Saratoga, N. Y., Sept. 27.—At the opening of the session of the national Unitarian conference the committee on credentials reported an attendance of 1,000, including 332 delegates representing 116 churches and organizations out of an aggregate of about 500 in the Unitarian denomination. The election of officers resulted as follows: President, Carroll D. Wright, Washington; vice presidents, Thomas J. Morris, Baltimore; George E. Adams, Chicago; George C. Perkins, San Francisco; J. Harsen Rhodes, New York; Francis Lowell, Boston; and Rockwood Hoar, Worcester, Mass.

Taylor Defeats Kramer.

New York, Sept. 27.—There was plenty of excitement in Madison Square Garden when Maj. Taylor defeated Frank L. Kramer in an unpaced match, best two out of three one-mile heats for the unpaced indoor championship of America. Taylor won in two straight heats. In the eighth lap of the first heat, just as Taylor jumped the Jersey rider, Kramer's machine slipped and Kramer fell. Taylor finishing alone. Kramer protested, but the judges decided against him. In the second heat Taylor again jumped Kramer in the sixth lap and won out by six feet.

Race Winners Yesterday.

At Hawthorne—Silurian, Gonfalon, Dick Furber, Aladdin, Odnor, Tommy Foster, Leo Newell.

At Gravesend—Gold Seeker, Lady Chorister, Zinzibar, Fonsoluca, Paul Clifford, Tower of Candles.

At Delmar Park—Golden Easter, Ann. Wakita, Nearest, Flying Eagle, Our Lady.

At Toronto—Invasion, Plum Tart, Last Fellow, Advocate, Pharanah, Tramer.

ROYALTY IN WINNIPEG.

Duke and Duchess Are Given a Rousing Reception.

Winnipeg, Man., Sept. 28.—The special trains of the duke and duchess of Cornwall and party arrived here at noon yesterday, and the royal couple were given an enthusiastic reception. The city was filled with visitors and the crowd gathered outside the depot numbered many thousands. The city was attractively decorated and the national colors were shown everywhere. The duke and duchess received an address of welcome, and there was a procession in their honor. The duke presented medals to the veterans of the South African war, and the duchess assisted in the opening of the Manitoba university. The royal party dined at Government house last night and resumed the journey westward at 10 o'clock.

Prince of Wales.

New York, Sept. 28.—A dispatch from London says: It is reported on most excellent authority that all the details in connection with the creation of the duke of Cornwall and York as prince of Wales are completed, and that the dignity will be conferred immediately on his return.

LINCOLN'S SECRETARY DEAD.

John George Nicolay Passes Away at the Age of 70.

Washington, Sept. 28. — Mr. John George Nicolay, private secretary to President Lincoln, and widely known as the author of several works on the life of the great war president, died this afternoon at his residence here, aged seventy years. He had been in feeble health for several years, and since his resignation as marshal of the United States supreme court in 1887 he had been living quietly at his Washington home with his daughter, Miss Helen Nicolay, the only surviving member of the family. A warm personal friendship existed between President Lincoln and Mr. Nicolay.

LINCOLN'S CASKET OPENED.

Remains Found to Be in a Good State of Preservation.

Springfield, Ill., Sept. 28.—Abraham Lincoln's casket was chiseled open yesterday. Eighteen persons gazed upon the features of the long-dead first martyred president and great emancipator, and then the casket holding all that was mortal of the honored dead was finally laid away for the thirteenth time. The casket was opened for the purpose of identifying the remains before being interred for what is hoped to be the last time. The features of the martyred president were found to be in a good state of preservation.

MONUMENT FOR M'KINLEY.

Organization Files Articles of Incorporation.

Canton, Ohio, Sept. 28—Articles of incorporation for an organization having for its object the erection of a suitable monument to the late President McKinley were forwarded to Columbus yesterday. The incorporators are the members of the executive committee created under authority of the president's cabinet to direct the Canton funeral arrangements, headed by Mayor J. H. Robertson and Judge William R. Day. The name decided upon is "The McKinley National Memorial Association."

ENJOY FIRST DAY.

President's Children Examine Their New Home Thoroughly.

Washington, Sept. 28.—The Roosevelt children, Kermit and Ethel, who arrived in Washington with their mother, thoroughly enjoyed their first day in the White House. They were out of bed a long time before the family was ready for breakfast and immediately began an inspection of their new home. In the afternoon they took a long ride on their wheels, going down Pennsylvania avenue, over into the Smithsonian grounds and through the extensive mall between the national museum and the capitol.

EVANS WILL REMAIN.

Roosevelt Will Retain the Present Commissioner of Pensions.

Chattanooga, Tenn., Sept. 28.—Some of the closest friends of Pension Commissioner H. Clay Evans, whose home is in Chattanooga, have received positive information from Washington that President Roosevelt intends to retain him as the head of the pension bureau throughout his administration.

Shaffer Is Willing.

Pittsburg, Sept. 28.—When President Shaffer of the Amalgamated association was shown the open letter issued by President Samuel Gompers of the American Federation of Labor, and John Mitchell, president of the United Mineworkers, in reply to his statement charging them with the responsibility for the failure of the great steel strike, he said he would accept their challenge and was ready to submit to an investigation as to the truth of his charges.

Divorce for Mrs. Pullman.

Chicago, Sept. 28. — Mrs. George M. Pullman, Jr., will be granted a divorce from her husband to-day. Evidence in the suit for divorce was heard by Judge Bishop in the circuit court here yesterday after the adjournment of the regular session, no one being present except those directly interested. Mr. Pullman has been in the Far West for some time and is now said to be in Redwood, Cal.

Anxious to Sell.

Copenhagen, Sept. 28.—The new Danish ministry has resumed negotiations with Minister Swensen for the sale of the Danish West Indies to the United States. The ministry favors the sale and is anxious to be in position to give the rigsdag definite information when it meets shortly.

Episcopal Deans in Session.

New Paynesville, Minn., Sept. 28. — The deanery of the Episcopal church of this district is now in session here, Rev. H. F. Parshall of St. Cloud being the presiding officer. Clergymen are here from St. Cloud, Sauk Rapids and Crookston.

Turks and Albanians Clash.

Belgrade, Sept. 28. — It is reported that Turkish and Albanian troops have come into collision at Belopolje, Old Servia, with the result that fifty-four were killed and wounded.

AWFUL DISASTER

THIRTEEN PROSPECTORS LOSE THEIR LIVES BY DROWNING IN TEXAS.

FLOODS SWEEP DOWN OVER THEM

CATCHES THEM BEFORE THEY ARE AWARE OF THEIR GREAT DANGER.

WALL OF WATER TWENTY FEET HIGH

EVERY MAN IN THE CAMP A VICTIM OF THE RAGING TORRENT.

San Antonio, Tex., Sept. 29. — News has just been received of a terrible disaster that occurred in Presidio county, near the Rio Grande river on the 25th instant, thirteen men who were prospecting for cinnabar losing their lives in floods caused by a waterspout or cloudburst.

The men were in two parties, camped a mile apart in a dry ravine known as Almiento creek, in which there had been no water for fifteen months on account of drouth. The men were asleep at 9 o'clock when there was a cloudburst several miles up the ravine. The volume of water, twenty feet high, washed down the channel of the ravine and swept over the men in the two camps before they were aware of their danger. All were drowned, and up to this time only six bodies have been recovered. The Almiento empties into the Rio Grande not far from where the fatality occurred, and it is more than probable that the other seven bodies have been swept into that stream.

MEXICAN ROBBERS ROUTED.

Five of Them Are Killed by the Owner of a Hacienda.

Pueblo, Mex., Sept. 29. — Brigands obtained entrance to the Hacienda de la Joya in this state, taking advantage of the hour when the workmen reported at the office of the hacienda. One of the robbers shot Senor Lastiri, owner of the place, the bullet entering the abdomen. Lastiri fired his revolver at the bandits and killed his assailant. Lastiri was then wounded by a machete, but continued firing his pistol with his left hand, when his son came to the rescue and opened fire on the robbers, killing four of them. The band then fled. The man who guided the robbers to the hacienda, which is surrounded by wooded hills, has been arrested. He says the robbers expected to secure a large amount of money which Lastiri had just received from the sale of cattle and grain. Mounted gendarmes are scouring in all directions, and it is expected the entire band will be captured or shot.

M'KINLEY'S WILL.

Leaves All His Property to His Wife.

Canton, Ohio, Sept. 29. — Secretary Cortelyou came here yesterday to assist Mrs. McKinley in disposing of matters connected with the late president's estate. After meeting Mrs. McKinley the question of filing the will was taken up. The trying task of reading it to her was undertaken by Mr. Cortelyou. Mrs. McKinley made a heroic effort to bear up and succeeded in doing so. Last night she was resting well. All legal formalities necessary for her to subscribe to were disposed of. Yesterday afternoon Judge Day and Secretary Cortelyou went to the office of the probate judge and offered the will of President McKinley for probate. Mrs. McKinley requests the appointment of Judge Day and Mr. Cortelyou as administrators of the estate. The will bequeaths the bulk of the property to Mrs. McKinley, and at her death to be divided equally between his brother and sisters. The estate will total $225,000 to $250,000.

PASSENGER TRAIN WRECKED.

Three Passengers Fatally and Sixteen Seriously Injured.

Omaha, Sept. 29.—The through passenger train from St. Louis to Omaha on the Wabash was wrecked yesterday seven miles from Council Bluffs. The entire train, consisting of mail and baggage cars, two day coaches, chair car and a Pullman, rolled down an eighteen-foot embankment and turned bottom side up, the engine alone remaining on the track. The engine stopped with the forward trucks on the edge of the bridge over Indian creek. The train carried nearly a hundred passengers and it seems almost a miracle that none were killed. Three were perhaps fatally injured, sixteen seriously hurt and a score of others received minor bruises. The cause of the wreck is thought to be due to the spreading of the rails on the curve where it occurred.

GOING TO THE COAST.

President Roosevelt Will Take an Extended Trip Next Year.

Washington, Sept. 29.—According to a statement made by John Barrett, former minister to Siam and a friend of the president, there is every reason to believe that Mr. Roosevelt has decided to make an extended visit to the Pacific coast next year. Mr. Barrett, who has had several talks with the president recently, said: "While I am not authorized to make any outline of the president's formal intentions or plans, I can say that the president has told his friends that he would visit the Pacific coast states next year."

K. B. Armour Dead.

Kansas City, Sept. 29.—Kirkland B. Armour the packer died at his residence here at 6 o'clock last evening. Mr. Armour suffered with Bright's disease and a weak heart and had been sinking gradually for three days.

Iowan to Start Buffalo Farm.

Fort Dodge, Iowa, Sept. 29.—Carl Leander, who lives at Bancroft, Iowa, is planning to start a buffalo farm. He has for years been known as a breeder of curious animals, and this is his latest venture.

PECULIAR ACCIDENT.

Montana Miner Killed by an Explosion and Fall at Winston.

Helena, Mont., Sept. 27. — The East Pacific mine at Winston was the scene of a spectacular accident in which Louis Schroepel lost his life. The most plausible explanation of this accident, whose real history no one is able to give is that Schroepel was carrying his powder in his right coat pocket and his fuse wound around his right arm. While in the act of climbing he must have shifted his candle also to his right hand, whereupon the fuse became ignited. Doubtless he failed to notice this and the fuse burned until the cap was exploded. The ignition and explosion of the powder would necessarily follow. He was blown from the ladder, falling 150 feet. When found by his fellow workers life was extinct.

MADISON FAIR.

Will Not Be Interfered With by the Fire.

Madison, Minn., Sept. 27.—The fair will not be interfered with by the fire, but will come off on dates advertised, Oct. 1, 2 and 3. A committee of citizens has been appointed to secure accommodations for all visitors at the fair. The citizens of Madison have raised a large purse which will pay for some of the best and biggest races ever held in Western Minnesota. There are more horses entered than ever before. The grand opening will be held on Oct 2 at 10 o'clock a. m. Oct. 3 will be a grand school day. Several hundred school teachers and over a thousand school children will be in a parade and hear the state superintendent, who will address the people of Western Minnesota on that day.

WATER FOR MORTON.

Piped From the Hills Bordering the Minnesota Valley.

Morton, Minn., Sept. 27.—This village has just commenced work on a novel system of waterworks for fire protection. As the town is located on a granite ledge it is impossible to sink a well. In lieu thereof the council went about three-quarters of a mile to the northeast, on top of the hills flanking the Minnesota valley, which are 50 or 100 feet higher than the highest building in Morton, and tapped a spring and sunk a cistern. A conduit will be laid from this cistern to town, and pipes from the conduit will furnish the water for fire purposes at various points. The pressure will be very strong.

FARMERS' CONGRESS

Will Meet in Sioux Falls Second Week in October.

Sioux Falls, S. D., Sept. 27. — The twenty-first annual meeting of the farmers' national congress will begin here Oct. 12. The governors of nearly all the states have appointed delegates and the attendance of at least 1,500 is anticipated. The object of the organization is to promote closer friendly and social relations between people in different sections of the country interested in husbandry, and to disseminate a wider knowledge of the best advancement of the agricultural interests in the United States.

AN ELK TEMPLE.

Sioux Falls Lodge Lays Corner Stone of New Building.

Sioux Falls, S. D., Sept. 27. — Last night marked an epoch in the history of the Elk lodge of this city, the occasion being the laying of the corner stone of the handsome and mammoth new building to be erected by the lodge. The new four-story temple will be one of the finest lodge buildings in the Northwest. The cornerstone was laid with appropriate ceremonies. Delegations of Elks from Sioux City, Aberdeen, Chamberlain and a number of other towns were present to assist in the services.

"WAS CRUSHED."

Methodist Preacher Disappears Very Mysteriously.

Baraboo, Wis., Sept. 27. — Dr. E. A. Mueller, pastor of the First Methodist church of this city, disappeared on Wednesday and his whereabouts are unknown. No member of his congregation knew he had gone until Presiding Elder William Martin arrived here yesterday with his resignation, which was accompanied by a note stating that he "was crushed." Dr. Mueller was a single man and some suppose he was mixed up in a love affair.

TEMPERANCE WORKERS.

Interesting Meetings Are Held at Watertown.

Watertown, S. D., Sept. 27. — The thirteenth annual convention of the South Dakota C. T. U. convened in this city yesterday. The meeting promises to be one of the most interesting in the history of the state organization, as the national union has contributed some of its most prominent speakers. Arrangements were made in advance by the local workers for a big attendance and they have not been disappointed.

Inspecting Rural Routes.

New Richmond, Wis., Sept. 27.—Special Agent Walker, of the rural free delivery service, is making his second trip through St. Croix county inspecting proposed routes that have been recommended for adoption by Congressman Jenkins. This week Mr. Walker is going over the routes out of Deer Park, Ceylon and Somerset.

Railroad Tracks Washed Away.

Cumberland, Wis., Sept. 27. — The heavy rains of yesterday washed the Omaha tracks in the yards here to such an extent as to derail the local way freight. The train was running at a low rate of speed, consequently no one was injured and no great damage done to the train.

Prominent Wisconsin Man Dies.

Janesville, Wis., Sept. 27.—Judge H. A. Patterson, seventy-two years of age, died yesterday from a severe cold and heart trouble. He was well known throughout the state. He served in the legislature and had been postmaster.

Suicide by Shooting.

Menomonie, Wis., Sept. 27.—Ed. Kalkin committed suicide by shooting himself through the head with a revolver. Death was almost instantaneous. Coroner Galloway decided it was not necessary to hold an inquest.

LITTLE BROWN HANDS

They drive home the cows from the pasture,
Up through the long, shady lane,
Where the quail whistle loud in the wheat fields
That are yellow with the ripening grain.
They find in the thick, waving grasses
Where the scarlet-lipped strawberry grows;
They gather the earliest snowdrops
And the first crimson buds of the rose.

They toss the hay in the meadow;
They gather the elder bloom white;
They find where the dusky grapes purple
In the soft-tinted October light.
They know where the apples hang ripest
And are sweeter than Italy's wines;
They know where the fruit hangs the thickest
On the thorny blackberry vines.

They gather the delicate seaweeds
And build tiny castles of sand;
They pick up the beautiful sea shells—
Fairy barks that have drifted to land;
They wave from the tall, rocking tree-tops,
Where the oriole's hammock nest swings,
And at night time are folded in slumber
By a song that a fond mother sings.

To those who toil bravely are strongest;
The humble and poor become great;
And from these brown-handed children
Shall grow mighty rulers of state.
The pen of the author and statesman—
The noble and wife of the land—
The sword and the chisel and palette
Shall be held in the little brown hands.

Whitened Hair.

BY H. S. ROGERS.

(Copyright, 1901, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

Conductor Shaffer of No. 5 let himself down from the rear end of his train as it came to a standstill. He cast an inspecting glance along the line of cars and at first hardly noticed the white-haired man who came creeping out from under the car near which he has standing. It was evident that the stranger had been stealing a ride, and he was dirty and begrimed; but in spite of the unattractive appearance of the man there was something unusual in his appearance that would cause anyone to look at him a second time. The skin had the pink tint and smoothness of youth, yet the hair above the face was as white as winter snow. The men looked at each other a moment and then the stranger turned quickly as if about to move away. Said Conductor Shaffer:

"Joe Jordon, by thunder!"

"Hoped you wouldn't know me, Shaff."

"I'd know you in the kingdom come, Joe. But, Lord, how you have changed!"

Joe appeared a bit uneasy and moved from one foot to the other restlessly.

"What you doing under that train?"

"Riding the rods."

"From where?"

"Other end of the division."

"Where were you going?"

"Didn't know and didn't care. Just got out because I was getting cramped."

"You are a regular bum, then?"

"Yep, pretty much."

"Just you get right in the smoker there and after I work the train I will come in and talk to you."

After Conductor Shaffer had done his work he went forward and sat down by the side of the queer looking tramp.

"Kind of getting up in the world some, ain't you, Shaff?"

"How?"

"Kind of elevated from a freight run to this."

"Yep, made up my mind three years ago that the old man on the I. N. and W. would never give me a chance, so I took the first offer and transferred over here. Had not been here six months until I got this passenger run. You seem to be still on the slow freights in your line, Joe. What on earth has happened to your hair?"

"Joe Jordon, by thunder!"

"It's a pretty long story, Shaff, unless you have got time to listen."

"Twenty miles to the next stop."

"Well, you see, it is like this, Shaff. It's five years since I dropped out. Not one single person that I knew or that knew me in the old days has ever seen me or spoken to me since then until I ran across you this morning. There was no one dependent upon me, and no one that cared, I guess. You know that I was running pretty strong with Mary Parr, then for a time, and although she is married now——"

"What's that?"

"Well, I ain't ashamed to say that I thought a lot of her and if things had gone differently may be I would have had a passenger run by this time. One evening Mary and I had a little spat—didn't amount to much, but we thought it did—and that settled it. Then I heard that she was going with Henry Weber, a machinist at the shops, and so I kind of dropped out. Left the road and worked all over for a time. Then I got to traveling about a bit, and soon I was on the bum. You don't know how easily a fellow can drop into that, especially a fellow that knows railroading as I do. I have traveled all over these United States without a cent. It's hard lines some times, but I don't know but it is as good as any other if a fellow don't care what becomes of him.

"About my white head? Did you ever hear that a man's hair could turn gray in a night. I never took much stock in that, but here before you is a sample of what can be done by fear. It was in this way. I had been wandering down through the eastern states some three years ago, and one night I landed at Lancaster, Pa. There was a young fellow hanging around the Pennsylvania road's water tank and we decided to travel together. It was warm even if it was late winter and we began nosing around the cars. The young fellow found a car door unsealed and called to me. We climbed in and found ourselves in a car loaded with bananas. It was pleasant enough and we found straw on top of the crates and made it a good place for sleeping. Before I went to sleep a brakeman came along and I heard him swearing because the banana car had not been sealed before it left Newark, and then I heard him closing the door. It did not seem that I had been asleep very long when I was awakened by my companion. Said he:

"'There is something in this car.'

"'Of course there is,' said I, and about to fall asleep again.

"'It's something crawling. Don't you feel them?'

"I did feel something on my hand and shook it off. Then I dug a match out of my pocket and struck it. That's where my hair began to turn white. The place was swarming with gigantic spiders, I thought, but as the match flickered and flared I looked up at my companion. His face was deadly white and he hissed at me:

"'Tarantulas.'

"Then I understood in an instant. The horrible things had been brought from some southern country in the bunches of bananas. A bite from any one of the ugly creatures meant death. I could hear my companion's teeth chattering and I know that he was in an agony of fear.

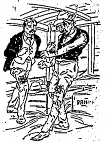
"'What's to be done?' he gasped.

"'Sit perfectly still,' said I. 'Don't move nor brush one of them off, even if it crawls on your face. Have you the nerve to do it?'

"'No, no. My God, I shall be insane in a few minutes.'

"I knew that he was telling the truth and felt that I also had the same, to fear. Our warm bodies probably attracted the creatures, because they began to crawl over us, and to this day I have only to close my eyes and I can see and feel those hairy legs and little claws creeping on my flesh. Suddenly my companion gave a scream and began beating the air and fighting the tarantulas. We were pressed so close to the roof of the car that we could scarcely move, and as I lay there, not daring to even turn a hand or foot it was fearful. The odor from the insects that he had crushed and from the ripe fruit was in itself overpowering, and it is not surprising that I soon became unconscious. And that no doubt saved my life and reason.

"It was some time the next day when I awoke, and there was daylight in the car. I looked about and there was not a tarantula in sight. I called to my companion, but there was no answer, and I was too weak to get over to him. After a time I heard people moving outside and made an outcry that attracted attention. At last the car was opened and I was released. I won't trouble you with all those details, but they found the body of my companion. It was swollen to horrible size and a fearful thing to see. I lay in a hospital three weeks and when I came out my hair was like it is now, although you know, Shaff, I am less than thirty."



"Tarantula!"

"I have had some darned queer stories told me, Joe Jordan, but that takes the cake. Who told you that Mary Parr was married?"

"Nobody; just knew it was all."

"Well, you are the blamdest idiot. That girl has just been sitting around waiting for someone, and most people think it is you. My wife was saying to me only the other day that if Mary was pining for that Joe Jordan she better look out or she would end up an old maid, because the Lord only knew whether he was in the land of the living."

"Reckon most people would think she was losing time waiting around for an old whiteheaded tramp, Shaff."

The queer looking tramp sat a long time watching the scenery rushing by, but it is doubtful if he saw any of it. When the conductor came along the next time he looked up and remarked:

"Say, Shaff, do you reckon I could get back on the old I. N. & W.?"

"'Ain't done nothing to queer yourself, have you?"

"Not that I know of."

"Well, the old man always spoke mighty well of you, and if there is nothing doing for you on that road, I have got a pretty good pull over here myself. You drop off at home with me, and we will see about fixing you up a bit before you tackle him."

Friederichshof Is Hers.

Friederichshof, at Cronberg, the palace wherein the late Dowager Empress Frederick died, is one of the most beautiful country seats possessed by the royalty of Europe. It is natural, therefore, that envious eyes should be now cast at Princess Frederick Carl of Hesse because, by the will of her deceased mother, she comes into possession of this estate. It is a spacious and sumptuously furnished palace, surrounded by a magnificent park, set in some of the most romantic country scenery in Germany. Upward of $1,000,000 was spent by its recent occupant in improving house and grounds. The young princess who is soon to occupy it is one of the sweetest-faced members of German royalty. She is the fifth and youngest child of the late Empress Dowager, and was the favorite during the last few years of her life. She was born April 22, 1872, and was named Margarethe. Her marriage to Prince Frederick Carl of Hesse occurred in January, 1893, and she has three sons.

Some Hotel Figures.

Statistics are not very entertaining, but there are some stories of hotels that they alone can tell, and that of the supplies is one of them. For instance, during the year 1900, one of those big hotels spent for meats, $200,000; for poultry, $113,000; for vegetables, $80,000; for fruit, $42,000; for eggs, $12,000; for butter, $57,000, and for the flowers used in decorations—and there are flowers on the tables every day—$30,000. The initial investment in silverware was $250,000, and with losses that, charitably, are credited to the souvenir craze, and the general wear and tear on table service, about $40,000 a year is spent in keeping this supply up to the hotel's standard.

Progress in Ocean Travel.

In 1840 the Cunard steamship Britannia, built of wood, propelled by paddle wheels, maintained a sea speed of about 8½ knots. Her steam pressure was 12 pounds per inch. She was 207 feet long, about 2,000 tons displacement, her engines developed about 750-horse power, and her coal consumption was about 40 tons a day, or about five pounds of coal per indicated horse power per day. She carried a full spread of sail. In sixty years speed has been increased from 8½ knots to twenty-three knots; the time on the voyage has been reduced to about one-third of what it was in 1840.

DAIRY AND POULTRY.

INTERESTING CHAPTERS FOR OUR RURAL READERS.

How Successful Farmers Operate This Department of the Farm—A Few Hints as to the Care of Live Stock and Poultry.

Some Hints on Turkeys.

From the Farmers' Review: After the red comes, usually when they are eight or ten weeks old, it is not necessary to fight lice upon them again if you keep their roosting place clean. It is best to fix roosts under a shed, under trees, or even in the open, and remove their coops after they are feathered out, for impure air and overcrowding in their roosting quarters always results disastrously. Let the most of their food be given after they outgrow the bread period and now it will do no harm to allow them to eat all they want if they have considerable of a run, for they are naturally great bug-eaters and foragers, so the feed you give will help to make quick growth.

Never neglect to provide clean water in clean vessels for them to drink; if you do not they will either drink foul water, or wander off in search of water. Poults will gang together and will follow after any hen that will cluck and not fight them. We had one old chicken hen that we named the "turkey hen," for she raised two gangs of turkeys each year. Towards fall she would have the whole gang of turks after her. After she had brought her second clutch through bab, ood until we sold them. They would even try to stick their heads under her while on the roost.

It is hardly possible to get turks to fatten through the hot weather, but the first frosty nights seem to sharpen their appetites and then they eat greedily. We feed mature shelled corn for six weeks before said day, aiming to give all they will eat three times a day. If they seem droopy after babyhood, give them a feed of curds made black with pepper and thick with chopped onion tops some morning. This will nearly always straighten out their dumps. If it does not put a quart of good wood ashes in two gallons of water and allow them to drink of it. This often stops disease that greatly resembles cholera, but if they still continue droopy quarantine the worst ones and strive by added cleanliness to prevent the well ones becoming droopy. We do not doctor much, excepting for symptoms of roup and bowel trouble, for we think cleanliness, wholesome food, grit and few lice, or none at all, are the best things to have in the way of medicine.

The first year we killed several in our ignorance by using coal oil in their roost coops, and by our crowding. We soon discovered it simply will not do to use strong fumes of any sort in their coops, nor to overcrowd, nor to put grease on them.

Last summer our neighbor told us she found lice on her poults that morning, and that she promptly greased them a little with lard. We told her her poults would be most sure to die, and in a few days she said some were already dead, the others had the dumps and finally they did all die that she greased. But what can I do for lice? "Use insect powder." It didn't kill them when she had used it. Well, then, it wasn't fresh. Get good, either by sending to headquarters or by buying of a reliable druggist.—Emma Clearwaters.

Red Hogs.

It strikes the writer of the swine editorials that the breeder of red hogs is well deserving of a word of not sympathy but praise and encouragement at our hands. He seems to have little to say for himself but he may here take notice that we shall be glad to have him come to the front and say something in his own behalf through these columns. We thought of the red hog man last week when visiting upon a large stock farm down in the flat lands of western Indiana where the big ditches have made it possible to grow good crops of corn and grass instead of the crops of frogs which were at one time the main dependence of the residents for a living. (They didn't personally eat the frogs but got a good price for them in the Chicago Market.) Here we found upon the same farm large herds of both Poland-Chinas and Duroc-Jerseys and both varieties were of good blood and form. It was a chance to compare notes as to the difference between the two lots of hogs and we do not intend to tell all that was said because there was no red-hog man there to make a "professional statement" for his friends. But after all what did transpire was to the credit of the red hog breeder and we rather imagine that his P-C rival would take exception to some of the remarks made on behalf of the warm tinted swine. Our own opinion was that comparing the two breeds the red hogs had the advantage in size of frame and length of body but appeared somewhat coarse and loosely built. Is this a correct estimate? Interviewed, the breeder said that what he found to be especially in favor of the red sow is that she brings forth more pigs than her P-C sister. His annual average shows eight pigs per sow for the red breed against five for the P-C and he tells us that the red pigs are great hustlers after feed from birth and seem to be less susceptible to the ailments of young pigs than are the others. Also as they grow towards maturity they grow heavier than the black pigs and make growth faster on the same amount of food and at killing time weigh with him 100 pounds more than the marketable P-C's. Is this correct, Mr. D-J breeder? But then there was an alleged draw back to all of this fine showing. The breeder alleged that the red hog may be the best hog for the farmer but said that the packer does not especially admire him. Why is this, if it is a fact? We presume that it is entirely owing to the large size and heavy weight of the red hog added to the well known fact that the packers are nowadays after a medium, well fed and finished hog that will cut a good percentage of carcass to live weight. If this is not the reason then it may be that the P-C bears more lard and that lard is more profitable compared with extra large sides and hams of mixed meat and bacon. It is certainly a great thing in favor of the red hog that the sow is so prolific and that she has an abundant supply of milk for her pigs, but there are a lot of things we want to know from the red hog breeder before we form a "fully matured" estimate of the value of his big breed. Experiments at hand do not furnish much information about Duroc-Jersey swine. In some Ontario experiments made in 1896 two Duroc-Jerseys fed the same way as two P-C hogs (pure bred) made a daily gain of 1.16 lbs. compared with 1.03 lbs. made by the latter. At the close of the experiment the D-J's weighed 199 lbs. and the P-C's 190 lbs. The former dressed 77.21 per cent dressed carcass, and the latter 77.18 per cent. At the commencement of the experiment the D-J's weighed an average of 62 lbs., and the P-C's an average of 69 lbs. To make a gain of 100 lbs., the D-J's required 580 lbs. of food and the P-C's 507 lbs. of food. In similar experiments carried out at the Michigan Ex. Station, the P-C's made a daily gain of 1.20 lbs. and the D-J's a daily gain of 1.47 lbs. At start of experiment the P-C's weighed an average of 81 lbs. and the D-J's 80 lbs. At the close of the experiment the P-C's weighed 264 lbs., had used 514 lbs. of food for 100 lbs. of grain and dressed 84.7 per cent. The D-J's weighed at close of experiment 320 lbs., had used 467 lbs. of food per 100 pounds of grain and dressed 83.2 per cent. This will give our readers a chance to figure out exactly which is the best hog. It also relieves us of the responsibility of judging in the matter.

Poultry Briefs.

According to the experimenters at the California station 100 hens weighing three pounds each should daily receive the following: Dry matter, 16 pounds; protein, 2.52 pounds; fat, 1.2; carbohydrates, 9.9. To get this balance in the circulation the various rations are proposed, any one of which may be used:

Ration 1.—6 lbs. wheat, 3 lbs. bran, 3 lbs. middlings, 5 lbs. crushed barley, 1 lb. cocoanut oil-cake meal, 4 lbs. alfalfa hay, 75 lbs. blood meal.

Ration 2.—11 lbs. wheat, 3 lbs. bran, 4 lbs. middlings, 2 lbs. alfalfa hay, 1 lb. meat meal.

Ration 3.—1 lb. wheat, 3 lbs. bran, 5 lbs. crushed barley, 5.0 lbs. cocoanut oil-cake meal, 5.5 lbs. alfalfa hay.

Ration 4.—7.0 lbs. wheat, 3.5 lbs. bran, 2.0 lbs. alfalfa, 4.5 lbs. crushed barley, 1.0 lb. meat meal.

Ration 5.—9 lbs. bran, 5 lbs. middlings, 5 lbs. bran, 15 lbs. skim milk.

The California station has been looking into the poultry business a good deal and some valuable data have resulted. Analyzing the egg, they found the following: Shell, 10.81 per cent of the whole; yolk, 32.47 per cent; white, 56.42 per cent. Over 93 per cent of the shell is found to be carbonate of lime; over 4 per cent organic matter and water; less than 1 per cent carbonate of magnesia, and the same amount phosphates. Of the yolk, about half is water; 15 per cent protein and 33 per cent fat. Mineral matters in the yolk—lime, magnesia, phosphates—total less than 2 per cent. Of the white, about 80 per cent is water, 12 protein, and fat about one-fifth of one per cent.

It is evident from a brief consideration of the subject that the powers of digestion of fowls are somewhat different from that of other farm stock. This difference is in favor of the fowl and is due to the gizzard. This makes it possible for the fowl to pulverize the bony and other hard matter consumed. To what extent this pulverized material is taken into the circulation we do not yet know.

Good and Bad Butter.

Have you ever stopped to think that the world is hungry for a fresh, highly flavored creamery butter, and that the demand for the same is greater than the creameries can supply? Have you ever stopped to think that there is not an eater in the land hungry for the butter you sell at the grocery store? Nine of every ten pounds of butter sold at the grocery goes into a barrel and is sold as packing stock for several cents a pound less than the merchant paid for it, and is not offered to the public as butter until it is purified and sold at a higher price than its maker received. What is wrong with such a system? Give to your creamery every pound of cream you make into this low priced grease, and the increase in price you will receive will make you smile.—Exchange.

At last California has taken a step toward a dairy school. The University of California announces that a dairy school will begin at the university October 9 and continue till December 12. The announcement is further made that only 30 students will be received the first year. This looks small alongside of what some of the eastern states are doing, but probably the California dairymen are thankful for even a start. It has been notorious that up to this time the great gold-producing state has been utterly negligent of the educational interests of her dairymen.

Brazilian coffee imported to Porto Rico was boycotted by the residents of the island recently.

Vermont Experiments with Dairy Cows

Grooming Cows.—Last year and the year previous tests were made at the Vermont Experiment Station to determine the effect of grooming cows. The results in either case were not very favorable. The published summary of results states that a unit of total and of digestible dry matter yielded four per cent less when the cows were groomed than when they were kept uncarded, and that there was practically no difference in the quality of the milk given under the two conditions. The conclusion reached is that grooming should lessen the bacterial content of a cow's milk, but is not likely to add to its amount or its fat content.

Watering Cows at Will.—A test was made to determine the effect of allowing cows to drink at will as opposed to the practice of watering them at regular intervals. Four mature cows were selected for the test, and the amount of water drank was weighed in each case. The results showed that the cows that drank whenever they wished and in such quantities as they desired, made no more and no better milk than when they drank but twice daily.

Warm vs. Cold Water.—The report of the results of an experiment in warming water for dairy cows states that increase in the consumption of water when warmed was universally observed. The cold water was drunk more freely in November and May than in the intervening months. At all other times it was drunk much less freely than the warmed water, the increased consumption of water when warmed averaging from 8 to 23 per cent. This increase in consumption, however, resulted in no increase in the milk flow or decrease in its quality. In other words, the cow did not water her milk by increased drinking.

Excessive Amounts of Single Nutrients.—Experiments were undertaken to determine the effect of adding to a standard ration excessive amounts of a single nutrient. It was found that an excess of protein (Atlantic gluten flour) had but slight effect on the quantity and none upon the quality of the milk flow. A 10 per cent excess of carbohydrates in the form of cane sugar also had but slight effect upon the quantity and none on the quality of the milk flow. The addition of a solid fat (palm oil) had a pronounced effect upon the quality of the flow, increasing the total solids 2 per cent and the fat 7 per cent. The increase appeared to be a permanent one. In similar trials reported a year ago cottonseed oil was found to increase the fat content of milk permanently to the extent of .20 to .30 per cent. Emulsified corn and linseed oils depressed the fat percentages. Financial considerations did not enter into these tests, as the protein, carbohydrates and fats added were so costly as to make very expensive rations.

Effect of Large Grain Rations.—To determine the effect of large grain rations, four, eight and twelve pounds of different grain rations were fed at different times, with hay and silage. The results from a financial standpoint showed that an increase of grain from four pounds to eight, or to twelve pounds, seldom yielded enough more butter to pay the cost of the extra grain. In practically every case, however, there was enough more skim milk and enough better manure made to more than offset the extra expense for grain. When the by-products are considered the profit was each time in favor of the eight-pound ration as compared with the four-pound and generally in favor of the twelve-pound as compared with the eight-pound ration.

Our Trade with Spain.

Trade relations between the United States and Spain have resumed the conditions existing prior to the war between the two countries. The exports from the U. S. to Spain in the fiscal year just ended were larger than in any preceding year with a single exception, 1883, and show an increase of 6 million dollars over 1899; while our imports from Spain also show a marked increase over 1899. In the 7 months ending July 1901, our imports from Spain were $3,110,118, against $2,875,840 in the corresponding period of the preceding year, while during the same period our exports to Spain increased from $8,189,288 to $8,988,970. Raw materials form the most important feature of our exports to Spain, and fruits and iron ore the principal articles of importation. The total value of our imports from Spain in the fiscal year 1901 was $5,409,301, and in 1900, $5,950,047. The details of the 1901 importations are not available, but those of the year 1900 show fruits, over one and a half million dollars, nuts, 518 thousand dollars; wines, 538 thousand, and iron ore, 650 thousand dollars in value. Turning to the export side, raw materials prove to be the chief feature of our export trade with Spain. Our total exports to Spain in the fiscal year 1901 were $15,484,738, against $13,399,680 in 1900. Of the latter total, cotton was valued at $9,618,930; mineral oil, $888,011; shooks and staves, $850,295; tobacco, $661,842; boards and planks, $420,387; breadstuffs, $236,353; iron and steel manufactures, $162,738.

S. R. Dawson, the inventor of the Damascus steel process who has served half of his ten years' sentence for killing a son-in-law, was recently paroled by Governor Shaw of Iowa in order that his valuable discovery might not die with him. Dawson claims that steel can be made by his process much cheaper than the steel of ordinary commerce.

Flowers for Bridesmaids.

Bouquets of flowers attached to long walking sticks have been carried by many of the bridesmaids at the smart June weddings.

At one very decorative wedding the bridesmaids wore gowns of soft ivory satin made up over pink, bordered with a deep flounce composed of tiny chiffon frills and made with transparent lace necks and waists. Each maid carried an ebony wand mounted in silver, with a pink knob, to which was tied a bouquet of pink carnations. Some of the June bridesmaids have carried a basket on the arm filled with one special bloom. Newest of all is the bouquet, made somewhat in crescent-shape, one end attached to the elbow with ribbons, the other to the wrist.—Philadelphia Times.

A Fearless Physician.

Benton, Ill., Sept. 30th.—Much comment has been caused by the action of Dr. R. H. Danaway, a physician here, who for over a year past has been recommending Dodd's Kidney Pills to those of his patients who suffered from Rheumatism, Bright's Disease, Diabetes or other Kidney Troubles.

Dr. Dunaway also published an open letter last May stating positively that he himself had been cured of Diabetes by Dodd's Kidney Pills, and that, after he concluded he was going to die.

He is a well man to-day, and says he feels it his duty to do as he has done and is doing because Dodd's Kidney Pills saved his life.

CONSUMPTION

A Sultan's Dishes

Abdul Hamid Has Gold and Silver Plate.

It costs a good deal to feed a monarch; the cheapest of them are most expensive luxuries. The sultan of Turkey is a most costly article of bric-a-brac, especially for a bankrupt nation. The cost of the mere necessaries of life for him and his household amounts to about $7,500,000 a year. This seems an enormous grocery and butcher's bill, but it must be remembered, that, including his 300 brevet wives, the palace eunucks, and the servants and officers of the imperial household, no less than 6,000 people are catered for daily when Abdul Hamid is "in residence" at Yildiz or Dolma Bagtche palace. Enormous quantities of bread are consumed by the sultan and his household, the palace bakeries turning out no less than 18,000 pounds daily. The bakery staff is a small army, for, besides the bakers, there are the buyers and the slaves who purchase the flour and rye and the fuel for the fires. One ton of rice is used daily in making the inevitable "pillaf" or pilau without which no Turk thinks he has really made a meal. This dish consists of rice boiled with mutton, kid or fowl, and flavored with raisins, spices, butter and the cook only knows what else. Then there are consumed daily 600 pounds of sugar and a like amount of coffee, not to mention huge quantities of other groceries, fruit and vegetables. The water for the household is brought to the palace in great round casks from two streams which empty into the Bosporus.

As every part of the Turkish administration is nearly as rotten as Tammany Hall (but not quite), there is little doubt that a portion of this enormous amount of food is disposed of as perquisites by the palace officials; for even 6,000 people scarcely could consume all that the sultan pays for daily in the shape of food. The sultan himself is a small eater. His breakfast consists of fruit, coffee and a roll, and at luncheon he eats pilau, fruit and some sweets. He seldom drinks spirituous liquors, but indulges in large quantities of sherbet and eats an incredible amount of ice cream. All the food for the sultan is prepared by one man alone, and is cooked in dishes of silver, and sometimes even of gold. Each dish is sealed when it leaves the kitchen, and when brought on the table the seal is broken in the sultan's presence by the chamberlain. In order to test the food for poison, the chamberlain takes a spoonful out of each dish before his imperial master touches it. The food always is served to the sultan in the same dish in which it is cooked, and the padishah eats out of the dish with his fingers, never using a plate or a knife or fork except on occasions when he has some foreigners to dinner with him. Sometimes he will use a spoon, but prefers his fingers to all extraneous aids to dining. As each course is served two slaves approach the sultan, one bearing bread and the other pancakes upon golden trays; so it takes twice as many slaves as there are courses to get the sultan through his meal. Only the sultan and the higher palace officials are allowed pancakes with their meals; the underlings have to be content with bread.—New York Press.

Queen Is a Mountaineer.

Queen Margherita of Italy is a skillful mountaineer, and has a firm head and a steady foot when treading the fastnesses of her native country. Clad in the practical peasant dress, with short skirt, her majesty is never so happy as when roaming about her beloved mountains or ascending some height. Queen Helene of Italy is also a skillful mountaineer, for as a girl she was accustomed to scale the mountains of Montenegro with her father and brothers in pursuit of game, so that she adds a love for sport to her love for the mountains.

Cricket Still the Favorite Game.

Cricket still holds its own in the British Isles in spite of the increased attention paid to foot-ball, golf and other sports. This was strongly shown by the records of attendance and receipts at the annual match between Yorkshire and Lancashire. This match lasted three days, and the average daily attendance of spectators was 10,000. The profits amounted to a very large sum, which, in accordance with custom, was handed over to the champion professional player.

A Man's Point of View.

"What should I say makes girls attractive?" answered a society man to whom the above query was put. "Well that is a very hard question to answer. Different men (for I take it by asking me you wish to know what makes a girl attractive to a man) like different attributes. You probably mean generally attractive—what you might call a popular girl in society. Well, I should say one of the most important traits is the power of making another feel that—for the moment at least—his personality and what he says are of paramount interest. Many young women let their eyes wander while you are talking to them, as if they were looking for other men. This is certainly not complimentary. Still, even absent-mindedness is not much worse than a too great interest of expression, which is apt to bore one. One feels any affectation of interest instinctively. Interest must be genuine and spontaneous to be agreeable. A pleasing voice and sympathetic laugh are also great adjuncts. I know several girls who score a lot in that way. It is a pleasure to talk to them for no other reason. It is the general opinion that beauty attracts a man more than any other quality. This is by no means the case; in fact, as a rule the beauties do not have half so good a time as pretty women who are less self conscious. There are many beautiful women who completely lack charm. There is one thing about a woman's personal appearance that appeals particularly to ninety-nine men out of a hundred, and that is neatness and smartness. Women, as a rule, do not realize this. In their efforts to look pretty and have their belongings becoming they often completely overlook tidiness, and so spoil everything. A neat shining head always excites a man's admiration, while becomingness is with him quite a secondary consideration. I have often seen my sisters look in the glass, arrange their crimps with the greatest care, and quite overlook the fact that their heads were far from looking trig and tidy—two great essentials, to my mind. As for lasting attractions! Ah, for those men look below the surface more than women suppose. A man's instinct seeks in the woman he cares for something better than himself. He may not say much about it, but he feels it all the same. These qualities I have mentioned may attract, but it needs others to attach."

This for Mothers.

On one of the trains entering New York a few weeks ago, a woman afforded her fellow passengers an unconscious, but powerful, object lesson. With the woman was a little girl about six years old. The day was warm, and through the open windows the dust drifted in a fine gray cloud. Every passenger was exceedingly uncomfortable, but each forgot his discomfort in the spectacle of that suffering child. The mother began operations by seating her little daughter beside her with a thump that made the infant's teeth rattle. Then, at intervals of one or two minutes during the weary journey she paid the child these maternal attentions: She took off her hat; she smoothed her hair; she put the hat on again; she removed the child's little jacket, and put in on again; she straightened her collar; she wiped her face with her handkerchief; she removed an imaginary cinder from her eye; she smoothed her hair again; she took off and retied the ribbon on her hair; she stood her up and smoothed her down; she unfastened the bow at her neck and retied it. Over and over she followed this program while the awe-struck passengers looked on. The child accepted the situation with grim endurance. Evidently she had been used to it all of her short life. The world to her was a strange place where mothers exhausted their nervous energy in useless attentions to little girls. Her small face was pathetically sad and tired. When the journey's end was reached she arose wearily, was put through it all once more, and got languidly off the car. Among those who watched the scene was a prominent New York specialist in nervous diseases. He turned to the writer and summed up the entire situation in one sentence which has in it a sermon for every American mother. "Each touch," he said, grimly, "pushes that child a little nearer to the doors of the sanitarium that will some day open for her." There were other mothers on the train. Perhaps they took the lesson home.

Through Sunday Vandals.

Antiquaries will read with mingled satisfaction and regret that the Roman Wall station of Borcovicus, or Housteads, has been closed to the public, the reason being that Sunday vandals had taken to hurling stones from it down the neighboring ravine. The great wall has already suffered more than enough spoliation. The farmhouse of Plane Trees, hard by, was built with stones taken from this very station; and all along from Carlisle to Newcastle it is more or less a ruin—the more pitiably because what remains of it, assailed by no worse enemies than winter and rough weather, is surprisingly fresh.—Yorkshire Post.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of Testimonials.

THE NEWS,

BY JOHN W. EASTMAN.

PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY.

1.50 PER YEAR IN ADVANCE.

President Roosevelt was born the same year in which Minnesota was admitted to statehood. The new president will be forty-three years old on the 7th of October next. Minnesota was the thirty-third state to be admitted to the Union, and most of the territory west of us to the Pacific ocean was an unexplored land. Now it is divided into prosperous states and numerous cities, traversed by many lines of railroad, and is an important part of this great country. The president is chief executive of a much greater country than was President Buchanan. Our territory now embraces Alaska Sandwich Islands and important islands in both the West and East Indies. Our growth has been marvelous, and it is probable that the limit has been about reached. It is not impossible that Cuba may come to us of its own volition, and we may acquire a few islands as safeguards to our outlying possessions, but beyond these there does not now seem to be any further hope of territorial expansion, unless in future years Canada may desire to unite the whole of the North American continent under one government. To make this the best, most highly civilized, most prosperous and liberty loving nation on earth, is a task large and grand enough for the ablest statemen and the people of the United States. There is room enough for growth, development and excellence in government in the vast territory now under the stars and stripes.—St. Cloud Journal Press.

SALE OF State Lands.

STATE OF MINNESOTA, LAND OFFICE.

ST. PAUL, September 7th, 1901.

Notice is hereby given that on Friday, the 18th day of October, 1901, at 2 o'clock, in the afternoon at the office of the County Auditor in Red Lake Falls, Minnesota, I will offer for sale the following described unsold state lands, and the following described state lands which have reverted to the state by reason of the non-payment of interest will also be then and there offered for resale. Fifteen per cent of the purchase price and interest on the unpaid balance from the date of sale to June 1st, 1902, must be paid at the time of the sale. The balance of the purchase money can be paid at any time, in whole or in part, within forty years of the time of the sale; the rate of interest on the unpaid balance of the purchase money will be four per cent per annum provided the principal remains unpaid for ten years but if the principal is paid before the expiration of ten years from the date of the sale, the rate of interest on the unpaid balance will be five per cent per annum, payable in advance on June 1st of each year.

Holders of certificates on which the interest payments are in default can have their certificates reinstated on payment before the sale of the interest in full to date and the penalties thereon, when the lands covered thereby will be withdrawn from sale.

R. C. DUNN,
State Land Commissioner.

THE THIEF RIVER FALLS NEWS.

VOL. XVIII. [redacted] THIEF RIVER FALLS, MINN., THURSDAY, OCTOBER 10, 1901. NUMBER 40.

A BIG YIELD

Of Potatoes Raised in Red Lake County.

Capt. R. J. McDonald, of the government improvement boat and who lives in Meehan's addition, exhibited at the NEWS office last week the product of one hill of Early Rose potatoes that were dug from his garden, consisting of 15 large and 5 small potatoes, the weight of the 20 by actual test being 20½ pounds, an average of over one pound for each potato in the hill. At this rate three hills would produce 1 bushel of potatoes with 1½ pounds to spare.

Mr. McDonald also reports that from a piece of ground in his garden measuring 50x128 feet, he dug over 80 bushels of potatoes. This breaks the record in potato culture, and at the rate potatoes have been selling in Thief River Falls this year, his little patch would yield him $48, or $1,200 for a full acre. Mr. McDonald is a gentleman of thorough reliability and his statements can therefor be accepted as correct. The largest potatoes on being cut open were found to be solid without the least sign of hollow heart.

When such large crops of potatoes can be raised in this section, it might be pertinent to ask what is the matter with having a starch factory here? With a product of one-tenth the part of Mr. McDonald's and if sold at 18 cents per bushel (the lowest price paid by starch factories) there would still be a good profit to the farmer, and a season like the present, when potatoes have been selling for 60 cents per bushel by the wagon load for shipment, what better crop could you get? We have everything requisite for the successful operation of a starch factory—the soil to produce a good crop and an ideal location for a factory with good drainage and a bountiful supply of good, cool water.

Rev. Dade to Continue to Be the Presbyterian Pastor.

The members of the Presbyterian church held a meeting in the Odd Fellow's hall Monday afternoon and extended to the pastor Rev. C. W. Dade, a unanimous call to remain here another year. Rev. Walker, of Red Lake Falls, acted as moderator, and the meeting was well attended.

Rev. Dade has given excellent satisfaction—is a bright, progressive and scholarly gentleman—and the Presbyterian of this city are to be congratulated upon securing his services.

The call was sent to Presbytery which meets at Mollory this week.

THE PINE CUT.

It Will Be Very Large This Winter.

Logging operations in the pine woods during the coming winter will be as heavy as the various logging and lumbering concerns are able to make them.

The demand for pine lumber during the season has been so great that stocks are little larger than they were at the beginning of the sawin season, and by the time the mills are ready to commence work next spring the assortment will be poorer than it was last spring. What the harvest of logs will be will depend on a number of things.

The scant supply of labor is bothering the loggers and promises to continue to handicap them during the coming months. Wages are high and yet the men do not respond. Harvest fields and railroad work have kept them busy, and the latter will continue to keep many of them out of the camps for some weeks.

Jones in Washington.

Washington, Oct. 7.—As a preliminary to the settlement of the vexed Indian problem in Minnesota, Commissioner of Indian Affairs Jones says he is in favor of the allotment of lands of unceded reservations and the disposal of the remainder under the general land laws. He so expressed himself in discussing the proposition made some time ago by Congressman Eddy to have an inspector negotiate a treaty for the opening of a few townships in the Red Lake reservation. While in the northwest he went over these townships and says there is some fine land there that can be cultivated by the whites, but which will probably be non-productive as long as it remains in the hands of the Indians.

Mill wood—1 load, $1; 6 loads $5; 12 loads, $10. These prices are good while the mill is running. Next winter the price will be $1.50 per load. The Thief River Falls Lumber Company.

HIGHER COURT

Thief River Falls to Do Away With Justices.

The city council Monday evening passed a resolution establishing a municipal court in Thief River Falls, and a judge will be elected at the coming election. The office of justice of peace will be abolished. The advantages of having a municipal court here are numerous, and civil cases in the county where the amount involved does not exceed $500 can be tried in this court. The office of municipal judge is a somewhat lucrative one and there will probable be more than one candidate.

SAD ACCIDENT

Small Boy Killed at Red Lake Falls.

A most distressing accident occured last Thursday evening at Red Lake Falls A threshing engine and outfit that was passing through the village stopped for a short time in the street and while at rest quite a number of children gathered around it. One of them a small boy named Earl Mead, attempted to climb on the engine just as it was about to start, and fell under the wheels unnoticed by the engineer, and the wheels passed directly over his head, completedly crushing it. The remains were taken to Euclid this afternoon for burial.

Further fatalities at that place are reported as having occurred last Friday. Mamie Fevers, aged 10 dropped dead in school in the afternoon, and the two months old baby of Frank Brouillet and wife was found dead in bed by the parents when they awoke.

E. H. Gerlash was crushed between a seperator and an engine, but it is expected he will recover.

BURN FORTUNES

Flax Straw Valuable to Make Paper.

Farmers are wasting thousands of tons of flax yearly which would more than cover the expense incurred in raising the entire flax crop.

This is the opinion of William M. Woolridge industrial agent for the Great Northern Railroad company at Hinsdale, Mont.

"I remember years ago, that farmers in Eastern Illinois did the same thing," said he. "They kept the seed and destroyed the straw. It occurred to some enterprising men to build a paper mill to manufacture this straw into paper. Up to that time practically no use had been made of it.

"A very small part of that product was fed to stock, but the straw had no market value. After the establishment of the paper mill the price of flax straw steadily advanced until it reached the price of $7 and $8 per ton for this purpose alone. The money received from the sale of what was formerly a waste product more than paid the entire expense of producing the crop."—Minneapolis Tribune.

Coenen & Pederson have again reopened their cigar factory.

Wm. Curran returned to this city last week.

PERTINENT POINTERS.

Daniel Shaw—In conversation with settlers in the southern part of Roseau county recently, I was surprised to learn that they all desired to do their trading here but were prevented on account of the poor roads. They said that Thief River Falls was the best market point in this section of the state, and that goods could be purchased cheaper here than elsewhere. If good roads were built I believe the merchants would find that their trade would greatly increase.

Carl Kretzschmar—Some people seem to be afraid to have the city go in debt for water works and sewerage. When I was in business in Crookston I trusted out to the farmers over $50,000 in one year, and I did not loose anything either. Surely a city with the resources of Thief River Falls had not ought to be afraid to go in debt.

John Smith—I am one of the farmers that intend to raise more potatoes in the future. When the price is low I can use them to advantage feeding them to hogs.

C. C. Jackson—I would like to see a city council elected this fall that would go to work and build country roads. Have the work done by contract and let it be permanent. This spending of a few hundred dollars in making roads "passable" is just throwing away money, for which we receive no benefit. I don't care how much is spent if it is only done economically.

T. G. Thompson—I met an old acquaintance from Buffalo River, Clay county, last week and he states that a large number of farmers from that section are coming up here this fall for the purpose of buying farm lands and go into the stock raising business. They have plenty of money, are enterprising, and will make valuable citizens.

Chas. A. Robbecke—I have been shouting for water works until I am black in the face—and I don't intend to quit until a system is put in. Of course a few more fires will bring the people to their senses, but that may prove too expensive. Don't wait until the horse is stolen before you put a lock on the barn.

The Ruskin commonwealth of socialists at Waycross, Ga., has failed, according to a dispatch to the New York Sun. Only three families remain, the others having departed for the North and West. Their printing outfit is advertised for sale and the land will go the same way. This will wipe out the last vestige of the colony, which went from Tennessee two years ago.

The compliments of the Companion to fifteen millions of boys and girls who again take their seats in the schoolrooms and pick up their books! A lively scrap between a clergyman and a layman was witnessed at a baptizing ceremony in Stanchfield Lake, Minn. George Tomlinson had agreed to be baptized there by the Rev. Mr. Orrock, but his nerve deserted him at the last moment. The clergyman attempted to use force, and there was a struggle, the convert angrily resisting. After a prolonged contest, the minister succeeded in ducking the unwilling convert in three feet of muddy water.

The death is announced at Genoa, at the age of 98, of Pierre Maurier, a Frenchman, who lived on the island of Elba when Napoleon took up his compulsory residence there in April, 1814. Pierre remembered hearing the news towards the end of February, 1815, that the Emperor, with over 1,000 followers, had sailed away in feluccas bound for Provence. The lad used to carry eggs and fruit to the kitchen of the Emperor and one day that famous potentate caught him stoning a dog and sharply reproved him. Maurier was presented to Victor Emmanuel in 1863 and the King was much interested when he heard from Pierre's own lips his memories of the great Napoleon.

Figures may not lie, but they are often disappointing. Census figures, especially, are apt to fall below what is expected of them. The recent census of Canada shows a population of 5,338,833, which is an increase of 505,594 over the total of 1891. The gain of about ten per cent in ten years seems to many Canadians a meager result of a decade of prosperity, and of energetic efforts to promote immigration. But it is the rule nowadays that city populations grow faster than rural, and Canada has few cities. Only eighteen places in the Dominion have more than ten thousand inhabitants. But there remains the consolation that not all the elements of national greatness are measured by a count of heads.

Several articles of jewelry embedded in the flesh were discovered in the making of an autopsy on the body of Paul Shirvell, a Russian, who was killed in a mine in Pennsylvania. In the leg was a miniature dumbbell, about the size of a cuff button. In each instance the jewelry had been fastened in the man's flesh, which had grown over the article, completely hiding it from view. On the body of Frank Lorenz, who committed suicide at White Haven recently, was found similar ornaments embedded in the flesh. It is believed Lorenz and Shirvell were political exiles from Siberia, and that the fastening of jewelry in their bodies was a part of the punishment inflicted by prison authorities.

Commodore Perry is a name high in honor in the United States navy, having been the title of two famous brothers—Oliver Hazard and Matthew Calbraith Perry. On September 10th, eighty-eight years ago, the elder brother, a young lieutenant who had never seen a naval fight, fought that fierce Battle of Lake Erie, which saved the Northwest to the United States and gave the world the dispatch: "We have met the enemy and they are ours." Forty-eight years ago last July the younger brother landed in Japan with a message from the president which practically opened that country to the world. The Matthew Perry monument recently unveiled at Kurihama, Japan, is a shaft thirty-three feet high made of a rare native stove and bearing an inscription in gold written by Marquis Ito. A dense crowd of natives witnessed the ceremonies, both Japanese and American battleships fired salutes from the harbor, and one of the speakers was Rear Admiral Beardslee, who, as a midshipman under Perry, was present at the original entry.

Henry J. Furber, Jr., professor of political economy at the Northwestern University, Evanston, Ill., has been decorated with the Cross of the Legion of Honor, in recognition of his interest in the educational affairs of France. About five years ago Prof. Furber suggested to the French Minister of Public Instruction certain changes in the rules governing foreign students attending the French universities. The suggestions were adopted, and the change was followed by a marked increase in the number of American students in French colleges.

MONTANA LYNCHING.

Alleged Assault on Little Girl Cause for Action of Mob.

Helena, Mont., Oct. 4. — James Edward Brady committed an unusually brutal assault upon five-year-old Ida Pugsley in Helena Tuesday, and early yesterday morning was taken from the jail by a mob and hanged to a telegraph pole in the Haymarket square, about three blocks from the jail. The crowd was orderly, and after the man had been hanged it quietly dispersed. There were about two hundred men engaged in the affair and they were all masked.

BIG FIRE AT MARINETTE.

Grocery Warehouse Destroyed Entailing a Loss of $200,000.

Marinette, Wis., Oct. 4. — Yesterday afternoon fire destroyed the warehouse of Smith, Thorndike & Brown, wholesale grocers, together with contents, entailing a loss of about $200,000. Among the goods stored was a large quantity of kerosene oil, which exploded with damaging effect to other goods. It was with the greatest difficulty that the mills and lumber yards of the N. Ludington company were saved. The damage is partly covered by insurance.

MIDWINTER LAUNCHING.

Three Boats Which Will Be Floated the Coming Winter.

West Superior, Wis., Oct. 4. — The spectacle of a launching in midwinter is one that will probably be the opportunity of the people of this city to see the coming winter. There are three boats to be built at the Superior Shipbuilding company's yards, and owing to the fact that all three cannot be building at the same time, one of these boats will have to be launched in the middle of the winter.

FIGHT WAS RENEWED.

And Alexander Longstaff Is Under Arrest for Shooting.

Helena, Mont., Oct. 4.—A Red Lodge special says that Alexander Longstaff shot and seriously wounded Max Gerald. The men had quarreled during the forenoon and renewed it upon meeting again in the main street in the evening. Longstaff pulled a revolver, shooting Gerald twice in the abdomen. Longstaff was arrested.

La Crosse, Wis., Oct. 4. — It was formally announced yesterday that the Twin City Telephone company would construct an independent long-distance line of copper between St. Paul and Minneapolis and La Crosse, the improvement to cost in the neighborhood of $250,000. Work has already been commenced, and it is thought the line will be completed by Thanksgiving.

Sunk in the Rapids.

La Crosse, Wis., Oct. 4.—The Satellite, the bowboat of the steamer Saturn, was sunk near Le Claire in the rapids. The two boats had a raft in tow, and a strong wind carried the bowboat out of its course. It is one of the most dangerous points on the river, as the rocks in the stream and banks make it possible for a raft to crush a boat in a very short time.

Merrillan Postoffice Robbed.

Merrillan, Wis., Oct. 4.—The postoffice was robbed Monday night, the robbers using tools taken from a local smithey. A violent storm prevailed at the time. The office was guarded by a St. Bernard dog, but there was no disturbance. The loss was $15 in stamps. The outside combination of the safe was broken. The thieves were evidently amateurs.

Unknown Killed by Cars.

La Crosse, Wis., Oct. 4.—An unknown man was killed at Bangor by a Chicago & Northwestern train. He was a Bohemian or Italian, 5 feet 5 inches tall, 140 pounds, well dressed in a black coat and striped trousers, and had an excursion ticket dated July, from Hurley to St. Paul. It was the only article on his person.

Charged With Breaking Into Cars.

Willmar, Minn., Oct. 4. — Six Great Northern employes were arrested here yesterday on the charge of breaking into and stealing goods from bonded cars. The deed is alleged to have been committed about a year ago near Crookston, where the men are now in custody awaiting trial.

War Dance at a Funeral.

Fort Meade, S. D., Oct. 4. — An Indian baby died here this week which belonged to the band of Pine Ridge Sioux who are visiting the Hills. It was buried in the post cemetery along with the dead soldiers. The Indians celebrated the event with a war dance.

Potatoes Are Thriving.

Ridgeway, Iowa, Oct. 4.—The recent rains have made the best pastures of the season, and the potato crop that was thought to be a failure is now booming and there will be potatoes to a considerable extent.

Burglars Loot Store.

Wabasha, Minn., Oct. 4. — The general store of A. L. Millis was burglarized and a large quantity of clothing carried away. Local parties are suspected, and a number of arrests will probably follow.

ONE FOR SCHLEY

WATCH OFFICER OF THE BROOKLYN TESTIFIES FOR THE ADMIRAL.

EXPLAINS CHANGE IN THE LOG

ORIGINAL ENTRY REGARDING THE FAMOUS LOOP WAS ERRONEOUS.

BOB EVANS RISES TO EXPLAIN

SCHLEY'S COUNSEL OBJECTS TO THE INTRODUCTION OF A LETTER.

Washington, Oct. 4. — At the Schley inquiry yesterday after Rear Admiral Evans made a few corrections in the testimony offered Tuesday, he arose from the witness chair and said he wished to make a statement to the court. He took from his pocket a letter that had been written by Capt. Cook of the Brooklyn. This letter in response to a request from "Fighting Bob" denied that the commander of the Iowa had boasted that he had blown the bow off one torpedo boat and the stern from another. Mr. Rayner had asked him a question in this line the day previous.

"Let me see the letter," said Admiral Schley's counsel, just as Evans was clearing his voice preparatory to reading it. Rayner read it through carefully, while Admiral Schley peered at it over his attorney's shoulder. The admiral read it through carefully and shook his head slowly. Mr. Rayner said he did not wish to be put in the position of objecting to what appeared to be a Personal Vindication,

but as Capt. Cook was not present he did not deem this the proper place to present it. Admiral Evans withdrew the letter temporarily after Admiral Dewey called attention to the fact that Rear Admiral Evans had practically stated the contents of the letter to the court.

An interesting turn was given to the inquiry by the introduction of the first witness in Admiral Schley's behalf. This was Lieut. James J. Doyle, who was watch officer on board the flagship Brooklyn during the war with Spain. Mr. Doyle was called by the department, but as it also had been the purpose of Admiral Schley to summon him, advantage was taken of his presence on the stand to question him as an original witness for "the applicant." He was under examination by Mr. Rayner in the interest of the admiral when the court adjourned for the day.

Concerning the Loop.

Before undergoing examination at Mr. Rayner's hands Lieut. Doyle, at Capt. Lemly's request, explained his part in the battle of July 3 and his original entry in the ship's log concerning the famous loop and his alteration of that entry because he subsequently discovered that his first entry had been erroneous.

Lieut. Commander Sharp, who commanded the Vixen during the Spanish war, also gave his testimony during the day, giving especial attention to notes of the battle of July 3, made by Lieut. Harlow of his ship.

Admiral Evans, Capt. Sigsbee and Correspondent Dineaide were all recalled for the purpose of correcting their testimony as given yesterday, and all made additional statements.

Just before the adjournment for the day the court announced its decision not to allow any questions concerning the blockade off Santiago after July 1, when Commander-in-Chief Admiral Sampson arrived there.

Lemly Almost Through.

Judge Advocate Lemley hopes to conclude the presentation of evidence for the department this week. Attorney Rayner said that the Schley side had summoned thirty-seven witnesses, but might not examine them all. He expects the case to continue until the first or second week in November, as it is proposed to have Admiral Schley read all the testimony before going on the stand in his own behalf. Judge Advocate Lemly has a number of witnesses yet to call from the department, including several of the captains in the flying squadron. The Schley counsel have endeavored to prove by the department's witnesses that the admiral was hampered by the failure of his captains to co-operate with him, and also to show that Schley did as much as Sampson ordered.

RETURN TO PEKIN.

Elaborate Preparations Being Made for the Journey of the Chinese Court.

Pekin, Oct. 4.—Dispatches from Sian Fu announce that the Chinese court is preparing to start about October 6. The temporary palace there is being dismantled, and all the furnishings will be carried for use en route. The officials and servants will constitute a caravan numbering from 3,000 to 5,000 persons with 1,200 carts and several thousand horses and mules have been collected in the Sinon-fu district. Two parties of officials have already started to make preparations along the line. The towns through which the court will pass are engaged in decorating temorarp palaces and collecting supplies. The emperor, or the empress dowager in his name, has issued an edict strictly commanding the officials to pay for all supplies.

GERMAN EXCUSE.

Trying to Defend Removal of Astronomical Instruments From Pekin.

Berlin, Oct. 4.—In view of the criticism of the German action in removing astronomical instruments from Pekin the semi-official North German Gazette explains that after the final signature of the peace protocol Germany placed the instruments at the disposal of China. The latter, however, in view of the trouble in reconveying and re-erecting the instruments, renounced her claim to them.

CASTLE'S FIGURES.

Show a Smaller Deficit Than for the Preceding Year.

Washington, Oct. 6.—Auditor Henry A. Castle, for the postoffice department yesterday closed the books of the postal service for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1901. The year's business is shown to be as follows: Receipts, $111,631,193; expenditures, $115,554,921; net deficit, including losses by fire, etc., $3,981,521. The deficit is about $1,500,000 smaller than for the previous year. Owing to the extension of the free delivery and other augmented appropriations in every department, the expenses for the service were $8,200,000 greater than the preceding year. Receipts increased $9,250,000.

RUSH WORK ON SOLACE.

Naval Transport Needed to Take Marines to Panama.

Vallejo, Cal., Oct. 6. — Orders have been received at Mare island to rush the repairs on the naval transport Solace, as she must be ready for service by Oct. 16. A force of shipfitters, joiners and machinists worked on her last night, and the men will work overtime from now on to get the vessel ready in time. It is stated that the vessel is needed to take a force of marines to Panama.

Girl Burned to Death.

Edmore, Mich., Oct. 6.—By a fire here yesterday afternoon, Florence Grant, aged seven years, was burned to death. The blaze started from a gasoline explosion in a meat market, and destroyed that and several other stores. The girl lived with her parents over the market. Loss about $5,000.

Anarchist Rag Seized.

Rome, Oct. 6.—The Agitasion, an anarchist sheet, has been seized by the police for publishing an article, signed by Malatesta, defending Czolgosz.

When the white dove coos to his drowsy mate,
And birds in the trees rejoice,
Old Brahma stands on the barn-yard gate
And shouts in a lusty voice:
"I feel better this mor-rning,"
And the bantam thinks 'tis true,
For he answers back in a tenor tone:
"Without—a doubt—you do-o."

The house dog lies with his head on his paws,
And blinks at the morning call:
The cat with a field-mouse in her jaws
Comes running home on the wall;
While the Brahma heralds the morn again,
And the bantam takes the cue:
"I feel better this mor-rning,"
"Without—a doubt—you do-o."

The birds with a glorious burst of song
Make glad the orchard boughs;
And the farmer, swinging his pails along,
Goes out to milk the cows:
The work of the day begins again,
And the roosters call anew:
"I feel better this mor-rning,"
"Without—a doubt—you do-o."

The Problem of Life.

BY ETHEL M. COLSON.

(Copyright, 1901, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

If there was one particular characteristic or quality for which the Rev. Charles Billings was especially distinguished it was that of truthfulness. He was truthful, moreover, for reasons quite apart and side from his calling. As a slim and pallid youth at boarding school he had been famous—and popular—because of his exceeding candour. Later, as the devoted and conscientious rector of the Angelican Catholic Church of the Atonement, he was popular and beloved in spite of it. And if ever the meek and lowly-minded clergyman knew a suspicion of spiritual pride it was because of the absolutely spotless and unstained condition of his life-record in the matter of truth-telling.

To have expected the Rev. Charles Billings, therefore, to have deliberately—albeit unwillingly—yielded to the temptation to give utterance to an unequivocal lie would have been manifestly outrageous. And yet——

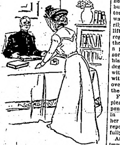
The door of the church study opened, one evening, to admit a woman—a woman tall, slender, of good figure, and expressive face, mirroring just then numerous unpleasant emotions. The Rev. Charles Billings knew her for one of his parishoners, the wife of solid John Brewster, merchant of the old-time Chicago, and a man who was popularly suspected of being a better business man than husband. Certain it is, the fine eyes of his wife had long since acquired a look of weary and patient resignation.

Straight up to the table at which the priest sat hurried the woman. In her eagerness and agitation she never saw the surprised but soothing gesture which beckoned her to a chair. But as she sank into it mechanically it became evident that she had been crying.

"Oh Father Billings!" she exclaimed, wildly—the gentle little priest being so designated by his High Church congregation—"Oh Father Billings do help me! If you do not—" but it was some minutes before she could go on.

"I met an—an old friend this afternoon," she explained, subsequently, "and we—we had an ice together, just to talk of—of old times. There wasn't a shadow of harm in it, although we used—we used to love each other. Perhaps," with a sudden accession of recklessness, "I love him still. At all events, someone—my husband," her voice and face all concentrated bitterness, "plotted and came between us. Then I married—Mr. Brewster. I—I felt so helpless; I didn't know what else to do. And I've tried to be a good wife to him, a far better wife than he has been a husband. I've never seen—the other man—since I was married, until today.

"We came upon each other quite by accident, and we only—we only talked a little of—of that other time. But as we left the confectioner's by one door



"Oh, Father Billings!"

my husband came in at another. If he saw me—and I'm almost sure he did—he'll believe the worst in a moment. He judges everybody by himself. And the fact that he had another woman with him won't make a bit of difference—to him. If he saw me—and I know, I feel that he did—he's at home now, questioning my maid. He always does so if he finds me out of the house, no matter where I am, nor how short a time I've been absent. And if he discovers that I haven't been making charity calls this afternoon, as I told my maid I intended doing, he'll—he'll throw me aside like an old glove, or an answered letter. Oh, I know him." as the priest looked incredulous, "and I know what he'll do. And I—I don't know—ah yes, God help me! I do know—what will become of me. And I haven't a relative, scarcely a friend in the world, with the exception of yourself, Father Billings. If you don't help me, I'm—I'm afraid I'm lost forever!"

"What do you want me to do, my child?" asked the priest, quietly.

For answer, she sank on her knees beside him, catching at his hand with small, beseeching fingers that burned like fire.

"Tell him that I have been making charity calls," she said, hoarsely. "He won't believe me, but he'll believe you, if you tell him. Everybody knows," without a suspicion of grim humor, "how invariably truthful you are."

"But, my child," said the priest, gravely, "that would be a lie, a sin."

"I know it would be a lie," she made answer, "but would it be a sin if you did it to save another? And there are worse sins than lying, Father, and some of them are hard to avoid. I don't know how to tell you, but—I've no money, Father, I've no friends or relatives, and if my husband throws me aside there's only one person to whom I can turn for assistance—and—and—I do not want to go to—him."

The face of the priest was pale and puzzled. As a clergyman he knew lying to be sinful. As a man and a gentleman he hated lying on general principles. He was firmly convinced of the wickedness of doing evil that good may come. And yet—

"No, sir," he heard himself saying.

It was all so clear before him. If this woman did not still love the—the other man—she would not so fear and dread being thrown aside by her unloving, unloved husband. And, if so thrown aside, to whom else could she turn? That she was speaking the truth in regard to her husband's harshness and her own penniless condition the clergyman knew well. He knew more about solid John Brewster than most people, and for a hard man and exceeding close with his money all men knew him. That he would refuse to believe the meeting between his wife and the lover from whom he had parted her, by unfair means, solitary and as innocent as accidental was also tolerably certain.

Then, certainly, the problem lay between this woman's soul and his own—the priestly soul which had never yet been stained by lying.

Heavy steps sounded along the passageway leading from the street. The woman, springing to a chair on the other side of the table, looked at the priest beseechingly and bent hurriedly over some papers. A moment later and solid John Brewster himself strode into the room.

At sight of his wife the hard face changed, the expression faltered. The priest, rising to confront him, saw in his eyes both doubt and hesitation.

"I see my wife is with you," the man said, sullenly. "May I inquire if she has been with you all day?"

For a moment the priest struggled against a most human impulse, the mad, natural, all but uncontrollable inclination to knock down this intimidator of a woman and trample upon him. Then he remembered that he was a priest, and that there seemed but one way of helping the intimidator's victim. He turned his eyes toward her down-bent head, momentarily, and again the Problem of the Lie lifted its double-headed torment and regarded him. He saw, as if in vision, the Recording Angel who was so real a personage to him take down, with sorrowful sternness, the white scroll of his unstained veracity and degrade it, degrade it to the dust. His eyes filled with tears, suddenly, as though he had witnessed another's downfall. But, over and against this vision, was set the soul of this woman—and her peril.

For him, repentance and remorse in plenty. Nay, was he not already repenting the very thought of the sin in contemplation. For her—in case her fears were realized—no place of repentance, though she sought it carefully, with tears.

And, right or wrong, the unselfish impulse triumphed.

"No, sir," he heard himself saying, distinctly, after so brief an interval that even the angry husband noticed no hesitation, "she has not. I did not see her until after luncheon. But this afternoon she accompanied me on a round of charity calls, and, since our return, she has been busily engaged in making out her report to the Charity Calls Committee of the Woman's Auxiliary. She will be ready to accompany you home so soon as this is finished."

For this lie Father Charles Billings presently—and long—repented, and he will never cease to be anxious concerning its moral effect upon Mrs. Brewster—now slowly acquiring the habit of a negative happiness by utter self-forgetting. Also, the recurrent torture of his wretched inability to solve the problem of whether or not he did right in telling the lie will always serve the purpose of an exquisitely painful hair-shirt to the man who told it. But there are rare moments, now and then, when the problem and the repentance alike cease to trouble him—when he is glad in the conviction that the lie saved not only a woman's body from perdition, but also the woman's soul.

GAS KILLS FLUSHING TREES.

Leaks Out of the Mains and Affects the Tree Roots.

The people of Flushing, which has become famous for the beautiful shade trees which line its streets, have noticed recently that many big, sturdy trees have withered and become lifeless without apparent cause or injury. These trees were not confined to any one variety nor was any single locality alone affected. Horticultural experts examined the dead trees to see if they had been affected by insects or rust, but nothing of the kind was found. Then Samuel B. Parsons, a veteran nurseryman, was asked to make an investigation. He reported: "The condition of the trees indicates that they have been killed by illuminating gas which has escaped through the mains in the streets and has found its way to the roots. In several cases where the dirt has been dug up around the roots of the dead trees there has been a strong odor of gas. If a similar test was made with all the dead trees the same odor would be discovered. I do not know of anything else that would kill the trees." Most of the trees were planted more than fifty years ago. At the present rate, however, Mr. Parsons says he fears that all of them will be killed within five or six years. The same cause he says has killed many of the trees planted in Manhattan. Another nurseryman said that there is no doubt about the gas killing the trees in Flushing. "Last spring," said he, "we planted six trees in front of a residence here. All the trees budded, but just as they were about to put forth leaves one of them died. We replaced it, but when we dug the dead tree up there was a strong smell of gas. The second tree planted also died. Then we made a complaint to the gas company and found that not fifty feet away there was a leak in the gas main."

The managers of the Flushing gas plant declare that they are not to blame for the destruction of the trees. They say that there are dead trees on streets where there are no gas mains. The Flushing Association has promised to employ one of the best experts in the country to examine the trees.—New York Sun.

DEFECTS IN THE CAPITOL.

Whiteness of Main Body Retained by Frequent Painting.

Frederic Harrison's admiration for the capitol as an architectural work and the central object of the Washington landscape is shared by so many that one can always send a thrill of pained surprise through a part of every group of visitors by a reminder that only its two wings are built of marble, and that for the whiteness of its main body we must thank copious and oft-renowed applications of white paint. But quite as much astonishment is likely to be felt by most persons at the discovery that the great dome, which has been the delight of all beholders, is not precisely in the axis of the central portico, but about six feet out of place. Yet such is the case. It has been necessary to resort to some trickery to deceive the eye in taking in the whole effect of the edifice, but the cheat has been accomplished so cleverly that it may be forgiven. Another fact little known to the public is that the exquisite proportions of the dome are the result of accident, not design. The present lines do not follow the architectural drawings, because when the base of the dome proper was measured preparatory to lowering it into the collar, which was already in place for it, it was found to be too large. The collar could not be changed to fit, so the original base was cut off at the point where the diminishing diameter would slip into the collar. The result was most gratifying. If, as many experts assert, the present dome is perfect, it follows that the dome as first designed would have been imperfect, and if it had been used, one of the most satisfactory public edifices in the world would have lacked a large part of its present charm.—Boston Transcript.

A Remarkable Australian.

Sir George Dibbs, who has just presented King Edward with a walking stick of his own make, is one of the remarkable men of Australia. He is probably the only man in the empire who has passed through the two extreme experiences of a prime minister and a prisoner in jail. Sir George has twice been premier of New South Wales, and has held many other posts of the highest importance in the colony; and it was while he was a prominent public man that he had the courage to refuse to pay what he thought an extortionate bill of costs. He was committed to Darlinghurst jail, Sydney, for a year, and served the sentence through to the end.

Hi Henry's minstrel company gave performance at the Alhambra Saturday night and Sunday afternoon and evening, and gave good satisfaction to the audiences which gathered in Manager Miller's theater for a preliminary bit of enjoyment before the regular season of the Grand avenue house opens next Sunday afternoon with "Hunting for Hawkins."

Uncle Sam's Gun Shops

The extensive plant established by the United States government at the Washington navy yard is one of the attractions for visitors to the capital city. Several immense buildings are required for the accommodation of the machinery and workmen employed, and the entire work is carried on under the supervision of naval officers. The principal structure of the group of buildings is approximately 900 feet long and 100 feet wide, and is devoted to the boring, rifling and jacketing of the guns, or the complete construction of the guns proper as distinguished from the carriage and other accessories. The well-known Morgan traveling cranes and hoisting apparatus are employed for suspending and moving the heavy ordnance, and in applying the jacket thereto, and this machinery is all of the largest and most substantial type.

Trackways and beams of great size and strength extend along the sides and across the upper portion of the building to support the traveling hoists, and the suspending chains, made up of enormous links freely travel longitudinally and across the building, and upon each of the movable beams is a house or cab containing the propelling mechanism and the operator.

Gigantic lathes are used for supporting the heavy guns and operating the drills and other required tools, and the most expert workmen are employed in this important work.

The "jacketing" of the gun is a delicate operation, requiring the highest order of mechanical skill. The slightest flaw or inequality in the surface of the gun is quickly detected, and frequently more than a single trial is necessary before the jacket is successfully placed in position. The visitor observing the "jacketing" process will be impressed with the quiet discipline of the workmen engaged. The master workman directs his subordinates, and especially those in charge of the hoisting apparatus, almost entirely by signals with the head and hands, and the noisy shouting of orders is not resorted to. In fact, the discipline of the great establishment is quite strict and along naval lines.

Numerous notices are conspicuously posted to the effect that workmen are not allowed to talk to visitors.

Necessarily the quality of the metal employed in the manufacture of the huge guns, constituting the armament of our great warships, is a matter of first importance, and the materials are subjected to the highest tests known to science. As a result of the great care required in this respect, as well as in the subsequent steps involved in the development of the finished product, the cost of producing these guns is very great.

Another large building is devoted to the building of gun carriages, especially designed to support the large guns and a large force of machinists is employed to operate the great variety of machinery employed in this branch of the work.

Many curious and specially designed machines are seen in operation here for scraping, shaving, drilling and recessing the hard gun metal, and most of them are entirely automatic, requiring only the attention of a skilled workman to adjust the work and keep the machinery in perfect working order.

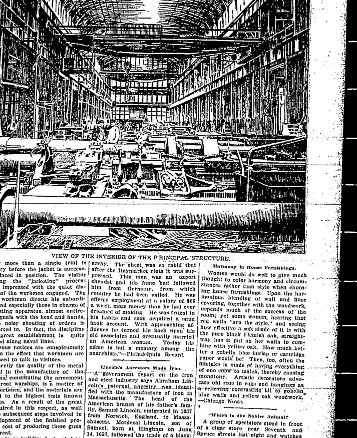
In still another separate building the work of forming and drawing cartridge cases is carried on, and this is by no means the least interesting department of the plant to the ordinary visitor. The rapid transformation of a bulky, cumbersome looking blank into a thin, shapely cylinder is an operation which attracts the eye and excites the interest of the unskilled lookeron.

The array of boxes or crates of completed cartridge cases ranged along one end of the building would indicate that Uncle Sam is a firm believer in the soundness of the injunction, "In time of peace prepare for war." The formidable looking rows of cartridge cases, however, are harmless, as they have yet to be charged with the projectiles and high explosives.

As above stated, all of the work connected with the gun plant is in charge of naval officers who are specialists in the construction of ordnance, and here and there about the great workshops is seen one of these officers arrayed at this season in his summer uniform of white duck, with a cap of the same color, the spotlessness of the garb contrasting conspicuously with the rather grimy surroundings and the greasy overalls of the hand workers.

The gun shops necessitated the establishment within the yard of a railway system on a small scale, and the tooting of locomotives and the shifting of loaded flat cars give evidence of industry and labor.

The manufacture of naval guns and ammunition has greatly increased the number of the government's employes, and constitute another step in the growth and development of our national strength and resources.



VIEW OF THE INTERIOR OF THE PRINCIPAL STRUCTURE.

Anarchists Don't Prosper.

"Very few anarchists ever become prosperous and contented citizens," says a detective. "There have been some instances, though. I have in mind one man who fifteen years ago was very prominent in anarchistic circles here. He even published a little paper in the interest of anarchy. The sheet was so rabid that after the Haymarket riot it was suppressed. This man was an expert chemist and his fame had followed him from Germany. Soon after he came to this country he had been offered employment at a salary of $60 a week, more money than he had ever dreamed of making. He was frugal in his habits and soon had a snug bank account. With approaching affluence he turned his back upon his old associates and eventually married an American woman. To-day his name is but a memory among the anarchists."—Philadelphia Record.

Lincoln's Ancestors Made Iron.

A government report on the iron and steel industry says Abraham Lincoln's paternal ancestry was identified with the manufacture of iron in Massachusetts. The head of the American branch of his father's family, Samuel Lincoln, emigrated in 1637 from Norwich, England, to Massachusetts. Mordecai Lincoln, son of Samuel, born at Hingham on June 14, 1657, followed the trade of a blacksmith at Hull, from which place he removed to Scituate, where "he built a spacious house and was a large contributor toward the erection of the ironworks at Bound Brook" in 1703. These works made wrought iron directly from the ore. Mordecai Lincoln had two sons, Mordecai, Jr., and Abraham, who settled in Berks county, Pa. Mordecai, Jr., was the great-great-grandfather of Abraham Lincoln.

A Funny Numeral System.

The natives of Murray Island, Torres strait, have a numeral system which is based on two numbers, netat, one, and neis, two. Above two they compute by composition—neis-netat, means three, neis i neis, two and two, four. Where they get above this figure they have recourse to different parts of the body, beginning with the little and other fingers of the left hand and going from there to the wrist, elbow, armpit, shoulder, etc., on the left side and thence down the right side to twenty-one; the toes giving ten numbers more, to thirty-one. Beyond this they are satisfied with "many."

"An Error in Nature."

Among the more interesting examples of uncommon British birds at the Zoo is a crossbill, the seed-eating fowl which Buffon stigmatized as being "an error and a defect in nature." But Buffon only dwelt upon the odd way in which the upper and lower beak cross each other obliquely, and was not aware that this apparently deformed bill is exceedingly serviceable in extracting the seeds of apples and pines, upon which the crossbill chiefly feeds. The specimen at the Zoo is of a greenish-yellow hue, but the full-dressed male bird is bright red, which color, together with its crossed bill, has been explained in a medieval legend as due to its attempts to draw out the nails from the cross.—London Express.

Eradicating Rabies.

During the whole of 1900 no case of rabies was found in England or Scotland and it is asserted with confidence that the disease which had been present for centuries has been entirely eradicated. This official statement justifies the stringent muzzling order passed by Parliament a few years ago and the vexatious regulations against importing dogs. A few cases of rabies were reported from Wales, where the regulations were not enforced strictly. For the first time in fifty-one years not a single person died of hydrophobia in England and Wales in in 1899.—New York Sun.

Harmony in House Furnishings.

Women would do well to give much thought to color harmony and circumstances rather than style when choosing house furnishings. Upon the harmonious blending of wall and floor covering, together with the woodwork, depends much of the success of the room; yet some woman, hearing that Flemish oak is "the style," and seeing how effective a soft shade of it is with the pure black Flemish oak, straightway has it put in to combine with yellow oak. How much better a gobelin blue burlap or cartridge paper would be! Then, too, often the mistake is made of having everything of one color to match, thereby causing monotony. Artistic decorators advocate old rose in rugs and hangings as a relieving contrasting bit to gobelin blue walls and yellow oak woodwork.—Chicago News.

Which Is the Nobler Animal?

A group of spectators stood in front of a cigar store near Seventh and Spruce streets last night and watched an intoxicated man being led home by a red setter dog. The man was almost helplessly drunk. He held the dog by a chain. Once in a while he would grab a lamppost and cling to it with one hand while he held the dog's chain by the other. The faithful, patient dog would sit down for a while and then would tug at the chain and arouse his inebriated master. "That's nothing new," remarked the center of the group at the cigar store; "that dog takes that young man home in that condition almost every Saturday night."—Philadelphia Record.

France's Increase in Population.

France is proud of the increase in her population. The census figures for this year are 38,641,333, an increase in five years of 412,364. The increase in the preceding five-year period was only 133,819.

TO KILL THE POPE

AUSTRIAN ANARCHIST IS CAUGHT LOITERING ABOUT THE VATICAN.

MURDEROUS DESIGNS SUSPECTED

POPE LEO AND CARDINAL RAMPOLLA WERE MARKED FOR VICTIMS.

M'KINLEY MURDER IS CHEERED

ANARCHIST SAYS CZOLGOSZ HAS EARNED GRATITUDE OF WORLD.

Rome, Oct. 8.—An Austrian anarchist named Glavenovich was arrested yesterday while loitering about the Vatican. It is reported that he was aiming to murder the pope and Cardinal Rampolla. He carried a razor.

McKinley Murder Cheered.

London, Oct. 7.—For the first time the assassination of President McKinley was applauded at a public meeting here yesterday afternoon which was attended by about 200 anarchists. H. Kelley of New York drew cheers from a part of the audience by declaring that Czolgosz had probably done a good thing in shooting Mr. McKinley. Other speakers varying from the mild dreamer to the fiery vaporer, expressed anarchistic views and elicited slight applause. One of them declared that Czolgosz had earned the eternal gratitude of the workers of the world. A feature of the meeting was the presence of a number of youths. A detective who attended the meeting was asked whether any practical effect was to be expected from such gatherings. He replied: "Look at these youngsters. Who knows."

INDICTS KENTUCKY POLITICIANS.

Louisville Grand Jury Returns Bills Against Democrats.

Louisville, Ky., Oct. 8. — Six indictments against men accused of breaking into Republican headquarters after the July city and county primary election and destroying ballots and paraphernalia were returned by the grand jury. Those indicted are as follows: Emanuel Paretto, A. Jacobson, Max Louis; Herman Lochner, Dr. F. H. Hart, Victor Quigley. The charge against them is housebreaking. Of those indicted three were candidates in the primary, all being defeated.

DEFENDS CZOLGOSZ.

New York Baker, Evidently an Anarchist, Is Arrested.

New York, Oct 8. — Thomas Holzekonk, twenty-three years of age, a baker, was arrested here. He was having a hot argument with a number of men outside a saloon and was defending Czolgosz for killing President McKinley. A new dagger was found on him. He refused absolutely to say anything after arrest, and the police, thinging perhaps he might have some connection with an anarchist group, have detailed detectives to look into the case.

HE DID RIGHT.

Rev. McCammish Exonerated by the Coroner's Jury.

Carbondale, Ill., Oct. 8.—The coroner's jury summoned to inquire into the killing of John C. Brown on the streets of this city Saturday rendered a verdict fully exonerating Rev. Joseph McCammish, who shot him. Brown, jealous of the preacher, attacked him with a knife on the public square, but McCammish, who had been told that Brown had threatened to kill him, was armed and shot his assailant through the lung.

FRENCH SCANDAL.

Dismissal of Gen. Davoust Give Food to Enemies of Ministry.

Paris, Oct. 8.—The dismissal of Gen. Davoust of the Legion of Honor is attaining a scandal of serious proportions. The enemies of the government allege that they see in it a chance to deal a damaging blow to the ministry on the ground that it has dishonored the Legion of Honor, as is proved by the numerous resignations of the highest officials.

NEARLY LYNCHED.

An Oregon Blacksmith Maligns the Late President McKinley.

Pendleton, Or., Oct. 8.—A blacksmith named McWilliams of Alba narrowly escaped lynching at Pilot Knob. McWilliams maligned the late President McKinley. A mob of men and boys started for the blacksmith. McWilliams fled from here and walked during the entire night.

Billy May Be Paroled.

Sioux City, Iowa, Oct. 8. — Billy Young, the official bootblack at the Iowa penitentiary at Anamosa, who is serving a life sentence for killing Geo. Elliott in a gambling house quarrel Dec. 16, 1896, over 20 cents, may get his liberty on a parole in a few months. Young is a negro, and has been an unusual prisoner. He is a safety, and receives a fee of 25 cents a month from each officer and guard for boot blacking. From his income he has saved $200. He has a brussels carpet on the floor of his cell and has neat pictures on the walls.

For Faribault Schools.

Faribault, Minn., Oct. 8.—The annual meeting of the Faribault school district resulted in the re-election of A. Blodgett, Jr., and E. N. Leavens as members of the board of education. The sum of $22,000 was voted to maintain schools.

Warehouse Destroyed.

Chicago, Oct. 8.—The six-story building at the foot of Michigan avenue, used by the Barry Brothers Transportation company as a warehouse, was destroyed by fire yesterday. Loss on building and contents $100,000.

BISHOP DUDLEY IS PRESIDENT.

Triennial Convention of American Episcopals.

San Francisco, Oct. 4.—The triennial convention of the Episcopal Church of America was formally organized yesterday by the election of Bishop Dudley of Kentucky as president and Rev. S. Hart of Kansas City secretary of the house of bishops; Dr. John S. Lindsay of Massachusetts, chairman and Rev. Charles Hutchins, secretary of the house of deputies. No other business of importance was transacted during the first business session of the convention.

CORBIN MAKES FIRM DENIAL.

He Was Not Interested in the Hemp Combination.

Washington, Oct. 4. — When the investigation of the charges against Lieut. Col. Heistand was resumed yesterday by the senate committee on military affairs William C. McIntyre, who was attorney for Maj. Hawkes at the time he made his settlement with Col. Heistand, was called to the stand. He related the substance of an interview with Gen. Corbin concerning the settlement. Hawkes, it appears, desired an appointment with more pecuniary remuneration in the way of settlement. Gen. Corbin told him (McIntyre) to see Assistant Secretary Meiklejohn. The latter, disclaiming any connection with the hemp combination, said he would be glad to do something for Hawkes. The details of the settlement effected, according to McIntyre, included the appointment of Hawkes to a civil position.

Gen. H. C. Corbin, adjutant general, who was named in the resolution as one of the parties to the deal, testified that Col. Heistand made a general statement to him concerning the organization of a company and asked him if he would like to invest in it. He thought favorably of the concern, but two or three days later he told Heistand that he had no money to invest in any company.

HAY MAY RETIRE.

Secretary Gage Says That Mr. Hay Is Tired of the Business.

Boulder, Colo., Oct. 4. — Lyman J. Gage, secretary of the treasury, arrived in the city on his way to Camp Talcot. Speaking of the rumored intention of Secretary Hay to retire from the cabinet, Mr. Gage said:

"Secretary Hay is getting tired of the business. He is a man of the strictest honor. He is very sensitive, however, and it hurts him, after he has worked hard, to be misrepresented, cartooned and lampooned. He is independently rich. He can do as he wishes, go wherever he desires. He has a few very intimate friends, and he would rather enjoy life surrounded by agreeable companions and his books than attend to the tiresome, changeless routine of the office of secretary of state. I should not be surprised if he would withdraw. If so Mr. Root probably will be his successor."

PLEDGES MADE BY M'KINLEY.

They Are Religiously Fulfilled by Roosevelt.

Washington, Oct. 4. — The president yesterday appointed John S. Dean as district attorney for Kansas. Senator Benton of Kansas had recommended B. H. Tracey for this appointment, but he withdrew that indorsement when he was told that the president intended to carry out what he regarded as the pledge of President McKinley to appoint Mr. Dean. This was one of the appointments President McKinley had decided upon, but had not announced before his death. It was similar to that of W. B. Ridgely of Illinois for controller of the currency. There are several more appointments that will be made in the same manner.

PURE FOOD TEST CASE.

Grocer Arrested for Selling Colored Butterine Is Acquitted.

Elgin, Ill., Oct. 4.—The jury in the test case of Food Commissioner Patterson and Commissioner Burke of Chicago against August Scheele, a local grocer, for alleged violations of the pure food law in the sale of butterine, last night returned a verdict in favor of the defendant after taking one ballot. This is a decided victory for the grocers, as the arrest and prosecution of the Elgin merchant was to have been, and, in fact, was brought about by the commissioners in order that the law which says that colored butterine must not be sold, could be properly tested.

IN M'KINLEY'S MEMORY.

British Ethical Culturists Will Hold a Memorial Service.

London, Oct. 4.—A movement is on foot under the auspices of English ethical culturists for a national memorial service in honor of the late President McKinley. Elaborate exercises will be held in the assembly hall of the Hamstead Ethical Institute on Sunday.

Albert Shaw the Orator.

Chicago, Oct. 4.—The University of Chicago has selected Albert Shaw, editor of the American Review of Reviews, as the orator at the next convocation of the university, which will be held Dec. 17.

Chou Fu Gives Out Taels.

Pekin, Oct. 4.—Chou Fu, the provincial treasurer, has begun the payment of nearly 5,000,000 taels as indemnity to native converts on account of the Boxer uprising and the loss of their property.

INTENSE FEELING

IN MILITARY CIRCLES BECAUSE OF THE MASSACRE IN SAMAR.

AUTHORS OF DEED WERE PACIFICOS

HAD TAKEN THE OATH OF ALLEGIANCE AND SOME HELD OFFICE.

ALL GARRISONS ON THEIR GUARD

CONVEYS A LESSON OF NECESSITY FOR INCREASED VIGILANCE.

Manila, Oct. 8.—The disaster in Samar has produced general uneasiness, and strict orders have been issued to all the garrisons to guard against a similar surprise. There is intense feeling throughout the army because of the massacre, which would not be the case to any such extent had it been the work of ordinary insurgents. The latter might have been expected to commit such an outrage. Feeling is particularly intense in military circles because the authors of the massacre were pacificos, most of whom had taken the oath of allegiance, and many of them, including the president of Bagangiga, were actually holding office. Some of the after effects are shown at many points, particularly at Baulan and Cutucan, in the Provinces of Batangas and Manila, where disaffection

Is Manifesting Itself,

although it is not likely to be allowed to go far. On the other hand, the officers and troops at all the garrisons throughout the archipelago feel that the disaster conveys a lesson to themselves of the necessity for increased vigilance. Maj. Morris Foote of the Ninth United States infantry, who has returned here from the Island of Samar, was in Balangiga the day before the disaster to Company C. He says that Capt. Connell had been fully warned and had taken what he (Foote) considered very necessary precaution. Information that a plot was brewing among the Filipinos came to Maj. Foote through a priest, who said it was the plans of the populace at North Balinga and Basay to attack the garrison. Basay garrison from a cock pit in the rear of the barracks. Orders were immediately given to demolish the cockpit and extra guards were stationed.

There is a misunderstanding between Gen. Chaffee and the supreme court regarding their respective jurisdictions. The question arose over an ex-soldier, who while acting as a military messenger, refused to perform his duties and was deported. He was taken from a transport on a writ of habeas corpus. Gen. Chaffee claims to have power equal to that of the supreme court, as they are both acting under the war power granted to the president, and hence he did not require to concurrence of the court to deport the man. The question is important as it involves the authority of the military system.

PANIC IN A HOSPITAL.

Delirious Patient Runs Amuck With a Knife.

Salt Lake City, Utah, Oct. 8.—In a fit of delirium August Sinnel, a powerfully built Finnish miner, who was suffering from acute erysipelas, created a panic at Holy Cross hospital by arming himself with a large knife and rushing wildly about the corridors, threatening to murder anyone who sought to restrain him in his effort to break out of the hospital. Sinnel burst off an inner door, jumped through a glass window and disappeared before the police arrived. The shock of the excitement and fright was severe upon the sisters and the patients of the hospital, many of whom were on the verge of collapse.

At a late hour last night no trace of Sinnel had been found.

ACCUSED OF CRUELTY.

Alleged Cause of Mutiny on German Cruiser.

Berlin, Oct. 8.—An official statement is printed in the North German Gazette in regard to the recent mutiny on the German cruiser Gazelle. The story is that the men accused Capt. Noltzke of cruelty and unnecessary severity. The men were imprisoned for their alleged mutinous behavior. Then it was discovered that parts of six guns on the cruiser had been thrown overboard and a threatening note was found on the captain's table. An ablebodied seaman was placed in irons. In accordance with his own wish Capt. Noltzke has been relieved of the command of the ship and has left the service.

BIG FIRE AT PITTSBURG.

Damage to the Amount of $280,000 Done to a Clay Pot Plant.

Pittsburg, Oct. 8.—Fire yesterday in the Pittsburg Clay Pot works in Allegheny damaged the plant to the extent of $280,000, injuring six men and enforced the idleness for several months upon a force of 168 workmen. The injured men were firemen who were on the roof of the boiler house when the wall fell and they were carried with it. None of them will die. The fire originated in the boiler room from an unknown cause. Secretary William McMillan, general superintendent of the company states the loss at between $250,000 and $280,000 on which there is $180,000 insurance.

Furious Gales in Great Britain.

London, Oct. 8.—A furious gale raged yesterday over Great Britain, the channel, the North sea and Belgium. Several fatalities on land are reported as the result of falling trees. Slight casualties at sea are also reported.

Eighteen People Injured.

Atlanta, Ga., Oct. 8.—Two cars on the Consolidated street railway were in collision last evening, injuring eighteen people. Both cars were crowded and were under considerable headway on a down grade when they met.

COLLAPSE OF BOER RESISTANCE.

London Paper Learns That a Speedy Termination of the War Is Anticipated.

London, Oct. 5. — "We learn on very high authority," says the Daily Chronicle, "that a sudden and complete collapse of Boer resistance and the speedy termination of the war in South Africa are anticipated. The attacks on Fort Italia and Moedwill and the other recent engagements are regarded as the last desperate efforts of men who are wearied by the struggle and tired of being hunted. Therefore, beyond sending drafts to compensate for losses by casualties and disease, there is no intention to dispatch further reinforcements, or to employ Indian troops, as rumored, for guarding the lines of communication."

Commenting editorially upon this information the Chronicle, while admitting that there is much to be said for "the sanguine view taken by the war office," reminds the government of previous miscalculations and warns ministers that it is their duty no longer to trade on chances, but to make a success, humanely speaking, certain.

KILLED BY APACHES.

Five Settlers Wantonly Shot Down Without Warning.

Albuquerque, N. Mex., Oct. 5.—Five settlers living on Willow creek, near the old rendezvous of Geronimo and Victoria, have been killed by Apaches. According to reports received here yesterday a number of these Indians broke away from the San Carlos reservation and took refuge in the Mogollon mountains. On their way to their mountain fastnesses they came across the five settlers, two Mexicans and three Americans, whom they wantonly shot down. United States Marshal Foraker is at Silver City, and news of the uprising has been wired to him. Unless prompt action is taken it is believed that many more young bucks will join the band, in which case serious trouble may be looked for.

SHE DEFIES AUTHORITIES.

Emma Goldman Is Determined to Speak.

Chicago, Oct. 5. — Defying the order of Mayor Harrison to prevent anarchist rallies in this city at present, Emma Goldman, the "high priestess of anarchy," announced yesterday that she would not leave Chicago until she had an opportunity to speak. She declared that since the move by the city authorities to stop her from speaking in public was made she had decided to make several speeches here instead of one. She has, however, served notice that she will not announce the place of her addresses through the newspapers, and will not help the police in finding it out.

QUINCY FOR GOVERNOR.

Heads the Massachusetts Democratic Ticket.

Boston, Oct. 5. — The Democratic state convention held here yesterday placed the following ticket in nomination: Governor, Josiah Quincy, Boston; lieutenant governor, John W. Coughlin, Fall River; secretary of state, Wetmore B. Stone, Springfield; treasurer, Joseph I. Chalifoux, Lowell; auditor, James F. Dean, Salem; attorney general, F. F. Putnam, Uxbridge. For the first time in six years the Democracy of the state was united, and, with one exception, nominated the entire ticket by acclamation.

Sol Smith Russell Ill.

New Bedford, Mass., Oct. 5. — The many friends of Sol Smith Russell, the famous actor, were startled by the report that Mr. Russell was seriously ill at his summer home at Edgartown, Martha's Vineyard, Mass., having been attacked with a serious sinking spell. Mr. Russell was making preparations to close his house at Edgartown for the season. Miss Russell, daughter of the famous actor, last night said that Mr. Russell had a bad bilious attack, but it was not serious.

Jealous Man's Deed.

Marshall, Mo., Oct. 5. — William Thomas, jealous over the attentions paid his sweetheart, Miss Minnie Hayse, by Arthur Cox, shot and fatally wounded the girl at her home here and then killed himself. Thomas had called to see Miss Hayse and found Cox there. He left after threatening to kill both. After Cox had departed Thomas re-entered the house and shot the girl while she was alone. All lived in the country.

Snowstorm in Indiana.

Peru, Ind., Oct. 5. — Two inches of snow fell in the northern part of Miami county yesterday. The snowstorm was preceded by a heavy fall of hail and the mercury dropped almost to the freezing point. At Macy the fall of snow is reported to have exceeded a depth of two inches. The weather in this part of the state was reported the most severe experienced this early in the season for twenty-five years.

Storage Warehouse Burned.

Philadelphia, Oct. 5. — Leach's storage warehouse, owned by A. S. Leach & Co., one of the largest in the city, was completely destroyed by fire yesterday. The fire started from an unknown cause. Nothing was saved. Mr. Leach says the loss on his two buildings is $40,000, and that the household goods stored in them were worth from $250,000 to $500,000. The loss is only partially covered by insurance.

Gets Down to Business.

San Francisco, Oct. 5. — In conjunction with the opening of the triennial convention of the Episcopal Church of America yesterday a thanksgiving service was held in Grace church at which the missionary offering of the Women's auxiliary amounting to $104,295 was presented. The sessions of the conventions were devoted strictly to business.

Postoffice Frozen Out.

Yankton, S. D., Oct. 5. — Four more rural delivery routes were started from Yankton. It is understood that the postoffice at Lakeport will be discontinued because these routes thoroughly cover the country tributary to that office.

$1,000 Gone.

Cumberland, Wis., Oct. 5. — G. E. Scott's general store at Prairie Farm, in the southern part of this county, was burglarized of $1,000 in cash and notes. No clue.

INDIANS GET EVEN

THEY RETALIATE UPON VENEZUELAN MARAUDERS IN COLOMBIA.

MURDER MANY OF THE FUGITIVES

ATTITUDE OF INDIANS MOST SERIOUS FEATURE OF THE CAMPAIGN.

VENEZUELANS LOSE SIX HUNRDED

COLOMBIANS ARE VICTORIOUS IN A TERRIBLY BLOODY BATTLE.

Colon, Oct. 5.—The most serious feature of the Guajara campaign to-day is the attitude of the Guajara Indians. When the Venezuelans first entered the peninsula they robbed the Indians of their cattle and generally maltreated them. The Indians are now retaliating, cruelly mutilating and murdering many of the numerous fugitives, who have been struggling since the defeat over the waterless, burning flat peninsula in an effort to reach their lines or the coast.

Gen. Davita's first fight at Curoga Was an Absolute Rout.

Five Venezuelan battalions of 400 men each were engaged and the Colombians are estimated at the same number. It is now known that Gen. Echeverria was killed on the battlefield and not shot by the Colombians. The battalion called the "Sacred battalion," composed of gentlemen volunteers, mounted, was the first to break and retreat before the Colombians. After Gen. Echeverria was killed Gen. Davita, Clodomiro Castillo and Emilio Castro, a brother of President Castro, fled the field. Another battalion then broke. The three remaining battalions kept up the fighting after the flight of the higher officials until routed. About 600 were killed on the Venezuelan side, including thirty minor officers. All the flags of the Venezuelans were lost, as well as Gen. Davita's cannon, variously estimated at from 5 to 15. Such as were not captured by the Colombians were thrown into the river by the retreating Venezuelans.

Massacred by Indians.

The Indians ambushed Gen. Davita's retreating vanguard, composed of 200 men, and annihilated it.

Clodomiro Castillo, who is a Colombian, now commands the Venezuelan forces at the front of Guajara peninsula and Emilio Castro now commands "the sacred battalion."

The general plan of campaign, so far as it can be gathered from the latest Maracaibo messages, seems to be that about 800 reinforcements left them Oct. 1 to join the Sanchez expedition to Sinmaica.

Vague, unverifiable, but persistent reports are current here and have been current for four days, that President Castro's Venezuelan forces at Tachera and in the vicinity of San Cristobal suffered defeat at the hands of Gen. Rangel Garbiras and his Colombian conservative supporters Sept. 23 and 26.

MORE MEN WANTED.

Construction of Duluth, Virginia & Rainy River.

Duluth, Minn., Oct. 5. — Four hundred men is all that the Minnesota Construction company has been able to secure for the work of building the Duluth, Virginia & Rainy River road, and the company is scouring the labor centers far and wide in an effort to get 500 more. President Cook says that he has never known a time when men were so hard to get. Wages are high and the company offers work for two years or more in connection with logging operations in winter. Steel for thirty-one miles of the new road has been purchased. Fifteen thousand cedar ties have been bought and 250,000 will be cut this winter. Three camps are on the first ten-mile division and two more are to be put on as fast as men can be had. Virginia is the headquarters for the company, though the general offices are in Duluth. The new road will be put through to Koochiching about next fall. It will open up a territory containing two billion feet of timber suitable for lumber owned or controlled by President Cook and his associates, together with a large amount of tie and telegraph pole timber. In connection with the Duluth, Missabe & Northern road, the new road will afford a direct line from Duluth to the international border, the northern terminus to be at Koochiching, opposite Fort Frances.

BALLOON RACE.

Feature of New York Day at the Pan-American Exposition.

Buffalo, Oct. 5. — The challenge recently sent out by Prof. Charles Litchfield, the Boston aeronaut, has been accepted by Aaron Stevens, now in this city, and the balloon race is to come off here under the auspices of the Pan-American exposition Oct. 9. The race in the air is to start from the stadium on the exposition grounds at 3 o'clock in the afternoon for a purse of $3,000. Oct. 9 is New York State day. The two aeronauts will be given a certain period of time in which to inflate their balloons and travel a fixed distance through the air.

FATAL FIRE.

Two Children Lose Their Lives and Another Will Die.

Wood River, Neb., Oct. 5.—The children of John Ulsenberry, aged four and ten years, are dead, a daughter aged fourteen will die and the mother and two other children are seriously burned as the result of a fire at their home yesterday morning. The mother and six children were sleeping in an upper room. The mother rose to start a fire and returned to bed and the fire probably was caused from a match dropped by her.

NEW OCTOPUS BORN.

International Salt Company Incorporated in New Jersey.

New York, Oct. 5.—The International Salt company, which expects to obtain control of the salt mines of the entire world, has been incorporated in New Jersey with a capital of $30,000,000 and will issue bonds to the amount of $12,500,000.

Out of 22,883 coal miners employed in the Liege (Belgium) district 15,064 are now idle. Collisions between the strikers and the gendarmes are becoming more frequent. Strikers are trying to forcibly prevent the non-striking from working.

John G. Capels has been appointed by Senator Hanna, chairman of the committee, to a vacancy on the Republican national committee caused by the death of Judge E. A. Webster of South Carolina. Mr. Capels is at present district attorney.

The American contributions to the Queen Victoria memorial fund amount to $65,000, which, according to the king's consent to a request made by the American society in London, will be applied to a clearly designated portion of the memorial.

DISQUIET AT HAITI.

One Man Put to Death and Many Imprisoned.

New York, Oct. 8. — Disquieting reports of the political condition in Haiti have been received here. Segur Dossous, a merchant of Jeremie, was summarily shot because he was opposed to the government. Many persons have been imprisoned.

Livery and training barns of Johnson Bros. burned at Indianola, Iowa. Loss, $10,000.

BOERS RUSHED THE PICKETS

GAINED POSITION COMMANDING THE CAMP OF THE BRITISH.

DRIVEN OUT AFTER HARD FIGHT

BOERS RELEASE SCOUTS AFTER BRUTALLY BEATING TWO OF THEM.

Pretoria, Oct. 6.—The fight at Magatos Nek took place early in the morning. A patrol of yeomanry who had proceeded beyond the pickets rode into a Boer force and were driven back. The Boers followed them, rushed the pickets and gained a position commanding the British camp. It was necessary to drive them from this position at all costs, and this was done by the Derbyshire regiment and the Scottish Horse. The fighting was at such close quarters that the bayonet was used. This made the casualties heavy. The name of the Derbyshire regiment for staunch heroism under disconcerting circumstances was maintained, while the Scotch horse did excellent work. Devenish and seventeen of his scouts, who were recently captured by the Boers at Karoo and Karoopoort, have been released. Two of them who had been captured once before were brutally flogged.

Town Guard Called Out.

Cape Town, Oct. 6.—In consequence of the activity of the Boers in the Southwestern districts the Mossel Bay town guard has been called out. The British cruiser Beagle landed a party of Blue Jackets with a Maxim gun, the shops were ordered closed and the trenches manned. Gen. Smuts' commando, between 300 and 500 strong, passed through the Grahamtown district hotly pursued by British columns under Col. Crabbe and others. Gen. Smuts was engaged by an armored train near Sheldon. Lieut. Maasdorp of the Graaff Reinet mounted troops was fatally wounded by a member of his corps, who mistook the lieutenant for a Boer. Another trooper of the same corps narrowly escaped a similar fate.

HEAVY BOER LOSSES.

Four Hundred Killed at Prospect and Itala.

Pretoria, Oct. 6.—Among the killed in the engagement at Magatos Nek was Commandant Boshoff of the Johannesburg police. Col. Kekewich was prevented from pursuing Gen. Delarey, who attacked him a few days ago owing to the fact that many of his horses were killed. The latest news from Zululand is that in the recent fighting at Prospect and Itala the Boers lost most heavily. Some reports state that they had 200 killed in both fights. The Boers rushed the posts across open ground, thinking that they were weakly held, whereas they had strong garrisons. The attacking force was the main body of Gen. Botha's army, with himself in command. Very few Boers are now within the Zulu border. They have mostly retired north.

CANADIAN CHALLENGE.

Two Groups of Men Who Think They Want America's Cup.

Montreal, Oct. 6.—The second defeat of Shamrock has revived both here and in Toronto the talk about a Canadian challenger for the America's cup. There are at present two groups of men who have evinced some intention of challenging. One is headed by Commodore Gooderham of Toronto of the Royal Canadian Yacht club. Gooderham is immensely wealthy, and his sporting diversions run to fine horses and yachts. Ex-Commodore Jarvis of Toronto would be manager of the boat. The other group is composed of ex-Commodore James Ross of the Royal St. Lawrence Yacht club, the street railway king, and with him would be President Whitney of the Dominion Steel and Iron company of Sydney, C. B., and a number of its shareholders. The Toronto syndicate would probably have their boat designed in England, but the iron and steel syndicate would have George Herrick Duggan design and manage her.

SCHLEY TO RETIRE.

Will Take Place While the Court of Inquiry Is In Session.

Washington, Oct. 6. — Next Wednesday, Oct. 9, Rear Admiral Schley will retire from the active list of the navy by age limit, and by present prospects this will take place while the court of inquiry is still in session. His retirement will promote two captains to be rear admirals. Capt. Frank Willis, who was in command of the Boston during the battle of Manila Bay, now heads the list of captains. He was promoted for war service, and under the law of advancement must not retard the regular course of promotions. Therefore, Capt. Henry Glass, who stands next on the list of captains, will also enter the list of rear admirals of the navy. Other promotions resulting from Rear Admiral Schley's retirement will be those of Commanders F. P. Gilmore and Eugene H. C. Leutze, who become captains, and Lieut. Commanders Henry A. Staunton and Chas. W. Bartlett, who become commanders.

SOUSA IN HIGH FAVOR.

American Bandmaster and Organization Now in London.

London, Oct. 6. — John Philip Sousa and his band have met with a hearty reception in London. His first concert will be given in Royal Albert hall. Following the concert a reception in honor of Mr. Sousa will be given at the Trocadero restaurant. Early in the coming week the band will go to Glasgow to fulfill an engagement at the international exhibition.

PRAYED FOR DEATH.

Man Mentally Deranged Pleads That He Be Not Sent to an Insane Asylum.

St. Joseph, Mo., Oct. 6. — Andrew J. Brown, formerly a wealthy stockman and mine owner, was before the county court yesterday during an inquiry into his sanity.

"I know that I am mentally unbalanced and ought to be treated," he said, "but send me where I can be quiet—not to the asylum above all places. I had a brother who was confined there and he died, surrounded by maniacs. A man can't help becoming insane, and it is awful to have to go to where one's companions are all mad."

The court had no alternative and Brown was given into the custody of asylum attendants. Again addressing the court he said their action sealed his doom, and he prayed for death.

HIGH OFFICIALS IMPLICATED.

Story of Corruption Told by a Chicago Bailiff.

Chicago, Oct. 6. — Underlying the charge made by the grand jury that Alexander Sullivan, Edward Mayer, Frederick St. John and George P. Murray conspired to send James J. Lynch, the former bailiff in Judge Clifford's court who is under charges of jury bribing, out of the jurisdiction of the criminal court and of keeping him there, is a greater conspiracy, it is said, implicating court officers.

The story told by Lynch to the grand jury astounded the members of that inquisitorial body, as it revealed a condition of corruption in the courts that exceeded anything that has ever been hinted at.

According to Lynch's story court officers and jurymen have been corrupted by the score, and there are at the present time in the courts of Cook county, he declares, bailiffs, who to his knowledge, have been guilty of acting as dispensing agents for the West Chicago street railway in efforts to reach jurors in the personal injury cases. So far-reaching was the statement of Lynch that the grand jury has decided to probe further into the matter.

FIRE CAUSES PANIC.

Two Girls Are Missing and Are Thought to Have Perished.

Sandusky, Ohio, Oct. 6.—Fire yesterday afternoon destroyed the plant of the American Crayon company, causing a loss estimated at $140,000. The insurance is $62,000. The fire started in the drying room on the first floor of the packing department and was first discovered when the flames broke through the second floor, where fifty girls were at work. The flames spread rapidly and a panic ensued. Within fifteen minutes the entire plant, covering a block, was on fire, as well as a half dozen houses. The plant and two large barns were soon in ruins. One hundred and fifty men were employed. Late last night it was reported that two girls were missing, and it is feared they have lost their lives.

MANY ADVENTURES.

Woman Dressed as a Man Elopes With Young Girl and Marries Her.

Lincoln, Neb., Oct. 6. — Additional facts were developed last evening in connection with Burt Martin, the convict at the penitentiary who has been regarded as a man, but, whom investigation proved to be a female. Two years ago Martin, then twenty years of age, under the name of Burt Shurman, appeared at the town of Ashland. Here "he" induced the daughter of the family with whom he was staying to elope. They were arrested at Nebraska City, charged with stealing a livery team, but were not prosecuted. The father of the girl, however, insisted on a marriage ceremony and the couple were married at Wahoo.

MISS LONG DEAD.

Pulmonary Trouble Finally Results Fatally.

Higham, Mass., Oct. 6.—Miss Helen Long, oldest daughter of Secretary Long, died last evening at the family residence in this town. Miss Long had been in failing health since November, 1898, with pulmonary trouble, and at that time her father sent her to Colorado Springs to live. A house was built for her there and she was given the best medical care. Several weeks ago her strength failed rapidly and it was deemed best for her to return to Hingham. Efforts to prolong her life were useless and her death occurred last night, the entire family being at her bedside.

A $200,000 FIRE.

Twenty Buildings at Tampa, Fla., Destroyed by Fire.

Tampa, Fla., Oct. 6.—Twenty buildings in the heart of West Tampa were burned yesterday morning with a property loss of $200,000. The fire was discovered in the large cigar factory of O'Halloran & Co. The water supply in West Tampa was inadequate and the fire practically burned itself out. Great excitement exists on account of the belief that the fire was of incendiary origin. There have been several threats of incendiarism as a result of the labor troubles and agitators have been made to leave the city within the last few hours for advising the use of the torch.

NO DEWEY PROMISE.

Aguinaldo Admits That the American Admiral Never Promised Independence.

San Francisco, Oct. 6.—Congressman Kahn of California, who has just returned from the Philippines, in an interview said that he had obtained from Aguinaldo an explicit denial of the story that Dewey had ever made any promises of independence to the Filipinos.

King Edward Has Lumbago.

London, Oct. 6.—It was ascertained last evening that King Edward's complaint is lumbago. The attack is not at all serious. He drove out yesterday afternoon. Dr. Sir James Reid, summoned to Balmoral, has returned.

Appointed Deputy Collector.

Washburn, Wis., Oct. 6.—D. W. Corning has been appointed deputy collector of customs for this port in place of H. C. Prudhamme, resigned. The change has gone into effect.

TAKES THE THIRD

LIPTON ALMOST SECURES A RACE

LEADS COLUMBIA AT THE FINISH BUT LOSES ON TIME ALLOWANCE.

IRISH BOAT MAKES BEST TIME

GALLANT IRISH KNIGHT LEADS THE CHEERS FOR THE VICTOR.

New York, Oct. 6.—With victory flags floating from her towering mastheads and the ends of her spreaders in honor of her concluding triumph in the cup races of 1901, the gallant sloop Columbia returned to her anchorage last night under the escort of the entire excursion fleet. She had completed her defense of the honored trophy in another stirring race with the Shamrock II. over a leeward and windward course of thirty miles, crossing the finish line two seconds behind her antagonist, but winning on time allowance conceded by Lipton's boat by forty-one seconds.

For the second time she has now successfully foiled the attempt of the Irish knight to wrest from our possession the cup that means the yachting supremacy of the world. And plucky Sir Thomas Lipton, standing on the bridge of the Erin, led his guests in three hearty huzzas for the successful defender.

"She is the better boat," he said, "and she deserves to be cheered."

The series of races just closed will always be memorable as the closest ever sailed for the cup, and Sir Thomas, although defeated, will go home with the satisfaction of knowing that his golden yacht is the

that ever crossed the western ocean. During both series of races not an untoward incident has occurred, and Sir Thomas will return to England by far the most popular of all the foreigners who have challenged for the America's trophy.

Yesterday's race, on paper, was the closest of the series, because of the flukiness of the wind on the beat home, but as a contest of the relative sea merits it is not to be compared with the magnificent, truly run and nobly fought battles of Saturday and Thursday. The wind was strong and from the shore, embroidering the sea with foam and piling up no swell—ideal conditions for the challenger. The racers were sent away before the wind, each carrying a penalty for crossing the line after the handicap gun. No official record is kept of the time after that gun had been fired, but the experts with stop watches estimated Columbia's handicap at fifteen seconds and Shamrock's at thirty seconds. The contest of the yachts fleeing before the following wind was picturesque, but not exciting. Notwithstanding the fact that the Columbia beat the Shamrock before the wind last Saturday, the challenger yesterday

Gained Slowly But Steadily

all the way out and rounded forty-nine seconds before the defender, having actually gained one minute and four seconds. Immediately after the yachts turned their noses into the wind for the beat home the breeze moderated and turned fluky. The skippers split tacks, each searching for wind, with the result that first one would get a lift and then the other. At one time Columbia seemed a mile ahead when with a sudden cant of the wind, allowed Shamrock to point nearer the mark and a mile from home the challenger appeared to be leading by fully half a mile. The talent began to feel nervous, but as the yachts approached the finish the Yankee skipper by some miraculous legerdemain, shoved his boat into the light air like a phantom ship, and one hundred yards from home the two racers were almost on even terms. It was a pretty sight and one seldom witnessed, when they crossed rail to rail, the white yacht's bowsprit just lapping the golden boat's mast. The usual pandemonium that attends the

Final Yankee Victory

in a cup contest followed. Whistles, sirens, bells, bands and cheerers united in a grand chorus of jubilation, and J. P. Morgan's steam yacht Corsair added to the terrific din by firing a national salute of twenty-one guns.

While taking his defeat gamely, Sir Thomas Lipton made no attempt to conceal the honest disappointment when he talked about the races last night on the Erin.

"I am very disappointed," he said. "I can't hide that. I thought within fifteen minutes of the finish that we had won. I was sure as my life we had won. It was a hard blow to be so near winning and then to lose. I should like to have got one race, just by way of consolation. It is a very hard thing to be beaten by a breath—by a few beats of the pulse. It has been a severe strain on me. I have worked so hard for many months now and I am glad it is over. To have won would have been a joy greater than today's disappointment. Columbia's win to-day was fair and square and honorable."

BRITONS DISAPPOINTED.

They Think That Lipton Deserved Better Luck.

London, Oct. 6.—There is a feeling of supreme disappointment in London over the failure of Shamrock II. to win even a single race. Those who denounced Sir Thomas Lipton's ambition, asserting that he was using his yacht to advertise his business interests, now admit that his sportsman's spirit deserved a better result. When the American yacht was leading near the home stretch the news was received in silence by the crowds on the embankment. There was never much betting in this country, and the disappointment among the masses is incere and general.

YOUTHFUL SAVAGES.

Barbarous Treatment of a Fellow Student by Beloit Pupils.

Beloit, Wis., Oct. 8.—George F. Stockwell, a student in the preparatory department of Beloit college, was enticed from his room at the house of President Eaton at an early hour yesterday morning by members of the middle preparatory class. He was overpowered, divested of every article of clothing and compelled to walk ahead of a score of howling student, aided by the application of switches in the hands of his tormentors. His clothing was fastened to the top of a flagpole, and after he had been sufficiently "disciplined" he was allowed to go home to plan revenge. The outrage is the climax of a number of class fights this year in which the worst punishment inflicted heretofore was compelling students to walk into town after having been driven far into the country. The faculty will probably take no action owing to the fact that the perpetrators of the deed are unknown, and the members of Stockwell's class have taken matters in their own hands. Stockwell lives in Cherry Valley, Ill., and has no enemies in the school.

LANDS FOR SETTLERS.

Rosebud Indians Will Relinquish Part of Their Reservation.

Chamberlain, S. D., Oct. 8. — The work of securing the signatures of the Rosebud Indians to an agreement relinquishing for settlement that portion of the Rosebud reservation in Gregory county is practically complete. Maj. McLaughlin, chief Indian inspector, has been engaged for some months in securing the signatures. He expects to put the lands on the market in a very short time. There are many thousands of acres in the tract which are of a superior character, and applications are already being filed for them, many people having come to this place to await settlement.

ORPHAN GIRL WHIPPED.

Priest, His Housekeeper and a Servant Girl Are Now in Jail.

Neillsville, Wis., Oct. 8.—Fr. Charles L. Youngblut, Lizzie Nolan, his housekeeper, and a servant girl, were arrested and are now in jail, charged with assaulting Mary Prim, an orphan eleven years old, who lived at the priest's house. It is alleged that the girl was whipped so severely and punished in other ways that her condition is considered very critical. The people of Neillsville are said to be very indignant over the affair. Fr. Youngblut was taken into court for fear of a mob, which hanged him in effigy, with the placard, "Youngblut the assassin."

INSANE BURGLAR.

Says He Has More Power Than God and Will Rob All Banks.

Winona, Minn., Oct. 8.—W. F. Moody, who has lived about here at different times for a number of years, and whose family lives at Stockton, entered a bank here Saturday at the noon hour when only two men were in the building. He had his pockets filled with money before he was discovered. He was held then and the police summoned. It was then discovered that his mind was badly deranged. He claims to have greater power than God and says that to-day he will escape and rob all the banks in the city. He will probably be sent to Rochester.

HIS SKULL CRUSHED.

South Dakota Stockman Accidentally Killed in Chicago.

Chicago, Oct. 8. — J. M. Griffith, a horse dealer from Dakota City, S. D., was found yesterday with a fractured skull on top of a stock car in the yards at Fifty-first street. He died while being transported to the hospital. He is supposed to have been killed while passing under a viaduct near the yards.

CLARK A. PLACE DEAD.

For Thirty Years Paymaster of the Milwaukee Road.

Milwaukee, Oct. 8.—Clark A. Place, for thirty years paymaster of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad and a resident of Milwaukee since 1846, died yesterday. Mr. Place had been ailing for a long time. He was eighty-four years old.

Fatal Blood Poisoning.

Redwood Falls, Minn., Oct. 8.—A peculiar and fatal case of bloodpoisoning has occurred at this place. A little over two weeks ago Benjamin, the thirteen-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Alex McIlravie, was nursing a coldsore on one of his lips. A scab had formed. On the day that the scab had formed perfectly young McIlravie indulged in a scuffling contest with a playmate, and by accident the scab was knocked off the lip. Blood poisoning set in a few days later. Large lumps formed at the base of the brain and caused death.

North Dakota Educators.

Fargo, N. D., Oct. 8.—The executive committee of the North Dakota Educational association met here to arrange the date and program for the next meeting of the association to be held next year at Grand Forks. The first three days in January were selected, and the program will include addresses by many leading educators in the country. President Draper of the Illinois university will be among the number.

An Operator Drowned.

Redwood Falls, Minn., Oct. 8.—William Kreimer, operator for the Northwestern railroad at Place was yesterday drowned in the Redwood river just above the North Redwood dam. He and Fred Barns were in a boat fishing when the boat capsized, throwing both men out. Barnes swam to the shore, but Kreimer was drowned.

Burglars Make Small Haul.

Fairchild, Wis., Oct. 8. — This town was visited by burglars, the postoffice and Peoples' meat market being broken into. The residences of J. M. Rivard and J. F. Kuth were also attempted. Less than $10 was secured.

Pretty Fair Interest.

Yankton, S. D., Oct. 8.—The Tiedemann estate near Tripp, purchased a month ago for $50,000 by a Yankton syndicate consisting of Will Edmunds, Will Stockwell and Herb Goodrich, was sold for $80,000.

DANGEROUS TRIP

BRIDAL TOUR ACROSS THE OCEAN IN A FOURTEEN-FOOT BOAT.

CAPT. ANDREWS' QUEER NOTION

COUPLE SAIL FROM ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., IN THE "DARK SECRET."

BIG CROWDS BID THEM ADIEU

MANY PEOPLE SKEPTICAL ABOUT THE CAPTAIN MAKING THE TRIP.

Atlantic City, N. J., Oct. 7.—A solid wall of 5,000 people met yesterday afternoon on the west side of Young's ocean pier to bid a bon voyage to Capt. William Andrews and his bride of a few weeks as they started on their long and eventful journey across the Atlantic ocean in a fourteen-foot boat, sloop rigged, called the Dark Secret.

The sailing time was fixed at 4 o'clock, but it was half an hour later when Mrs. Andrews, wearing a blue suit and a blue yachting cap, hove in sight. She was sitting in the stern of a yawl rowed by Capt. John Young, the owner of the pier. The Dark Secret, in which she is trusting her fate, lay at anchor fifty feet westward of the pier. If there was any expectation of excitement or enthusiasm, Capt. Andrews and his wife

Must Have Been Disappointed.

Not a sound was heard, and handkerchiefs only were waved. Mrs. Andrews jumped nimbly into the Dark Secret, which rolled in the water fifty feet from the pier as she got aboard. Alongside of the yawls the Dark Secret looked small. She sat deep in the water weighed by stores, and the thought of the entire gathering was that it was a foolhardy undertaking, and that the Dark Secret would never survive at sea in a storm. The ocean was calm as a lake, with a stiff breeze from the northeast. The captain and his wife shook hands with the occupants in the yawl boats and waved an adieu to the curious and silent sightseers. Anchor was then raised, and without the sound of a cheer the Dark Secret first headed southward, and then, when clear of the outer pier, turned and started up the coast toward Brigantine beach, almost due east. This is the course that is to be held until they reach

The Azores Islands.

Most of the people believed that Capt. Andrews means to hug the shore and put into the first safe harbor he reaches. Persons who know the man say he will make the venture at the risk of his life, for in other small boats—this being the eighth trip in them—he has been reported in midocean. Prior to sailing Capt. Andrews climbed the mast and hung to one side to test her. She sank down on one side, but showed no signs of being dangerous. Mrs. Andrew's mother, who objected to her sailing, was in a small cottage on the pier, weeping as her daughter sailed. She bade her daughter an affectionate good-bye just before she boarded the Dark Secret. Capt. Andrews counts on averaging ten miles an hour and reaching the Azores islands in eight days. He goes from there to Palos, Spain.

PREFERS FARM TO HIS LIFE.

Iowa Man Kills Himself While Sheriff Waits to Take Him Away.

Fort Dodge, Iowa, Oct. 7.—Smarting under supposed wrongs, James Fallon, a prominent pioneer resident of Webster county, blew out his brains in a room of his home near here while the sheriff was waiting in front with a warrant for his arrest. The warrant accused Fallon of murderous assault on a threshing crew that he drove from his place at the point of a revolver this morning.

The affair is the culmination of a series of events which originated in the sale of Fallon's old homestead to Charles Donahue in 1897. Immediately after giving the contract Fallon repented his bargain, saying he desired to spend his remaining years on the farm. Suit was then instituted to dispossess him, but he fought the action. Despite his efforts the state supreme court affirmed the lower court's decision and ordered Fallon dispossessed. He announced that he would never leave the place alive.

VOSS DENIES THEM.

Noth Dakota States Attorney Wants Charges Against Him Dismissed.

Bismarck, N. D., Oct. 7. — States Attorney H. G. Voss of Morton county, against whom charges in disbarment have been preferred by a committee of the state bar association, has filed his answer to the charges in the supreme court of the state. His answer is a general and specific denial of the charges made against him, which were made the basis for the motion for disbarment, and he asks that the charges against him be dismissed. Tracy R. Bangs of Grand Forks and E. C. Rice of Mandan are Mr. Voss's attorneys in the case. The charges made against Mr. Voss involved several specifications and alleged omission to perform his official duties in prosecutions of liquor and gambling cases.

BODIES ARE FOUND.

Three Victims of the Wreck of the Steamer Hudson.

Houghton, Mich., Oct. 7.—The steamer Friant, which has been used in the search for the bodies of the crew of the lost steamer Hudson, returned from Manitou island and Tobacco river this afternoon, bringing three bodies. A body which was identified as that of George Luck, a fireman, was found on the island. Luck came from Centerville, Mich. The remains of William Gregory, another fireman, of Buffalo, was picked up at Tobacco river. A third body, which could not be identified, was found on Manitou island.

An Old Resident Gone.

Stillwater, Minn., Oct. 7.—John Lowrie, an old resident of the city and for many years the proprietor of the Central house, died last night. He became suddenly ill about 9 o'clock in the evening and died before midnight. Fatty degeneration of the heart is believed to have caused his death. A widow and two children survive him.

INDIANS UGLY.

Mille Lacs County Settlers Are Afraid of an Outbreak.

St. Paul, Oct. 6. — Dr. H. H. Boeckman, sent by Dr. Bracken of the state board of health to investigate the smallpox epidemic among the Indians in Mille Lacs county, returned yesterday. He says the guards are now enforcing the quarantine with fair success. The disease is most virulent in form, however, and there have been several deaths. The Indians are in an ugly mood, their pay having been withheld by the government because they refuse to remove to the White Earth reservation. The settlers are much disturbed, fearing both the smallpox and an outbreak of the Indians. There is no great danger of an epidemic at present. Lars Erickson, a pioneer trader of Mille Lacs county, yesterday called at the capitol to enlist the aid of Gov. Van Sant. He says there is danger of an Indian outbreak and there is great danger of a smallpox epidemic. There are about 500 Indians loafing about homestead land who refuse to move. They have guns and refuse to obey the laws, living on game killed out of season.

FARMER AND SHOTGUN.

What a State Veterinarian Ran Up Against.

Sioux Falls, S. D., Oct. 6. — Henry Franseen, a prominent farmer living near Sioux Falls, was arrested yesterday on the charge of assault with a dangerous weapon and threatening the life of Dr. O. W. Stanley, assistant state veterinary surgeon, of this city. Dr. Stanley and State Veterinary Foster of Brown county, with another physician, went to Franseen's farm for the purpose of shooting some horses of his which were alleged to have been exposed to glanders. He appeared on the scene armed with a shotgun and ran the officials off his place. His preliminary examination was set for today, but has been continued until next Tuesday.

AFTER BREWER'S MONEY.

Iowa Attorney Wants Damages for Alleged Conspiracy.

Sioux City, Iowa, Oct. 6. — Eugene Lutz has commenced an action against the Sioux City Brewing company, demanding $20,000 damages for alleged malicious prosecution. Nov. 25, 1899, Lutz, who is an attorney, was arrested with a client named A. D. Brauner, for alleged conspiracy to injure the business of the brewing company, and put in jail. Brauner had been discharged from the employ of the company and sought retaliation by the prohibitory liquor law of Iowa. Lutz filed actions against the company and his arrest with his client followed.

WARD IS INDICTED

In Connection With Wrecking Le Mars, Iowa, Bank.

Sioux City, Iowa, Oct. 6.—Seven indictments were returned against T. F. Ward in the federal court for falsifying the records of the Le Mars National bank, now defunct, and embezzling $13,000 of the bank's funds. Ward, who was vice president, absconded and was captured in New Jersey.

BLACK RIVER FALLS TERROR.

Although Declared Insane, He Was Peaceably Helping Build a Railroad.

La Crosse, Wis., Oct. 6.—John Lowery, who is alleged to have burned his home and tried to burn a barn and terrorized Black River Falls and escaped here after being declared insane by a jury, was found working on a railroad in Minnesota, near Winona.

Fargo's House Famine.

Fargo, N. D., Oct. 6.—Efforts are being made to interest Fargo capitalists in a plan to erect a number of residences in the city. There is a residence famine, and as a result those who have houses for rent demand such exorbitant rates that many people who have thought of locating here, have been forced to go elsewhere. The opportunity for a profitable investment in homes has never been better, and as a result of Mayor Johnson's hustling there may be a change by next year.

Rural Mail Boxes Broken.

La Crosse, Wis., Oct. 6. — Reports come from French Island, in the town of Campbell, this county, that rural mail boxes have been broken into and mutilated. The authorities have taken up the matter and an investigation is being made. Several boxes have been found unlocked heretofore, but it is but recently that the contents of the boxes have been tampered with.

Poison Ends Old Man's Life.

St. Paul, Oct. 6.—William H. Butterfield, a cripple aged sixty years, died at his home in this city from poison. Butterfield's roommate, Len Robinson, heard the old man walking about his room at 1 o'clock. At 3 o'clock he was again aroused by the old man's groans. Butterfield said he was "all right." When Robinson arose at 6 o'clock Butterfield lay beside him dead.

Minister Wu Will Orate.

Washington, Oct. 6.—Wu Ting Fang, minister from China, has accepted the invitation of the management of the Southern railway to make an address before the annual convention of the American Association of Passenger and General Ticket Agents at Asheville, N. C., Oct. 15 to 17 on the subject of "The Railways of China."

Has the Accident Habit.

Cumberland, Wis., Oct. 6. — Clinton Hammond, a carpenter working on the company's large cold storage plant at this place, fell from the second floor, a distance of fourteen feet, breaking his left arm. It is just a year ago that the same man had the right arm broken and an eye knocked out in an accident.

Derailed by a Boulder.

La Crosse, Wis., Oct. 6. — Passenger train No. 49, due here on the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy from Chicago at 8:13, struck a huge boulder near McCartney while going fifty miles an hour. Fortunately the impact hurled it to one side, the only damage being to the engine.

Hand Nearly Chopped Off.

Cumberland, Wis., Oct. 6.—Iver Solum's two-year-old boy had his hand nearly chopped off by his brother while playing with an axe.

How Successful Farmers Operate This Department of the Farm—A Few Hints as to the Care of Live Stock and Poultry.

Broad Tape Worm of Sheep.

It is said that this tape worm, known technically as taenia expansa, came to this country from Europe, yet it is now one of the most common parasites of sheep. While it is usually associated with other parasites in the intestines of the sheep, it must be regarded as the cause of considerable injury and even fatality. It is easily recognized on account of its breadth and great length. It may exceed five yards in length and at the broadest part is from one-half to three-fourths of an inch wind. It tapers away to a fine point at the head, and this part of the worm is of strong texture, so that the head and neck feel like a thorn, or in larger worms in other animals like a wire nail. We notice it most in fall and winter, but it is really present in the intestines at all times of the year, constantly maturing segments which pass away in the droppings and spread infection to other sheep. As the conditions in the spring and summer are very favorable for the existence of the embryo outside of the body, sheep may become badly infected at this time and show symptoms of the presence of the tape worms in late summer or fall. Low wet pastures are supposed to be most favorable for producing tape worm diseases, but we should most fear the pasture that has been years in grass and over-pastured by sheep year after year. The only way of determining that sheep are infested with tape worms, apart from post mortem examination, is the appearance of the joints or segments in the manure. Unless a number of the parasites are present no indication of disease will be observed, but when present in considerable numbers in young lambs emaciation is speedy and may prove fatal. Dr. Curtice mentions finding fourteen adult worms in one lamb four months old, and that the number of individuals present may be from 2 or 3 to 100. It is seldom, however, that more than five or six are observed. Symptoms of disease do not appear until the parasites reach considerable size, when they partially block up the intestinal tube and probably cause considerable irritation. The affected lamb ceases to thrive, becomes weak and emaciated and may finally die from exhaustion. In late stages diarrhoea is a prominent symptom. The mucus membranes are pale, the wool becomes deprived of oil and is easily pulled out, and the appetite at first good, in later stages becomes impaired. Other diseases may supervene and carry off the already debilitated animal. The appetite of affected animals may for some time continue good, more food and drink being taken than when free from parasites. To prevent infection with tape worms new pastures and fresh drinking water should if possible be supplied. Overstocking and the use of low, wet pastures should be avoided. Medicinal treatment is quite effective if the flock is taken in hand early. For the destruction of this parasite several preparations are recommended. Before administering medicine, food and water should be withheld for twelve hours or more, and it is advisable to follow the tape worm medicine in three or four hours with a full dose of castor oil. Areca, not powdered, in one to three drachm doses, male shield fern in two ounce doses, kousso in one and one-half to two drachm doses, and picrate of potash in from 6 to 20 grain doses are the preparations most highly recommended. The picrate of potash is said to be very effective, but if properly administered, no doubt any of the above will give good results. Oil of turpentine is also much used. After using this remedy for the destruction of the stomach worms sheep have been observed to pass large numbers of tape worms. In the treatment of badly affected flocks the animals should receive the best of care, and in addition to being supplied with generous diet, composed of such foods as crushed oats, bran and oil cake, it is well to give a tonic medicine in the feed. For the latter purpose it will be found beneficial to mix for each sheep a teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts of dried sulphate of iron and ground ginger root in the feed twice daily until they begin to pick up, after which it may be given once daily for some time longer. Keep a good look out for segments of tape worms about this time of the year, and if they are noticed at once commence treatment as suggested above.

Character of Dairy Products from Silage.

Professor Henry, of the Wisconsin Experiment Station writes to Hoard's Dairyman of the increased use of silage for making milk. He says:

"The prejudice against silage-made milk has not yet entirely died out, though it is rapidly passing. The edict which went forth from one of the milk condenseries about a score of years ago that no milk from silage-fed cows would be received under any circumstances, was taken up by other condensing factories as they sprang into existence. Doubtless the proprietors regarded this as the easiest way of settling what otherwise might make trouble. This unreasonable ruling has done much to prejudice our people against silage for the dairyman. An interesting incident—almost an accident, we might say, occurred some time since, which has proved conclusively the injustice and folly of such a sweeping condemnation of an excellent feeding stuff. A condensing company in Michigan owns factories in Lansing and Howell. The Lansing factory, first built, was not receiving sufficient milk from the farmers for full operation and was therefore eager to secure a larger supply. The milk from a certain farm was found to be large in amount and satisfactory in quality. This farmer's milk had been repeatedly praised by those whose duty it was to watch quantity and quality. Nothing had ever been said about silage-produced milk, for the subject had never been considered, the officers thought, in that community. To the surprise and doubtless the consternation of the officials it was one day learned that the milk from the farmer which has been so much praised for abundance and quality, was from silage-fed cows. Here was a crisis! Should this farmer be turned down? If his milk was accepted, what should be said about other farmers adopting his practice of feeding silage? Choosing the sensible course, the factory accepted the situation, and the outcome was a pamphlet of nearly a hundred pages, treating of the construction of silos, the growing of silage crops, filling the silo and feeding the silage. These pamphlets were placed in the hands of each and every patron of this condensing company. A letter received from an authoritative source a couple of years since stated that about one-third of the milk received at the Lansing condensery was then being produced by silage-fed cows.

During a visit to the East some time since the writer found silage used as the main roughage on many of the best dairy farms. Milk that brought from 8 to 12 cents a quart under special brands in New York, Boston and other cities, was from silage sources. On many Eastern dairy farms the business would have to be abandoned were it not for the silo. Where timothy hay sells from $15 to $20 per ton, what could the milk producer do without the silage?

Substitutes for Eggs.

An egg substitute has been manufactured from skim milk. It is said to contain the casein and albumen of the milk mixed with a little flour, and is put up in the form of a paste or powder. Such material is evidently rich in protein, and, according to reports apparently reliable, is used in considerable quantities by bakers and confectioners in place of fresh eggs.

Egg substitutes have been devised which consist of mixtures of animal or vegetable fats, albumen, starch or flour, coloring matter, and some leavening powder in addition to the mineral matters similar to those found in the egg. Such products are designed to resemble eggs in composition.

Other egg substitutes have been marketed which contain little or no albumen, but apparently consist quite largely of starch, colored more or less with some yellow substance. These goods are specially recommended for making custards and puddings similar in appearance to those in which fresh eggs are used. There is no reason to suppose that such products cannot be made so that they will be perfectly wholesome. The fact must not be overlooked that in the diet they cannot replace fresh eggs, since they do not contain much nitrogenous matter or fat. As recently pointed out in one of the medical journals, this may be an important matter if such an egg substitute is used in the diet of invalids, especially if the composition of the egg substitute is not known, and it is employed with the belief that, like eggs, it contains an abundance of protein.

An Excellent Stable Whitewash.

The cow stable should frequently receive a coat of whitewash. The way in which the whitewash is made controls to a very large extent its durability. A whitewash is desired that will not easily and quickly wash away. The United States government has the same problem to face in the whitewashing of its lighthouses. These structures are exposed not only to the rains of heaven but also to the spray of the sea. Experience has evolved the following formula:

Slack about half a bushel unslacked lime with boiling water, keeping covered during process. Strain it, and add one peck of salt dissolved in warm water, three pounds ground rice put in boiling water and boiled to a thin paste, half pound powdered Spanish whiting and one pound clear glue dissolved in warm water. Mix these well together and let mixture stand for several days. Keep the wash thus prepared in a kettle or portable furnace, and when used put it on as hot as possible. This will answer for either wood, brick, or stone, and retain its lustre for a long time. It is a formula recommended by the U. S. Treasury Department to all lighthouse-keepers. It can be colored, if desired, to any shade. A little lampblack makes a slate color; lampblack and Spanish brown, a red-stone color; yellow ochre or chrome yellow, a pretty cream shade.

From January 1 to July 4, 1901, there were shipped from Argentina 26,444,000 bushels of wheat and 14,304,000 bushels of corn, against 54,306,000 bushels of wheat and 11,082,000 bushels of corn during the corresponding part of 1900. It thus appears that during the first half of 1901 the exports of corn were over one-third greater than during the first half of 1900, but the exports of wheat were considerably less than half as great.

American Oxford Down Breeders.

Practical Pigeon Notes.

Don't allow draughts in your loft, as pigeons are very susceptible to cold.

Be sure to furnish your birds a shallow tub to bathe in, and they will not trouble your water bucket.

Don't feed new grain to your pigeons, as in many cases evil results have been known to follow this practice.

A handful of hemp several times a week will be relished by the birds, and is also beneficial to their welfare.

Try tobacco stems for nesting. They are grand for keeping down vermin. Don't breed both lice and pigeons.

City fanciers are troubled by the plumage of their pigeons becoming soiled with tar. Sweet oil will remove it.

New beginners in pigeon culture constantly inquire which is the best grit for pigeons. Our experience teaches us that no better grit can be provided than old mortar.

In arranging your aviary see that the perches are arranged low. If the birds have no high perches to fly to when you enter the loft they very rapidly get accustomed to your appearance among them, and therefore become tamer.

Young fanciers are sometimes at a loss to know where to buy, and procure their birds at bird stores. Our advice is to write a reputable dealer and send him your order. They may cost you a little more, but when purchasing always buy the best, as they are the cheapest in the end.—Orr's Farm and Poultry Review.

Dried Eggs.

A report of the Department of Agriculture says: "Different methods of evaporating or desiccating eggs have been proposed, and several products which claim to be prepared in this way are now on the market. It is said that the egg is dried in or out of a vacuum, usually by a gentle heat or by currents of air. When placed on the market the dried egg is usually ground. Sometimes salt, sugar, or both, have been used as preservatives. Such material is merely egg from which the bulk of the water has been removed. If the process of manufacture is such that the resulting product is palatable and keeps well, the value of evaporated eggs under many circumstances is evident.

This material is used by bakers to some extent, as being cheaper when fresh eggs are high in price. It is also used in provisioning camps and expeditions, since desiccated foods have the advantage of a higher nutritive value in proportion to their bulk than the same materials when fresh. Fresh eggs contain about 25 per cent of dry matter. If all the water is removed in preparing evaporated eggs, one pound will furnish nutritive material equivalent to about four pounds of fresh eggs. One of the commercial products, recently tested appeared to be dried egg coarsely ground. For use it was thoroughly mixed with a small quantity of water. The mixture could then be fried or made into an omelet, etc., and was found to be very palatable, closely resembling in taste the same dishes made from fresh eggs.

A short time ago at Cross Plains, Wisconsin, a farmer lost two cows from eating second growth sorghum. This is the first time we have heard of losses of this kind from this cause in Wisconsin or adjoining states. In the case mentioned fifteen cows broke into a field where the sorghum had been pastured off and sprouts had sprung up to the height of a few inches. Of the fifteen cows six were made very sick. Milk was given them and four recovered. Similar cases have been reported from time to time. The poison, whatever it is, has never been identified, and in fact, it may be some unknown kind acting with great rapidity. Though the poison is not known, it is a certainty that it exists, and is a thing that must be taken into consideration by the farmers that wish to pasture cattle on sorghum.

Thomas W. Lawson, the Boston multi-millionaire, has bought two islands and has the option on twelve others in Isle au Haut Bay, near Stonington, Me., about fifteen miles from the mainland. The islands are all close together and many of them can be connected by bridges. On the largest Mr. Lawson will erect a magnificent residence for himself. A landscape artist will have charge of the matter and will transform the islands into a Venice in America. The whole cost of the project will be above $1,000,000.

A case of smallpox recently on a Lake Ontario steamer running between Alexandra Bay and Oswego, N. Y., caused a panic among the 600 excursionists aboard. It was reported on the boat that an effort would be made to quarantine the steamer and the excursionists were so terrified that a rush was made at Oswego to get off. Many women were crushed and there were many narrow escapes from drowning so eager were the people to get off the boat.

As the result of an explosion of gas in the new water works tunnel at Cleveland, Ohio, recently, five more lives were added to the already long list of casualties recorded since work first began on the great artificial waterway. The mayor ordered all work stopped until every safeguard was provided for the protection of the men.

Reports of commerce in Porto Rico show a big increase during last year, the exports exceeding those of 1898 by 300 per cent.

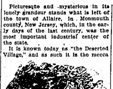
MYSTERY SURROUNDS THE CRUMBLING RUINS ON THE SITE OF A ONCE PROSPEROUS NEW JERSEY TOWN.

Picturesque and mysterious in its lonely grandeur stands what is left of the town of Allaire, in Monmouth county, New Jersey, which, in the early days of the last century, was the most important industrial center of the state.

It is known today as "the Deserted Village," and as such it is the mecca of the guests at the seaside resorts, who love to ponder over the secrets of its past and the mystery of its future, says the New York Press. The town, or, more properly speaking, what is left of it in the shape of dwellings and ruins, for it has not all gone to decay, is located on the line of the Freehold & Jamesburg branch of the Pennsylvania railroad, thirteen miles south of Freehold and six miles west from Sea Girt.

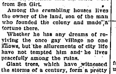


A TYPICAL RESIDENCE.

Among the crumbling houses lives the owner of the land, son of the man who founded the colony and made a fortune there.

Whether he has any dreams of reviving the once gay village no one knows, but the allurements of city life have not tempted him and he lives peacefully among the ruins.

Giant trees, which have witnessed the storms of a century, form a pretty grove which today is one of the attractions of the place. Cultivated meadowland slopes off to the old river bed, now almost dry in places, and deep ravines filled with an abundance of natural foliage present nature at its wildest and yet most attractive form.



OLD CHARCOAL HOUSE.

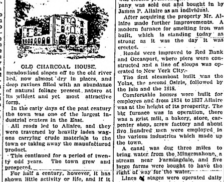
In the early days of the past century the town was one of the largest industrial centers in the East.

All roads led to Allaire, and they were traversed by heavily laden wagons carrying crude materials to the town or taking away the manufactured product.

This continued for a period of twenty odd years. The town grew and prospered.

For half a century, however, it has shown little activity or life, and if it were not for the many visitors who, prompted by curiosity or real interest, visit the place the town would be both dead and deserted.

Although the natural beauty of the location would suggest the idea that there was some utopian scheme behind its founding, it was a plain business proposition that prompted James P. Allaire, its founder, to establish the colony which for a number of years was such a busy place.



THE OLD SCREW FACTORY.

That the town finally became a deserted village was due, in a measure, to a peculiar combination of circumstances, and not attributed to any lack of foresight or ability on the part of Mr. Allaire.

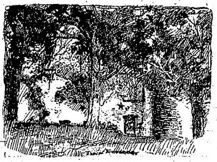
In fact, had he not been dissuaded from carrying out some of his plans, notably, that of building a railroad, Allaire might still have retained some of its former glory.

The establishment of an iron smelting works at Allaire marked its inception. The panic of 1837 crippled Mr. Allaire financially and it was followed some years later by the discovery of improved methods of combustion in the refining of iron ore. These were the beginning of the downfall of the town, which resulted ultimately in the enforced abandonment of a plant which at that time contained one of the finest iron smelting furnaces in the world.

It is still standing, a silent and majestic monument to the methods of the early days, and through its agency was cast some of the iron which revolutionized water travel and created a new era in the method of transportation.

When Mr. Allaire took hold of the old Howell furnace that section of Monmouth county was a wilderness.

There was a fair water power, by means of which the old furnace had been operated, and this was greatly improved. The pine trees in that section had been stripped by the charcoal burners. A tract of land comprising one thousand acres was purchased and more charcoal was made.



TOP OF FURNACE.

The stone for buildings was brought from Nyack and the brick needed was made there.

In 1828 the Howell Works company was incorporated and James P. Allaire was elected president. In 1831 the company was sold out and bought in by James P. Allaire as an individual.

After acquiring the property Mr. Allaire made further improvements. A modern furnace for smelting iron was built, which is standing today as strong as it was the day it was erected.

Roads were improved to Red Bank and Oceanport, where piers were constructed and a line of sloops was operated to New York City.

The first steamboat built was the Yolas, the second Osiris, followed by the Isis and the 1818.

Comfortable houses were built for employes and from 1834 to 1837 Allaire was at the height of its prosperity. The big furnace was in operation, there was a grist mill, a bakery, store, carpenter shop, screw factory and about five hundred men were employed in the various industries which made up the town.

A canal was dug three miles to bring water from the Mingemahone, a stream near Farmingdale, and five large farms were bought to have the right of way for the water.

Lines of stages were operated daily to the more important towns and goods were brought from New York by a steamboat line which succeeded the line of sloops. Much of the iron was shipped to market by the Manasquan river from a dock two miles below the furnace.

Currency was scarce in those days and in 1834 a lot of bronze coins, one and two cents, and bills from six and a quarter cents to $15 were placed in circulation.

The right to put the money in circulation was discussed by the lawyers of that time, but it was accepted, and passed by the people of the town as good as the currency of the federal government. The name of Allaire on it was considered a sufficient guarantee that it would be paid.

Mr. Allaire, who had extensive works in New York city, suffered in the panic of 1837, and the plant in New York passed into other hands. Improved methods of combustion in the smelting of ore followed and it was not long before it was evident that iron could not be produced in the Howell plant as cheaply as elsewhere.

Reluctantly Mr. Allaire announced in 1846 that he could make no more iron and the death-knell of the town was sounded.

The closing of the iron furnace was followed by the closing of other factories in the town and gradually the population dwindled down to a few who held on to the old place.

In 1836 Mr. Allaire projected a railroad to the town of Allaire, but he was dissuaded from undertaking its erection by some of his friends who feared it could not be carried through successfully.

Had he carried out his ideas the history of Allaire might have been far different.

Hal Allaire, the son of the old man, is a graduate of Columbia and a man of much learning, yet he, for some unknown reason, has buried himself among his ruins.

He was left the major portion of the estate by his father and the will was contested. In 1876 the New York courts decided in his favor and he was left in undisputed possession of a strange legacy.

He has lived the life of a quiet country farmer, and because of the many difficulties to be surmounted he never attempted to restore the town to its former industrial activity.

Mr. Allaire is highly esteemed by his friends, and while the ruins undoubtedly remind him of the greatness of the past, yet he takes an active interest in the affairs of the county and acts as postmaster for the present town of Allaire.

On Sunday he conducts a Sunday school in the old school building.

DEMAND FOR HOUR GLASSES

Some Are Used for Keeping Tab on Piano Practice.

"Most people think that hour glasses went out of style years ago," said a clerk in a Twenty-third street store to the New York Sun, "along with perukes and knee breeches, but as a matter of fact we have more calls for them today than we have had at any time within the last ten years. That this renewed popularity of the hour glass augurs its universal acceptance as a timepiece by the coming generation, I am not prepared to say; but if such a renaissance were to become assured it would be no more surprising than some of the other recent fads based on a revival of lost customs. Anyway a brief study of the hour glass will do nobody harm. There are thousands in this generation who have not the slightest idea what an hour glass looks like, and it won't hurt them to broaden their education a little along certain lines. Of the hour glasses sold at present the three-minute class is in the lead. This glass is used almost exclusively to measure time in boiling eggs and its usefulness naturally places its sale a little in advance of the more sentimental varieties. Next come the five, ten and fifteen minute and full hour glasses, which are bought chiefly by musicians for piano practice and by lodges and secret societies. The sand used in an hour glass is the very finest that the world affords. The western coast of Italy furnishes most of it, as it has done for ages past. The cost of hour glasses is regulated by the ornamentation of the frames. A glass set in a plain rosewood case can be bought for $1, while a mahogany frame comes to $1.50 or $2. Of course, the price can be brought up still higher by fancy carving and decoration. Swell lodges sometimes go to this extra expense, but most people are satisfied with the cheaper grades."

Claims Discovery of Perpetual Light.

John P. Magrady, a Chicago photographer, claims to have discovered a perpetual light. The secret of this light is the combination of chemicals in a vacuum. These chemicals, which are four in number, when brought into contact in a glass or porcelain globe, dissolve and throw out a strong and beautiful white light. The globe will continue to give light so long as it remains perfectly sealed. The inventor has had one of the lamps burning steadily for seven months. The light is of dazzling brightness, a test showing it to be of thirty-six candle power. If the claims of the inventor be fully substantiated a revolution will be wrought in the methods of illumination.

His Business Way.

"No, Mr. Veeder," said the pretty village milliner, with a blush, "I like you very much, but not enough to marry you."

"Bless you, Miss Phoebe," replied the commercial traveler, "I never give it up on the first trial. Sometimes I have to make a dozen trips before I sell a bill of goods, and I can do a good deal more persevering than that when I am looking for a wife. You won't marry anybody inside of the next thirty days, will you? All right. I'll be around again in exactly that time, with the same—with the same sample of young man. WRENCHED FOOT AND ANKLE.

Cured By St. Jacob's Oil.

Gentlemen: A short time ago I severely wrenched my foot and ankle. The injury was very painful, and the consequent inconvenience (being obliged to keep to business), was very trying. A friend recommended St. Jacob's Oil, and I take great pleasure in informing you that one application was sufficient to effect a complete cure. To a busy man, so simple and effective a remedy is invaluable, and I shall lose no opportunity of suggesting the use of St. Jacob's Oil. Yours truly, Henry J. Doira, Manager the Cycles Co., London, Eng.

St. Jacob's Oil is safe and sure and never-failing. Conquers pain.

How a Woman Chooses Her Seat.

"There are lots of things about women that can't be explained, and in our business we can't help noticing them," said the communicative conductor. "For instance, nine women out of ten will invariably take a seat on the right hand side of a car, if a car is not crowded. I have often wondered at this, and at last I think I have the correct solution. I started out from the barn with an empty car the other day, and in five blocks I had picked up seven women, and they all sat in a row on the right-hand side of the car. It was just about the hour in the morning when the women come down town to do their shopping. Three men got in, and they sat on the left-hand side.

"A couple of blocks farther down I picked up another woman, and, instead of taking a vacant seat near the door on the side, the side the other women were sitting, as I thought she would do, she walked the entire length of the car and sat down beside one of the men. This bit of eccentricity puzzled me until I went to collect her fare, and then I discovered that she was left-handed. See? All the other women were right-handed. Yes; it does look like rain, doesn't it?"—Philadelphia Record.

Still Talking About It.

Bryant, Mo., Oct. 17th.—The case of Mrs. M. A. Goss, continues to be the chief topic of conversation in this neighborhood. Mrs. Goss was a cripple for a long time with Sciatica; she was so bad she couldn't turn over in bed, and for four months she lay on one side.

She had tried everything without getting any relief, till at last she heard of Dodd's Kidney Pills. She is strong and well to-day, and has not a single ache or pain.

Mrs. Goss says: "I don't know if Dodd's Kidney Pills will cure anything else or not; but I do know they will cure Sciatica, for they cured me, and there couldn't be a worse case than mine."

A Puzzler.

"I suppose you know it is considered extremely lucky to have a black cat come to you?" remarked the clairvoyant.

"Yes; what I came to you to learn," remarked the thoughtful man with the side-whiskers, wearily, "is the significance of having two gray cats, five black, one tortoise-shell, four or five cats of mixed shades and three white ones, come to my back fence and squall there every night."—Brooklyn Eagle.

A Mild Assertion.

If there is no dialect local to Ohio, why do so many Ohio people pronounce the name of their state "Ohier"?—Boston Globe.

Well, now, who, for instance?—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Poor Sarah.

Sarah Bernhardt says the idea of her playing Romeo to Maud Adams' Juliet was a joke. Only half a joke. It is admitted that Maud Adams can play Juliet.—Louisville Courier Journal.

Required Faith.

"How long must I keep praying for you and papa?"

"Why, I hope always, Willie."

"Well, I've been asking God to make you more indulgent, but I don't notice any change."—Life.

Mrs. Ellen Ripley, Chaplain Ladies Aid, Grand Army of the Republic, No. 7, 222 10th Ave., N. E., Minneapolis, Minn., Strongly Endorses Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—Your Vegetable Compound cured me of ulceration of the womb, and getting such a complete cure I felt that the medicine had genuine merit and was well worth recommending to other sick women.

"For fifteen years I have been your friend. I have never written you before, but I have advised hundreds of women to take your medicine, in fact it is the only real reliable remedy I know of for a sick woman.

"I have not yet found a case of ovarian or womb trouble which has not been relieved or cured by the faithful use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"You have brought health to hundreds of women in Minneapolis as you have no doubt to others over the country."—MRS. ELLEN RIPLEY.

$5000 FORFEIT IF THE ABOVE LETTER IS NOT GENUINE.

When women are troubled with irregular or painful menstruation, weakness, leucorrhoea, displacement or ulceration of the womb, that bearing-down feeling, inflammation of the ovaries, backache, flatulence, general debility, indigestion, and nervous prostration, they should remember there is one tried and true remedy. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound at once removes such troubles.

No other medicine in the world has received such widespread and unqualified endorsement. No other medicine has such a record of cures of female troubles. Refuse to buy any other medicine.

PERSUADED WITH A CAMERA.

How a Young Man Won Over His Prospective Father-in-Law.

"It was simply bull-headed luck," said the young man with the red shirtwaist. "Papa declared that it would be a warm day when he consented to my marrying his daughter, and as the weather record had been broken several times after he had made that remark, I was beginning to lose hope. When all-the-world-to-me went on her vacation I went to the same place and put up at the same hotel. Now, papa-in-law-to-be is an old blowhard, and it made me tired—everybody else, too—the way he bragged about the fish he caught in former years. Finally, some one hinted that it would be a good plan for him to make good and give us an example of his skill as a fisherman. He accepted the challenge and spent three days getting his tackle ready. He went alone, as he said he didn't want to be bothered by having any greenhorns along, and we waited with bated breath for him to return. Now, I am something of a camera fiend and late in the afternoon I started out to take a picture of a little wooded dell when the shadows were well down. I was making my way to the road through some thick brush when I discovered my daddy-in-law-to-be standing in the middle of the road bargaining with a small boy for a long string of magnificent fish. Quick as a flash I took a snap shot of him just as he was holding onto his pocket with one hand and digging into it with the other. I let the old man brag around the hotel for three days about the fish he had caught. Then I showed him the picture, told him if he didn't consent to my marrying his daughter I would spread it broadcast over the hotel, and pointed out where his reputation would be. He wilted, gulped hard and surrendered. He isn't a bad sort when you know how to handle him."—Detroit Free Press.

SOUVENIR CUPS LATEST.

Made of a New Metal and in Many Fantastic Shapes.

One of the latest fads to show itself in the jewelry trade is the souvenir cup of metal. This article, says the Jewelers' Weekly, is already popular in some sections of the United States. The souvenir spoon fad had its origin in Washington, D. C., and so, too, the souvenir cup in its present form, seems to have first appeared in that city a few months ago. It has now extended to other cities. In Washington the cups became a fad because that is a great tourist center. So far these cups have all been made to order in Germany and imported by one or two New York firms, who claim to have control, for this country, of all manufactures of the metal employed in this form. But if the demand expands and develops into a general fad there is every reason to expect American manufacturers to enter into competition with the German houses that now have the monopoly. The metal used is the new Kayser Zinn metal, which has come into demand lately for various uses, and the cups are sold either in their natural condition or silver plate inside and outside, or silver plate outside and gold lined. The popular shape is that of a white tumbler three and a half inches high by two and three-eighths inches in diameter at the top and one and five-eighths inches at the bottom. There are other more fancy shapes, such as a small German beer stein and a small thin goblet eight or nine inches high. On the sides are local designs which give the cups their souvenir significance.

Saved the Little Bottles.

"I have a patient who is wonderfully considerate of my interests," said a prominent physician lately. "A few weeks ago he had malaria, and I prescribed quinine for him, giving him four-grain capsules, so that he might take the drug without discomfort. He came out of his attack and a few days later called to see me at my office. Judge of my surprise when he exhibited the empty capsules and said, 'Doctor, I thought you might like the little bottles, so I saved them and brought them back.' He had emptied each four-grain dose of the bitter powder, and then essayed the rather hopeless task of washing it down with water. I couldn't do otherwise than to take the 'little bottles' from him without a word and next time I'll give him quinine in another form."—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

Takes Family in Balloon.

The archduke Leopold Salvator, who is considerably interested in aeronautics, recently made an ascent in his balloon, Meteor, accompanied by his wife and little seven-year-old daughter and Princess Theresa of Bavaria. The ascent was made in Vienna at about 10 o'clock in the morning, the Danube was crossed at about a height of 6,500 feet and the descent was safely accomplished some three hours later at Kornenburg. In Berlin a permanent international commission has been formed to promote ballooning, both in the interests of science and of sport.—Chicago News.

Promotion for Bravery.

Word reaches us of a small band of soldiers who held at bay a large number of Filipinos for over two hours until assistance arrived, thereby saving an important point from capture. For their bravery they were all given promotion. To be brave it is necessary to have strong nerves and a good digestion. If your stomach is weak and you suffer from indigestion, heartburn, belching, nervousness or insomnia, you should try Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. It will cure you.

Decided Her.

"How did they come to marry?"

"She saw his picture, and resolved that he was the man to whom she would entrust her future."

"I didn't know she was romantic."

"She isn't. His picture was on an advertisement for a business that is realizing enormous profits."—Cassell's Journal.

The people of Cass Lake have decided to disagree in school matters and as a result there are now two school districts in that town. The circumstances are somewhat similar to those existing here a few years ago, and which resulted in keeping so many desirable people from locating here on account of conditions of our schools. Two school districts in one town cannot do effective work and are a great deal more expensive. Before many years he people of Cass Lake will regret the course they have taken.

The failure of the fire engine at two recent fires, the first through bad management and the second by reason of an unavoidable accident, has caused a deal of criticism which is very unjust to the department. Thief River Falls is fortunate in possesing so competent a body of fire fighters and their record in this line can hardly be excelled. But four buildings have been burned to the ground since its organization, the first two fires being of incendary origin and beyond control before an alarm was given and the other two burning while the engine was "out of the business." The recent ill luck, which, in all probability, will never be repeated, should not blind the city to the excellent work done on the many blazes which have been put out before serious damage could occur. There are, however, several urgent needs of the department which are generally overlooked. In the first place there is an opening for a large number of men who have the interest of the city at heart to join one another of the companies and promote the efficiency of the whole.

When the alarm sounded Friday morning there were but eight men in the city to handle the two hose carts and four of these lived in the outlying part of the city and failed to hear the alarm. The engine company, which consists of two men, had to get along with one and the hook and ladder, with eleven men available, turned out eight. It is to be deplored that our citizens do not take more interest in this matter so important to our city and come forward to join the fire department. Another thing which the department needs is a chemical extinguisher of 30 or 40 gallons capacity. Such a piece of apparatus will not cost a deal of money and will frequently stop a fire in its incipiency before the engine could be placed and a string of hose laid in. The council should see to this matter.

The ladies of the Catholic church will meet with Mrs. Robert McGinn, Thursday Oct. 17.

The law passed in 1899 providing that non-resident deer hunters should pay a license of $25 and residents of the state a license of 25c was slightly amended by the last legislature. Under the original law the applicant for a license has to appear in person before the county auditor and have his personal decription written on the license. Now he can go before the town clerk, who can take his description and secure the license from the auditor by mail. The change will be of considerable interest to hunters residing in remote sections of the country.

SALE OF State Lands.

STATE OF MINNESOTA, LAND OFFICE.

St. Paul, September 7th, 1901.

Notice is hereby given that on Friday, the 18th day of October, 1901, at 2 o'clock, in the afternoon at the office of the County Auditor in Red Lake Falls, Minnesota, I will offer for sale the following described unsold state lands, and the following described state lands which have reverted to the state by reason of the non-payment of interest will also be then and there offered for resale. Fifteen per cent of the purchase price and interest on the unpaid balance from the date of sale to June 1st, 1902, must be paid at the time of the sale. The balance of the purchase money can be paid at any time, in whole or in part, within forty years of the time of the sale; the rate of interest on the unpaid balance of the purchase money will be four per cent per annum provided the principal remains unpaid for ten years but if the principal is paid before the expiration of ten years from the date of the sale, the rate of interest on the unpaid balance will be five per cent per annum, payable in advance on June 1st of each year.

Holders of certificates on which the interest payments are in default can have their certificates reinstated on payment before the sale of the interest in full to date and the penalties thereon, when the lands covered thereby will be withdrawn from sale.

R. C. DUNN,
State Land Commissioner.

DAIRY AND POULTRY.

INTERESTING CHAPTERS FOR OUR RURAL READERS.

How Successful Farmers Operate This Department of the Farm—A Few Hints as to the Care of Live Stock and Poultry.

Dairy Notes.

(From the Farmers' Review.)

According to a Missouri professor the Iowa breeders of Holsteins and Jerseys are slightly at odds. The Jersey breeders have invented a test for Holstein cows and the Holstein breeders have invented a test for Jersey cows. The Jersey breeders say: "Put a silver dollar in the bottom of a milk pail, milk the pail full of milk, and if you can see the dollar you have a pure-bred Holstein cow." The Holstein breeders say: "Put a dollar in the bottom of a pail, select what you think is a Jersey cow, and milk her into the pail. If you don't get enough milk to cover the dollar you have a full-blooded Jersey cow." Both sets of breeders should feel better after this bout.

Rudolph Miller declares that according to his observations the greatest trouble in raising calves by hand arises from feeding the calves whole milk one day, skimmilk the next day and sour milk the third day. Without doubt there is something in this view of the case. Such a course of feeding certainly tends to upset the digestive habits of the calf, and such changes are injurious even to mature animals.

If there is one place on the farm where it is necessary to keep an account of every financial transaction it is in the dairy. The margin of profit in dairying is not so large that one can afford to ignore the laws that hold in usual commercial enterprises. Euclid N. Cobb says that the assertion that the "bull is half the herd" is not always true. He has found that the lead pencil is "half the herd."

A successful feeder of dairy cows must have some succulent feed for his animals at all times of the year. Whether winter or summer the change from succulent feed to dry fodder means loss. The usual summer feeder wishes that his blue grass pasture would continue throughout the summer. The man that has summer silage to feed has the equivalent of a blue-grass pasture at its best, even in the midst of the summer drouth. Our best dairymen are coming to believe that silage is profitable to be fed every month in the year.

Poultry Briefs.

We frequently hear people say that they have "had good luck with their poultry this year." Impossible. Good luck is an old wives' fable and the less dependence put in it the better for the people that are trying to succeed in any line in life. Brain power and the use of that power will alone win success.

What is the best time to hatch chickens when winter layers is the object? We would like to hear from our readers on this question. One poultry raiser says that the end of March and first part of April is the period that gives the best results as to winter layers. If the chicks are hatched earlier they often lay a clutch of eggs and then go to moulting, which is detrimental to their work as layers of eggs at the time eggs are the most valuable. Birds hatched during the first two weeks of April should go to laying early in the fall if they are given a good supply of food.

What advantage to a poultry raiser is there in showing, if he wins no prizes? Much every way. In the first place he will make a study of his birds and their needs; he will communicate with others as to their methods. He will give so much attention to his flock that many of the old errors will be eliminated and many truths discovered and made serviceable.

Men upon whom we look as authorities sometimes make statements that unsettle our confidence in them. It is now currently reported that one celebrated poultry raiser in the east declares that there is as much money in summer eggs as in winter eggs. This is rather an old heresy and has been repeatedly knocked to pieces. It rests upon a comparison of the cost and selling price of eggs in summer and winter. Thus, if eggs sell at 40 cents in winter and cost thirty cents, the difference is ten. If eggs sell in the summer at twenty and cost ten, still the difference is ten. Then the argument is that there is as much profit in one as the other, which is not true. There is one thing that is lost sight of, and that is, that the cost of keeping the hens the year round is the true foundation for figuring. The hens have to be supported in the winter whether they lay or not. For illustration: One hen lays ten dozen of eggs in the winter season and they sell for forty cents per dozen, which is four dollars. Another hen lays ten dozen of eggs in the summer when eggs are worth twenty cents per dozen, and they sell for two dollars. The cost of feed is the same in either case. The problem is a simple one, for one hen has $2 more to her credit than the other one.—Farmers' Review.

Money in Pork.

Prices in the hog markets have been what may be called "firm" for a good many months. That they are to remain so is indicated to some extent by the anxiety shown by the packers, who are doing all possible to stimulate hog raising. The recent high prices have resulted in the marketing of a good many light hogs. In some of the Chicago markets a good many light pork loins are being sold, some of the loins weighing about five pounds each, less than half the usual. The pigs were evidently marketed because their owners feared a drop in prices, but this very process is most likely to prevent a drop in prices by decreasing the supply of mature hogs. We do not mean to say that the prices are to stay at the present point. That would be absurd. The market must and will change in response to the multitudinous influences that are always affecting it. But the prices of hogs will for a long time at least remain high enough to permit of the wise feeder and judicious marketer making a profit on his investment as well as to get pay for his work. There are few farmers that raise too many hogs. It is more usual for him not to raise as many hogs as would yield him a profit. The men that have been raising hogs for years and have kept at it through bad times and good are now making money out of their tenacity. There is money in pork, but the farmer that goes into hog raising in good times and out of hog raising in bad times is likely to miss it.

Scratching Room Under Poultry House.

This illustration shows a poultry house so constructed that the scratching shed is below the part occupied by the hens. There are some advantages in this form of structure. Cost is saved, as the whole expense of the scratching shed is represented by the small addition in height of the building. The aperture to the open air being smaller than in most cases, could be closed with ease at night and in stormy weather. On the other hand the scratching shed itself has so little height that it is not an easy matter to keep it in order or to enter it for any purpose. As a whole, it represents how advantageously many of the poultry houses now in existence could be altered. Such change would mean principally the raising of the floor.—Farmers' Review.

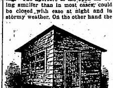

Fig. 11.—Scratching room under poultry house.

Nursery Inspection.

In many of our states at the present time laws exist requiring the inspection of all nurseries by officials connected with the office of the state entomologist. Buyers of fruit trees should note the fact that such inspections are not sufficiently rigid to make them guarantees of the freedom from insects and fungous diseases of stock from the inspected nurseries. The entomologists claim that an inspection to be really effective must include the close scrutiny of every tree in the nursery, which it is manifestly impossible to have in the few hours devoted to inspection. The number of individual trees often runs up into the thousands, making a close examination of each one impracticable. But for all this, the inspection is valuable, as the inspectors have a chance of finding orchard pests if they exist there. This possibility acts as an incentive to the nurseryman to do much inspecting himself previous to the visit of the official inspector. The purchasers of nursery stock should, however, inform themselves on the insects and fungi and do some inspecting on their own account.

Importance of High-Grade Product.

D. E. Salmon, chief of the bureau of animal industry, says: In order to secure a higher consumption of poultry products per capita in the United States, it is of prime importance that there should always be an abundant supply of strictly fresh eggs and of the best grades of table poultry. This condition is also a necessary factor in the development of the export trade. When the markets are filled with eggs that have lost their quality and flavor by long keeping and many of which have acquired an offensive taste; when the broilers and roasters offered to the consumer are thin, tasteless, tough, and altogether unfit for the table, it is not surprising that they are passed by and beef, mutton or pork taken in their stead. So also when the exporter is buying for consignment to foreign markets, he must be able to find at all times a good article of eggs or poultry in sufficient quantity or he cannot continue his trade.

Little Jean's doll had met with an accident and her mother had procured a new head for it. The removal of the old head proved to be a rather difficult task which Jean watched with great interest. "I am afraid, Jean, I can't get this old head off," said her mother. Jean's face glowed with the light of an inspiration as she said, "Never mind, mamma, just take the body off."

A little girl of four years was riding past a cemetery with her mother. Looking up she said: "Mamma, how long after they bury a person before the gravestone comes up?"

Animal collectors working in South Africa for European and American zoological concerns command high salaries.

Western Grazing Land Problems.

The matter of grazing stock on government forest reserves has for some time been the cause of considerable friction between stock growers and government officials. Until within the past two years the Department of Interior has prohibited the grazing of herds, especially sheep, upon these reservations, but upon representations made by the officials of the National Live Stock Association this order was modified so as to permit grazing, under certain restrictions. Gifford Pinchot, forester for the government, has submitted to the Association his ideas, subject to modifications. They are as follows: The Government, through its forest officers, after consultation with the representatives of the various interests involved, to decide on the number of head to be grazed in each forest reserve, or each subdivision of a reserve, and to establish the boundaries between cattle range and sheep range. 2. The local associations to assign ranges to owners within the limits thus laid down, subject to official approval. 3. Both owners and local associations to be held responsible for the observance of the terms of permits and the prevention of fire and overgrazing. 4. Each sheep owner to have the exclusive right to his range, and the same to apply within reasonable limits to groups of cattle owners. 5. Permits to run for five years. 6. Residents to have precedence in all cases over tramp owners and owners from other states. 7. Local questions to be decided on local grounds and on their own merits in each separate case. 8. Since the forest reserves are usually summer ranges, provision to be made for necessary routes of transit. 9. The policy of the Government to be based on regulation rather than prohibition, except in special cases, it being understood that the avoidance of overgrazing is equally in the interest of all parties.

Supply of Horses.

S. A. French, Franklin County, Ia.: Most of the stallions used here are either Norman or Clyde. The mares are mostly grades or some mixed breed. Probably fifty per cent of the farmers raise horses and they find the drafts the most profitable. A few raise carriage horses, but they are not as salable as the heavier horses. The supply of colts is about what it was before horses got so cheap. The present supply of marketable horses is considerably short of former years, for when the prices of horses fell so low, fewer colts were raised for two or three years and that has shortened the present supply. Except a few cases of distemper, no disease prevails and the condition of horses is good.

John W. Brucker, Calumet County, Wis.: About one-fourth of our farmers raise colts, but not every year; perhaps one-half of that quarter raise colts every other year; still we have more 2-year-old colts than we had in 1894. We also have some three-year-olds—possibly half as many as our stock of two-year-olds. They are mostly roadsters weighing about 1,100 pounds on the average. Draft horses are most in demand and we have now some heavy Percherons and Clydes. The supply of horses that are ready for market is not as large as in previous years, though there are always some horses for sale. Horses are generally healthy and in good condition.

J. E. Gray, Louisa County, Iowa: Relative to the supply of horses in our neighborhood, would say almost every farmer raises colts of some kind, mostly draft colts, say about three-fourths of them. There are also some roadsters and a small number of coach horses. Horses of marketable condition are scarce and command good prices—$150 to $200 a head at home. A light attack of distemper and pink eye is affecting the horses on some farms; otherwise condition of horses is good.—Farmers' Review.

The Pig and the Dairy.

Today the pig is considered almost an essential part of the dairy. There was a time when the by-product was ignored in every branch of farming, but that day has gone. The pig is the most successful utilizer of the dairy by-products and represents profits very largely. The dairyman can give the pig just what he needs—clover and milk. This, with a little corn for finishing, is a diet on which the pig thrives. One dairyman says that his greatest obstacle in successful dairying is the finding of a market for his skimmilk. To a man so situated the pig is the natural means of marketing the skimmilk. Enough pigs should be kept to use up all of this product, unless there is a profitable market for part of it. We have seen skimmilk sell at 20 cents per gallon, and then again we have seen it sell at one cent a gallon. The pig will pay at least five cents a gallon for it, and when pork is high in price will pay even more. Besides, he buys it without requiring the seller to pay any cost of marketing.

Our Farm Animals.

The total value of all farm animals and live stock in the United States is more than $2,000,000,000. More than half that value ($1,200,000,000) is in cows, oxen and other cattle.

Roosevelt Takes All to Lunch.

When luncheon time comes the president glances around his office at the White House and says, "Well, let's all go and have some luncheon;" and marches in at the head of the company that happens to be with him, whether it is one man or a dozen. He has had somebody at dinner and usually three or four every night since he has been at the White House. The number he has had at luncheon will average three a day, and there have been a dozen guests at breakfast at various times.

Wedding Gifts of Silver—Old Dutch Pieces Quite the Fashion, and Jewelers Show Many Other Attractive Articles—Cooking Recipes.

ABOUT WEDDING GIFTS.

For those interested in wedding gifts the shops are showing many fascinating things. The big jewelry establishments are making an unusually attractive showing. The novelties are many and unique. Antique silver, with partly gilt finish, is most effective.

A very beautiful service of it was among the gifts at a recent fashionable wedding. The extreme oddness in shape of the sugar bowl, with this service, was much commented on. It was a perfect reproduction of the pineapple.

As it is in vogue to use odd pieces in silver as well as in china on the tea table, it will be proper to combine the antique and the Dutch silver. Tea caddies make very attractive additions to the tea table in Dutch silver.

The new idea in glass ware makes a most desirable gift, and one any bride might be proud of. This enameled glass ware is shown in olive and bon-bon dishes. A particularly effective olive dish has a design of strawberries in wreath form with a narrow gilt border on either side, says the Philadelphia Press.

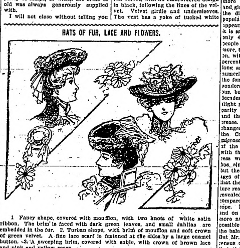
Perhaps the most acceptable of gifts are the beautiful pieces of bric-a-brac in Royal Vienna ware, and the shops are showing an unlimited variety.

Those effective bronze electroliers are also there to tempt one, and with their flower-like globes, in orchids, lilies and roses, they certainly make a pardonable extravagance.

These electroliers are far more dainty in design, and coloring than the majority of lamps, of which the bride of old was always generously supplied with.

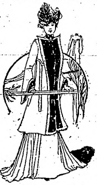
I will not close without telling you of another gift just ordered for a bride of the near future. It is a fruit compote in Dutch silver, supported by three small cupids.—Boston Herald.

HATS OF FUR, LACE AND FLOWERS.



1 Fancy shape, covered with mouflon, with two knots of white satin ribbon. The brim is faced with dark green leaves, and small dahlias are embedded in the fur. 2. Turban shape, with brim of mouflon and soft crown of green velvet. A fine lace scarf is fastened at the sides by a large enamel button. 3. A sweeping brim, covered with sable, with crown of brown lace and pink and yellow roses.

SMART COAT FOR STREET WEAR.



Made of smooth goods, with wide reveres and full sleeves, faced with panne velvet.

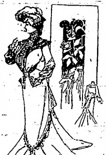
HOW TO TALK TO MEN.

Among our readers there are many young girls who complain that they do not know how to talk to men. They have probably been brought up almost exclusively among their own sex, and, therefore, look upon men very much as upon beings of another world, and when they find themselves in masculine society they are at a loss to know how to make themselves agreeable, and what to talk about.

Their task would be lightened if they realized that men are, after all, very nearly akin to themselves, and that they have very much the same ideas, feelings and sentiments. The failure to recognize this fact generally earns them the character among their male acquaintances for unamiability or pride; seldom, indeed, are they credited with the timidity of ignorance, says Home Notes.

The girl who generally is acceptable with men is without self-consciousness, and talks to a man much in the same style as she would to a girl friend. She is not always thinking of herself and the impression she creates, but she is kind and sympathetic, and she interests herself in him and his affairs, and lets him feel it, always, however, taking care to avoid excess in this respect. When talking with him she shows interest in the matter under discussion, but, while holding to her own opinions, she takes care not to assert them with too great eagerness.

L. CK CLOTH GOWN.



Trimmed with shaped bands of deep red velvet, with an embroidered design in black, following the lines of the velvet. Velvet girdle and undersleeves. The vest has a yoke of tucked white chiffon, with bands of embroidered chiffon crossing it; lower part of accordion pleated chiffon.

WOMEN LOOK YOUNGER THAN MEN.

I wonder how many people have noticed that in the last twenty years the fallacy that "a woman looks older for her years than a man" has been exploded. A woman—the ordinary woman who takes care of herself and treasures her youth as a precious thing—looks younger than the majority of men of the same age, says the Minneapolis Times. Women of 40 and 45 look many years younger than their husbands, who are usually but a few years their seniors, and because of the eternal youth preserving that obtains among the new century women the fashion of marrying men who are several years their juniors is becoming more and more the vogue.

COOKING RECIPES.

Baked Potato Cake.

Cream a half-pound of butter with two cups of powdered sugar and the beaten yolks of six eggs and a teaspoonful each of ground mace and nutmeg. Into a pound of mashed potato that has been rubbed through a colander squeeze the juice of a lemon and stir into the other ingredients. Add a cup of milk and beat all until smooth and light. Now stir in the stiffening whites of the six eggs, turn into a buttered dish and bake. This is more like a pudding than a cake, but is, I hope, what my correspondent asks for.

Almond Cake.

Blanch enough almonds to make a cupful of them when skinned and when cold pound to a paste. Or, what is more convenient, buy the almond paste ready prepared. Cream a quarter-pound of butter with a pound of powdered sugar and beat into this the well-whipped yolks of seven eggs. Now beat in gradually the almond paste, one teaspoonful of rose water, a quart of sifted flour and, lastly, the stiffened whites of the eggs. Bake in a loaf in a steady oven until a straw comes out clean from the thickest part. When cold, ice, flavoring the icing with rose water and a very little essence of bitter almonds.

SEX IN POPULATION.

U. S. CENSUS FIGURES SHOW THAT MALES PREDOMINATE.

Since 1850 There Has Been a Distinct Numerical Superiority of the Male Over the Female Element in This Country—The Causes.

Whatever differences Dame Nature may have intended between the spheres of influence of men and women, she evidently intended that numerically at least the two sexes should stand on nearly the same footing. The world over, except where recognizable and what might be called artificial causes interfere, the male and female elements of the population are about equal. At first sight, perhaps, this may not seem at all remarkable. But it is to be remembered that in many families—large ones, too—the great majority of the children are of one sex or the other. And one should not be surprised if the aggregate effect of this lopsidedness were to produce a considerable excess of men or women in a nation. The fact that such is not the case, then, shows that there is some potent and mysterious law of compensation at work upon the race as a whole. And this law operates upon many of the animals as well as men. On the farm it is found convenient to preserve a great predominance of one sex over the other in cattle and chickens. The bull calf is predestined from his birth to conversion into veal, and a similarly stern fate consigns the superfluous cockerel to the gridiron or chicken pie at a tender age. But, so far as the natural increase is concerned among cattle and poultry, an approximately even balance is preserved. Curiosity, not to say astonishment, is excited, therefore, by a recent announcement of the United States Census Bureau. The enumeration of 1900 shows that there are more men and boys than women and girls in the United States, and that the difference exceeds 1,800,000 in a population of 76,303,387. The excess appears more distinctly, perhaps, when it is said that there are 512 males and only 488 females in every thousand people in the United States. What is more, this sort of thing has been going on, with some little fluctuation in the percentage, for over half a century. As long ago as 1850 there was a distinct numerical superiority of the male over the female element. By 1860, the preponderance was even more conspicuous, but in 1870 less than for several decades. The returns for 1880 show a slight gain once more, though the disparity of 1860 was not quite reached, and those for 1890 a still further increase. The situation has scarcely changed in the last ten years. Indeed, the Census Bureau figures out a microscopic falling off in the growth of the male population as compared with the female. To be sure, the excess was only 1,560,097 in 1890, and has since been enlarged by 254,727; but the bureau finds that the percentages of gain are not quite alike, and that there are faint indications of a future reaction. The state of things here revealed is the more striking when compared with that existing in Europe. Both in the United Kingdom and on the continent the women are more numerous than the men. It is possible to detect forces that disturb the balance in some of these countries. But Mr. Porter, superintendent of the census of 1890, was inclined to think that these influences did not operate perceptibly in Austria and the Netherlands, and hence that normally the female sex outnumbers the male in nearly the proportion of 51 to 49. Comparison with that standard, then, makes the excess of males in America stranger than if Nature exhibited strict impartiality. The two forces which appear to be chiefly concerned in upsetting the equilibrium are war and immigration. And of the two the former is much the less effective. Still, it was powerful enough to influence the returns in Germany and France after the famous struggle of 1870-71. And in the United States it pulled down the male proportion of 5,112 in every 10,000 in 1860 to 5,056 in 1870. As might be expected, the greatest excess of men is to be found in the far west, in the great agricultural and mining districts. In Minnesota and Nebraska there were at least 54 men out of every 100 people for a long time, from 55 to 58 in the Dakotas and from 60 to 68 in most of the regions to the west and southwest. The ratio in Montana was once as great as 81 out of 100, and even in 1890 was 66⅔ to 33⅓.

Water Supply of American Cities.

New York city's average daily supply of water for the three boroughs of Manhattan, Brooklyn and The Bronx is 340,000,000 gallons, and the consumption of Queens and Richmond brings up the total to 350,000,000 gallons, a larger quantity than is used by any other city in the world and nearly as much as is used by any other two American cities. The daily supply of Chicago is 285,000,000 gallons, of Buffalo, 187,000,000; of Cleveland, 65,000,000; Philadelphia, 290,000,000; St. Louis, 60,000,000; Boston, 80,000,000; Cincinnati, 40,000,000; San Francisco, 30,000,000; Newark, 25,000,000; Denver, 40,000,000; Milwaukee, 25,000,000; Baltimore, 50,000,000; Omaha, 20,000,000, and Washington, 50,000,000.

Too Many for Them.

"I wonder why the young men are so shy about calling on Miss Bunn-Combe. Is it because she is such a singular kind of girl?" "Not at all. It's because her younger brothers are so formidably plural."—Chicago Tribune.

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

VARIOUS RECOMMENDATIONS FOR THE CONSIDERATION OF CONGRESS.

THE QUESTION OF RECIPROCITY

FAVORS THE PRINCIPLE, BUT OPPOSES ANY GENERAL TARIFF CHANGE.

WHAT TO DO WITH THE TRUSTS

PUBLICITY THE ONLY SURE REMEDY THAT CAN NOW BE EVOKED.

To the Senate and House of Representatives:

The congress assembles this year under the shadow of a great calamity. On the 6th of September President McKinley was shot by an anarchist while attending the Pan-American exposition at Buffalo and died in that city on the 14th of that month.

Of the last seven elected presidents he is the third who has been murdered, and the bare recital of this fact is sufficient to justify grave alarm among all loyal American citizens. Moreover, the circumstances of this, the third assassination of an American president, have a peculiarly sinister significance. Both President Lincoln and President Garfield were killed by assassins of types unfortunately not uncommon in history. President Lincoln falling a victim to the terrible passions aroused by four years of civil war and President Garfield to the revengeful vanity of a disappointed officeseeker.

President McKinley was killed by an utterly depraved criminal belonging to that body of criminals who object to all governments, good and bad alike, who are against any form of popular liberty if it is guaranteed by even the most just and liberal laws, and who are as hostile to the upright exponent of a free people's sober will as to the tyrannical and irresponsible despot.

It is not too much to say that at the time of President McKinley's death he was the most widely loved man in all the United States, while we have never had any public man of his position who has been so wholly free from the bitter animosities incident to public life. His political opponents were the first to bear the heartiest and most generous tribute to the broad kindliness of nature, the sweetness and gentleness of character which so endeared him to his close associates. To a standard of lofty integrity in public life he united the tender affection and home virtues which are all important in the makeup of national character. A gallant soldier in the great war for the Union, he also shone as an example to all our people because of his conduct in the most sacred and intimate of home relations. There could be no personal hatred of him, for he never acted with aught but consideration for the welfare of others.

No one could fail to respect him who knew him in public or private life. The defenders of those murderous criminals who seek to excuse their criminality by asserting that it is exercised for political ends, inveigh against wealth and irresponsible power. But for this assassination even this base apology cannot be urged.

President McKinley was a man of moderate means, a man whose stock sprang from the sturdy tillers of the soil, who had himself belonged among the wageworkers, who had entered the army as a private soldier. Wealth was not struck at when the president was assassinated, but the honest toil which is content with moderate gains after a lifetime of unremitting labor largely in the service of the public. Still less was power struck at in the sense that power is irresponsible or centered in the hands of any one individual. The blow was not aimed at tyranny or wealth. It was aimed at one of the strongest champions the wageworker has ever had, at one of the most faithful representatives of the system of public rights and representative government who has ever risen to public office.

President McKinley filled that political office for which the entire people vote, and no president, not even Lincoln himself, was ever more earnestly anxious to represent the well thought out wishes of the people.

His one anxiety in every crisis was to keep in closest touch with the people; to find out what they thought and to endeavor to give expression to their thought after having endeavored to guide that thought aright.

He had just been re-elected to the presidency because the majority of our citizens, the majority of our farmers and wageworkers, believed that he had faithfully upheld their interests for four years. They felt themselves in close and intimate touch with him. They felt that he represented so well and so honorably all their ideals and aspirations that they wished him to continue for another four years to represent them.

And this was the man at whom the assassin struck! That there might be nothing lacking to complete the Judaslike infamy of his act he took advantage of an occasion when the president was meeting the people generally, and, advancing as if to take the hand outstretched to him in kindly and brotherly fellowship, he turned the noble and generous confidence of the victim into an opportunity to strike the fatal blow. There is no baser deed in all the annals of crime.

The shock, the grief of the country, are bitter in the minds of all who saw the dark days while the president yet hovered between life and death. At last the light was stilled in the kindly eyes and the breath went from the lips that even in mortal agony uttered no words save of forgiveness to his murderer, of love for his friends and of unfaltering trust in the will of the Most High. Such a death crowning the glory of such a life leaves us to infinite sorrow, but with such pride in what he had accomplished and in his own personal character that we feel the blow not as struck at him, but as struck at the nation. We mourn a good and great president who is dead, but while we mourn we are lifted up by the splendid achievements of his life and the grand heroism with which he met his death.

When we turn from the man to the nation, the harm done is so great as to excite our gravest apprehensions and to demand our wisest and most resolute action.

This criminal was a professed anarchist, inflamed by the teachings of professed anarchists and probably also by the reckless utterances of those who on the stump and in the public press appeal to the dark and evil spirits of malice and greed, envy and sullen hatred. The wind is sowed by the men who preach such doctrines, and they cannot escape their share of responsibility for the whirlwind that is reaped. This applies alike to the deliberate demagogue, to the exploiter of sensationalism and to the crude and foolish visionary who for whatever reason apologizes for crime or excites aimless discontent.

The blow was aimed not at this president, but at all presidents, at every symbol of government.

President McKinley was as emphatically the embodiment of the popular will of the nation expressed through the forms of law as a New England town meeting is in similar fashion the embodiment of the law-abiding purpose and practice of the people of the town. On no conceivable theory could the murder of the president be accepted as due to protest against "inequalities in the social order" save as the murder of all the freemen engaged in a town meeting could be accepted as a protest against the social inequality which puts a malefactor in jail. Anarchy is no more an expression of "social discontent" than picking pockets or wife-beating.

DOWN WITH ANARCHY.

Immigration Legislation as the First Step Recommended.

The anarchist, and especially the anarchist in the United States, is merely one type of the criminal, more dangerous than any other because he represents the same depravity in a greater degree. The man who advocates anarchy directly or indirectly in any shape or fashion or the man who apologizes for anarchists and their deeds makes himself morally accessory to murder before the fact. The anarchist is a criminal whose perverted instincts lead him to prefer confusion and chaos to the most beneficent form of social order. His protest of concern for workingmen is outrageous in its impudent falsity, for if the political institutions of this country do not afford opportunity to every honest and intelligent son of toil then the door of hope is forever closed against him.

The anarchist is everywhere not merely the enemy of system and of progress, but the deadly foe of liberty. If ever anarchy is triumphant, its triumph will last for but one red moment, to be succeeded for ages by the gloomy night of despotism.

For the anarchist himself, whether he preaches or practices his doctrines, we need not have one particle more concern than for any ordinary murderer. He is not the victim of social or political injustice. There are no wrongs to remedy in his case. The cause of his criminality is to be found in his own evil passions and in the evil conduct of those who urge him on, not in any failure by others or by the state to do justice to him or his. He is a malefactor and nothing else. He is in no sense, in no shape or way, a "product of social conditions" save as a highwayman is "produced" by the fact that an unarmed man happens to have a purse. It is a travesty upon the great and holy names of liberty and freedom to permit them to be invoked in such a cause. No man or body of men preaching anarchistic doctrines should be allowed at large any more than if preaching the murder of some specified private individual. Anarchistic speeches, writings and meetings are essentially seditious and treasonable.

I earnestly recommend to the congress that in the exercise of its wise discretion it should take into consideration the coming to this country of anarchists or persons professing principles hostile to all government and justifying the murder of those placed in authority.

Such individuals as those who not long ago gathered in open meeting to glorify the murder of King Humbert of Italy perpetrate a crime, and the law should insure their rigorous punishment. They and those like them should be kept out of this country, and if found here they should be promptly deported to the country whence they came, and far reaching provision should be made for the punishment of those who stay. No matter calls more urgently for the wisest thought of the congress.

The federal courts should be given jurisdiction over any man who kills or attempts to kill the president or any man who by the Constitution or by law is in line of succession for the presidency, while the punishment for an unsuccessful attempt should be proportioned to the enormity of the offense against our institutions.

Anarchy is a crime against the whole human race, and all mankind should band against the anarchist. His crime should be made an offense against the law of nations, like piracy and that form of man stealing known as the slave trade, for it is of far blacker infamy than either. It should be so declared by treaties among all civilized powers. Such treaties would give to the federal government the power of dealing with the crime.

A grim commentary upon the folly of the anarchist position was afforded by the attitude of the law toward this very criminal who had just taken the life of the president. The people would have torn him limb from limb if it had not been that the law he defied was at once invoked in his behalf. So far from his deed having been committed on behalf of the people against the government, the government was obliged at once to exert its full police power to save him from instant death at the hands of the people. Moreover, his deed worked not the slightest dislocation in our governmental system, and the danger of a recurrence of such deeds, no matter how great it might grow, would work only in the direction of strengthening and giving harshness to the forces of order. No man will ever be restrained from becoming president by any fear as to his personal safety. If the risk to the president's life became great, it would mean that the office would more and more come to be filled by men of a spirit which would make them resolute and merciless in dealing with every friend of disorder. This great country will not fall into anarchy, and if anarchists should ever become a serious menace to its institutions they would not merely be stamped out, but would involve in their own ruin every active or passive sympathizer with their doctrines. The American people are slow to wrath, but when their wrath is once kindled it burns like a consuming flame.

TRUSTS AND COMBINES.

These Are Placed Under the Head of Serious Social Problems.

During the last five years business confidence has been restored, and the nation is to be congratulated because of its present abounding prosperity. Such prosperity can never be created by law alone, although it is easy enough to destroy it by mischievous laws. If the hand of the Lord is heavy upon any country, if flood or drouth comes, human wisdom is powerless to avert the calamity. Moreover, no law can guard us against the consequences of our own folly. The men who are idle or credulous, the men who seek gains not by genuine work with head or hand, but by gambling in any form, are always a source of menace not only to themselves, but to others. If the business world loses its head, it loses what legislation cannot supply. Fundamentally the welfare of each citizen and therefore the welfare of the aggregate of citizens which makes the nation must rest upon individual thrift and energy, resolution and intelligence. Nothing can take the place of this individual capacity, but wise legislation and honest and intelligent administration can give it the fullest scope, the largest opportunity to work to good effect.

The tremendous and highly complex industrial development which went on with ever accelerated rapidity during the latter half of the nineteenth century brings us face to face at the beginning of the twentieth with very serious social problems.

The old laws and the old customs which had almost the binding force of law were once quite sufficient to regulate the accumulation and distribution of wealth. Since the industrial changes which have so enormously increased the productive power of mankind they are no longer sufficient.

The growth of cities has gone on beyond comparison faster than the growth of the country, and the upbuilding of the great industrial centers has meant a startling increase not merely in the aggregate of wealth, but in the number of very large individual and especially of very large corporate fortunes.

The creation of these great corporate fortunes has not been due to the tariff nor to any other governmental action, but to natural causes in the business world, operating in other countries as they operate in our own.

The process has aroused much antagonism, a great part of which is wholly without warrant. It is not true that as the rich have grown richer the poor have grown poorer. On the contrary, never before has the average man, the wageworker, the farmer, the small trader, been so well off as in this country and at the present time. There have been abuses connected with the accumulation of wealth, yet it remains true that a fortune accumulated in legitimate business can be accumulated by the person specially benefited only on condition of conferring immense incidental benefits upon others. Successful enterprise of the type which benefits all mankind can only exist if the conditions are such as to offer great prizes as the rewards of success.

The captains of industry who have driven the railway systems across this continent, who have built up our commerce, who have developed our manufactures, have on the whole done great good to our people. Without them the material development of which we are so justly proud could never have taken place.

Moreover, we should recognize the immense importance to this material development of leaving as unhampered as is compatible with the public good the strong and forceful men upon whom the success of business operations inevitably rests. The slightest study of business conditions will satisfy any one capable of forming a judgment that the personal equation is the most important factor in a business operation; that the business concern, big or little, is usually the factor which fixes the gulf between striking success and hopeless failure.

An additional reason for caution in dealing with corporations is to be found in the international commercial conditions of today. The same business conditions which have produced the great aggregations of corporate and individual wealth have made them very potent factors in international commercial competition. Business concerns which have the largest means at their disposal and are managed by the ablest men are naturally those which take the lead in the strife for commercial supremacy among the nations of the world. America has only just begun to assume that commanding position in the international business world which we believe will more and more be hers. It is of the utmost importance that this position be not jeoparded, especially at a time when the overflowing abundance of our own natural resources and the skill, business energy and mechanical aptitude of our people make foreign markets essential. Under such conditions it would be most unwise to cramp or to fetter the youthful strength of our nation.

Moreover, it cannot too often be pointed out that to strike with ignorant violence at the interests of one set of men almost inevitably endangers the interests of all.

The fundamental rule of our national life, the rule which underlies all others, is that on the whole and in the long run we shall go up or down together. There are exceptions, and in times of prosperity some will prosper far more and in times of adversity some will suffer far more than others; but, speaking generally, a period of good times means that all share more or less in them, and in a period of hard times all feel the stress to a greater or less degree. It surely ought not to be necessary to enter into any proof of this statement. The memory of the lean years which began in 1893 is still vivid, and we can contrast them with the conditions in this very year which is now closing. Disaster to great business enterprises can never have its effects limited to the men at the top. It spreads throughout, and while it is bad for everybody it is worst for those farther down. The capitalist may be shorn of his luxuries, but the wageworker may be deprived of even bare necessities.

The mechanism of modern business is so delicate that extreme care must be taken not to interfere with it in a spirit of rashness or ignorance. Many of those who have made it their vocation to denounce the great industrial combinations which are popularly, although with technical inaccuracy, known as "trusts," appeal especially to hatred and fear.

These are precisely the two emotions, particularly when combined with ignorance, which unfit men for the exercise of cool and steady judgment. In facing new industrial conditions the whole history of the world shows that legislation will generally be both unwise and ineffective unless undertaken after calm inquiry and with sober self-restraint.

Much of the legislation directed at the trusts would have been exceedingly mischievous had it not also been entirely ineffective. In accordance with a well-known sociological law the ignorant or reckless agitator has been the really effective friend of the evils which he has been nominally opposing. In dealing with business interests for the government to undertake by crude and ill-considered legislation to do what may turn out to be bad would be to incur the risk of such far-reaching national disaster that it would be preferable to undertake nothing at all. The men who demand the impossible or the undesirable serve as the allies of the forces with which they are nominally at war, for they hamper those who would endeavor to find out in rational fashion what the wrongs really are and to what extent and in what manner it is practicable to apply remedies.

All this is true, and yet it is also true that there are real and grave evils, one of the chief being overcapitalization, because of its baneful consequences, and a resolute and practical effort must be made to correct these evils.

There is a widespread conviction in the minds of the American people that the great corporations known as trusts are in certain of their features and tendencies hurtful to the general welfare. This springs from no spirit of envy or uncharitableness nor lack of pride in the great industrial achievements that have placed this country at the head of the nations struggling for commercial supremacy. It does not rest upon a lack of intelligent appreciation of the necessity of meeting changing and changed conditions of trade with new methods nor upon ignorance of the fact that combination of capital in the effort to accomplish great things is necessary when the world's progress demands that great things be done. It is based upon sincere conviction that combination and concentration should be not prohibited, but supervised and within reasonable limits controlled, and in my judgment this conviction is right.

It is no limitation upon property rights or freedom of contract to require that when men receive from government the privilege of doing business under corporate form which frees them from individual responsibilities and enables them to call into their enterprises the capital of the public they shall do so upon absolutely truthful representations as to the value of the property in which the capital is to be invested. Corporations engaged in interstate commerce should be regulated if they are found to exercise a license working to the public injury. It should be as much the aim of those who seek for social betterment to rid the business world of crimes of cunning as to rid the entire body politic of crimes of violence. Great corporations exist only because they are created and safeguarded by our institutions, and it is therefore our right and our duty to see that they work in harmony with these institutions.

PUBLICITY NEEDED.

This Is the First Essential in Dealing With Trusts.

The first essential in determining how to deal with the great industrial combinations is knowledge of the facts—publicity. In the interest of the public the government should have the right to inspect and examine the workings of the great corporations engaged in interstate business. Publicity is the only sure remedy which we can now invoke. What further remedies are needed in the way of governmental regulation or taxation can only be determined after publicity has been obtained by process of law and in the course of administration.

The first requisite is knowledge, full and complete—knowledge which may be made public to the world.

Artificial bodies, such as corporations and joint stock or other associations depending upon any statutory law for their existence or privileges, should be subject to proper governmental supervision, and full and accurate information as to their operations should be made public regularly at reasonable intervals.

The large corporations, commonly called trusts, though organized in one state, always do business in many states, often doing very little business in the state where they are incorporated. There is utter lack of uniformity in the state laws about them, and as no state has any exclusive interest in or power over their acts it has in practice proved impossible to get adequate legislation through state action.

Therefore, in the interest of the whole people, the nation should, without interfering with the power of the states in the matter itself, also assume power of supervision and regulation over all corporations doing an interstate business.

This is especially true where the corporation derives a portion of its wealth from the existence of some monopolistic element or tendency in its business. There would be no hardship in such supervision. Banks are subject to it, and in their case it is now accepted as a simple matter of course. Indeed it is probable that supervision of corporations by the national government need not go so far as is now the case with the supervision exercised over them by so conservative a state as Massachusetts in order to produce excellent results.

When the Constitution was adopted, at the end of the eighteenth century, no human wisdom could foretell the sweeping changes, alike in industrial and political conditions, which were to take place by the beginning of the twentieth century. At that time it was accepted as a matter of course that the several states were the proper authorities to regulate so far as was then necessary the comparatively insignificant and strictly localized corporate bodies of the day. The conditions are now wholly different, and wholly different action is called for. I believe that a law can be framed which will enable the national government to exercise control along the lines above indicated, profiting by the experience gained through the passage and administration of the interstate commerce act.

If, however, the judgment of the congress is that it lacks the constitutional power to pass such an act, then a constitutional amendment should be submitted to confer the power.

There should be created a cabinet officer to be known as secretary of commerce and industries, as provided in the bill introduced at the last session of the congress. It should be his province to deal with commerce in its broadest sense, including, among many other things, whatever concerns labor, and all matters affecting the great business corporations and our merchant marine.

The course proposed is one phase of what should be a comprehensive and far-reaching scheme of constructive statesmanship for the purpose of broadening our markets, securing our business interests on a safe basis and making firm our new position in the international industrial world, while scrupulously safeguarding the rights of wageworker and capitalist, of investor and private citizen, so as to secure equity as between man and man in this republic.

CHINESE EXCLUSION.

Protection for the American Workingman Is Necessary.

With the sole exception of the farming interest, no one matter is of such vital moment to our whole people as the welfare of the wageworkers. If the farmer and the wageworker are well off, it is absolutely certain that all others will be well off too. It is therefore a matter for hearty congratulation that on the whole wages are higher to-day in the United States than ever before in our history, and far higher than in any other country. The standard of living is also higher than ever before. Every effort of legislator and administrator should be bent to secure the permanency of this condition of things. Not only must our labor be protected by tariff, but it should also be protected so far as it is possible from the presence in this country of any laborers brought over by contract or of those who, coming freely, yet represent a standard of living so depressed that they can undersell our men in the labor market and drag them to a lower level.

I regard it as necessary, with this end in view, to re-enact immediately the law excluding Chinese laborers and to strengthen it wherever necessary in order to make its enforcement entirely effective.

The national government should demand the highest quality of service from its employes, and in return it should be a good employer. If possible, legislation should be passed in connection with the interstate commerce law which will render effective the efforts of different states to do away with the competition of convict contract labor in the open labor market. So far as practicable under the conditions of government work provision should be made to render the enforcement of the eight-hour law easy and certain. In all industries carried on directly or indirectly for the United States government women and children should be protected from excessive hours of labor, from night work and from work under unsanitary conditions. The government should provide in its contracts that all work should be done under "fair" conditions and, in addition to setting a high standard, should uphold it by proper inspection, extending if necessary to the subcontractors. The government should forbid all night work for women and children as well as excessive overtime. For the District of Columbia a good factory law should be passed, and, as a powerful indirect aid to such laws, provision should be made to turn the inhabited alleys, the existence of which is a reproach to our Capital City, into minor streets, where the inhabitants can live under conditions favorable to health and morals.

American wageworkers work with their heads as well as their hands. Moreover, they take a keen pride in what they are doing, so that, independent of the reward, they wish to turn out a perfect job.

This is the great secret of our success in competition with the labor of foreign countries.

The most vital problem with which this country, and for that matter the whole civilized world, has to deal is the problem which has for one side the betterment of social conditions, moral and physical, in large cities and for another side the effort to deal with that tangle of farreaching questions which we group together when we speak of "labor." The chief factor in the success of each man—wageworker, farmer and capitalist alike—must ever be the sum total of his own individual qualities and abilities. Second only to this comes the power of acting in combination or association with others. Very great good has been and will be accomplished by associations or unions of wageworkers when managed with forethought and when they combine insistence upon their own rights with law-abiding respect for the rights of others. The display of these qualities in such bodies is a duty to the nation no less than to the associations themselves. Finally there must also in many cases be action by the government in order to safeguard the rights and interests of all. Under our Constitution there is much more scope for such action by the state and the municipality than by the nation. But on points such as those touched on above the national government can act.

When all is said and done, the rule of brotherhood remains as the indispensable pre-requisite in the kind of national life for which we strive.

Each man must work for himself, and unless he so works no outside help can avail him. But each man must remember also that he is indeed his brother's keeper, and that while no man who refuses to walk can be carried with advantage to himself or any one else, yet that each at times stumbles or halts, that each at times needs to have a helping hand outstretched to him. To be permanently effective aid must always take the form of helping a man to help himself, and we can all best help ourselves by joining together in the work that is of common interest to all.

TAKE ONLY THE BEST.

Three-fold Improvement in Immigration Laws Recommended.

Our present immigration laws are unsatisfactory. We need every honest and efficient immigrant fitted to become an American citizen, every immigrant who comes here to stay, who brings here a strong body, a stout heart, a good head and a resolute purpose to do his duty well in every way and to bring up his children as law-abiding and God-fearing members of the community. But there should be a comprehensive law enacted with the object of working a threefold improvement over our present system. First we should aim to exclude absolutely not only all persons who are known to be believers in anarchistic principles or members of anarchistic societies, but also all persons who are of a low moral tendency or of unsavory reputation. This means that we should require a more thorough system of inspection abroad and a more rigid system of examination at our immigration ports, the former being especially necessary.

The second object of a proper immigration law ought to be to secure by a careful and not merely perfunctory educational test some intelligent capacity to appreciate American institutions and act sanely as American citizens.

This would not keep out all anarchists, for many of them belong to the intelligent criminal class, but would do what is also in point—that is, tend to decrease the sum of ignorance so potent in producing the envy, suspicion, malignant passion and hatred of order out of which anarchistic sentiment inevitably springs. Finally all persons should be excluded who are below a certain standard of economic fitness to enter our industrial field as competitors with American labor. There should be proper proof of personal capacity to earn an American living and enough money to insure a decent start under American conditions. This would stop the influx of cheap labor and the resulting competition which gives rise to so much of bitterness in American industrial life, and it would dry up the springs of the pestilential social conditions in our great cities where anarchistic organizations have their greatest possibility of growth.

Both the educational and economic tests in a wise immigration law should be designed to protect and elevate the general body, politic and social. A very close supervision should be exercised over the steamship companies which mainly bring over the immigrants, and they should be held to a strict accountability for any infraction of the law.

RECIPROCITY.

This Is Favored, but Tariff Revision Is Not.

There is general acquiescence in our present tariff system as a national policy. The first requisite to our prosperity is the continuity and stability of this economic policy. Nothing could be more unwise than to disturb the business interests of the country by any general tariff change at this time. Doubt, apprehension, uncertainty, are exactly what we most wish to avoid in the interest of our commercial and material well being.

Our experience in the past has shown that sweeping revisions of the tariff are apt to produce conditions closely approaching panic in the business world.

Yet it is not only possible, but eminently desirable, to combine with the stability of our economic system a supplementary system of reciprocal benefit and obligation with other nations. Such reciprocity is an incident and result of the firm establishment and preservation of our present economic policy. It was specially provided for in the present tariff law.

Reciprocity must be treated as the handmaiden of protection.

Our first duty is to see that the protection granted by the tariff in every case where it is needed is maintained, and that reciprocity be sought for so far as it can safely be done without injury to our home industries. Just how far this is must be determined according to the individual case, remembering always that every application of our tariff policy to meet our shifting national needs must be conditioned upon the cardinal fact that the duties must never be reduced below the point that will cover the difference between the labor cost here and abroad. The well being of the wageworker is a prime consideration of our entire policy of economic legislation.

Subject to this proviso of the proper protection necessary to our industrial well being at home the principle of reciprocity must command our hearty support. The phenomenal growth of our export trade emphasizes the urgency of the need for wider markets and for a liberal policy in dealing with foreign nations. Whatever is merely petty and vexatious in the way of trade restrictions should be avoided. The customers to whom we dispose of our surplus products in the long run directly or indirectly purchase those surplus products by giving us something in return. Their ability to purchase our products should as far as possible be secured by so arranging our tariff as to enable us to take from them those products which we can use without harm to our own industries and labor or the use of which will be of marked benefit to us.

It is most important that we should maintain the high level of our present prosperity.

We have now reached the point in the development of our interests where we are not only able to supply our own markets, but to produce a constantly growing surplus for which we must find markets abroad. To secure these markets we can utilize existing duties in any case where they are no longer needed for the purpose of protection, or in any case where the article is not produced here and the duty is no longer necessary for revenue, as giving us something to offer in exchange for what we ask. The cordial relations with other nations which are so desirable will naturally be promoted by the course thus required by our own interests.

The natural line of development for a policy of reciprocity will be in connection with those of our productions which no longer require all of the support once needed to establish them upon a sound basis, and with those others where either because of natural or of economic causes we are beyond the reach of successful competition.

I ask the attention of the senate to the reciprocity treaties laid before it by my predecessor.

MERCHANT MARINE.

American Goods Should Be Carried in American-built Ships.

The condition of the American merchant marine is such as to call for immediate remedial action by the congress. It is discreditable to us as a nation that our merchant marine should be utterly insignificant in comparison with that of other nations which we overtop in other forms of business. We should not longer submit to conditions under which only a trifling portion of our great commerce is carried in our own ships. To remedy this state of things would not merely serve to build up our shipping interests, but it would also result in benefit to all who are interested in the permanent establishment of a wider market for American products and would provide an auxiliary force for the navy. Ships work for their own countries just as railroads work for their terminal points. Shipping lines, if established to the principal countries with which we have dealings, would be of political as well as commercial benefit.

From every standpoint it is unwise for the United States to continue to rely upon the ships of competing nations for the distribution of our goods. It should be made advantageous to carry American goods in American-built ships.

At present American shipping is under certain great disadvantages when put in competition with the shipping of foreign countries. Many of the fast foreign steamships, at a speed of fourteen knots or above, are subsidized, and all our ships, sailing vessels and steamers alike, cargo carriers of slow speed and mail carriers of high speed, have to meet the fact that the original cost of building American ships is greater than is the case abroad, that the wages paid American officers and seamen are very much higher than those paid the officers and seamen of foreign competing countries and that the standard of living on our ships is far superior to the standard of living on the ships of our commercial rivals.

Our government should take such action as will remedy these inequalities. The American merchant marine should be restored to the ocean.

FINANCIAL SAFEGUARDS.

These Should Be Thrown About the Present Laws.

The act of March 14, 1900, intended unequivocally to establish gold as the standard money and to maintain at a parity therewith all forms of money medium in use with us, has been shown to be timely and judicious. The price of our government bonds in the world's market when compared with the price of similar obligations issued by other nations is a flattering tribute to our public credit. This condition it is evidently desirable to maintain.

In many respects the national banking law furnishes sufficient liberty for the proper exercise of the banking function, but there seems to be need of better safeguards against the deranging influence of commercial crises and financial panics.

Moreover, the currency of the country should be made responsive to the demands of our domestic trade and commerce.

The collections from duties on imports and internal taxes continue to exceed the ordinary expenditures of the government, thanks mainly to the reduced army expenditures. The utmost care should be taken not to reduce the revenues so that there will be any possibility of a deficit, but after providing against any such contingency means should be adopted which will bring the revenues more nearly within the limit of our actual needs. In his report to the congress the secretary of the treasury considers all these questions at length, and I ask your attention to the report and recommendations.

I call special attention to the need of strict economy in expenditures. The fact that our national needs forbid us to be niggardly in providing whatever is actually necessary to our well being should make us doubly careful to husband our national resources as each of us husbands his private resources by scrupulous avoidance of anything like wasteful or reckless expenditure. Only by avoidance of spending money on what is needless or unjustifiable can we legitimately keep our income to the point required to meet our needs that are genuine.

INTERSTATE COMMERCE.

Some of the Provisions of the Present Law Should Be Changed.

In 1887 a measure was enacted for the regulation of interstate railways, commonly known as the interstate commerce act. The cardinal provisions of that act were that railway rates should be just and reasonable and that all shippers, localities and commodities should be accorded equal treatment. A commission was created and endowed with what were supposed to be the necessary powers to execute the provisions of this act.

That law was largely an experiment. Experience has shown the wisdom of its purposes, but has also shown possibly that some of its requirements are wrong, certainly that the means devised for the enforcement of its provisions are defective. Those who complain of the management of the railways allege that established rates are not maintained, that rebates and similar devices are habitually resorted to; that these preferences are usually in favor of the large shipper; that they drive out of business the smaller competitor; that while many rates are too low many others are excessive and that gross preferences are made affecting both localities and commodities. Upon the other hand, the railways assert that the law by its very terms tends to produce many of these illegal practices by depriving carriers of that right of concerted action which they claim is necessary to establish and maintain nondiscriminating rates.

The act should be amended. The railway is a public servant. Its rates should be just to and open to all shippers alike. The government should see to it that within its jurisdiction this is so and should provide a speedy, inexpensive and effective remedy to that end. At the same time it must not be forgotten that our railways are the arteries through which the commercial lifeblood of this nation flows. Nothing could be more foolish than the enactment of legislation which would unnecessarily interfere with the development and operation of these commercial agencies. The subject is one of great importance and calls for the earnest attention of the congress.

PROTECT THE FORESTS.

Establishment of a Bureau of Forestry Is Recommended.

The department of agriculture during the past fifteen years has steadily broadened its work on economic lines and has accomplished results of real value in upbuilding domestic and foreign trade. It has gone into new fields until it is now in touch with all sections of our country and with two of the island groups that have lately come under our jurisdiction, whose people must look to agriculture as a livelihood. It is searching the world for grains, grasses, fruits and vegetables specially fitted for introduction into localities in the several states and territories where they may add materially to our resources. By scientific attention to soil survey and possible new crops, to breeding of new varieties of plants, to experimental shipments, to animal industry and applied chemistry, very practical aid has been given our farming and stock-growing interests. The products of the farm have taken an unprecedented place in our export trade during the year that has just closed.

Public opinion throughout the United States has moved steadily toward a just appreciation of the value of forests, whether planted or of natural growth.

The great part played by them in the creation and maintenance of the national wealth is now more fully realized than ever before.

Wise forest protection does not mean the withdrawal of forest resources, whether of wood, water or grass, from contributing their full share to the welfare of the people, but, on the contrary, gives the assurance of larger and more certain supplies. The fundamental idea of forestry is the perpetuation of forests by use. Forest protection is not an end of itself; it is a means to increase and sustain the resources of our country and the industries which depend upon them. The preservation of our forests is an imperative business necessity. We have come to see clearly that whatever destroys the forest except to make way for agriculture threatens our well being.

The practical usefulness of the national forest reserves to the mining, grazing, irrigation and other interests of the regions in which the reserves lie has led to a widespread demand by the people of the West for their protection and extension. The forest reserves will inevitably be of still greater use in the future than in the past. Additions should be made to them whenever practicable, and their usefulness should be increased by a thoroughly businesslike management.

At present the protection of the forest reserves rests with the general land office, the mapping and description of their timber with the United States geological survey and the preparation of plans for their conservative use with the bureau of forestry, which is also charged with the general advancement of practical forestry in the United States.

These various functions should be united in the bureau of forestry, to which they properly belong.

The present diffusion of responsibility is bad from every standpoint. It prevents that effective co-operation between the government and the men who utilize the resources of the reserves without which the interests of both must suffer. The scientific bureaus generally should be put under the department of agriculture. The president should have by law the power of transferring lands for use as forest reserves to the department of agriculture. He already has such power in the case of lands needed by the departments of war and the navy.

RECLAIM ARID LANDS.

The President Recommends the Enactment of Irrigation Laws.

The wise administration of the forest reserves will be not less helpful to the interests which depend on water than to those which depend on wood and grass. The water supply itself depends upon the forest. In the arid region it is water, not land, which measures production. The western half of the United States would sustain a population greater than that of our whole country to-day if the waters that now run to waste were saved and used for irrigation. The forest and water problems are perhaps the most vital internal questions of the United States.

Certain of the forest reserves should also be made preserves for the wild forest creatures. All of the reserves should be better protected from fires. Many of them need special protection because of the great injury done by live stock, above all by sheep. The increase in deer, elk and other animals in the Yellowstone Park shows what may be expected when other mountain forests are properly protected by law and properly guarded. Some of these areas have been so denuded of surface vegetation by overgrazing that the ground breeding birds, including grouse and quail, and many mammals, including deer, have been exterminated or driven away. At the same time the water storing capacity of the surface has been decreased or destroyed, thus promoting floods in times of rain and diminishing the flow of streams between rains.

In cases where natural conditions have been restored for a few years vegetation has again carpeted the ground, birds and deer are coming back, and hundreds of persons, especially from the immediate neighborhood, come each summer to enjoy the privilege of camping. Some at least of the forest reserves should afford perpetual protection to the native fauna and flora, safe havens of refuge to our rapidly diminishing wild animals of the larger kinds and free camping grounds for the ever increasing numbers of men and women who have learned to find rest, health and recreation in the splendid forests and flower-clad meadows of our mountains.

The forest reserves should be set apart forever for the use and benefit of our people as a whole, and not sacrificed to the shortsighted greed of a few.

The forests are natural reservoirs. By restraining the streams in flood and replenishing them in drouth they make possible the use of waters otherwise wasted. They prevent the soil from washing and so protect the storage reservoirs from filling up with silt. Forest conservation is therefore an essential condition of water conservation.

The forests alone cannot, however, fully regulate and conserve the waters of the arid region. Great storage works are necessary to equalize the flow of streams and to save the flood waters. Their construction has been conclusively shown to be an undertaking too vast for private effort. Nor can it be best accomplished by the individual states acting alone. Far-reaching interstate problems are involved and the resources of single states would often be inadequate.

It is properly a national function, at least in some of its features. It is as right for the national government to make the streams and rivers of the arid region useful by engineering works for water storage as to make useful the rivers and harbors of the humid region by engineering works of another kind.

The storing of the floods in reservoirs at the head waters of our rivers is but an enlargement of our present policy of river control under which levees are built on the lower reaches of the same streams.

The government should construct and maintain these reservoirs as it does other public works. Where their purpose is to regulate the flow of the streams the water should be turned freely into the channels in the dry season to take the same course under the same laws as the natural flow.

The reclamation of the unsettled arid public lands presents a different problem. Here it is not enough to regulate the flow of streams. The object of the government is to dispose of the land to settlers who will build homes upon it. To accomplish this object water must be brought within their reach.

The pioneer settlers on the arid public domain chose their homes along streams from which they could themselves divert the water to reclaim their holdings. Such opportunities are practically gone. There remain, however, vast areas of public land which can be made available for homestead settlement, but only by reservoirs and main line canals impracticable for private enterprise.

These irrigation works should be built by the national government.

The lands reclaimed by them should be reserved by the government for actual settlers, and the cost of construction should so far as possible be repaid by the land reclaimed. The distribution of the water, the division of the streams among irrigators, should be left to the settlers themselves in conformity with state laws and without interference with those laws or with vested rights. The policy of the national government should be to aid irrigation in the several states and territories in such manner as will enable the people in the local communities to help themselves and as will stimulate needed reforms in the state laws and regulations governing irrigation.

The reclamation and settlement of the arid lands will enrich every portion of our country, just as the settlement of the Ohio and Mississippi valleys brought prosperity to the Atlantic states.

The increased demand for manufactured articles will stimulate industrial production, while wider home markets and the trade of Asia will consume the larger food supplies and effectually prevent Western competition with Eastern agriculture. Indeed the products of irrigation will be consumed chiefly in upbuilding local centers of mining and other industries which would otherwise not come into existence at all. Our people as a whole will profit, for successful homemaking is but another name for the upbuilding of the nation.

The necessary foundation has already been laid for the inauguration of the policy just described. It would be unwise to begin by doing too much, for a great deal will doubtless be learned, both as to what can and what cannot be safely attempted, by the early efforts, which must of necessity be partly experimental in character. At the very beginning the government should make clear, beyond shadow of doubt, its intention to pursue this policy on lines of the broadest public interest. No reservoir or canal should ever be built to satisfy selfish personal or local interests, but only in accordance with the advice of trained experts after long investigation has shown the locality where all the conditions combine to make the work most needed and fraught with the greatest usefulness to the community as a whole. There should be no extravagance, and the believers in the need of irrigation will most benefit their cause by seeing to it that it is free from the least taint of excessive or reckless expenditure of the public moneys.

Whatever the nation does for the extension of irrigation should harmonize with and tend to improve the condition of those now living on irrigated land.

We are not at the starting point of this development. Over two hundred millions of private capital has already been expended in the construction of irrigation works and many million acres of arid land reclaimed. A high degree of enterprise and ability has been shown in the work itself, but as much cannot be said in reference to the laws relating thereto. The security and value of the homes created depend largely on the stability of titles to water, but the majority of these rest on the uncertain foundation of court decisions rendered in ordinary suits at law. With a few creditable exceptions, the arid states have failed to provide for the certain and just division of streams in times of scarcity. Lax and uncertain laws have made it possible to establish rights to water in excess of actual uses or necessities, and many streams have already passed into private ownership or a control equivalent to ownership.

Whoever controls a stream practically controls the land it renders productive, and the doctrine of private ownership of water apart from land cannot prevail without causing enduring wrong. The recognition of such ownership, which has been permitted to grow up in the arid regions, should give way to a more enlightened and larger recognition of the rights of the public in the control and disposal of the public water supplies. Laws founded upon conditions obtaining in humid regions, where water is too abundant to justify hoarding it, have no proper application in a dry country.

In the arid states the only right to water which should be recognized is that of use. In irrigation this right should attach to the land reclaimed and be inseparable therefrom.

Granting perpetual water rights to others than users without compensation to the public is open to all the objections which apply to giving away perpetual franchises to the public utilities of cities.

A few of the Western states have already recognized this and have incorporated in their constitutions the doctrine of perpetual state ownership of water.

The benefits which have followed the unaided development of the past justify the nation's aid and co-operation in the more difficult and important work yet to be accomplished. Laws so vitally affecting homes as those which control the water supply will only be effective when they have the sanction of the irrigators; reforms can only be final and satisfactory when they come through the enlightenment of the people most concerned. The larger development which national aid insures should, however, awaken in every arid state the determination to make its irrigation system equal in justice and effectiveness that of any country in the civilized world. Nothing could be more unwise than for isolated communities to continue to learn everything experimentally instead of profiting by what is already known elsewhere. We are dealing with a new and momentous question in the pregnant years while institutions are forming, and what we do will affect not only the present but future generations.

Our aim should be not simply to reclaim the largest area of land and provide homes for the largest number of people, but to create for this new industry the best possible social and industrial conditions, and this requires that we not only understand the existing situation, but avail ourselves of the best experience of the time in the solution of its problems. A careful study should be made both by the nation and the states of the irrigation laws and conditions here and abroad. Ultimately it will probably be necessary for the nation to co-operate with the several arid states in proportion as these states by their legislation and administration show themselves fit to receive it.

AS TO THE ISLANDS.

Legislation Is Urgently Recommended—Freedom for Cuba.

In Hawaii our aim must be to develop the territory on the traditional American lines. We do not wish a region of large estates tilled by cheap labor. We wish a healthy American community of men who themselves till the farms they own. All our legislation for the islands should be shaped with this end in view. The well being of the average homemaker must afford the true test of the healthy development of the islands. The land policy should as nearly as possible be modeled on our homestead system.

It is a pleasure to say that it is hardly more necessary to report as to Porto Rico than as to any state or territory within our continental limits. The island is thriving as never before, and it is being administered efficiently and honestly. Its people are now enjoying liberty and order under the protection of the United States, and upon this fact we congratulate them and ourselves. Their material welfare must be as carefully and jealously considered as the welfare of any other portion of our country. We have given them the great gift of free access for their products to the markets of the United States. I ask the attention of the congress to the need of legislation concerning the public lands of Porto Rico.

In Cuba such progress has been made toward putting the independent government of the island upon a firm footing that before the present session of the congress closes this will be an accomplished fact.

Cuba will then start as her own mistress, and to the beautiful Queen of the Antilles as she unfolds this new page of her destiny we extend our heartiest greetings and good wishes. Elsewhere I have discussed the question of reciprocity. In the case of Cuba, however, there are weighty reasons of morality and of national interest why the policy should be held to have a peculiar application, and I most earnestly ask your attention to the wisdom, indeed to the vital need, of providing for a substantial reduction in the tariff duties on Cuban imports into the United States. Cuba has in her constitution affirmed what we desired, that she should stand in international matters in closer and more friendly relations with us than with any other power, and we are bound in every consideration of honor and expediency to pass commercial measures in the interest of her material well being.

In the Philippines our problem is larger. They are very rich tropical islands, inhabited by many varying tribes, representing widely different stages of progress toward civilization. Our earnest effort is to help these people upward along the stony and difficult path toward self-government.

We hope to make our administration of the islands honorable to our nation by making it of the highest benefit to the Filipinos themselves, and as an earnest of what we intend to do we point to what we have done. Already a greater measure of material prosperity and of governmental honesty and efficiency has been attained in the Philippines than ever before in their history.

It is no light task for a nation to achieve the temperamental qualities without which the institutions of free government are but empty mockery. Our people are now successfully governing themselves because for more than a thousand years they have been slowly fitting themselves, sometimes consciously, sometimes unconsciously, toward this end. What has taken up thirty generations to achieve we cannot expect to see another race accomplish out of hand, especially when large portions of that race start very far behind the point which our ancestors had reached even thirty generations ago. In dealing with the Philippine people we must show both patience and strength, forbearance and steadfast resolution. Our aim is high. We do not desire to do for the islanders merely what has elsewhere been done for tropic peoples by even the best foreign governments.

We hope to do for them what has never before been done for any people of the tropics—to make them fit for self-government after the fashion of the really free nations.

History may safely be challenged to show a single instance in which a masterful race such as ours, having been forced by the exigencies of war to take possession of an alien land, has behaved to its inhabitants with the disinterested zeal for their progress that our people have shown in the Philippines. To leave the islands at this time would mean that they would fall into a welter of murderous anarchy. Such a desertion of duty on our part would be a crime against humanity. The character of Gov. Taft and of his associates and subordinates is proof, if such be needed, of the sincerity of our effort to give the islanders a constantly increasing measure of self-government exactly as fast as they show themselves fit to exercise it. Since the civil government was established not an appointment has been made in the islands with any reference to considerations of political influence or to aught else save the fitness of the man and the needs of the service.

In our anxiety for the welfare and progress of the Philippines it may be that here and there we have gone too rapidly in giving them local self-government. It is on this side that our error, if any, has been committed.

No competent observer sincerely desirous of finding out the facts and influenced only by a desire for the welfare of the natives can assert that we have not gone far enough. We have gone to the very verge of safety in hastening the process. To have taken a single step farther or faster in advance would have been folly and weakness and might well have been crime. We are extremely anxious that the natives shall show the power of governing themselves. We are anxious first for their sakes and next because it relieves us of a great burden. There need not be the slightest fear of our not continuing to give them all the liberty for which they are fit.

The only fear is lest in our over anxiety we give them a degree of independence for which they are unfit, thereby inviting reaction and disaster. As fast as there is any reasonable hope that in a given district the people can govern themselves self-government has been given in that district. There is not a locality fitted for self-government which has not received it. But it may well be that in certain cases it will have to be withdrawn because the inhabitants show themselves unfit to exercise it. Such instances have already occurred. In other words, there is not the slightest chance of our failing to show a sufficiently humanitarian spirit. The danger comes in the opposite direction.

There are still troubles ahead in the islands. The insurrection has become an affair of local banditti and marauders who deserve no higher regard than the brigands of portions of the old world.

Encouragement, direct or indirect, to these insurrectos stands on the same footing as encouragement to hostile Indians in the days when we still had Indian wars. Exactly as our aim is to give to the Indian who remains peaceful the fullest and amplest consideration, but to have it understood that we will show no weakness if he goes on the warpath, so we must make it evident, unless we are false to our own traditions and to the demands of civilization and humanity, that while we will do everything in our power for the Filipino who is peaceful, we will take the sternest measures with the Filipino who follows the path of the insurrecto and the ladrone.

The heartiest praise is due to large numbers of the natives of the islands for their steadfast loyalty. The Macabebes have been conspicuous for their courage and devotion to the flag. I recommend that the secretary of war be empowered to take some systematic action in the way of aiding those of these men who are crippled in the service and the families of those that are killed.

The time has come when there should be additional legislation for the Philippines. Nothing better can be done for the islands than to introduce industrial enterprises. Nothing would benefit them so much as throwing them open to industrial development.

The connection between idleness and mischief is proverbial, and the opportunity to do remunerative work is one of the surest preventives of war. Of course no business man will go into the Philippines unless it is to his interest to do so, and it is immensely to the interest of the islands that he should go in. It is therefore necessary that the congress should pass laws by which the resources of the islands can be developed, so that franchises (for limited terms of years) can be granted to companies doing business in them and every encouragement be given to the incoming business men of every kind.

Not to permit this is to do a wrong to the Philippines. The franchises must be granted and the business permitted only under regulations which will guarantee the islands against any kind of improper exploitation. But the vast natural wealth of the islands must be developed and the capital willing to develop it must be given the opportunity. The field must be thrown open to individual enterprise, which has been the real factor in the development of every region over which our flag has flown. It is urgently necessary to enact suitable laws dealing with general transportation, mining, banking, currency, homesteads and the use and ownership of the lands and timber. These laws will give free play to industrial enterprise, and the commercial development which will surely follow will afford to the people of the islands the best proofs of the sincerity of our desire to aid them.

I call your attention most earnestly to the crying need of a cable to Hawaii and the Philippines, to be continued from the Philippines to points in Asia.

We should not defer a day longer than necessary the construction of such a cable. It is demanded not merely for commercial, but for political and military considerations.

Either the congress should immediately provide for the construction of a government cable or else an arrangement should be made by which like advantages to those accruing from a government cable may be secured to the government by contract with a private cable company.

ACROSS THE ISTHMUS.

Construction of the Canal Is Urgently Recommended.

No single great material work which remains to be undertaken on this continent is of such consequence to the American people as the building of a canal across the isthmus connecting North and South America. Its importance to the nation is by no means limited merely to its material effects upon our business prosperity, and yet with a view to these effects alone it would be to the last degree important for us immediately to begin it. While its beneficial effects would perhaps be most marked upon the Pacific coast and the gulf and South Atlantic states, it would also greatly benefit other sections. It is emphatically a work which it is for the interest of the entire country to begin and complete as soon as possible; it is one of those great works which only a great nation can undertake with prospects of success, and which when done are not only permanent assets in the nation's material interests, but standing monuments to its constructive ability.

I am glad to be able to announce to you that our negotiations on this subject with Great Britain, conducted on both sides in a spirit of friendliness and mutual good will and respect, have resulted in my being able to lay before the senate a treaty which, if ratified, will enable us to begin preparations for an isthmian canal at any time, and which guarantees to this nation every right that it has ever asked in connection with the canal.

In this treaty the old Clayton-Bulwer treaty, so long recognized as inadequate to supply the base for the construction and maintenance of a necessarily American ship canal, is abrogated. It specifically provides that the United States alone shall do the work of building and assume the responsibility of safeguarding the canal and shall regulate its neutral use by all nations on terms of equality without the guarantee or interference of any outside nation from any quarter. The signed treaty will at once be laid before the senate, and if approved the congress can then proceed to give effect to the advantages it secures us by providing for the building of the canal.

The true end of every great and free people should be self-respecting peace, and this nation most earnestly desires sincere and cordial friendship with all others.

Over the entire world of recent years wars between the great civilized powers have become less and less frequent. Wars with barbarous or semi-barbarous peoples come in an entirely different category, being merely a most regrettable but necessary international police duty which must be performed for the sake of the welfare of mankind. Peace can only be kept with certainty where both sides wish to keep it, but more and more the civilized peoples are realizing the wicked folly of war and are attaining that condition of just and intelligent regard for the rights of others which will in the end, as we hope and believe, make worldwide peace possible. The Hague gave definite expression to this hope and belief and marked a stride toward their attainment.

MONROE DOCTRINE.

It Is Not Intended as Hostile to European Nations.

"The Monroe doctrine," says the president, "should be the cardinal feature of the foreign policy of all the nations of the two Americas as it is of the United States. . . . The Monroe doctrine is a declaration that there must be no territorial aggrandizement by any non-American power at the expense of any American power on American soil. It is in nowise intended as hostile to any nation in the Old World. Still less is it intended to give cover to any aggression by one New World power at the expense of any other."

"The work of upbuilding the navy," says the president, "must be steadily continued. No one point of our policy, foreign or domestic, is more important than this to the honor and material welfare and, above all, to the peace of our nation in the future. Whether we desire it or not we must henceforth recognize that we have international duties no less than international rights. There should be no cessation in the work of completing the navy."

The president concludes this portion of his message by pointing out the requirements of the service and urging upon congress to give the matter early consideration.

President Roosevelt also gives the other branch of the service considerable attention. No increase in the army beyond its present size is needed at this time. Various matters of importance to the army are considered at length and congress is invited to give its attention to recommendations for improvements in the service.

CIVIL SERVICE.

President Roosevelt a Firm Believer in the Merit System.

The merit system of making appointments is in its essence as democratic and American as the common school system itself. It simply means that in clerical and other positions where the duties are entirely nonpolitical all applicants should have a fair field and no favor, each standing on his merits as he is able to show them by practical test. Written competitive examinations offer the only available means in many cases for applying this system. In other cases, as where laborers are employed, a system of registration undoubtedly can be widely extended. There are, of course, places where the written competitive examination cannot be applied and others where it offers by no means an ideal solution, but where under existing political conditions it is, though an imperfect means, yet the best present means of getting satisfactory results.

Wherever the conditions have permitted the application of the merit system in its fullest and widest sense the gain to the government has been immense. The navy yards and postal service illustrate probably better than any other branches of the government the great gain in economy, efficiency and honesty due to the enforcement of this principle.

I recommend the passage of a law which will extend the classified service to the District of Columbia, or will at least enable the president thus to extend it. In my judgment all laws providing for the temporary employment of clerks should hereafter contain a provision that they be selected under the civil service law.

It is important to have this system obtain at home, but it is even more important to have it applied rigidly in our insular possessions. Not an office should be filled in the Philippines or Porto Rico with any regard to the man's partisan affiliations or services, with any regard to the political, social or personal influence which he may have at his command. In short, heed should be paid to absolutely nothing save the man's own character and capacity and the needs of the service.

The administration of these islands should be as wholly free from the suspicion of partisan politics as the administration of the army and navy. All that we ask from the public servant in the Philippines or Porto Rico is that he reflect honor on his country by the way in which he makes that country's rule a benefit to the peoples who have come under it. This is all we should ask, and we cannot afford to be content with less.

The merit system is simply one method of securing honest and efficient administration of the government, and in the long run the sole justification of any type of government lies in its proving itself both honest and efficient.

The consular service is now organized under the provisions of a law passed in 1856, which is entirely inadequate to existing conditions.

The interest shown by so many commercial bodies throughout the country in the reorganization of the service is heartily commended to your attention. Several bills providing for a new consular service have in recent years been submitted to the congress. They are based upon the just principle that appointments to the service should be made only after a practical test of the applicant's fitness; that promotions should be governed by trustworthiness, adaptability and zeal in the performance of duty, and that the tenure of office should be unaffected by partisan considerations.

The guardianship and fostering of our rapidly expanding foreign commerce, the protection of American citizens resorting to foreign countries in lawful pursuit of their affairs and the maintenance of the dignity of the nation abroad combine to make it essential that our consuls should be men of character, knowledge and enterprise. It is true that the service is now in the main efficient, but a standard of excellence cannot be permanently maintained until the principles set forth in the bills heretofore submitted to the congress on this subject are enacted into law.

OUR RED WARDS.

Indians Should Now Be Treated as Individuals.

In my judgment the time has arrived when we should definitely make up our minds to recognize the Indian as an individual and not as a member of a tribe. The general allotment act is a mighty pulverizing engine to break up the tribal mass. It acts directly upon the family and the individual. Under its provisions some 60,000 Indians have already become citizens of the United States.

We should now break up the tribal funds, doing for them what allotment does for the tribal lands—that is, they should be divided into individual holdings.

There will be a transition period during which the funds will in many cases have to be held in trust. This is the case also with the lands. A stop should be put upon the indiscriminate permission to Indians to lease their allotments. The effort should be steadily to make the Indian work like any other man on his own ground. The marriage laws of the Indians should be made the same as those of the whites.

In the schools the education should be elementary and largely industrial. The need of higher education among the Indians is very, very limited. On the reservations care should be taken to try to suit the teaching to the needs of the particular Indian. There is no use in attempting to induce agriculture in a country suited only for cattle raising, where the Indian should be made a stock grower.

The ration system, which is merely the corral and the reservation system, is highly detrimental to the Indians. It promotes beggary, perpetuates pauperism and stifles industry. It is an effectual barrier to progress.

It must continue to a greater or less degree as long as tribes are herded on reservations and have everything in common. The Indian should be treated as an individual, like the white man. During the change of treatment inevitable hardships will occur. Every effort should be made to minimize these hardships, but we should not because of them hesitate to make the change. There should be a continuous reduction in the number of agencies.

In dealing with the aboriginal races few things are more important than to preserve them from the terrible physical and moral degradation resulting from the liquor traffic. We are doing all we can to save our own Indian tribes from this evil. Wherever by international agreement this same end can be attained as regards races where we do not possess exclusive control every effort should be made to bring it about.

The president recommends that the census office be made a permanent government bureau.

The remarkable growth of the postal service is pointed out, and attention is called to the benefits derived from the rural free delivery.

TRADE WITH CHINA.

"Open Door" Idea Is Considered an Admirable One.

Owing to the rapid growth of our power and our interests on the Pacific, whatever happens in China must be of the keenest national concern to us.

The general terms of the settlement of the questions growing out of the anti-foreign uprisings in China of 1900, having been formulated in a joint note addressed to China by the representatives of the injured powers in December last, were promptly accepted by the Chinese government. After protracted conferences the plenipotentiaries of the several powers were able to sign a final protocol with the Chinese plenipotentiaries on the 7th of last September, setting forth the measures taken by China in compliance with the demands of the joint note and expressing their satisfaction therewith. It will be laid before the congress, with a report of the plenipotentiary on behalf of the United States, Mr. William Woodville Rockhill, to whom high praise is due for the tact, good judgment and energy he has displayed in performing an exceptionally difficult and delicate task.

The agreement reached disposes in a manner satisfactory to the powers of the various grounds of complaint and will contribute materially to better future relations between China and the powers.

Reparation has been made by China for the murder of foreigners during the uprising, and punishment has been inflicted on the officials, however high in rank, recognized as responsible for or having participated in the outbreak. Official examinations have been forbidden for a period of five years in all cities in which foreigners have been murdered or cruelly treated, and edicts have been issued making all officials directly responsible for the future safety of foreigners and for the suppression of violence against them.

We advocate the "open door" with all that it implies; not merely the procurement of enlarged commercial opportunities on the coasts, but access to the interior by the waterways with which China has been so extraordinarily favored.

Only by bringing the people of China into peaceful and friendly community of trade with all the peoples of the earth can the work now auspiciously begun be carried to fruition. In the attainment of this purpose we necessarily claim parity of treatment under the conventions throughout the empire for our trade and our citizens with those of all other powers.

"ALL THE WORLD AKIN."

Expressions of Sorrow Over the Deaths of Great and Good.

The death of Queen Victoria caused the people of the United States deep and heartfelt sorrow, to which the government gave full expression. When President McKinley died, our nation in turn received from every quarter of the British empire expressions of grief and sympathy no less sincere. The death of the Empress Dowager Frederick of Germany also aroused the genuine sympathy of the American people, and this sympathy was cordially reciprocated by Germany when the president was assassinated. Indeed from every quarter of the civilized world we received, at the time of the president's death, assurances of such grief and regard as to touch the hearts of our people. In the midst of our affliction we reverently thank the Almighty that we are at peace with the nations of mankind, and we firmly intend that our policy shall be such as to continue unbroken these international relations of mutual respect and good will. —Theodore Roosevelt.

White House, Dec. 3, 1901.

Rickerby's Folly

By TOM GALLON

CHAPTER III. (Continued.)

His meditations were interrupted by a voice close beside him; turning, somewhat abruptly—for it was disconcerting to discover anyone in that quiet spot and so unexpectedly near to him—he saw a tall, lanky youth, with a curious, self-satisfied smile upon his face, and with his hands thrust under the skirts of a very long and very dingy Newmarket coat. A hat, of a sporting shape, was stuck on the back of his small, round head, and there dropped from one corner of his mouth a cigarette, from which a little spiral of smoke went up into one eye, causing him to wink without meaning it. He might have been, from his appearance, anywhere from seventeen to twenty, and was evidently one of those persons—the direct product of a democratic age—who would have accosted a prince of the blood royal as readily as a gutter urchin. He shuffled a little nearer to Gilbert Rickerby, and turned the eye into which the smoke was drifting towards the house on the opposite side of the road.

"There's things a-goin' on over there, I give you my word," he muttered, hoarsely. "Are you on the same lay as me?"

Gilbert drew back from him, frowning a little.

"What do you mean?" he asked.

"Oh, don't be uppish. I've seen you standin' about 'ere this hour or more, a-watchin' that crib. P'raps you're lookin' for the ghost?"

"Ghost! What ghost?" asked Gilbert, interested, in spite of himself. "I know nothing about the house; I've only heard about the man who belonged there, and who is dead. Has he left his ghost behind?" He asked the question somewhat bitterly, thinking of his own unhappy fate.

"Give it up. They've talked about it for years, I understand—about the ghost that's in the side of the house they don't use. None of the servants will go near that side, for fear of it. They say the old bloke's wife died there, and 'as been 'aunting it ever since. P'raps the dead chap'll join 'er now."

"Well—and what have you to do with it?" asked Gilbert Rickerby, somewhat resentfully. "I suppose they can look after their own ghost, can't they?"

"P'r'aps they can—and p'r'aps they can't," responded the youth. "That's where my business comes in. Let me ask you this 'ere: "W'y 'ave they been talkin' so bold about the ghost, this last day or two—w'y 'ave they been tellin' everybody about 'ow it walks at night—an' what it does—eh? I tell you there's summink be'ind it—or my name ain't 'Ubbard!"

"Is that your name?" asked Gilbert.

"One of 'em," replied the other. "An' I'm going to keep my eye on that 'ouse—ghosts or no ghosts. I know a bit—I do; an' I'll know a bit more, before I've done."

Before Gilbert Rickerby could reply, the youth in the Newmarket coat swung on his heel and went off, whistling. Gilbert looked after him, with certain new thoughts beginning to take shape in his mind.

"'Perhaps the dead chap will join her!' Why not? Heaven knows, if the ghost of my poor, unhappy mother haunts the place where she wept her unhappy life away, there should be nothing to fear from her. Why, in a sense, I am a ghost myself; so far as the world knows, the body of me lies under the turf; Gilbert Rickerby is a name, to be soon forgotten. Yet, before he is quite forgotten, there is a thing he must do. 'Perhaps the dead chap will join her!' Yes—the dead chap shall! That side of the house is deserted—and I know a way into it—a way I have not used for years. Gilbert Rickerby is dead; but the ghost of him goes back to his father's house to-night!"

Four years before, when he had been turned out of the place, for the last time, by his father, he had carried away with him, quite unconsciously, a very practical memento of his meetings with his girlish sweetheart. The memento was no other than the key of a little gate, long disused, which opened into a small alley at the back of the house. The girl had given it to him in order that he might creep in at night, to whisper his vows to her, without the chance of discovery; and he had been surprised at finding it in his pocket, months afterwards, when he was miles away from London. But, remembering the service it had rendered him, he kept it, merely for sentimental reasons, and to remind him—if any reminder were necessary—of those happy, stolen meetings. It was in his waistcoat pocket now: he took it out and looked at it with a smile.

"As a ghost, Gilbert Rickerby, you are a fraud," he said. "All the decent ghosts of which I have ever read found it quite easy to slip through cracks or key-holes, or slide down chimney-pots; you must needs go in like a thing of flesh and blood. Well, never mind; you shall make up for it afterwards. Now, to begin—it's well you have strong nerves, Gilbert Rickerby, for I suspect you'll want them."

He waited until he was certain that no one was in sight, and then slipped round to that narrow, little alley he remembered so well. The bolt of the lock had not been shot since the time—four years ago—when he crept in to see his sweetheart; it moved uneasily and complainingly. But still it moved; and in a moment he had glided through and had closed and locked the door behind him, and stood in the darkness of the garden, looking up at the grim old place that had been his mother's prison.

About his feet clung the dank and rotten leaves and weeds that had been allowed to accumulate there for years; the wind blew about him drearily, like the sighs and whisperings of ghostly things. Shuddering a little and treading cautiously, he made his way—still keeping in the shadow of that deserted side of the double house—towards a door at the back. The memory of old, boyish days was strong upon him, and he had no difficulty in finding his way about in the darkness. To his surprise, the door was merely latched; it became evident, in a moment, that the place had been so long uninhabited and left to ruin and decay, that fastenings were not thought of. Gaining confidence, he slowly pushed open the door, and found himself in deeper darkness than before and in a stone-flagged passage.

Here he was on certain ground—knew every inch of it. Cautiously feeling his way along the wall, he came, at the end of the passage, to a door.

"I ought to know this room," he thought. "I've crept down here many and many a time to get on the soft side of old Jemima for goodies. What's become of Jemima, I wonder? Dead long ago, I expect. However, there's a staircase in here leading to the upper rooms."

He turned the handle and stepped into the room, and stepped, in a moment, into a blaze of light. There was no time to retract; in fact, he was too much amazed to know what to do. For there, facing him, and standing, looking steadily at him, was a figure that might have sprung straight out of the buried past.

It was an old woman—one of those old women who seem never, by any possibility, to have been young; who walk with bent shoulders and feeble steps through one's childhood, and seem not a day older when one's hair is gray. This old woman had a lined old face, with a yellowish tinge in it, and wisps of her gray hair had strayed out of place and were tumbling into her eyes. Dull eyes they were, as though they had looked on the world for a long time and had found nothing particularly interesting. She turned, without the least haste or trepidation, and picked up a lighted candle from the table, brought it quite steadily close to the face of the man; turned, and set it down again.

"Master Gilbert," she said, entirely without emotion, "you've come 'ome."

Now, if the old woman, on seeing him, had screamed or fainted, or done any other of the things we are generally led to suppose a woman does under the influence of fright or surprise, Gilbert Rickerby would probably have known what to do. But to be greeted in this callous fashion, as though he had merely returned to the house after a casual evening stroll, when, as a matter of fact, he had not seen the old creature, for years, was more than startling; it was terrifying.

"But you—you didn't expect to see me?" he began, feebly.

"I don't never expect to see anybody," she muttered, with a short laugh—"but they comes, all the same. I only believes what I sees—and not much of that. And—oh, dear me!—the lies people do tell!" She said it all in the same monotonous tone, and quite without resentment, almost as though it were a thing to be expected and made the best of.

"What lies?" he asked.

"W'y—they said you was dead; they 'av bin a-layin' theirselves out on mournin' for you. Come 'ome, that there Leathwood did, with a pack o' lies about buryin' you. Shouldn't wonder if they don't clay a tombstone on you, with a burn an' a trowel."

"But, look here, Jemima—I am dead," said Gilbert, earnestly. "There must be no mistake about that; I am as dead as the deadest door nail."

"Oh—I don't mind," she replied, with a shrug; "ave it yer own way—please yerself an' you'll please me. It seems to me, in this world, it don't matter much whether a person's dead or alive; they're pretty much of a muchness. Please yerself."

"But I want you, Jemima, to say it in the old, childish way, I'm going to play dead. I'm going—"

"Play away," she broke in. "You was always a queer boy—and God knows you 'ad enough to make you queer. If it pleases you to come back 'ere and say you're dead—then dead it is. I never was one to spoil sport."

"But I want you, Jeminma, to say nothing about me, to let them believe that I am dead; no matter what you're asked, you know nothing about me."

"I shan't say anything," she replied. "I ain't worth mentioning."

He knew from old experience that he could trust her; knew that whatever duties she had to perform in that inhabited part of Rickerby's Folly, she would say nothing about the strange tenant of the part which had been given over to decay. So far as she was concerned, he might wander about the old house as much as he liked, and she would take his presence there quite as a matter of course.

She went away presently; he heard her shuffling along among the dead leaves towards the other house. He was alone in the place in which he had been born, and not twenty yards away, the man who had falsely buried another in his stead, wore black clothing in pretended sorrow for him. It was a grim thought, and made him shiver a little.

He took the candle and went up stairs. The rooms were damp and mouldy-smelling, from having long been shut up; dust was thick everywhere. He opened the door of one room—which had been his when a boy, and set down the candle on the dressing table.

"A queer home-coming," he muttered. "I suppose I can shake the dust off the bed a bit, and sleep in my clothes on top of it. Well, I've slept in worse places before now."

There was a cupboard beside the bed—a tall, gaunt old cupboard, fitted into a recess into the wall. He remembered how it used to be a place of dread to him in his childhood; the fastening of it had been too high for his hands to reach then, and it had always seemed as though something uncanny must be hidden behind its door. With a remembrance of his old fears, and a little contempt in his mind for that trembling boy of long ago, he picked up the candle and went to the cupboard and laid his hand upon the latch. The door yielded at once and flew open.

Even as it flew open, something big and heavy lurched forward out of it and fell upon him and upon the candle, knocking out the light and almost throwing him to the floor. He heard a thud as the something, whatever it fell at his feet.

He was in total darkness, and, for some strange reason, was trembling violently. For, curiously enough, as that which fell out of the cupboard fell against him, in the moment before the light was extinguished, he thought he had a glimpse of a face—only a glimpse of less than the fraction of a second. Trembling still, but deriding his fears, he took out a match-box and, with shaking hands, essayed to get a light.

The first match flared and spluttered—threw a little bluish haze round—and went out; but it had been enough to let him see that something long and dark, like a body, was at his feet. He struck another match; and this time it flared up brightly; he lowered it, and himself, too, towards what lay at his feet.

Good heavens—it was a body! He took the light slowly along the length of it until he came to the face, bent nearer to it, and then cried out wildly, and dropped the match.

The face was that of a dead man, horribly distorted; and it was the face of the messenger he had sent into Rickerby's Folly—James Holden!

CHAPTER IV.

Little Miss Innocent.

Nugent Leathwood was haunted in a double sense. For the moment he knew that he was safe; he had publicly claimed a man as Gilbert Rickerby, and had buried him under that name; beyond that, the real Gilbert Rickerby was hidden away in a cupboard, in that ghostly house into which no one ever went. So far, so good; but then the haunting began.

In the first place, it was absolutely impossible for him to know what ravings the man Probyn, who had died in the hospital, had been guilty of before his death; what words he might have let slip which would give the whole clue to the murder. If only he could know what had been said—who had been with the man when he died—what they had found upon him. With the cowardice of the man whose hands are bloodstained he felt that even these surgeons and nurses were capable of lying to him, to entrap him, if possible. Again, at any time, some man might spring upon him from nowhere, to demand what had become of Miles Probyn. Oh, it had been a great and splendid scheme, to seize upon that one frail chance of a delirious man dying with that name upon his lips—to declare that that man was the one he had murdered! That was a stroke of genius; the world was at liberty to look upon the tombstone of Gilbert Rickerby, without knowing what ghastly fraud lay beneath it. If only Miles Probyn was of little enough importance not to be sought after, Nugent Leathwood was safe.

But, on the other hand, that horrible thing shut up in the cupboard of the empty house haunted him. At night, when he went out into the old garden and glanced up at the dark windows, he could have sworn he saw a horrible, distorted face passing to and fro behind the glass; over and over again at night he woke up, with a cry on his lips, from a dream he had had of struggling over the floor with someone and choking the life out of him. A dozen times he made up his mind to flee the place and have done with it; as many times he knew that he dared not, because of the thing that was hidden there.

Moreover, there was another reason why he should remain at Rickerby's Folly; and the reason was, perhaps, pretty well explained in a conversation he had with old Cornelius, on the afternoon of the day on which Gilbert Rickerby so mysteriously took up his residence in the deserted house. Nugent sat alone in a room adjoining that in which he had been on that first night when the messenger came to him; he sat alone before the fire, staring moodily into it and chewing the stump of a burnt-out cigar. At the very moment when he was least prepared for any interruption old Cornelius stood beside him and laid a hand upon his shoulder. Nugent sprang to his feet and struck at him blindly, overturning the chair on which he had been sitting; saw who it was, and tried to laugh.

"You doddering idiot! Why do you creep about like a ghost in that fashion, scaring people out of their wits? Shout, or dance, or sing, when you enter a room; the place is quite enough like a vault without any of your graveyard antics. What do you want?"

Cornelius—not in the least disturbed by the other's onslaught—smiled grimly, and jerked his head in the direction of the second house. "You 'aven't got no fear it'll walk, 'ave you?" he asked.

"Hush!" cried the other, glancing over his shoulder. "Haven't I told you I'll have no more said about it? Isn't it enough that the thing should be with me, night and day, without your dragging it out? Now, come, Cornelius, we have got to face this thing—to fight it out as best we can. The man is dead—doubly dead. That idiot, Probyn, stuck himself in the way and got what he deserved; he's buried, under a more respectable name than he ever bore in his life. The real man we've got to dispose of."

"Yes, that's the next thing to be done," said Cornelius, scratching his chin and glancing out of one eye at his master. "You see, you can't go a-leavin' dead folk stuck about the 'ouse; you never know what may 'appen. Then, there's the gel."

"Yes," replied Nugent, slowly, "I'm thinking of the girl. The girl is everything—the reason for this man's death—the reason for whatever danger there may be in it for us. Now, let us look at the thing fairly and calmly. In the first place, who is to suspect us?"

"That's the second time," said Cornelius, with much gravity, "that you've spoke of 'us.' I don't like it. Try a change."

Nugent Leathwood twisted round in his chair and looked at the old man strangely.

"Well, what's the game now, Cornelius?" he asked. "Do you back down on me? Come—out with it; I'm not the man to stand any shuffling."

"Now you're a-losin' your temper," retorted Cornelius, nodding his head slowly and pointing at him. "Don't do it; it ain't wise. What I says I mean; I ain't goin' to take nothin' on my shoulders as don't belong to me. So, drop that little word 'us.' It ain't appropriate. More than that"—he spoke with sudden fierceness—"say it again, an' I've done with yer!"

"Come, Cornelius, you don't mean that, I'm sure," said the other, in a changed voice. "You wouldn't go back on one who is prepared to do as much for you as I am—would you? Come, you shall be rich—as rich as I am; you shall never want for anything. Don't be a fool, Cornelius; you and I have too much at stake to quarrel. Now let us—I beg your pardon, I'm sure—let me discuss the matter clearly."

Cornelius, somewhat mollified, sat down and prepared to listen; Leathwood, with an evil glance at him, proceeded to state what he wanted and what he intended.

"In the first place, Cornelius, you know that this girl comes here to-night; in order to allay any possible suspicion she may have, you will meet her at the station—an old family servant, and all that kind of thing. I have managed the matter very carefully; I have told her in writing, that she is to meet Gilbert Rickerby at this house to-night; that I have arranged that they shall both be here at the same time. Well, they will both be here at the same time"—he laughed and glanced at his companion—"but I'm afraid they won't meet—eh?"

"I don't think they will," replied Cornelius, with a chuckle.

"After that, when the girl arrives, I shall, of course, explain the death of her lover; his burial; can show her his grave, if she likes. Remember, Cornelius, she hasn't a friend in the world except myself; bear that well in mind. She comes here alone; being of age, she can do as she likes. Do you follow me, Cornelius?"—he sprang up from his chair and brought his hand down heavily on the old man's shoulder—"the thing is done! Gilbert Rickerby is gone; everything that should have been his—everything he was coming home to claim—is mine; fortune—girl—everything!"

"The gel—as a gel—don't appeal to me," said Cornelius, somewhat scornfully. "I've always found as 'ow gels is apt to get in the way. I on'y made one mistake in that way myself—and it's lasted me a lifetime."

Nugent Lethwood turned upon him quickly. "By the way—that reminds me," he said. "That wife of yours—Jemima—what about her?"

"Well—what about 'er?" demanded Cornelius, resentfully. "Ain't it enough for a man to 'ave the thoughts of such a wife, without bein' reminded of it? What about 'er?"

"I mean—is she safe? Remember, we can take no risks; that old woman is about the house all day long—all night long, for all that I know. What if she should—"

Cornelius waved his hand impatiently. "There ain't no fear," he said. "That there woman is of such a stony nature that it's my belief that, if she saw you a-cuttin' up a person into inches, she'd git a basket and collect the bits. Nothin' moves 'er—leastways, I was never able to. She 'asn't no soul, 'asn't Jemima."

"Lucky for her!" muttered Nugent. "By the way, it was strange you should come together again, after so many years. Quite accidental?"

"Yes, quite accidental," replied Cornelius, thoughtfully. "I married Jemima when I was quite a young man—some said 'andsome; she was reported to 'ave a bit laid by. She must 'ave laid it by pretty carefully, for I never saw it. Anyways, she 'ad a son, an' soon after that I left 'er."

"And came back again?"

"Yes. She'd been in service 'ere with Mrs. Rickerby. I left 'er 'ere; I came back twenty years after—an' 'ere she was still. She told me the boy was gone; what she meant by that I never asked. I thought she might 'ave another bit put by—but I 'aven't found it yet."

"Well, never mind about that," said Nugent, quickly. "You won't need it; I'll swear you won't need it. Only I want to be sure that the old woman is safe."

"Make your mind easy," replied the other. "What few wits she ever 'ad I took good care to worry out of 'er long ago. Now, I'll go an' look after this gel. What's she like to look at?"

"Very pretty, very slight, and very dark; you'll know her easily enough—there's not likely to be more than one girl waiting about Paddington, looking for someone to meet her. I'd go myself, but that I want to allay any suspicions she might have. Besides, you look so infernally respectable, Cornelius, when you haven't got that grin on your face, that she's sure to believe in you. Tell her, when you meet her, that I'm here, entertaining her lover. Don't forget that, Cornelius; entertaining—ha! ha!—her lover!"

Cornelius, muttering choice opinions about "gels" in general, and this one in particular, set off upon his errand; and Nugent Leathwood was once more left alone. But to be alone in that place seemed unbearable. He went out into the garden and walked there restlessly under the stars.

"It has been cleverly done," he muttered, as he walked among the dead leaves and stirred them into heaps with his feet; "cleverly done, indeed. I made it all so public—advertised so freely, was so ready to give the fullest information to every pressman who came upon the scene—that I'm the last man in the world they would suspect. And to-night little Miss Innocent walks into the spider's web, with her eyes open, to look for her lover. Well, she'll find one, but not the lover she anticipates."

Still walking up and down, he glanced up at the dark house into which he had gone so recently with Cornelius, when they bore between them something at which he dared not look. Despite the fact that everything appeared to be going so smoothly, he shuddered a little and glanced about him uneasily in the darkness.

"That was a good idea, too—about the ghosts. I've put it about pretty broadly, among ignorant tradesmen's boys and others, that the old place is haunted; that lights are seen at night and noises heard from there. I don't think anyone will venture near in a hurry. Well, if any ghosts ever walk the earth, I should think there ought to be one stirring in that house just now."

In his restless wanderings he had got around to the farther side of the deserted house; as he walked along under the shadow of the high wall of the garden, he glanced up at the windows. As he did so, he saw, with terror and amazement, that the window of that room in which he had so hurriedly hidden the body of the dead man, glowed faintly with light from within. Even while he stood gazing up at it, there passed across the blind—hideously large, and seeming to loom threateningly over him—the shadow of a man. At first, while he leaned against the wall, and caught at its rough bricks as if for support, he saw only the head and shoulders; but, gradually these rose and widened on the blind, until he saw the legs clearly; then the light went out; and there might have been no house at all there, for all he could see of it in the darkness.

"It—it isn't true—it can't be!" he whispered to himself, while he stood trembling in every limb, propped up against the wall. "Ghosts don't walk in these days; men can't come out of the shades— Who's there?"

Someone was moving in the garden coming towards him. Going forward, fearfully, he saw, after a moment, that it was the old woman, Jemima, tottering along and muttering to herself. Glad of any contact with human things at that moment, he sprang forward and caught her by the shoulders.

"Jemima, who is in that room? Answer me, quickly, or I shall go mad. Who is in that room?" He pointed, with shaking hand, towards the window where he had seen the shadow.

(To Be Continued.)

WAS SAVED BY HIS WIT.

But He Cut Out the Trick From the Bill Afterwards.

"It was a pretty close shave, and nothing but my presence of mind is responsible for my being able to tell of it now," said the old magician. "Several years ago I made a tour of the West. One night, while showing in a small town, I made use of what I consider my greatest and most mystifying trick—that of catching in my teeth a bullet fired from a gun. The trick—for it is nothing but a trick—is of itself very dangerous, and it is for that reason that I seldom ever attempt it. But that night my audience was so enthusiastic that I resolved to give it. When I called for the man to step forward to fire the gun, the audience took it for granted that the local bad man—a dead shot, by the way—should be the man, and he came swaggering up to the platform. Well, the trick was a complete success, and I was well repaid for the danger that I had run by seeing the look of amaze on the bad man's face when I showed him the marked bullet between my teeth. After the performance was over I went to my hotel, and, while enjoying a good-night cigar before going to bed, the office was suddenly invaded by a mob of excited men, headed by the 'bad man. "Here, pard,' said he, seizing hold of me and shoving me up against the wall. 'Bill, here, wasn't at the show, and he says he don't believe you can catch a bullet with your teeth, and I've bet him $10 that you kin.' Then, before I could find my tongue, he backed off about fifteen paces and drew a gun. 'Now, git ready, pard!' shouted the bad man, as he drew a bead on me. Right here was where I did the most rapid thinking of my life. Hastily passing my hand over my mouth, I extracted my false teeth, and then pleaded that I should have to go to my room before I could do the trick. I left, ostensibly to get the teeth, but, really to catch a train out of town. I cut that trick for the balance of the trip."—London Mail.

A Wrinkle in Apple Packing.

"There is a knack in doing everything," is an old saying, and the truthfulness of it was brought to mind recently by a gang of men engaged in wrapping and packing apples. Each had a full box of apples, a pile of thin paper cut into wrappers and an empty box. An apple was taken from the full box, a wrapper put around it, and it was put in the other box. It is not an easy thing to pick up a wrapper of thin paper without missing one occasionally, and in doing so the men adopted different schemes. A new hand wet his thumb on his tongue for every wrapper. One who had been longer in the business, and found it was unwholesome to be wetting his thumb on his tongue, had a slice of lemon beside his pile of wrappers, and moistened his thumb in the lemon before picking up the wrapper. The scheme worked well, but he did not know whether the acid of the lemon would make his thumb sore or not. A third man had a thin rubber thumbstall on his thumb, and could pick up wrappers all day long and never make a miss. He was an old hand at the business.—Morning Oregonian.

Forgotten Directions.

As the steamer pitched and rolled in the waves the traveler heard, through the thin partition, a wailing voice in the next state room exclaim:

"Oh, mamma, it's coming again, worse than ever!"

Then he heard a sleepy voice in reply:

"Marie, why don't you follow the directions you told me about before we came on board?"

"Because I've forgotten whether I ought to breathe as the vessel rises, and let the breath go out as it moves downward, or whether it ought to be the other way, and, oh! oh! oh! I wish I was dead!"—Epworth Herald.

Nansen's Plea for Polar Discovery.

In an interesting article in Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly for November the great explorer closes with this appeal:

"In our age of avarice and greed, when the nations stand armed to the teeth to fight for power and pelf, and one begins to have doubts as to the moral progress of humanity, it seems like a ray of light to see men setting sail for higher goals. Let us, then, wish them Godspeed on their several quests in Browning's words:

Gone Before.

"I confess to a peculiar and even pathetic interest in this old college foot ball ground," said the middle-aged man, who was revisiting his alma mater after the lapse of many years.

"It seems a part of yourself, I presume?" observed the other man.

"Yes; that 's what invests it with the peculiar interest," he rejoined. "When I played my last game on these grounds I left a finger joint and part of an ear somewhere about here."—Chicago Tribune.

False Charge.

Magistrate—What is the charge?

Officer—Carrying concealed deadly weapons.

Prisoner—'Tis false, your honor. I had no deadly weapon. It was only a French dueling pistol.—New York Weekly.

A Wonderful Clock.

A clock was recently made, which, in addition to striking the hours, halves and quarters, shows the phases of the moon and tells the time in any other city, but as the clock is too expensive to purchase, the best way to obtain this information is from Hostetter's Almanac for 1902. It also contains many amusing anecdotes, statistics and much general information that will interest you. It can be obtained from any druggist free of charge.

His Criticism.

She—Boys have more fun than girls, anyhow.

He—Well, that's because they spend too much time just trying to be good."

WHAT A LEADING AGRICULTURIST SAYS OF WESTERN CANADA.

Prof. Thomas Shaw of Minnesota University Gives an Unbiased Opinion.

In a letter to "The Farmer," St. Paul, dated Sept. 1st, 1901, Prof. Thomas Shaw of the Minnesota State University has the following to say, after having made a trip through Western Canada:

"The capabilities of the immense area known as Western Canada are but little understood on this side of the line. Our people are apt to look upon it as a region of frost and snow, a country in which but a small portion of the land relatively will ever be tillable, because of the rigors of the climate. True, the climate is cold in winter, but Western Canada has, nevertheless, just that sort of climate which makes it the most reliable wheat-producing country in all the continent.

An Immense Area.

Western Canada is not only an immense area, but the same description will apply to those portions of the country that are capable of being successfully tilled or grazed. Nearly all of the prairie Province of Manitoba can be brought under cultivation, although probably not one-third of its surface has been laid open by the plow. Assiniboia to the west is a grain and stock country. Saskatchewan to the north of Assiniboia has high adaptation for the same. This also may be said of Alberta to the west. Here lies what may be termed a grain-growing and stock producing empire, the resources of which have been but little drawn upon, comparatively, viewed from the standpoint of the agriculturalist. When it is called to mind that even in the Peace River country in Athabasca, and several hundreds of miles north of the Canadian boundary, wheat was grown which won a premium at the World's Fair in 1893, the capabilities of this country in wheat production loom up more brightly than even the brilliant northern lights of the land that lies toward the pole.

Adapted to Stock and Grain Production.

The region under consideration is, however, mainly adapted to growing grain and grazing stock. Much of it is adapted to growing both grain and stock, but certain areas, especially towards the mountains, are only adapted to ranching, except where irrigation will yet be introduced. This, of course, can be done successfully along the many streams that flow down from the Rockies and water the country towards the east and north. The adaptation of the country for wheat production is of a high character. The cool nights that usually characterize the ripening season are eminently favorable to the filling of the grain, and to the securing of a plump berry, and consequently large yields. The crop this year is a magnificent one. In Manitoba and the territories it should certainly give an average of more than 20 bushels per acre. But should the yield be not more than 20 bushels, the crop will be a most handsome one, owing to the large area sown to wheat. Many farmers only grow grain. But those who do succeed as well in growing oats and barley as in growing wheat, hence these foods for stock should always be abundant. Some grow cattle mainly, and others combine the two. The last named, of course, is doubtless the safest of the three during a long course of years, that is to say, where much farming is practicable.

Quality of the Live Stock.

It was a pleasurable surprise to note the high quality of the stock. The average of quality in cattle is higher than the average of cattle in our state, unless in the dairy classes. This opinion is not reached rashly or without ample opportunity for investigation. I spent three long days in the show ring at Winnipeg making the awards in the beef classes. I question if any of our states, single handed, could make such a showing in cattle. It was my privilege to make the awards at several shows and at all of their fairs were evidences that much attention is given to the improvement of the stock. I noted carefully the character of the herds that grazed along the railroad and everywhere the high average of the quality of the stock was in evidence.

Reasons for Quality in Stock.

The quality of the grass is good. Many of the settlers came from Ontario and had been schooled as to the value of good stock before going west. The railroads and the government have taken a deep interest in making it less difficult and costly to the farmers to secure good males.

Those who are anxious of changing their residence should bear in mind that the lands in Western Canada are many of them free and others reasonably cheap.

Information will gladly be given by any agent of the Canadian government, whose advertisement appears elsewhere.

YOU & TODAY
BY ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

With every rising of the sun,
Think of your life as just begun.

The past has shriveled, and buried deep,
All yesterdays; there let them sleep.

Nor seek to summon back one ghost
Of that innumerable host.

Concern yourself with but to-day.
Woo it, and teach it to obey

Your will and wish. Since time began,
To-day has been the friend of man;

But, in his blindness and his sorrow,
He looks to yesterday and to-morrow.

You, and to-day! a soul sublime,
And the great pregnant hour of time,

With God himself to bind the twain!
Go forth, I say, attain, attain!

What Rob Said.

BY MRS. MOSES P. HANDY.

(Copyright, 1901, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

"Indeed, Bertie, I just think I'm one of the luckiest girls in the world," and Ethel Trent leaned back on the lounge and folded her pretty hands complacently, so that her diamond and sapphire ring showed to the best advantage. "Mr. Wilson simply adores me, and I shall have everything that money can buy. Think of spending a whole year abroad. I have always longed to travel and to be able to buy no end of beautiful things for our new house on the boulevard. And then Mr. Wilson is a man any girl might be proud of. He doesn't look a day over 40, and is really distinguished looking. I tell you I'm in luck.

"But, what will Rob say?' asked her sister, far less impressed by the glowing picture than Ethel had expected her to be.

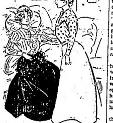
The girl shrugged her shoulders impatiently. "Congratulate me, I suppose. He has no right to say anything else, and it would make no difference if he did."

"Oh, Ethel."

"Bertha, you make me tired," exclaimed Ethel, sitting erect in her vehemence of speech. "I never could see why you always insisted that Rob Hillis and I were sweethearts. I am not engaged to him. He never asked me to marry him, and supposing he was in love with me what would it matter? I can't marry all the men who admire me, so I choose to please myself. Rob is as poor as a church mouse, and you know it."

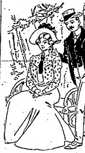
"But, Ethel, don't you know his uncle has made him his assistant, and he will surely ask you now that he can afford to marry."

Ethel interrupted her disdainfully. "On $1,200 a year, excuse me if you please. My dear child, don't you know that Mr. Wilson has twice as many thousands? Really, Bertha, you ought to have more sense. But then you have spent your life here in the country, and you don't know what life is. I have no more reason to think that that boy is in love with me than with you; he is Joe's chum, that is all. But if he does mind, what then? He has no right to complain and he will get over it, never fear. Anybody would really think you thought more about him than me. Novel reading has turned your brain. I don't believe in romantic passion myself and am quite willing that most of the love shall be on the man's side so long as I have a high respect for my husband and he has plenty of money. I never was in love in my life and I never expect to be, but I shall do my best to satisfy Mr. Wilson, and I have no fears for the future. Besides, I am older than you are, and you have no business to lecture me."



"But what will Rob say?"

The summer previous Mrs. Trent's only sister, well-to-do, childless, living in a fashionable apartment house in a large city, and "quite in the swim" had been ordered absolute rest and quiet from her social duties and her charities. Seeking such repose she had come to visit her sister in the country township of Knowoc, and found the experiment a success. When she returned to town she had taken her eldest niece with her. Ethel was a beauty and Mrs. Morton had announced to her husband her intention to give the girl a chance. Mr. Morton never denied his wife anything; moreover, he, too, had taken a fancy to the girl and the chance was given with no niggard hand.



"That's good news."

It would be hard to tell whether Mr. or Mrs. Morton was most pleased at the sensation which Ethel made, most delighted when the head of the firm of Wilson & Co., of which Mr. Morton was a junior member, asked Ethel to marry him. Neither of them imagined the possibility of a refusal, although the suitor was twice her age.

The old chronicle tells us that when Alcides, having gone through all the fatigues of life, took a bride in Olympus, he ought to have selected Minerva, but he chose Hebe. Other men since then have done the same thing, and no one, not even the bride-elect, thought of the difference of age as an objection. Ethel did not say "yes, and thank you," but she felt it, and her behavior on the occasion was generously rewarded by her aunt and her uncle-in-law. Ethel had the satisfaction of knowing that her trousseau would be all that could be desired.

As for Rob Hillis, Ethel never took him into consideration; as she said, why should she? Half the young men in Knowoc were more or less in love with her. Rob was her brother's special friend, and so, oftener at the house than any of the others, but much more was taken for granted than had ever been said.

Bertha Trent, four years younger than her sister, admired Ethel beyond measure. She herself was barely good looking, and accustomed to be overshadowed by her brilliant sister upon all occasions, she was content with reflected glory and never thought to be jealous.

Only now was she disappointed when everyone else was praising Ethel for that she had done so well to herself.

Bertha was intensely loyal, and she loved Rob better than she even knew. She had always taken it for granted that her two swans must mate, and her air castles had all been built with that end in view. There was nobody good enough in her eyes for Ethel but Rob, and how could anyone whom Rob loved fail to say him yea?

So when Ethel came home after six months' absence, bringing her sheaves with her, Bertha, unimpressed by their golden glory, asked herself and her sister, "What will Rob say?"

The year before Rob Hillis had graduated with high honors at one of the first medical colleges in the country, and coming home, hung out his shingle.

But country towns are apt to distrust young men, most of all when they have grown up in their midst, and it was only the very few who appreciated the great advances which medicine and surgery have made in recent years, who dared to employ him. Thus it was a godsend when the young doctor's uncle, having no son to inherit his practice and feeling the need of an assistant, wrote to Rob to come and fill the post. This, during Ethel's absence, but before the news of her engagement had reached Knowoc.

Rob had talked the offer over with Joe and Bertha, although there was but one opinion as to its acceptance, a fairly good income for a young man. Rob had answered, "Yes, a fellow might get married on that with the right kind of a wife," and had smiled at Bertha, who, thinking of Ethel, had choked down a lump, which, to her shame and confusion, rose in her throat, and bravely smiled back.

Now that Ethel had unhesitatingly thrown Rob over, Bertha felt that further protest was useless; nay, more, she felt that she was on the verge of tears and that if she remained in the room with her sister she would do or say something to be sorry for.

She left the room and the house; she felt that she wanted to be alone in order to recover her composure. Almost unconsciously she took the path to a favorite spot with the young people of both households, a clump of willows half way between the Trent and Hillis homesteads, where the boys years ago had built a rustic seat.

There she sat thinking, her eyes full of tears, her heart aching.

"Oh, Rob, Rob," she sighed at last aloud, "If I could only help you."

"Well," exclaimed a merry voice, not at all that of a despairing lover. "That's good news, because you can more than anyone else in the world. I was just on my way to tell you that I can't get along without you, and to ask you if you think you can be happy as a poor man's wife?"

Chinamen Emigrating.

The Englishman writing about Chinamen immigrating to Calcutta from the Canton districts, and then finding wives among the lower classes of the Eurasian community, makes the remark "that the children of these marriages are generally educated on western lines, that is to say, they are taught to speak, read and write English, and are given a grounding in arithmetic and accounts. They are then apprenticed to their fathers' trades. This fact may partly account for the rapidity with which Chinamen are ousting natives of India in the business of shoemaking and carpentry, which they have made their own in Calcutta." Burmah opens out a good field for Chinese immigration, says the Mandalay Herald, and the only wonder is that the government does not sufficiently encourage Chinamen immigrating hither. Down at Australasia Chinamen have flocked in shoals, some contracting marriages with European women, and from past experience have been found to be good factors and formidable rivals not only in commerce, but in the several handicrafts of trade, so much so that their immigration into the colonies has been made prohibitive by taxes and other heavy obligations.—Lahore Tribune.

The Art of Skipping.

The Living Age remarks that some of the fundamental principles of the useful art of skipping are suggested by Mr. Anthony Deane, in the following passage in the London Pilot: When I meet a paragraph which begins, "It is now necessary to retrace our steps somewhat to explain:" or, "The crimson sun by this time neared the horizon. Far over the hills stretched a vault of heavy cloud, its strange, purple tints fading and dissolving into"—or, "But the contents of this room, his sanctum sanctorum, deserve more detailed description;" or, "O strange, unfathomable mystery of existence, compelling our purblind race"—when, I say, I meet a passage in a novel which begins thus, I skip like anything.

When to Use "Shall" and "Will."

"At what time shall you be at liberty?" is the correct form when you "desire information, not consent or a promise." "At what time will you be at liberty?" is equivalent to "At what time are you willing to be a liberty?" It implies that being at liberty is dependent on the will of the person spoken to. "At what time shall you be at liberty?" is equivalent to "At what time are you going to be at liberty?"—being at liberty is regarded as simply a matter of the future, not dependent on the will of anybody. "Will you?" expects the answer "I will"; it denotes willingness, consent, or determination. "Shall you?" expects the answer "I shall"; it denotes futurity and nothing more.—Elizabeth A. Withey in Ladies' Home Journal.

Could Anybody Afford Her?

"If ten men should ask you to marry them, what would that be?" "What would it be?" "A tender." "And if one should ask you, what would that be?" "I don't know; what?" "A wonder."—Life.

Thrown from His Cab and Killed.

The following is a most interesting and, in one respect, pathetic tale: Mr. J. Pope, 42 Ferrar Road, Streatham, England, said:

"Yes, poor chap, he is gone, dead—horse bolted, thrown off his seat on his cab he was driving and killed—poor chap, and a good sort, too, mate. It was him, you see, who gave me the half-bottle of St. Jacob's Oil that made a new man of me. 'Twas like this: me and Bowman were great friends. Some gentleman had given him a bottle of St. Jacob's Oil which had done him a lot of good; he only used half of the bottle, and remembering that I had been a martyr to rheumatism and sciatica for years, that I had literally tried everything, had doctors, and all without benefit, I became discouraged, and looked upon it that there was no help for me. Well," said Pope, "You may not believe me, for it is a miracle, but before I had used the contents of the half-bottle of St. Jacob's Oil which poor Bowman gave me, I was a well man. There it is, you see, after years of pain, after using remedies, oils, embrocations, horse liniments, and spent money on doctors without getting any better, I was completely cured in a few days. I bought another bottle, thinking the pain might come back, but it did not, so I gave the bottle away to a friend who had a lame back. I can't speak too highly of this wonderful painkiller."

It Comes High, Too.

He had just returned from the city, and he was strangely uncommunicative concerning his adventures.

"Did you buy anything while you were gone, Hiram?" she asked.

"Yep," he replied shortly.

"Pay much for it?" she persisted, for she rather expected the material for a new gown.

"Yep."

"What was it?"

"Experience."

"I thought you loaded up with that last time," she said bitterly.

"Well, this was another kind," he explained.—Chicago Post.

Women Look Younger Than Men.

I wonder how many people have noticed in the last twenty years the fallacy that "a woman looks older for her years than a man" has been exploded. A woman—the ordinary woman who takes care of herself and treasures her youth as a precious thing—looks than a majority of men of the same age. Women of forty and forty-five look many years younger than their husbands, who are usually but a few years their seniors, and because of the eternal youth preserving that obtains among the new century women the fashion of marrying men who are several years their juniors is becoming more and more the vogue.

A Clergyman's Discovery.

Fredericksburg, Ind., Dec. 2.—According to the positive declaration of Rev. E. P. Stevens of this place, that gentleman has found a remedy for all diseases of the kidneys and urinary organs. For years he suffered severely with these complaints, incontinence of the urine, making life a burden to him, but he never ceased experimenting, in the hope that some day he would discover a remedy. After many failures he at last succeeded and is to-day perfectly cured and a well man, and explains that his recovery is due to the use of Dodd's Kidney Pills. This remedy has been successfully applied to many cases of Lame Back, Rheumatism, Bright's Disease, Diabetes and other Kidney Diseases, and there seems to be no case of the kind that Dodd's Kidney Pills will not cure. This is the only remedy that has ever cured Bright's Disease.

The Proof.

Then the defiant, militant spirit took possession of the devoted missionary.

"You think I'm a pudding!" he cried. "I'll show I am not!"

"The proof of the pudding is in the eating!" rejoined the savages darkly.—Detroit Free Press.

Broklyn, N. Y., Dec. 2.—Garfield Headache Powders are sold here in large quantities; this shows that people realize the value of a remedy at once effective and harmless. The Powders are of undoubted value in curing headaches of all kinds and in building up the nervous system. Investigate every grade of remedies offered for the cure of headaches and the Garfield Headache Powders will be found to hold first place. Write the Garfield Tea Co. for samples.

What He Declared.

An irascible German who recently landed in this city was much irritated by the customs inspectors. After he made his declaration he was charged duty on $50 worth of trinkets. He protested that he had no trinkets, and when shown his declaration, blurted out:

"Ach! Trinks! Dot inspector, what you calls him, ask me what I buy abroad, and he put me down so much dot I told him I spent $50 for drinks, but I haven't got them now."—New York Times.

A NOTED PHYSICIAN

Makes an Important Statement of Interest to All Women.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—The honest, intelligent physician is above the 'School.' Whatever is best in each case should be used, no matter to what school a physician belongs. I, as a matter of conscience, can only prescribe the best, and as I know and have proven that there is nothing in Materia Medica which equals Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in severe cases of female disorders, I unhesitatingly prescribe it, and have never yet been sorry. I know of nothing better for ovarian troubles and for falling of the womb or ulcerations; it absolutely restores the affected parts to their normal condition quicker and better than anything else. I have known it to cure barrenness in women, who to-day are happy mothers of children, and while the medical profession looks down upon 'patents,' I have learned, instead, to look-up to the healing potion, by whatever name it be known. If my fellow physicians dared tell the truth, hundreds of them would voice my sentiments."—DR. WANATA, Lansing, Mich.

President Roosevelt's first message is printed in full in the News today, and is an extremely able message. That part which relates to the Indian policy will be especially pleasing to the people of this section.

Halvor Steenerson's supporters point to the fact that his practice has made him acquainted in all parts of the district. There are generally as many soreheads as friends left in his wake, however. Acquaintance does not always mean friendship any more than notoriety means fame. We are not saying by this that Mr. Steenerson is not a strong candidate with many points in his favor, but merely giving the facts as we see them.—Red Lake Falls Gazette.

This states the situation in Thief River Falls exactly. While Mr. Steenerson has some warm friends here, he also has some very bitter enemies—and usually the latter do more work than the former.

Senator Nelson's Souvenir.

Senator Nelson has recently received a beautiful souvenir from his native land which he prizes very highly. It is an elegantly polished elk's horn mounted in solid silver and set upon a very substantial pedestal.

In Norway it is an old custom to have horns of oxen polished and prepared for drinking use. In fact Senator Nelson says the old saying, "Take a horn," originated in the land of the midnight sun. It is still the prevailing social fashion in Norway to pass one of the finely prepared polished horns around among guests, after it has been filled with wine or other liquid refreshment. Each guest takes a sip and passes it on to the next. This is something of an innovation over the older custom where each person to whom a horn was presented was supposed to drink its entire contents.

VOL. XVIII. THIEF RIVER FALLS, MINN., THURSDAY, OCTOBER 17, 1901. NUMBER 41.

WHERE IS HE?

E. E. Brown Missing Since Oct. 3rd.

PROBABLY DEAD.

It Is Thought that He Fell in the River.

E. E. Brown, an old resident of this section who resided on the East Side south of the Knox school house, has not been seen since Thursday evening, Oct. 3, and it is thought that he is now dead. On the day above mentioned Mr. Brown had been drinking quite heavily and about 6 o'clock in the evening was at Geo. William's saloon, where he drank four glasses of beer and then started for home. Later he was seen in the Thief River Falls Lumber company's yards by employers of that company, and the theory is that he walked into the river and was drowned. His wife is an Norwegian, who cannot talk English, and it was several days before the people of this city were informed of Brown's absence. Since then search has been made for the body by individuals.

Brown's home life is said to have been happy, and no reason can be assigned for his absence except that he is dead. He was an old man, having resided here for a great many years, and was well known to all the people here. He owns considerable property on the East Side, and also owns city property in Minneapolis.

TO SETTLE IT!

The Right of the State to Sections 16 and 36.

A Washington dispatch to the St. Paul Dispatch says that it is expected that the supreme court, during the term, will hand down the decision in the case of the State of Minnesota against secretary of the Interior Hitchcock and Land Commissioner Binger Hermann.

The issue in the case in the right of the state to 308 sections of land upon the Red Lake Indian reservation, numbered 16 and 36. Nearly 200,000 acre is claimed by virtue of the act which established the territorial government of Minnesota, approved March 3, 1849, and which provided that sections 16 and 36 should be set aside for educational purposes.

In all adjustments and dispositions of the public lands of the state, what are termed the "School Sections" have been invariably set aside, and the proceeds from the sales have gone into the school fund of the state.

The act of Feb. 26 1857, authorizing the people of the Territory of Minnesota to form a constitution, also contains provisions for agrегating these sections.

The interior department is fighting the claim, however, on the ground that the entire Chippewa reservation was wild and unsurveyed for a long time subsequent to the passage of all of the acts bearing upon any specified sections; that at time of admission of Minnesota into the Union May 11, 1858, all of the territory embodied in the Red Lake reservation was unceded Indian lands, and unsurveyed, and that sections 16 and 36 as mentioned in prior acts of congress, did not nor does not now apply to the said Indian reservation.

Secretary Hitchcock quotes in his defense, the treaty of Oct 2, 1863, the lands in question were specifically reserved and set aside for the use and occupancy of the Chippewas, which treaty was duly approved by President Lincoln.

It is further claimed by Hitchcock that the president's order of March 18 1879, and the Nelson act of Jan 14, 1889, recognized the validity of the existing treaty, and that no claim for school lands can therefore be admitted.

The state bases its claim on the broad general scope and intend of the acts of 1857 and the act admitting the state into the Union.

The counsel for the state, Kellogg & Severance and T. E. Byrnes cite the act of Feb. 26, which provides that sections 16 and 36 on the reservation shall not be sold until the claim of the State of Minnesota to the ownership of such lands shall have been determined. They also cite a letter from Land Commissioner Thomas H. Carter to Senator C. K. Davis dated Sept. 9, 1891, in which the admission is made that the land on sections 16 and 36 are schools sections.

It is also claimed that the Indians themselves becoming citizens can and do receive benefits from school funds of the state, in addition to that received in support of Indian schools by the federal government.

The question of jurisdiction is raised by Hitchcock, who claims that many of the Chippewa Indians, being citizens of Minnesota the title to their lands should be settled in the state and not the federal courts.

CORN BINDER

A Number Sold to Farmers Around Here.

In conversation with a farm machine dealer last week, the News was informed that several corn binders were sold to farmers of this section this year. It was only a few years ago that it was considered that corn could not be raised in this northern country, but the large yields that the farmers around here have raised of late show conclusively that corn can be raised here, and that it will be one of the staple crops here in the future.

CITY POLITICS

Candidates Are Getting Rather Numerous.

A BATTLE ROYAL

Will Be the Fight for Judge of the Municipal Court.

City election is getting warm. It is about the only topic of conversation on the streets now and candidates are rather numerous. No legal caucus could be held, now and the candidates for office will get their names placed upon the ticket by petition.

For the office of mayor, Frank H. Kratka and Dr. Grundy are most prominently mentioned. Either gentleman, we understand, is not averse to accepting a nomination, and they are being boomed by their respective friends. The friends of Mr. Kratka argue that he has made the best mayor Thief River Falls ever had, and they want him in office when the reservation is opened up, while the friends of Dr. Grundy say that although he has been a resident of this city for a number of years he has never yet received any political honor. There is also some talk of another candidate—one that would revolutionize the policy of all former mayors—but as yet no one has been agreed upon.

Mayor Kretzschmar positively refuses to serve another term although he has been urged by a large number of friends to again enter the race. Mr. Kretzschmar has made a good mayor, has at all times tried to do what he considered to be right, and has as large a personal following as any man in the city.

D. N. Winton is being boomed for the office of mayor by a large number of people, but it is doubtful if he would accept. Mr. Winton has a large circle of friends in this city and if he will give his consent, his friends will do the rest—elect him by a big majority.

The indications seem to be that there will be a lively fight for municipal judge. N. W. Tarrant, W. C. Smiley, M. K. Wall and Francis Hibner are all candidates.

The friends of Mr. Tarrant cite that he has been justice for the past two years; that everyone of his decisions—when appealed—were upheld by the higher courts, which has won for him the title of "Old Fair and Square," and that he knows as much about law as any attorney in town. Nick is an old resident, is popular, and willing to spend 30 cents to get elected.

W. C. Smiley, who has the reputation of being the best public speaker in Thief River Falls, would certainly make a good judge, and would hold the office with dignity. He has been electing other people to office for the past few years, and his friends now think that it is time he should receive some honor and emolument.

M. K. Wall's friends claim that the office should go to a person that has some knowledge of law and state that "Mike" is well qualified. He has read some law, and, aside from the attorneys, perhaps is the best posted man on law in the city. He too has a number of friends who are working hard for his success.

M. Hibner's qualification is based solely upon the fact that he is an attorney.

As yet there is but one avowed candidate for alderman-at-large—Hans Langseth. Mr. Langseth has been connected with the government of Thief River Falls since its organization, and will again be a candidate this year. There are a large number of other candidates being mentioned and it will be hard to say who they will be, but it is quite evident that there will be several aspirants.

In the First ward, C. L. Dobner and George Williams are the most prominently mentioned, and both will probably be candidates. In the Second ward, Matt Barzen is the only announced candidate, although Emil Zeh is being boomed by a number of friends. The Third ward on the East Side is considering several candidates among them being S. F. Staples C. E. Winslow, C. J. Knox, J. J. Crowe, S. V. Bailey and B. Christianson.

The four candidates for municipal judge—M. K. Wall, W. C. Smiley, N. W. Tarrant, and Francis Hibner,—circulated their nominating petitions the first of the week, and their names will be placed on the ballot.

Petitions placing in nomination C. A. Robbecke and James Meehan for aldermen-at-large, S. T. Johnson for mayor, Geo. Williams for alderman in the First ward and S. F. Staples for alderman in the Third ward, were circulated yesterday. And there'll be more today.

To the Public: I wish to announce to all that I will not be a candidate for mayor this fall. During the past I have received many political honors at the hands of Thief River Falls citizens, for which I am sincerely grateful, and I take this opportunity to express my heartfelt thanks to my many friends here.—Carl Kretzschmar.

STOPS WORK.

Thief River Falls Lumber Co.'s Mill

IS CLOSED DOWN.

Seasons Cut Was a Very Large One.

The Thief River Falls Lumber company's big mill at this point, which has been running night and day since the 11th day of April—a period of over six months—will be closed down for the season today. The cut this year has been the greatest in the history of the mill and although shipments have been exceedingly large there is at present over 4,000,000 more feet of lumber in the yards than there was when the mill closed down last fall. The company has a number of logs in the river at present enough to keep the mill running next spring until the logs to be cut this winter can be brought here.

The benefit of this institution to Thief River Falls has been great. Nearly 300 men have been employed by the company at high wages and thousands of dollars have been turned in the business channels of this city by the lumber company.

A crew of men will be put to work this winter repairing the mill and making improvements, getting it ready for next season's business.

SMALLPOX

May Be Many Cases This Winter.

Unless a great deal of care is taken there will probably be a large number of cases of smallpox in this city next winter. The Indians on this end of the reservation are mostly all sick with this disease, and a guard is now stationed at the bridge across the Thief River and no Indians are allowed to come into town.

There is said to be about thirty cases in Red Lake Falls, and also a number in Crookston and St. Hilaire. Thus far this city has been fortunate in that no cases of smallpox exists here.

Dr. E. H. Breckman, medical inspector of the state board of health, was in the city Monday looking after the Indians. He also visited Red Lake Falls.

Crookston College opened its fall term Sept. 9th. Its first winter term will open Nov. 4th. Board and furnished room in hotel or private family for $2.50 to $3.00 per week. Tuition $1.00 per week. Send for catalogue. Adress J. C. Sathre, Crookston, Minn.

THE NEWS,

By John W. Eastman.

PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY.

The saw mills of Minneapolis cut 559,914,055 feet of lumber during the past season. The C. A. Smith Lumber company made the largest cut, having sawed 101,128,712 feet.

President Roosevelt's first message is printed in full in the News today, and is an extremely able message. That part which relates to the Indian policy will be especially pleasing to the people of this section.

Halvor Steenerson's supporters point to the fact that his practice has made him acquainted in all parts of the district. There are generally as many soreheads as friends left in his wake, however. Acquaintance does not always mean friendship any more than notoriety means fame. We are not saying by this that Mr. Steenerson is not a strong candidate with many points in his favor, but merely giving the facts as we see them.—Red Lake Falls Gazette.

This states the situation in Thief River Falls exactly. While Mr. Steenerson has some warm friends here, he also has some very bitter enemies—and usually the latter do more work than the former.

Senator Nelson's Souvenir.

Senator Nelson has recently received a beautiful souvenir from his native land which he prizes very highly. It is an elegantly polished elk's horn mounted in solid silver and set upon a very substantial pedestal.

In Norway it is an old custom to have horns of oxen polished and prepared for drinking use. In fact Senator Nelson says the old saying, "Take a horn," originated in the land of the midnight sun. It is still the prevailing social function in Norway to pass one of the finely prepared polished horns around among guests, after it has been filled with wine or other liquid refreshment. Each guest takes a sip and passes it on to the next. This is something of an innovation over the older custom where each person to whom a horn was presented was supposed to drink its entire contents.

VOL. XVIII. THIEF RIVER FALLS, MINN., THURSDAY, OCTOBER 17, 1901. NUMBER 41.

WHERE IS HE?

E. E. Brown Missing Since Oct. 3rd.

PROBABLY DEAD.

It Is Thought that He Fell in the River.

E. E. Brown, an old resident of this section who resided on the East Side south of the Knox school house, has not been seen since Thursday evening, Oct. 3, and it is thought that he is now dead. On the day above mentioned Mr. Brown had been drinking quite heavily and about 6 o'clock in the evening was at Geo. William's saloon, where he drank four glasses of beer and then started for home. Later he was seen in the Thief River Falls Lumber company's yards by employers of that company, and the theory is that he walked into the river and was drowned. His wife is an Norwegian, who cannot talk English, and it was several days before the people of this city were informed of Brown's absence. Since then search has been made for the body by individuals.

Brown's home life is said to have been happy, and no reason can be assigned for his absence except that he is dead. He was an old man, having resided here for a great many years, and was well known to all the people here. He owns considerable property on the East Side, and also owns city property in Minneapolis.

TO SETTLE IT!

The Right of the State to Sections 16 and 36.

A Washington dispatch to the St. Paul Dispatch says that it is expected that the supreme court, during the term, will hand down the decision in the case of the State of Minnesota against secretary of the Interior Hitchcock and Land Commissioner Bingen Hermann.

The issue in the case in the right of the state to 308 sections of land upon the Red Lake Indian reservation, numbered 16 and 36. Nearly 200,000 acre is claimed by virtue of the act which established the territorial government of Minnesota, approved March 3, 1849, and which provided that sections 16 and 36 should be set aside for educational purposes.

In all adjustments and dispositions of the public lands of the state, what are termed the "School Sections" have been invariably set aside, and the proceeds from the sales have gone into the school fund of the state.

The act of Feb. 26 1857, authorizing the people of the Territory of Minnesota to form a constitution, also contains provisions for agregating these sections.

The interior department is fighting the claim, however, on the ground that the entire Chippewa reservation was wild and unsurveyed for a long time subsequent to the passage of all of the acts hearing upon any specified sections; that at time of admission of Minnesota into the Union May 11, 1858, all of the territory embodied in the Red Lake reservation was unceded Indian lands, and unsurveyed, and that sections 16 and 36 as mentioned in prior acts of congress, did not nor does not now apply to the said Indian reservation.

Secretary Hitchcock quotes in his defense, the treaty of Oct 2, 1863, the lands in question were specifically reserved and set aside for the use and occupancy of the Chippewas, which treaty was duly approved by President Lincoln.

It is further claimed by Hitchcock that the president's order of March 18 1879, and the Nelson act of Jan 14, 1889, recognized the validity of the existing treaty, and that no claim for school lands can therefore be admitted.

The state bases its claim on the broad general scope and intend of the acts of 1857 and the act admitting the state into the Union.

The counsel for the state, Kellogg & Severance and T. E. Byrnes cite the act of Feb. 26, which provides that sections 16 and 36 on the reservation shall not be sold until the claim of the State of Minnesota to the ownership of such lands shall have been determined. They also cite a letter from Land Commissioner Thomas H. Carter to Senator C. K. Davis dated Sept. 9, 1891, in which the admission is made that the land on sections 16 and 36 are schools sections.

It is also claimed that the Indians themselves becoming citizens can and do receive benefits from school funds of the state, in addition to that received in support of Indian schools by the federal government.

The question of jurisdiction is raised by Hitchcock, who claims that many of the Chippewa Indians, being citizens of Minnesota the title to their lands should be settled in the state and not the federal courts.

CORN BINDER

A Number Sold to Farmers Around Here.

In conversation with a farm machine dealer last week, the News was informed that several corn binders were sold to farmers of this section this year. It was only a few years ago that it was considered that corn could not be raised in this northern country, but the large yields that the farmers around here have raised of late show conclusively that corn can be raised here, and that it will be one of the staple crops here in the future.

CITY POLITICS

Candidates Are Getting Rather Numerous.

A BATTLE ROYAL

Will Be the Fight for Judge of the Municipal Court.

City election is getting warm. It is about the only topic of conversation on the streets now and candidates are rather numerous. No legal caucus could be held, now and the candidates for office will get their names placed upon the ticket by petition.

For the office of mayor, Frank H. Kratka and Dr. Grundy are most prominently mentioned. Either gentleman, we understand, is not averse to accepting a nomination, and they are being boomed by their respective friends. The friends of Mr. Kratka argue that he has made the best mayor Thief River Falls ever had, and they want him in office when the reservation is opened up, while the friends of Dr. Grundy say that although he has been a resident of this city for a number of years he has never yet received any political honor. There is also some talk of another candidate—one that would revolutionize the policy of all former mayors—but as yet no one has been agreed upon.

Mayor Kretzschmar postively refuses to serve another term although he has been urged by a large number of friends to again enter the race. Mr. Kretzschmar has made a good mayor, has at all times tried to do what he considered to be right, and has as large a personal following as any man in the city.

D. N. Winton is being boomed for the office of mayor by a large number of people, but it is doubtful if he would accept. Mr. Winton has a large circle of friends in this city and if he will give his consent, his friends will do the rest—elect him by a big majority.

The indications seem to be that there will be a lively fight for municipal judge. N. W. Tarrant, W. C. Smiley, M. K. Wall and Francis Hibner are all candidates.

The friends of Mr. Tarrant cite that he has been justice for the past two years; that everyone of his decisions—when appealed—were upheld by the higher courts, which has won for him the title of "Old Fair and Square," and that he knows as much about law as any attorney in town. Nick is an old resident, is popular, and willing to spend 30 cents to get elected.

W. C. Smiley, who has the reputation of being the best public speaker in Thief River Falls, would certainly make a good judge, and would hold the office with dignity. He has been electing other people to office for the past few years, and his friends now think that it is time he should receive some honor and emolument.

M. K. Wall's friends claim that the office should go to a person that has some knowledge of law and state that "Mike" is well qualified. He has read some law, and, aside from the attorneys, perhaps is the best posted man on law in the city. He too has a number of friends who are working hard for his success.

M. Hibner's qualification is based solely upon the fact that he is an attorney.

As yet there is but one avowed candidate for alderman-at-large—Hans Langseth. Mr. Langseth has been connected with the government of Thief River Falls since its organization, and will again be a candidate this year. There are a large number of other candidates being mentioned and it will be hard to say who they will be, but it is quite evident that there will be several aspirants.

In the First ward, C. L. Dobner and George Williams are the most prominently mentioned, and both will probably be candidates. In the Second ward, Matt Barzen is the only announced candidate, although Emil Zeh is being boomed by a number of friends. The Third ward on the East Side is considering several candidates among them being S. F. Staples C. E. Winslow, C. J. Knox, J. J. Crowe, S. V. Bailey and B. Christianson.

The four candidates for municipal judge—M. K. Wall, W. C. Smiley, N. W. Tarrant, and Francis Hibner,—circulated their nominating petitions the first of the week, and their names will be placed on the ballot.

Petitions placing in nomination C. A. Robbecke and James Meehan for aldermen-at-large, S. T. Johnson for mayor, Geo. Williams for alderman in the First ward and S. F. Staples for alderman in the Third ward, were circulated yesterday. And there'll be more today.

To the Public: I wish to announce to all that I will not be a candidate for mayor this fall. During the past I have received many political honors at the hands of Thief River Falls citizens, for which I am sincerely grateful, and I take this opportunity to express my heartfelt thanks to my many friends here.—Carl Kretzschmar.

STOPS WORK.

Thief River Falls Lumber Co.'s Mill

IS CLOSED DOWN.

Seasons Cut Was a Very Large One.

The Thief River Falls Lumber company's big mill at this point, which has been running night and day since the 11th day of April—a period of over six months—will be closed down for the season today. The cut this year has been the greatest in the history of the mill and although shipments have been exceedingly large there is at present over 4,000,000 more feet of lumber in the yards than there was when the mill closed down last fall. The company has a number of logs in the river at present enough to keep the mill running next spring until the logs to be cut this winter can be brought here.

The benefit of this institution to Thief River Falls has been great. Nearly 300 men have been employed by the company at high wages and thousands of dollars have been turned in the business channels of this city by the lumber company.

A crew of men will be put to work this winter repairing the mill and making improvements, getting it ready for next season's business.

SMALLPOX

May Be Many Cases This Winter.

Unless a great deal of care is taken there will probably be a large number of cases of smallpox in this city next winter. The Indians on this end of the reservation are mostly all sick with this disease, and a guard is now stationed at the bridge across the Thief River and no Indians are allowed to come into town.

There is said to be about thirty cases in Red Lake Falls, and also a number in Crookston and St. Hilaire. Thus far this city has been fortunate in that no cases of smallpox exists here.

Dr. E. H. Breckman, medical inspector of the state board of health, was in the city Monday looking after the Indians. He also visited Red Lake Falls.

Crookston College opened its fall term Sept. 9th. Its first winter term will open Nov. 4th. Board and furnished room in hotel or private family for $2.50 to $3.00 per week. Tuition $1.00 per week. Send for catalogue. Adress J. C. Sathre, Crookston, Minn.

THIEF RIVER FALLS NEWS
By John W. Eastman.
THIEF RIVER FALLS, MINN

The way to speak and write what shall not go out of fashion is to speak and write sincerely.

Explorers have approached within 238 miles of the north pole, but the nearest approach to the south has been 772 miles.

The most curious cemetery is situated at Luxor, on the Nile. Here repose the mummified bodies of millions of sacred cats. Their remains are side by side with the bodies of kings and emperors in mausoleums.

In the centre of Liverpool there is one large roof-garden. It forms the hobby of a lady who has at present in successful cultivation currants, gooseberries, and a fine show of outdoor flowers, besides exotics in a greenhouse. The earth was taken up to the tiles by means of a lift, and the garden is efficiently drained and free from despoilers.

An expert says of the discovery of coal in India: The development of the steel and iron trade in Bengal is only a matter of months, and Calcutta in a year or two will become the Cardiff of the east. With all the advantages of an Asiatic population at hand, an unlimited output and the enterprise controlled by Englishmen, there is no fear of competition, and a new era of prosperity is well in sight.

Sanger's circus recently caused a little scare in Ramsgate. A horse drawing a covered van of tigers made a wild dash down the High street and went through the windows of a drapery establishment. The horse was injured and the van overturned. Two fine tigers sprang out of the van as the folding doors flew open, and the crowd of sightseers was terrified; but some of the showmen were soon on the scene, and the tigers were quickly recaptured.

Dr. Colmette, head of the Pasteur Institute in Paris, and discoverer of the anti-venomous serum which bears his name, has just had a narrow escape from death, which he owes to his own invention. Dr. Colmette was collecting some serpents' venom, when one of the reptiles bit him severely on the finger. A moment's hesitation would have been fatal, for the poison was a deadly one, whose action is immediate. Fortunately one of Dr. Colmette's colleagues at once injected a strong dose of the anti-venomous serum, and the worst result so far has been a high fever and a swelling of the hand and wrist.

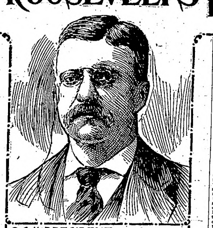
Among the villagers on the Volga in the Russian province of Samara a curious sect of women has made its appearance. It was originated by an elderly peasant woman in Sozanvo, called the "Blessed Mother." These women have fled from the villages around into a remote district, where they live singly in holes dug out of the face of the hill. They lead a life of fasting and prayer, and believe themselves called from the world, which they think is shortly about to perish in a general conflagration. The "Blessed Mother" has "ten wise virgins" as a sort of bodyguard, and the sect believes that these eleven women are possessed of miraculous power.

George Arnold, 82 years of age, who had been missing from the home of his granddaughter, Mrs. F. J. Warne, Syracuse, N. Y., was discovered in a field three miles from the Warne homestead. He was sitting under a tree and had nothing to eat but some green leaves and not a drop of water had passed his lips. Although very weak he is expected to live. The old man had lived in Toronto, Ont., up to a short time ago, when his wife died. He frequently said that he wanted to go home and had been acting in a peculiar manner. One mile from the place where the man was found his wooden leg was discovered. He had unstrapped it and crawled on his hands and knees over stone and barbed wire fences.

During the funeral of David Lindskog in Chicago, a few days ago, what threatened to be a panic, in which many would have lost their lives, was prevented by the prompt action of the pastor, Herman Lindskog. It occurred in the St. Ansgarius Swedish church. The church was crowded, and hundreds of people were outside awaiting an opportunity to view the remains of the pastor's son, who was shot by Policeman James P. Wiley during a scuffle. Just as the burial service was concluded a loud report and crashes as of splintering beams sounded in front of the edifice. The flooring bent several inches, and a number of persons started a rush for the entrance. In the crush at the door three women fainted. The collapse of the floor was caused by the splitting of a wooden post in the basement, which allowed the floor to sink.

During the last year 1,420 persons were treated at the Pasteur Institute at Paris. Eleven died of hydrophobia, and seven of these received treatment too late. Of the 1,413 patients who were treated in time, four died—the percentage being 28-100 of 1 per cent. In 1881, when the institute began operations, the percentage was 94-100; by 1888 it had fallen to 55-100; since that date it has, with the exception of one year, been less than 40-100; and since 1898 it has been less than 10-100 of 1 per cent.

SKETCHES from THEODORE ROOSEVELT'S BUSY LIFE.



26th PRESIDENT of the U.S.

Theodore Roosevelt's Father.

Theodore Roosevelt is the youngest American citizen who has ever been called to the head of our nation. He was born in New York City, October 27, 1858, his father, after whom he was named, being a prominent merchant, a patriot, a philanthropist, and a moving spirit in the Civil War. The elder Theodore Roosevelt went to Washington after the first Battle of Bull Run, and warned President Lincoln that he must get rid of Simon Cameron as Secretary of War, with the result that Mr. Stanton, the "organizer of victory," took his place. When the war was fairly under way, it was Theodore Roosevelt who organized the allotment plan, which saved the families of eighty thousand soldiers of New York State more than five million dollars of their pay; and when the war was over he protected the soldiers against the sharks that lay in wait for them, and saw to it that they got employment. Through his influence the New York newsboys' lodging-house system and many other institutions of public benefit and helpful charity were established. There were four children in the Roosevelt family, of whom Theodore was the second. There were two boys and two girls. A younger brother was killed in a railroad accident, and the hopes of the father were centered on Theodore. At the age of five or six, Theodore gave little promise of maintaining the prestige of the Roosevelt family line.

The President's Early Boyhood.

He was a puny, sickly, delicate boy. Some one who knew him in those days of the Civil War described him as a "weak-eyed, pig-chested boy, who was too frail to take part in the sports of lads of his age." When he arrived at the age of six, he was sent to the famous old McMullen School, where he remained for eight years. It was not, however, in New York that the boy Roosevelt spent with most profit the months to which he looks back with pleasure. The elder Roosevelt believed that children best thrive in the country. He selected a beautiful spot near the village of Oyster Bay, on the north shore of Long Island, and erected a country house which well deserves its title, "Tranquility." Here it was, among the hills which border the sound and the bay, that Theodore Roosevelt and his brother and sisters spent the long summer months. At fourteen Theodore was admitted to the Cutler School, a private academy in New York conducted by Arthur H. Cutler. Here he took the preparatory course for Harvard University, making rapid advancement under the careful tuition of Mr. Cutler, and graduating with honors.

Becomes an Athlete.

By careful attention and plenty of gymnasium exercise and out-of-door life his frame became more sturdy and his health vastly improved. It thus happened that when young Roosevelt entered on college life at Harvard, in 1875, he suffered little by comparison with boys of his age. While he did not stand in the front rank of athletics, he was well above the average, and had no reason to be ashamed of his physical prowess.

Never for a waking moment was he idle. It was either study or exercise. In addition to his regular studies and special courses he took upon himself the editorship of the college paper, and made a success of it. He was democratic in his tastes and simple in his mode of living. Theodore Roosevelt was graduated from Harvard in 1880 with high honors. In spite of severe study, his health was but little impaired, and he at once started on a foreign journey in search of instruction, pleasure and adventure. He distinguished himself as a mountain climber, ascending the Jungfrau, the Matterhorn and many other peaks, and was made a member of the Alpine Club of London.

Begins Study of Law.

On his return to America he studied law, and in the fall of 1881 he was elected to the State Assembly from the Twenty-first District of New York, generally known as Jacob Hess's district.

By re-election he continued in the body during the session of 1883 and 1884. He introduced important reform measures, and his entire legislative career was made conspicuous by the courage and zeal with which he assailed political abuses. As chairman of the Committee on Cities he introduced the measure which took from the Board of Aldermen the power to confirm or reject the appointments of the Mayor. He was chairman of the noted legislative investigating committee which bore his name. In 1884 he went to the Bad Lands in Dakota, near the "Pretty Buttes," where he built a log-cabin, and for several years mingled the life of a ranchman with that of a literary worker. From his front door he could shoot deer, and the mountains around him were full of big game. Amid such surroundings he wrote some of his most popular books. He became a daring horseman and a rival of the cowboys in feats of skill and strength. In 1886 Mr. Roosevelt was the Republican candidate for Mayor against Abram S. Hewitt, United Democracy, and Henry George, United Labor. Mr. Hewitt was elected by about twenty-two thousand plurality. In 1889 Roosevelt was appointed by President Harrison a member of the United States Civil Service Commission. His ability and rugged honesty in the administration of the affairs of that office greatly helped to strengthen his hold on popular regard.

Police Commissioner in New York.

Roosevelt continued in that office until May 1, 1895, when he resigned to accept the office of Police Commissioner from Mayor Strong. He found the administration of affairs in a demoralized condition, but he soon brought order out of chaos. Says James A. Riis, who is an intimate friend of President Roosevelt:

> We had been trying for forty years to achieve a system of dealing decently with our homeless poor. Two score years before, the surgeons of the police department had pointed out that herding them in the cellars or over the prisons of police stations in festering heaps, and turning them out hungry at daybreak to beg their way from door to door, was indecent and inhuman. Since then grand juries, academies of medicine, committees on philanthropic citizens, had attacked the foul disgrace, but to no purpose. Pestilence ravaged the prison lodgings, but still they stayed. I know what that fight meant, for I was one of a committee that waged it year after year, and suffered defeat every time, until Theodore Roosevelt came and destroyed the nuisance in a night. I remember the caricatures of tramps shivering in the cold with which the yellow newspapers pursued him at the time, labeling him the "poor man's foe." And I remember being just a little uneasy lest they wound him, and perhaps make him think he had been hasty. But not he. It was only those who did not know him who charged him with being hasty. He thought a thing out quickly—yes, that is his way; but he thought it out, and, having thought it out, suited action to his judgment. Of the consequences he didn't think at all. He made sure he was right, and then went ahead with perfect confidence that things would come out right.

His Advice to Organized Labor.

Mr. Riis says he never saw Roosevelt to better advantage than when he once confronted the labor men at their meeting-place, Clarendon Hall:

> The police were all the time having trouble with strikers and their "pickets." Roosevelt saw that it was because neither party understood fully the position of the other, and, with his usual directness, sent word to the labor organizations that he would like to talk it over with them. At his request I went with him to the meeting. It developed almost immediately that the labor men had taken a wrong measure of the man. They met him as a politician playing for points, and hinted at trouble unless their demands were met. Mr. Roosevelt broke them off short:
> "Gentlemen!" he said—with that snap of the jaws that always made people listen—"I asked to meet you, hoping that we might come to understand one another. Remember, please, before we go further, that the worst injury anyone of you can do to the cause of labor is to counsel violence. It will also be worse for himself. Understand distinctly that order will be kept. The police will keep it. Now we can proceed."
> I was never so proud and pleased as when they applauded him to the echo. He reddened with pleasure, for he saw that the best in them had come out on top, as he expected it would.

Attacked by "Yellow" Newspapers.

It was of this incident that a handle was first made by Mr. Roosevelt's enemies in and out of the police board—and he had many—to attack him:

> It happened that there was a music-hall in the building in which the labor men met. The yellow newspapers circulated the lie that he went there on purpose to see the show, and the ridiculous story was repeated until actually the liars persuaded themselves that it was so. They would not have been able to understand the kind of man they had to do with, had they tried. Accordingly they fell into their own trap. It is a tradition of Mulberry Street that the notorious Seeley dinner raid was planned by his enemies in the department of which he was the head, in the belief that they would catch Mr. Roosevelt there. The dinners were supposed to be his "set."

Some time after that, Mr. Riis was in Roosevelt's office when a police official of superior rank came in, and requested a private audience with him:

> They stepped aside and the policeman spoke in an undertone, urging something strongly. Mr. Roosevelt listened. Suddenly I saw him straighten up as a man recoils from something unclean, and dismiss the other with a sharp: "No, sir! I don't fight that way." The policeman went out crestfallen. Roosevelt took two or three turns about the floor, struggling evidently with strong disgust. He told me afterward that the man had come to him with what he said was certain knowledge that his enemy could that night be found in a known evil house uptown, which it was his alleged habit to visit. His proposition was to raid it then and so "get square." To the policeman it must have seemed like throwing a good chance away. But it was not Roosevelt's way; he struck no blow below the belt. In the governor's chair afterward he gave the politicians whom he fought, and who fought him, the same terms. They tried their best to upset him, for they had nothing to expect from him. But they knew and owned that he fought fair. Their backs were secure. He never tricked them to gain an advantage. A promise given by him was always kept to the letter.

Assistant Secretary of Navy.

Early in 1897 he was called by President McKinley to give up his New York office to become Assistant-Secretary of the Navy. His energy and quick mastery of detail had much to do with the speedy equipment of the navy for its brilliant feats in the war with Spain. It was he who suggested Admiral Dewey for commander of the Asiatic station.

Dewey was sometimes spoken of in those days as if he were a kind of fashion-plate. Roosevelt, however, had faith in him, and while walking up Connecticut avenue one day said to Mr. Riis: "Dewey is all right. He has a lion heart. He is the man for the place." No one now doubts the wisdom of his selection, and naval officers agree that the remarkable skill in marksmanship displayed by the American gunners was due to his foresight. He saw the necessity of practice, and he thought it the best kind of economy to burn up ammunition in acquiring skill.

A characteristic story is told regarding Roosevelt's insistence on practice in the navy.

Shortly after his appointment he asked for an appropriation of $800,000 for ammunition, powder, and shot for the navy. The appropriation was made, and a few months later he asked for another appropriation, this time of $500,000. When asked by the proper authorities what had become of the first appropriation, he replied: "Every cent of it was spent for powder and shot, and every bit of powder and shot has been fired." When he was asked what he was going to do with the $500,000, he replied: "Use every ounce of that, too, within the next thirty days in practice shooting."

His Cuban War Record.

Soon after the outbreak of the war, however, his patriotism and love of active life led him to leave the comparative quiet of his government office for service in the field. As a lieutenant-colonel of volunteers he recruited the First Volunteer Cavalry, popularly known as the "Rough Riders." The men were gathered largely from the cowboys of the west and southwest, but also numbered many college-bred men of the east. In the beginning he was second in command, with the rank of lieutenant-colonel, Dr. Leonard Wood being colonel. But at the close of the war the latter was a brigadier-general and Roosevelt was colonel in command. Since no horses were transported to Cuba, this regiment, together with the rest of the cavalry, was obliged to serve on foot. The regiment distinguished itself in the Santiago campaign, and Colonel Roosevelt became famous for his bravery in leading the charge up San Juan Hill on July 1st. He was an efficient officer, and won the love and admiration of his men. His care for them was shown by the circulation of the famous round-robin which he wrote protesting against keeping the army longer in Cuba.

As Governor of New York.

Upon Roosevelt's return to New York there was a popular demand for his nomination for governor. Previous to the state convention he was nominated by the Citizens' Union, but he declined, replying that he was a Republican. The Democrats tried to frustrate his nomination by attempting to prove that he had lost his legal residence in that state. That plan failed and he was nominated in the convention by a vote of 753 to 218 for Governor Black. The campaign throughout the state was spirited. Roosevelt took the stump and delivered many speeches. His plurality was 18,079.

As the campaign of 1900 drew near, the popular demand that Roosevelt's name should be on the National Republican ticket grew too imperative to be ignored by the leaders. The honor of the nomination for Vice-President was refused time and time again by Roosevelt, who felt that he had a great duty to perform as governor of New York state.

Says Cal. O'Laughlin, apropos of the Republican National Convention, which was held in Philadelphia on June 19, 20 and 21, 1900:

Nomination at Philadelphia.

> On the evening of the first day of the convention, Roosevelt saw Platt. "My name must not be presented to the convention," he told him. Platt was mad, and mad clean through; but he acquiesced and Roosevelt returned to his apartment to run into the arms of the Kansas delegation. "We do not request you to accept the nomination," said State Senator Burton: "we do not urge you to accept the nomination, but we propose to issue orders to you, and we expect you to obey them." Throughout the delivery of Mr. Burton's remarks, Roosevelt stood, with shoulders square and feet at right angles, his chin occasionally shooting forward, as if he were on the point of objecting to the argument that he alone could rescue "bleeding Kansas" from demagogism and populism. But he waited patiently until the address was ended, and then appealed to the Kansans to take his words at their face value, and vote for some one of the candidates. But his appeal was useless, for Senator Burton, grasping his hand, congratulated him "in advance upon his nomination and election," and the delegation enthusiastically approved the sentiments. So certain was Kansas that Roosevelt would be the choice of the convention, that it had printed a huge placard, bearing the words in large, black type:
> "KANSAS DELEGATION
> FIRST TO DECLARE FOR > GOVERNOR ROOSEVELT."
> And, when the nomination was declared to have occurred, triumphantly carried it about Convention Hall.

After his nomination, Roosevelt said:

> I held out as long as I could. I had to give in when I saw the popular sentiment of the convention. I believe it is my duty. Now that it is all over, I want to say that I appreciate fully the sentiment which accompanied my nomination. The unanimity and enthusiasm of the convention for my nomination never will be forgotten by me.

During the political campaign which followed, he traveled 16,100 miles, flashed through 23 states, delivered 459 speeches, containing 860,000 words, and made his appeal directly to 1,600,000 persons.

His Capacity for Work.

Mr. Riis says that the thing that beclouds the judgment of his critics is Roosevelt's amazing capacity for work. He says:

> He can weigh the pros and cons of a case and get at the meat of it in less time than it takes most of us to state the mere proposition. And he is surprisingly thorough. Nothing escapes him. His judgment comes sometimes as a shock to the man of slower ways. He does not stop at conventionalities. If a thing is right, it is to be done—and right away. It was notably so with the round-robin in Cuba, asking the government to recall the perishing army when it had won the fight. People shook their heads, and talked of precedents. Precedents! It has been Roosevelt's business to make them most of his time. But is there anyone today who thinks he set that one wrong? Certainly no one who with me saw the army come home. It did not come a day too soon. Roosevelt is no more infallible than the rest of us. Over and over again I have seen him pause when he had decided upon his line of action, and review it to see where there was a chance for mistake. Finding none, he would issue his order with the sober comment: "There, we have done the best we could. If there is any mistake we will make it right. The fear of it shall not deter us from doing our duty. The only man who never makes a mistake is the man who never does anything."

Enforcing the Law

Referring to Roosevelt's strict enforcement of the Sunday excise law, the San Francisco Argonaut's New York correspondent, "Flaneur," wrote under date of September 2, 1895:

> The law is not a Republican law. It was passed by Tammany, as a means of blackmailing saloonkeepers who refused to yield up tribute. It is a Democratic law, was introduced at the instigation of Tammany, was passed by a Democratic legislature, and was signed by a Democratic governor, David B. Hill. Senator Hill is now trying to make political capital by abusing Roosevelt for enforcing the law, but he places himself in a very questionable position. When a man is the leader of a party in a state, when his party passes an excise law, and when he himself signs it as governor, he certainly stultifies himself when, to embarrass a political opponent, he fights against the enforcement of the very law which he himself passed. The opponents of enforcing the law are having a rather hard time. Nobody denies that the law exists; all that they say is that it is "a hardship to enforce it." But who is to decide on the relative severity or mildness of the laws? Commissioner Roosevelt himself frankly says that he does not believe in such a severe Sunday law, but as it is the law, he is going to enforce it. And he is certainly doing so. There is a good deal of humor in the American people, and in this great city there are many thousands who are smiling sardonically over the plight of Tammany caused by enforcing a Tammany law. For Tammany's revenues come largely from the blackmailing of liquor saloons.

President Roosevelt has been a student of political economy since boyhood. He has been an omnivorous reader, and has pursued his studies with the same zeal and energy that have characterized all his acts in civil and military life.—San Francisco Argonaut.

NO SURRENDER BY ENGLAND.

In the Matter of the Isthmian Canal Treaty.

Washington, Oct. 10. — There has been no surrender by England to the United States in the matter of the new isthmian canal treaty, according to the best authority here. It is said to be equally true that the United States has sacrificed no principle in these negotiations and the effect of contrary statements is deprecated as likely to jeopardize the chances of the consummation of the convention which shall finally and peacefully settle an issue that has been a source of danger for the past fifty years. It is said that what actually has happened is that each has preserved the underlying principle of the Clayton-Bulwer treaty and the new convention will provide for a waterway neutral at all times and open to the commerce of the world.

BULGARIA IMPLICATED.

Sofia Government May Be Called to Account.

Washington, Oct. 10. — The Bulgarian as well as the Macedonian committee is charged with participation in the plot which culminated in the abduction of Miss Stone, the American missionary. This charge is of a most serious character, involving, as it does, the possibility of a breach in the friendly relations which have hitherto existed between the Sofia government and the United States. Careful investigation has not absolutely established Bulgarian complicity, but suspicion upon official dispatches is sufficiently strong to have been considered by the authorities in determining the policy pursued. This is the most important and surprising development of the abduction of Miss Stone.

ACRES OF COAL IN FLAMES.

Incendiary Fire Causes $250,000 Damage in Chicago.

Chicago, Oct. 10. — Shortly before midnight last night fire started on the docks of the Peabody Coal company at the foot of Orleans street. The flames spread to some freight sheds of the Chicago & Northwestern railway and to buildings occupied by the Globe Lighting and Heating company and the Davidson Marble works. Twenty flat cars standing on the tracks nearby were consumed.

The fire spread to the Peabody yards until five acres of coal were in flames. The loss on coal is estimated at upward of $250,000. The fire is believed to have been of incendiary origin.

WARNED AGAINST RUSSIA.

Affecting Scene at Deathbed of the Old Ameer.

Calcutta, Oct. 10. — There was an affecting scene at the deathbed of Abdurrahman Khan, the late ameer of Afghanistan. All the nobles present swore allegiance to his son and successor, Habibullah Khan, and to the British. Before his death the old ameer warned the Afghans against the Russians. He said his spirit would remain in the country, though his soul was going to God. There is no panic in India over the death of the ameer, as it is known that his heir, Habibullah Khan, is pro-English.

WANTS TO HELP LOW.

Mark Twain Will Go Into New York Campaign.

New York, Oct. 10. — "Mark Twain," it is said, may take the stump for Seth Low. That he will do so cannot be positively stated, because the fusion leaders did not learn until yesterday that Mr. Clemens was a resident of New York. Such, however, Mr. Clemens now considers himself. He expects to register this week, for the reason that he wants to vote for Mr. Low and do all he can toward electing the anti-Tammany ticket.

EATS, SLEEPS AND WALKS.

Czolgosz Does Not Want to See Any Person, or Do Any Talking.

Auburn, N. Y., Oct 10. — According to the information given to the press by Warden Mead there is no change of any kind in the condition of Assassin Czolgosz. The warden said that Czolgosz ate his meals in silence, spent his time in sleeping and pacing back and forth in the narrow confines of his cell, that he had talked to no one and had made no requests of any kind.

APPEAL TO ROOSEVELT.

Boer Sympathizers Want Shipment of Mules Stopped.

Chicago, Oct. 10. — The endless chain plan has been started by the American Transvaal league of Chicago. The cards, which are addressed to President Roosevelt, read: "Please stop the shipment of horses and mules from New Orleans to Cape Town, if possible. Please make England fight fairly in South Africa."

Boy Murderer Sentenced.

Logan, Utah, Oct. 10. — Abe Majors, popularly known as "The Boy Murderer," was yesterday sentenced to life imprisonment for the killing of Capt. Brown, chief of the Ogden police, three years ago. Majors, who is barely out of his teens, was convicted for the crime and sentenced to shot in 1899, but the supreme court granted him a new trial, which was concluded on Saturday last.

Cashier Gets the Limit.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Oct. 10. — Chas. A. Johnson, cashier of the defunct Niles National bank, pleaded guilty in the federal district court to violating the banking laws and was sentenced to ten years in prison, the limit.

Killed in a Duel.

Vienna, Oct. 10. — Lieut. Bennet Solka of the Hussars has been killed in a duel with pistols with Ernest Loenfeldt, a manufacturer.

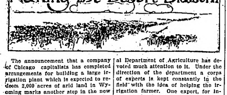
Partridge Hunter Lands Bears.

Iron Mountain, Mich., Oct. 10. — Louis Anderson while after partridges shot a bear weighing 240 pounds. Later he went out and got two cubs. The carcass of the old animal was shipped to a purchaser in Chicago.

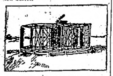
Carlos for Peace.

Paris, Oct. 10. — A dispatch from St. Carlist leader who is now in this city, discredits the reports from Spain of the imminence of a Carlist uprising. He says that Don Carlos at present favors peace.

Making the Desert Blossom



The announcement that a company of Chicago capitalists has completed arrangements for building a large irrigation plant which is expected to redeem 2,000 acres of arid land in Wyoming marks another step in the new inning of the West. Perhaps no single undertaking now under way means so much to the country and to the world at large as the supplying of sufficient water to this great region, aggregating in area over four-tenths of the total area of the country, and over which the average yearly rainfall is less than half the average in the Eastern States.



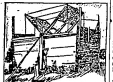
A MERRY-GO-ROUND WIND ENGINE.

Much has been accomplished already: Utah and southern California owe their greatness as agricultural countries to the irrigation ditch, and in a dozen places in Colorado great tracts of land have been redeemed from the desert and made most productive farms. These great plants are as a rule controlled by large companies which have invested thousands in building ditches and reservoirs and which furnish water to a multitude of farmers as gas is furnished elsewhere. In western Kansas individual farmers have largely built their own irrigation plants, and in one corner of the Sunflower State there are more than 1,200 windmill irrigation plants owned by individuals. But after all is said about the wonders which irrigation has accomplished, the fact remains that the work still remaining is infinitely greater. Roughly speaking, it is said that there are now not much more than 8,000,000 acres under irrigation, while the total area which it is estimated may be profitably brought under irrigation, and which will not be productive without it, is estimated to be over one hundred million acres.

As a fair example of what irrigation will do for a country and its people, Rocky Ford, in the Arkansaw valley of Colorado, may be cited. Men still young have hunted buffaloes over the site of one of the greatest sugar beet factories in the world, and in a single year Rocky Ford sends to market 300,000 sheep and 800 carloads of melons. All this is due to irrigation, and as a result land has increased in value from $25 to $250 an acre.

In eastern Colorado, near the Kansas state line, the largest irrigation system in the country has just been completed. It will furnish sufficient water for 200,000 acres of land, and more than a million dollars has been spent in its construction. The system consists of five great reservoirs, covering 13,000 acres of land, and provided with seven great canals and a number of subsidiary ditches, with a total length of more than 500 miles.

But even this irrigation system is entirely dwarfed by the colossal work now under way in Egypt, under the direction and control of the British Governors of the kingdom. This irrigation system, work on which has been going on for some time, is much the largest ever undertaken in the world, as is indicated by the fact that it will cost upwards of $25,000,000.

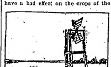


A HOME-MADE GIANT.

There are two ways in which arid lands may be irrigated. The first and simplest is by means of the so-called gravity ditches, according to which water is diverted from a river or reservoir and flows by the force of gravity through irrigation ditches to the land it is desired to water. In hilly and mountainous country this system has been systematically followed and has proved immensely profitable and successful. But gravity ditches are not practicable on the flat prairie lands which make so large a part of the arid West. As a means of taking their place it was long ago discovered that over almost all flat desert country a plentiful supply of water may be reached by sinking shallow wells. Then came the question of finding power to raise this water to the surface, and out of that need has grown a demand for huge windmills of curious construction. As for the necessary power it has been estimated that the free winds which sweep over the Kansas prairie develop more power than all Niagara during the same length of time.

So immensely important is this question of irrigation that the National Department of Agriculture has devoted much attention to it. Under the direction of the department a corps of experts is kept constantly in the field with the idea of helping the irrigation farmer. One expert, for instance, is kept busy experimenting with pumps and endeavoring to determine what style is best for the purpose of irrigation. Another expert drives over the arid country and determines the depth from the surface to water in various places and also what is the nature of the water supply. All the results of the experiments and tests are printed in pamphlet form by the Agricultural department and are sent free of charge to any one who may be interested.

One of the great benefits of irrigation is often lost sight of. Not only does the irrigation of a considerable section of land reduce the probability of crop failure in that district to a minimum, but it also has a beneficial influence on other fertile lands which lie contiguous to it. The intensely hot winds which blow across the leagues of barren and heated desert have a bad effect on the crops of the fresher and more fertile lands beyond, as was shown by the partial destruction of the Kansas corn crop during the recent summer by the hot winds blowing from the west. When a desert region is redeemed through irrigation the winds which blow over it lose their sting and are tempered to the growing crops. In this way a desert does harm far beyond its own limits and an irrigated district scatters blessings outside its own boundaries.



MODELED AFTER A BATTLE AX.

Of the hundred million acres of arid land still remaining in the west the government experts have made a thorough survey, and they report that a sufficient water supply is easily available to redeem 95 per cent of it. Government lands open for free settlement are becoming scarcer, but this enormous tract still remains practically untouched, and simply waiting for the touch of water to blossom. It is said by those competent to judge that forty acres of properly irrigated land in Kansas or Colorado will furnish a surer and a larger competency than 160 acres in the east.

The experience of thousands of irrigation farmers has been practically the same. They pay perhaps $1.25 or $2, or perhaps even $5 an acre for their land in an arid and entirely unproductive state. At an average cost of not more than $100 each of them puts up a tower sixty feet in height and surmounted by a sixteen-foot windmill. This windmill works an eight or ten inch pump in a well twenty feet deep. The water brought to the surface is stored in a reservoir about seventy-five feet in diameter, and which will cost another $100 to build. With such a plant a man can irrigate thoroughly at least ten acres of land. If he plants ten acres with alfalfa he will have water enough for twenty acres in all, for the alfalfa needs to be irrigated only in the winter time, for its long tap roots run down so deep below the surface that they will find a sufficient supply of moisture even when the surface of the ground is baked and hot.

In this way, with an expenditure of not more than $250 for an irrigating plant, a man may raise the value of his land from $2 or $3 to $40 an acre, this being a conservative average of the value of irrigated farming lands along the lines of railroad.

A few years ago there was a big boom in the formation of huge irrigation companies. Many of these companies failed because the plants they built were built in the most expensive way possible, because they were not properly planned and managed, and because they failed to secure for residents on their irrigated lands responsible and intelligent farmers and fruit growers.

A CURIOUS TYPE OF WIND ENGINE.

More recently several large irrigation companies have been successfully launched, most of them building at the same time a great beet sugar factory, where the product of their irrigated lands might find a quick and profitable market. The Rocky Ford factory produced last year more than 15,000 tons of sugar, and every year increases its capacity.

In southern California irrigation, and irrigation alone, has raised the value of some lands from $2 an acre to as many thousands of dollars an acre. Even in districts where rainfall is normal it is declared that a modified system of irrigation would be immensely profitable, because it would enable the farmer to avoid the effects of the prolonged droughts and other abnormal weather conditions.

"FADDY" MEALS IN LONDON.

"Flower Breakfasts" a Popular Form of Entertainment in London.

The fad of "flower breakfasts," which threatened to become a popular form of entertainment in London, is said to have failed of popular approval among the "smsrty" people, and so probably will not trouble us on this side of the water. For three seasons a certain "set" has been trying to make them "go." The first season they were popular, the next less so, and the past season hardly were heard of. These breakfasts consisted of dishes made entirely of flowers. Salad made from the blossoms of the nasturtium alternated with caper jelly and myrtle flower soup at these repasts. Usually the flowers of a peculiar species of pumpkin vine constituted the principal dish. They were yellow in color, fleshy and about the size of a silver dollar. These edible blossoms were picked before the petals were fully opened, baked or stewed in fresh milk and flavored with cloves, which, as every one knows or should know, are the unexpanded flowers of an evergreen plant growing in the East Indian archipelago. The feast was finished off with a plentiful supply of candied rose leaves, violets, etc. It was an extremely aesthetic sort of meal, but not filling enough to meet with popular approval. After one of these breakfasts the guests generally went out and got something to eat.

Dinners of sauces have met with more favor than the flower breakfasts and are not infrequently given by epicures searching for new gastronomic sensations. One of the most successful of these sauce dinners was given by a member of a "swell" London club not long ago. The soup was represented by gravy sauce, and in lieu of fish, oyster and lobster sauces were handed around. Then came egg sauce and bread sauce, and for dessert there was brandy sauce. This last course is probably what saved the lives of the guests and host, for they all survived and pronounced the dinner a success. It really seems as if the giver of the dinner should have included in his bill of fare Worcestershire, tomato catsup and tabasco. A dinner was given at the Hotel Cecil in London the other day at which everything served began with "c." There were "clear" soup, chickens, chops, claret, champagne, coffee, cutlets, carrots, custards, champignons, curry, currants and cucumbers, besides many more articles of food beginning with "c."—New York Press.

The Cleansing Ball.

The following is an excellent cleansing ball to prepare for use on clothes and woollen fabrics generally, says "What to Eat." Dissolve a bit of white soap the size of an egg in enough alcohol to cover it. Mix in the yolks of three eggs and a tablespoonful of oil of turpentine. Work in Fuller's earth till it becomes stiff enough to form into balls and let them dry. When you wish to remove a stain, moisten the fabric with a little water, rub the ball well in, let it dry and brush off the powder. There are three classes of stains these balls cannot remove—ink, iron rust and fruit stains. For ink, pour over milk, and as it becomes discolored absorb it with blotting paper. Then wash out well with tepid water and castile soap. If on white goods, lemon juice and common salt, often renewed, and placed in the sun, are most efficient.

Troubles of a Lady Lecturer.

A certain lady lecturer tells two good stories against herself. "I was on tour through the provinces," she says. "One night, as I appeared on the platform in a small town, the chairman introduced me to my audience in the following way: 'You have heard of Mr. Gladstone, the grand old man. Let me introduce to you the grand old woman.' This was intended as a sincere compliment. On another occasion a bluff old farmer, who boasted of his ability to look on all sides of a question, announced me as follows: 'This lady's come here to talk about her rights,' he said. 'She's hired the hall, and so she's got a right to be here, and if any of you don't like what she's got to say, you've got an equal right to walk out in the middle on't.'"

In Round Figures.

Not long ago a lady was giving a lecture, says the London Answers. Her subject was the human figure, and the requirements in the way of proportion, for beauty. She herself was of generous—one may say unwieldy—size, and her manner was supercilious and lofty. She was trying to demonstrate the relative sizes of the limbs as they really ought to be. "For example," she said, "twice round my thumb"—she held it up—"once round my wrist; twice round my wrist, once round my neck; twice round my neck, once round my waist." Here she paused, and a shrill voice from the audience exclaimed: "Twice round your waist, once round Hyde park!" The lecturer hastily passed on to another branch of the subject.

Presumption.

"That isn't the car that man wanted to take." "He ran hard enough for it. How do you know it isn't the one he wanted?" "Because he managed to catch it."—Philadelphia Record.

POISON OF INSECTS.

DANGER FROM THIS SOURCE MUCH OVERESTIMATED.

Bee Stings May Cause Death, but the Fatal Cases Are Rare—Formic Acid is Poison of Ants, Wasps and Bees.

An interesting article on insect poisons is contributed to the New York Sun by Dr. L. O. Howard, chief entomologist of the United States Department of Agriculture. Dr. Howard points out that the danger from this source is very generally over-estimated in the popular mind. Everywhere among civilized people, as well as among uncivilized races, there exists superstitions regarding perfectly harmless insects. For example, the common dragon fly or devil's darning needles, are feared very generally by English-speaking races and children in this country think that these harmless insects will sew up their ears. Much of the common superstition about spider bites is totally unfounded, while the stories about scorpions and centipedes are grossly exaggerated. The effects of intense nervous fear, following a physical injury of an insignificant nature, are well understood by the medical profession. Hence it is not difficult to understand cases of severe nervous prostration, and even death following a sting or a bite from a comparatively harmless insect. The truly poisonous insects, that is, insects which possess poison gland and secrete poison with their bites or stings, belong in the main to two classes. Either they sting for protection, as with the bees, certain ants and certain wasps, or they use the poison to assist in the capture of their prey, as with the digger wasps, certain pedaceous bugs and all spiders. The mosquito belongs to a third class, and the purpose of the poison which it injects is not fully understood. Insect poisons, as a rule, were undoubtedly developed for use against other insects. Therefore, they are small in quantity, and, generally speaking, are serious in their effects only upon other insects. The exact nature of the poison is not well understood. In ants, wasps and bees it contains essentially of formic acid. Cases are on record of the death of human beings as a result of the injection of poison with the sting of bees and wasps, as well as with the bites of spiders. Such cases, however, are rare. A number of cases are on record of death from a multitude of bee stings. I know of a case, well authenticated, of the death of a middle-aged woman from a single bee sting. The physical condition of the patient undoubtedly had much to do with the fatal result. Another case of similar nature came under the observation of Dr. William Frew of England, in 1896. The patient, a young lady of 23, was stung on the neck, just behind the angle of the jaw, by a wasp, the sting of which was extracted by a servant. A solution of arnica was applied and, as the patient felt ill, she was assisted to bed. She complained immediately of a horrible feeling of choking and of pains in the abdomen. The neck swelled rapidly, agonizing, and she died fifteen minutes after being stung. Dr. Frew saw the body about two hours after death, and found the neck and lower part of the body much swollen. The tongue was swollen to such an extent that it filled the mouth. The young lady was of a nervous, excitable temperament, and had shown symptoms of weak action of the heart.

The stings of bees and wasps have very different effects on different people, and without doubt persons who habitually handle bees become immune to their poisons. Herbert H. Smith, who is a professional collector of insects, catches bees and wasps in his net and removes them with his thumb and forefinger. In his case, the forefinger is stung so often that it has become thoroughly inoculated, and stings upon this finger produce no effect, but if he is stung on the back of the neck or in some other part of the body the sensation is as painful as it is with another person. Authentic cases of death from spider bite are rare, although cases reported are of almost weekly occurrence. I have investigated more than a hundred such reports in the United States in the past ten years. In many cases the reported facts were entirely erroneous; in the majority of cases no spider was seen to inflict the bite; there were almost no cases in which the spider was seen to bite and was saved for examination.

A New Milk Adulterant.

A new milk adulterant has been discovered by the dairy inspectors in use in Minnesota. It is called viscogen, and is composed of sugar, lime and water. It has the effect of making milk appear richer than it is, as the lactic acid in the milk turns the lime to a thick, white substance that assimilates with the milk and improves its looks while it does not injure the taste. It is not considered injurious to health.—Philadelphia Times.

Discontented Cinderella.

Cinder's Fairy Godmother—Why, what's this? You crying, Cinderella? And after all I've done for you, you discontented girl! Didn't I give you rich clothes and a coach and six? Cinderella—That's just it. When you gave me the coach and six, you led me to believe I'd be the biggest thing at the ball, and when I got there I found four of the others had automobiles!—Harper's Bazar.

"WORTH MORE THAN SILVER.

Colorado's Fields of Alfalfa Exceed Her Mines in Value.

Great as is the wealth of the state of Colorado in silver she has a far more valuable product in the royal purple alfalfa that supplies fodder for the innumerable herds that roam the plains and feed in the valleys. Last year the value of the alfalfa crop was placed at $10,000,000, yet that does not represent its contributory worth. In 1862 the introduction of this grass into the state solved the problem of forage, which up to that time had puzzled the pioneers, who had not been able to raise successfully any other form of forage. Alfalfa made possible the great stock growing industry of the state. Last year the aggregate number of horses, catttle, hogs and sheep, according to the assessors' returns, was 4,000,000, valued at $45,000,000. Excepting the range sheep and cattle and some horses in the cities alfalfa formed the greater part of the food of all these animals. Thus dairying, a new but rapidly developing industry, depends on the alfalfa. The great grain farms and potato ranches need this product as well. Alfalfa is peerless as a soil renovator and enricher. Its long roots, penetrating to a depth below the surface that other plants cannot reach, gather the needed elements and, decaying, liberate them for the benefit of future crops. The Colorado farmer has learned that rotating crops of wheat and alfalfa make the average yield of wheat in Colorado 25 bushels to the acre, while the average for the whole country is less than 14 bushels. The same rotation has produced the famous Greeley potato, as inimitable in its way as the Rocky Ford melon. The Colorado stock raiser has discovered that cattle may be fattened at home without sending them to corn states, and that alfalfa produced beef, not tallow. He has discovered that pigs turned into the alfalfa patch during the summer are ready for market in the fall, and that "alfalfa mutton" brings the top price in the east. The small rancher knows that his chickens, geese, ducks and Belgian hares are finer for the alfalfa that forms part of their daily food, and that his alfalfa honey equals, if it does not excel, the delicious white sage honey of California.

AN ECCENTRIC DINER.

How a French Millionaire Spent His Fortune at the Paris Cafes.

Paris is par excellence the city of gourmets and cranks, and many a story concerning them has added to the gaiety of the nations. Here is one of the latest, told by a well-known French head waiter. One of the regular customers of a famous Parisian restaurant used to be a short, thin, shy and shabbily dressed man, whose name no one knew, but who gave out that he was a butter dealer, for which reason he was called the butterman at the restaurant in question. He ate next to nothing, but his soup tureen, filled with a soup specially prepared for him, was always put before him. He took a few spoonful and had it taken away. Next came a whole fillet of beef, from which he cut the tiniest slice. Then followed four quail or a large chicken, of which he ate one mouthful together with two lettuce leaves and one radish. His dessert was four grapes—never a single one more—and a cup of coffee. A bottle of the best claret and another of the best champaign was served with the repast, but he only touched his lips with a drop of them, and let them go. He took two of these meals a day, and the price for each meal was 120 francs. But this was not all. Every time the butterman got up from his extraordinary meal he gave 40 francs to the head waiter, who put his food on his plate, since the guest did not like to handle spoons or dishes; 20 francs to the waiter, 10 francs to the lady cashier and 5 francs to the porter. Thus each meal came to 200 francs. The head waiter of the restaurant often did slight errands for him, buying his cigars, etc., and took them to the Grand Hotel, where the butterman lived. The little old man would then open the drawer of a wardrobe filled with heaps of banknotes of from 100 to 600 francs in value and with an enormous mass of gold pieces. "Pay yourself," said the owner, and the head waiter did so, putting the bills before his patron, who never deigned to look at them. One day the mysterious millionaire went away and was never seen again.—Westminster Gazette.

Original Home of Golf.

The scotsman contends that golf is a Scotch sport, to which poetical reference was made in Adamson's "Muses Threnodie," published at Perth as long ago as 1638. The terms used in the sport are for the most part Scotch. But the Dutch assert that it was first played in Holland on the ice, and before 1638 the Dutch poet Bredero described how "the golfer, with ice spurs on, stands ready to smile with ashen club weighted with lead, or his Scottish cleek of loaded box." But while this may be the earliest poetical reference to the game, it does not show that Holland is the original home of golf. The reference to the "Scottish cleek" seems at first sight to point rather to Scotland.—Baltimore Sun.

America Leads.

In consequence of the great demand for cotton goods, the United States consumed more raw cotton than Great Britain, which has always held supremacy in this industry, just as Hostetter's Stomach Bitters has been the best family medicine and which has retained its prestige for over fifty years. Today the Bitters is used in almost every home. It cures dyspepsia, indigestion, constipation and biliousness, also purifies the blood, calms the nerves, and builds up the entire system.

Misapplied Advice.

Out of that childish dependence that maternal care had encouraged Mamie had come to her mother for help in the doing of some little act that she should have readily done herself.

"You shouldn't annoy me for assistance in such trivial things at that," remarked her mother; "it's time you learned to help yourself."

"I have learned, ma," returned Mamie, "but I don't know just when it's right to do it: don't you remember how you scolded me the other day when I helped myself to preserves?"—Exchange.

How to Plant Bulbs.

The soil for bulbs grown in pots should be a rich, mellow one, made up of garden loam, sand and old cow manure in equal parts. Work it over until you have a mass of fine material. Prepare it before the time comes to pot your bulbs, so that there need be no delay in planting them on their arrival. It is quite important that all bulbs should go into the ground as soon as possible after they are received, as the moisture which they contain evaporates rapidly, and with it goes much of their vitality. Leave them exposed to the air and light for two or three weeks and they will be so weakened that the flowers they produce will be few and inferior.—"New" Lippincott.

Mrs. Madison's Case.

Polk City, Ia., Oct. 14th.—For over ten years Mrs. Elizabeth P. Madison, a respected lady of this place, has suffered most severely with Kidney trouble, complicated with derangements of the bowels and liver. Rheumatism, another painful result of deranged Kidneys, added its tortures to her burden of pain.

Treatments and medicines without number were tried: physicians soon exhausted their skill, but all to no purpose.

At this stage of the case a treatment of Dodd's Kidney Pills was resorted to and the results were simply miraculous, from the very first box an improvement was noticed, and the continued treatment resulted in a complete cure.

This remarkable cure created a decided sensation in the neighborhood, because of the complications of the case as well as its severity and apparent hopelessness.

Upon investigation Dodd's Kidney Pills are found to be the only remedy that has ever cured Bright's Disease, Diabetes or Dropsy, and these hitherto incurable diseases are readily conquered by this remarkable remedy.

IT CAME TOO LATE

ORDER TELLING OF CEVERA AT SANTIAGO WAS TWO WEEKS LATE.

SCHLEY LOCATES FLEET HIMSELF

FACT PROVED BEYOND DOUBT BEFORE THE COURT OF INQUIRY.

RAYNER AND LEMLY HAVE TILT

JUDGE ADVOCATE TWICE REPRIMANDED BY ADMIRAL DEWEY.

Washington, Oct. 15.—It was proven beyond question at the court of inquiry Saturday that Schley did not receive positive orders from Sampson to go to Santiago until June 10, and that he had no definite information from Sampson as to the presence of the Spanish fleet in that harbor until that date.

Schley himself had secured this information on May 29, and had been at Santiago two weeks before he received Sampson's positive order.

This was the most important development at the short session of the court of inquiry, which was marked by wrangling and bad feeling from end to end. There was a serious tilt between the attorneys, Capt. Lemly charging Mr. Rayner with making inaccurate statements.

Another important fact brought out was that there was a delay of thirty-six hours on the part of Sampson in sending to Schley what was believed to be reliable information regarding the presence of the Spaniards in Santiago. Early on the morning of May 20 Sampson received from Capt. Allen, the signal officer, information which according to the testimony of Lieut. Staunton of the New York, that the Spaniards were in Santiago. Sampson waited until night to confirm the report. The night confirmation was received through Capt. Allen, but for unexplained reasons this information was not started to Schley until the evening of May 21. Even Sampson did not communicate positive information on this point to Schley, but instructed the latter to be sure the Spaniards were not in Cienfuegos before leaving for Santiago.

Led Sampson to Believe,

Admiral Dewey had a bad day with the lawyers, and found it necessary to call them to account. Judge Advocate Lemly was reprimanded twice. He was in bad humor and flew into a fury when Attorney Rayner sought to introduce a chart concerning the speed of the ships the day of the battle. Capt. Lemly accused Mr. Rayner of making inaccurate statements. The leading counsel for Schley is a Maryland man, and his wrath arose at the charge, but he controlled himself well, and, addressing the court, he declared that he had practiced thirty years at the bar and never before had been made against his veracity. Mr. Rayner grimly hinted that trouble would follow if Lemley repeated the offense. Admiral Dewey then ruled in favor of Rayner, which made the judge advocate grow as angry as his opponent. When Admiral Dewey was about to administer the oath to the witness who followed Staunton Judge Advocate Lemly was still grumbling.

"Please be silent," commanded Dewey, pausing as he held the Bible on which the witness must place his hand as he pledges himself to tell the truth. The admiral considers taking the oath a solemn ceremony, and brooks no disorder while it is being done. He had got half-way through the long form when Lemley resumed his whispering. Admiral Dewey stopped short and his eyes burned fiercely as he again enjoined silence. Then he commenced all over again and finally had the witness properly sworn. An adjournment was taken until Monday.

BURN TO DEATH WHILE ASLEEP.

Quarrel at a Dance Ends in a Terrible Tragedy.

Topeka, Kan., Oct. 15.—As a result of a quarrel at a dance in Lane, a little town in Pottawattamie county, Saturday morning two men were burned to death, one is at the point of death from an injury, and the other is hopelessly insane. A dance was held there which was attended by a large number of the rougher young men of the county. About 1 o'clock in the morning a general fight started. When it was over it was found that John Teehan had been struck on the head with a blunt instrument and fatally injured. When it became known how seriously Teehan was hurt the other dancers scattered. One of them, Eugene Cronan, a real estate agent, went to his office to sleep and was accompanied by J. McDonald. During the early hours of the morning the office was set on fire by some of the dancers and the two men were burned to death. The father of Cronan has gone hopelessly and violently insane.

READY FOR FIGHT

COLOMBIANS AND REBELS PREPARING FOR THE FINAL STRUGGLE.

BOTH SIDES MEAN BUSINESS

BUSY GATHERING MEN AND AMMUNITION FOR THE CONFLICT.

TIRED OF GUERRILLA WARFARE

COLON AND PANAMA ARE REPORTED CROWDED WITH SOLDIERS.

New Orleans, La., Oct. 14. — Steamers arriving from Bocas del Toro bring the news that the Colombian government troops and revolutionists on the isthmus are preparing for the final struggle.

Both sides are getting all the arms and ammunition they need. The German steamer Valencia reached Bocas with 30,000 Mauser rifles and a million rounds of ammunition recently purchased in Europe by Colombia, and a number of other cargoes are expected. Most of the supplies and munitions of war for the insurgents are going through Costa Rica. The head of the insurgent government is at present at San Jose, the capital of Costa Rica, and is finding little difficulty in getting the guns and ammunition smuggled over the frontier, which is a dense swamp. The indications are that both sides are tired of the guerrilla warfare which has been going on for several months, and are Enlisting New Men.

Colon and Panama are reported crowded with soldiers. The Colombian government has secured an American captain and first officer for the cruiser Gen. Ponzon, from which they expect good results.

The Ola, the vessel seized by the revolutionists, and which caused the government great anxiety, has been finally captured, having been found in Crawl bay, slightly disabled. The government has seized boats belonging to natives and hired several boats belonging to foreign firms for patrol duty along the coast. A boat belonging to the German firm of Kroesman, Braden & Co. was seized and sent to Colon a few days ago. The owner, Mr. Braden, objected, whereupon he was arrested and also sent to Colon as a prisoner. The matter has been laid before the German consul, and it is thought that the Colombian officials will yield rather than make complications with Germany.

MINNESOTA UNITARIANS.

They Will Meet in Luverne During the Present Month.

Luverne, Minn., Oct. 14. — The fifteenth annual session of the Minnesota Unitarian conference will be held with Unity Congregational society, Luverne, Minn., Tuesday and Wednesday, Oct. 29 and 30. ROYAL LOVE MATCH.

Archduchess Elizabeth Will Wed Prince Otto Windisch-Graetz.

Vienna, Oct. 14.—The consent of Emperor Francis Joseph having been obtained, announcement was made to-day of the betrothal of Archduchess Elizabeth, daughter of the late Crown Prince Rudolf, to Prince Otto Windisch-Graetz.

His majesty, whose permission was only secured after much persuasion, will formally announce the engagement to-morrow at a family dinner at Schoenbrunn.

Prince Otto is a lieutenant of Uhlans. He belongs to an ancient but poor family, and while the marriage will not be regarded as morganatic, the archduchess will certainly wed beneath her. Their acquaintance was made at a court ball two years ago. It is quite a love match. The archduchess, who has refused to marry any but the man of her own choice, is beautiful and is eighteen years of age. Prince Otto is ten years older.

AFTER POINTERS.

Party of English Railway Officials Come to America.

New York, Oct. 14—On the White Star liner Celtic, which arrived to-day, was a party of English railway men, who come here to spend a month studying American railway methods and inspecting systems. They are George S. Gibb, general manager of the Northeastern railway; Norman D. McDonald, T. M. Newell and Wilson Dorsell, directors of the line. Speaking of their plans, Mr. Gibb said:

"We intend to inspect American railways and will go as far West as Chicago. We will study the handling of freight and the system of signals. Of course, until we have been about and seen things I cannot state whether we will adopt any of the features of the American system."

EIGHT HEATS ARE REQUIRED

MOST REMARKABLE EVENT ON THE TROTTING TURF IN YEARS.

FURIOUS DRIVE TO THE WIRE

ALL COME DOWN THE STRETCH UNDER VIGOROUSLY PLIED WHIPS.

Lexington, Ky., Oct. 12.—After trying for seven years Ed Gears yesterday landed a Transylvania stake. Urging Onward Silver, tired from seven fast heats, to his top speed, following one of the most sensational drives through the stretch in the recollection of veterans, he captured the first money in the $6,000 event. The last finish, as nearly all previous had been, was thrilling. Only a short neck measured the victory. After the fifth heat all save Onward Silver and Chain shot, with two heats each to their credit, and Susie J., with one heat, had retired to their stables.

The son of Onward was favorite at $50, with a field of nine. He was expected to win the next heat, and the race, but he was unable to overtake Susie J., who won by less than a neck. The mare led by distances varying from one to three length around the circle. When were driven onto the track for the final test twilight was settling. The grandstand and to the fence was packed with thousands who looked over into a field crowded with vehicles, and the excitement was intense. It was the first time in several years that they were to see the great fixture of the meeting, and the trotting turf as well, decided on the same day begun. Onward Silver was still favorite at $50, field at $25. They were sent off to a good start on the second attempt. Chain Shot led by half a length. Susie J. took the lead at the turn, with Chain Shot and Onward Silver closely following. At the quarter Susie J. had increased her lead to a length and a half, Chain Shot two length in front of Silver. The distance had been covered in 34 seconds. Two lengths separated them at the half, reached in 1:06 flat. Onward Silver then began to gain. He was

Three Lengths to the Good of Chain Shot at the three-quarter pole, which was passed in 1:40. Then began the race home. Chain Shot spurted and the space between all three decreased. Susie J. maintained the lead, but Onward Silver was doing slightly faster work as they passed the distance flag. Then came a furious drive to the wire, all three of the pilots whipping. Twenty yards from the wire Onward Silver was on even terms with the roan mare, and as he reached the wire her nose was at the throatlatch. Chain Shot was three length behind. The time was 2:13, the same as in the previous heat. When the race was called there were nine starters. All went to the five-heat limit save J. T., distanced for running in the second, and All Right, withdrawn after the third.

BULLER COMPLAINS.

Says the British Newspapers Have Been Too Severe on Him.

London, Oct. 12.—The wholly unsatisfactory situation in South Africa continues to call out the most severe criticism. Lord Kitchener wires that Gen. Botha has crossed the Pivaan river, twenty miles north of Vryheid, which means that he has again escaped the British cordon.

Gen. Buller, in a speech, complained of the general criticism, especially in the newspapers, of himself. He admitted he had advised Gen. Sir George White that it would possibly be necessary to surrender Ladysmith, but bearing in mind all the circumstances of the case, he was quite prepared to let the public judge of the justifiability of the newspaper attacks.

TROUBLE AVOIDED.

New Ameer of Afghanistan Is Accepted by His Brothers.

Allahabad, Oct. 12.—The government of India has issued the following:

"Reliable information states that Habid Ulla was accepted by his two brothers and the notables, and a declaration made on Oct. 4 in the name of the new ameer."

The Pioneer points out that the chances of complications in Afghanistan are much less than when the treasury at Cabul was empty, the army poorly equipped and Russia's Afghan border not clearly demarcated. The late ameer, Abdur Rahman Kahn, safeguarded the succession by allying Habid Ullah in marriage with all the leading notables.

Ryan Loses on a Foul.

Kansas City, Oct. 12.—George Green of San Francisco got the decision over Tommy Ryan in the sixth round of a bout at a local club last night. Ryan was the aggressor and had slightly the better of the fight, which was hotly contested, until the sixth round, when the referee gave the decision to Green, disqualifying Ryan for striking Green while on his knees.

Given Death Penalty.

Cartersville, Ga., Oct. 12.—Will Jackson, a negro, was yesterday given the death penalty for attempting to assault a white woman. The Barlow guards were on duty around the court house during the trial to prevent a threatened lynching.

Mistaken for Mud Hens.

La Crosse, Wis., Oct. 12.—T. Bollrud and F. Smith, aged fifteen years, were mistaken for mud hens in Rice lake in the high weeds and filled with shot, but their injuries are not fatal.

EASY VICTORY FOR GOPHERS.

Minnesota Scores Three Touchdowns and a Safety Against the Sturdy Nebraskans.

Minneapolis, Oct. 15. — Before an enthusiastic crowd of nearly 10,000 rooters Minnesota Saturday showed its ability to play football by defeating Nebraska university 19 to 0. Such a decisive victory was unexpected, and the much-heralded Nebraskans were a doleful lot when the last whistle sounded.

For the first ten minutes Nebraska had decidedly the best of the play and Minnesota seemed nervous. Then the Gophers braced wonderfully, and it soon became apparent that Minnesota had the better team. The tandem and guards back formations played by the Gophers proved effective. The Carlisle Indian, Rogers, whom Nebraska protested, was in the game and attempted three goals from the field, all of which failed by slight margins.

Minnesota first scored a safety by blocking an attempted punt which Nebraska was forced to make on her five-yard line. After that the Gophers took a brace and forced the ball to the three-yard line, only to lose it on downs. Three times did the Gophers slowly force the ball from the center of the field to within the ten-yard line, and then lose it.

In the second half Minnesota started in with a rush and soon had the ball on Nebraska's five-yard line, and Rogers was then pushed over for the second touchdown, ten minutes later Fee again carrying the ball over the line. With but five minutes to play it looked for the first time as if the Cornhuskers would score. Nebraska kicked to Dobie, who fumbled, and the Nebraskans regained the ball. They had soon forced it to the Gophers' twenty-five-yard line, but were there held for downs just before the whistle blew.

ADAMS' SUCCESSOR.

No Action Will Be Taken Until January by University Regents.

Madison, Wis., Oct. 15.—No meeting has yet been held of the committee appointed by the university regents to consider President Adams' resignation, and ex-Senator Vilas, who is a member of the committee, says no action has yet been taken toward the selection of President Adams' successor, and that nothing is likely to be done for some time. No proposition, Col. Vilas says, has been sent to any one in regard to the matter. Gossip, however, is busy in discussing the new presidency. There are distinct movements on foot in favor of Prof. J. W. Jenks of Cornell and State Superintendent L. D. Harvey by their friends. There are also several who think the presidency should go to Dean E. A. Birge, but considerable opposition to this comes from other members of the faculty. Prof. E. J. Turner also has many supporters. Nothing is likely to be done by the regents before the January meeting.

SMOKE IN THEIR TENT.

Two Old Soldiers Burned, One Perhaps Fatally.

La Crosse, Wis., Oct. 15.—Henry Hudson and John Benson, two old soldiers, aged sixty-one and sixty years, respectively, were nearly burned to death while camping near Capoli Bluff, only a few miles from here. They were asleep in their tent, but previously had been smoking, and it is thought sparks fell in the straw in the bottom of the tent. Both men were seriously burned, and Benson may die.

Muddle Settled.

Bemidji, Minn., Oct. 15.—The auditor muddle is at last settled. David Sylvester, originally appointed by the county commissioners to fill the vacancy made by the resignation of Auditor Haner has won out in the fight. Theodore Welte, who was later appointed and fired out of the office by an injunction issued by Judge McClenahan, decided to drop the fight, so the board decided to reappoint Sylvester and withdraw all legal action against him.

Wisconsin Teachers Adjourn.

Oshkosh, Wis., Oct. 15.—The meeting of the Northeastern Wisconsin Teachers' association came to a close here Saturday afternoon. Appleton was chosen as the next place of meeting and the following officers were elected: President, R. W. Pringle, Appleton; vice president, C. O. Marsh, Antigo; secretary, Miss Elizabeth Waters, Fond du Lac; treasurer, W. O. Brown, Green Bay; reporter, O. J. Schuster, Neenah; railroad, C. E. Carr, Clintonville.

Farmers Are Fined.

New Ulm, Minn., Oct. 15. — Three farmers, Peter Hengel, John Hauser and John Green, living near Essig, were arrested on complaint of the state dairy and food commissioner, charged with not keeping their cans in proper condition. Inspection of the Essig creamery showed a filthy condition of the pipe and the manager was fined $30.40 for disregarding the law. The three farmers were fined $10 each.

Lands for Settlers.

Yankton, S. D., Oct. 15.—The treaty secured with the Rosebud Sioux Indians in Inspector James McLaughlin, through the agency of Senator Gamble, provides for the cession of all of Gregory county not already platted. The county contains 520,000 acres; that included in the treaty amounts to 410,000 acres. It will probably be opened to settlement next spring.

Guilty of Petty Swindle.

Crookston, Minn., Oct. 15. — O. P. Hinds represented himself as a roadmaster on the Great Northern and furnished transportation to St. Paul to J. M. Nelson of Warren for $4.10. He gave Nelson an order on the ticket agent which read: "Please give the man a ticket to San Pall." Hinds and his accomplice, Jim Murphy, each paid $10 and costs in justice court.

Shoe Factory for Red Wing.

Red Wing, Minn., Oct. 15.—S. B. Foot & Co., have just closed a deal for the erection of a large shoe factory in Red Wing. The company proposes to erect a four-story brick building 40x100 feet. Work will be commenced at once.

Three Years at Stillwater.

Kasson, Minn., Oct. 15.—Sheriff Tucker took to Stillwater George Williamson, who burglarized a store near this place. He was sentenced to three years. He has been wanted by Pinkerton's men for some time.

CABLE QUESTION

ATTORNEY GENERAL KNOX MAKES A DECISION IN THE CASE.

PERMIT IS NOT NECESSARY

COMPANIES MAY LAND THEIR CABLES ON ANY AMERICAN TERRITORY.

LAW GIVES ALL NECESSARY POWER

GOVERNMENT CABLE MAY BE LAID TO HAWAII AND PHILIPPINES.

Washington, Oct. 12.—Attorney General Knox did not present an opinion as to the rights of the Postal Telegraph Cable company to landing privileges in the Philippines, but he has reached a conclusion that under the law there is no power to prevent any telegraph company incorporated under the laws of this country from landing its cables on any American territory.

The law is clear and the attorney general believes that the telegraph companies do not need a permit from either the executive or legislative authority. The law on this question was passed by congress in July, 1866.

In the opinion of the attorney general this law grants all the power any cable company may need to lay a cable between the United States, Hawaii and the Philippines, for these islands are territories of the United States. The company has the right to land its cables in these islands and there is no necessity for the present to grant permits. The president will therefore leave the company to deal with the situation under the law. He will take no action on the application for a permit to land cables.

Government Cable.

This law does not, however, prevent congress from providing for a government cable between this country and the Philippines via Hawaii. There is a strong sentiment in congress in favor of a government cable and efforts will be made to enact the necessary legislation at the next session. This sentiment in favor of a government cable is the real stumbling block in the way of the cable company proceeding under the old law and this was also the reason for the application for a permit from the president as such a permit would be regarded as a special concession binding on the government not to construct a government cable line.

Attorney General Knox will prepare a written opinion for the president to the effect that the laws makes unnecessary any permit.

SEX, NATIVITY AND COLOR.

How the Population of the United States Is Now Divided.

Washington, Oct. 12.—The final census report on the population of the United States by sex, nativity and color was issued to-day. It shows that the males numbered 39,059,242, or 51.2 per cent of the total population in 1900. The increase of 13,233,631 in total population since 1890 is made up of 6,744,179 males and 6,489,452 females, an increase of 20.9 of males and 21.1 of females. The foreign born element have increased only 12.4 per cent and the native born population 22.5 per cent since 1890. As to color and race the population in 1900 comprises 66,990,802 white persons and 9,312,585 colored persons, the latter comprising 8,840,789 persons of negro descent. The colored element as a whole shows an increase of 17.8 per cent since 1890.

CHARGED WITH MURDER.

Brutal Killing of an Old Couple in Illinois.

Grand Forks, N. Dak., Oct. 12. — Daniel Fauke was arrested here to-day charged with the commission of a brutal murder in Illinois a year ago. The story told by Deputy Sheriff Price of Freeport, Ill., is as follows:

In August, 1900, William Huffman, who lives near Freeport, sold a farm for $40,000 cash, and was said to be keeping the money about his house. On the evening of Aug. 21, a man who is said to have been Fauke asked of a neighbor the way to Huffman's, and on being directed went in that direction. He never reached there but in the morning the bodies of John Bobb and his wife were found in their farm house literally hacked to pieces with an axe. Fauke was never seen in the neighborhood again, and he is believed to have mistaken the place for that of Huffman.

The people who were killed were inoffensive old people, the man being nearly deaf and blind. They had no money, except about $60, which they had saved up for funeral expenses. This was gone and the premises had been ransacked. Fauke was traced to Pipestone, Minn., where he went under the name of Austin, and from there to Fargo, Larimore and Grand Forks.

N. P. PASSENGER DITCHED.

Six Coaches Leave Track but No One Is Injured.

Butte, Mont., Oct. 12. — The North Coast Limited train, westbound on the Northern Pacific, was ditched at a small station called Dempsey, about twenty-eight miles west of Butte, at 8:30 o'clock last night, but, according to information received in Butte, no one was injured. Six crowded passenger coaches left the track, but remained upright. The engine, baggage car and observation car remained on the track. The amount of damage has not been learned, but the railroad officials insist that no one was at all injured. The wreck was caused by a lot of bridge timbers having been piled too near the track, and were struck by the train. A train was sent from Butte to bring the passengers back, and the eastbound north coast was sent by the way of Helena.

NORTH DAKOTA SYNOD.

Session Begins at Grand Forks With Large Attendance.

Grand Forks, N. D., Oct. 12.—The Presbyterian synod of North Dakota opened with an attendance of upwards of seventy-five ministers and laymen. More delegates arrived by last evening's train, bringing the number up to over the hundred mark.

Rev. Thomas Dougan presided at the opening session. Rev. T. D. Acheson of Park River was elected moderator, and Rev. R. H. Meyers of Emerado temporary secretary. A sermon was delivered by Rev. J. S. Onion of Inkster.

At the afternoon session a report was received from Rev. A. C. Brown, synodical missionary, showing that much progress had been made.

The evening meeting was devoted to an address by Rev. Dr. Hasley of New York. He described his work in various parts of the world during the past ten years.

Women Elect Officers.

Des Moines, Oct. 12.—The national convention of the P. E. O. society, a secret organization for women, concluded its three-day session in this city this afternoon by the election of the following officers: President, Miss Carrie Hapeman, Minden, Neb.; vice presidents, M. Lue Weber of Knoxville, Iowa, and Anna Wilkins of Des Moines, Iowa; corresponding secretary, Anna Cadwallar Hyatt of Detroit, Mich.; recording secretary, Ella Moore Spencer of Oskaloosa, Iowa; treasurer, Emma R. Pratt of St. Louis; organizer, Dora Hallevek of Monroe City, Mo.

LA FOLLETTE IMPROVING.

Doctor Says He Will Soon Be Able to Attend to Business.

Milwaukee, Oct. 11.—Gov. La Follette has left the executive mansion and taken up temporary quarters at the farm of Dr. Philip Fox, ten miles from Madison. It is said that he will remain in the country about a week, after which, if he gains sufficient strength, he will go to French Lick Springs. Dr. Fox says the governor's condition is rapidly improving, "so that he will in a short time be able to resume his official duties." In the meantime Secretary Murphy will occupy the executive office until there is a change of program. Lieut. Gov. Stone has received no intimation from either the governor or his secretary that his presence in Madison will be desirable during the absence of the governor. Gov. La Follette's removal to the Fox farm is his first change of scene for four months. It is not known just when he left Madison.

TRADITION VIOLATED.

Senior Class of Wisconsin University Elects a Girl President.

Madison, Wis., Oct. 11.—The senior class at the university violated all tradition by electing a woman, Miss Nora McCue of Madison, as president. It is the first time in the history of the institution that a girl has been elected president of a class. Miss McCue is a brilliant and popular student, of marked literary talent, and has had many college honors. Her opponent for the honor was George H. Lohr of Milwaukee, a popular society man of the class. The class also went further in its innovation by electing Miss Mary Swain of Milwaukee sergeant-at-arms and Miss Mary Wright of Petersburg, Ill., pipe custodian, and decided to wear the cap and gown the entire year.

THE WRONG MAN.

South Dakota Sheriff Has Long Journey for Nothing.

Sioux Falls, S. D., Oct. 11.—Sheriff Huston yesterday returned from Goshen, Ind., having in custody a clairvoyant named Snow, who was arrested there a few days ago on suspicion of being Prof. Snow or Prof. Vance, a clairvoyant who recently, it is alleged, victimized a number of people in this city and at Omaha. Surprise was occasioned when it was discovered, after the prisoner had been inspected by several who knew Snow well, that he was not the man wanted here. Accordingly he was released and later intimated that he would institute a damage suit.

COUNTY AUDITOR MUDDLE.

Mix-Up at Bemidji Causes Considerable Trouble.

Bemidji, Minn., Oct. 11.—The auditor question is still absorbing public attention. David Sylvester, the original appointee, is holding the office by virtue of an injunction issued by Judge McClenahan against Theodore Welte, the other contestant, until their legal status is determined. Mr. Sylvester's bond has not yet been approved by the commissioners and the county treasurer has been very leary about cashing county orders with the former's signature.

IN HIS BROTHER'S ARMS.

Tragic Death of Thomas Dwyer Near Fort Dodge.

Fort Dodge, Iowa, Oct. 11.—Thomas Dwyer was instantly killed in a runaway northwest of the city. In company with his brother he was driving four horses to a heavy load of flax. While going down a steep hill some part of the harness broke and the horses ran away. The brothers jumped for their lives. Thomas called to his brother for assistance and when his brother reached him he staggered into his arms and expired.

WHEELOCK HONORED.

New Town Is Named After the Veteran Editor of the Pioneer Press.

Bemidji, Minn., Oct. 11. — The new town of W. F. Street's on the Great Northern between Solway and Shevlin has been named Wheelock, in honor of the veteran editor of the St. Paul Pioneer Press. About twenty acres have been platted and the sale of lots is now on. It is said that another town twelve miles from the junction, on the logging road now under active construction, will be laid out soon. It will be in Bear Creek township.

ASSAULTED BY TRAMP.

Young Schoolma'am Has Struggle With Unknown Man.

Luverne, Minn., Oct. 11.—Miss Violet Whittaker, a young school teacher, was attacked at her school near Sherman, S. D., by a tramp, who stabbed her in the arm while attempting to commit an assault. The tramp entered the house while Miss Whittaker was alone and attacked her with a knife. She escaped and aroused the neighbors, who searched for the assailant, but have not yet captured him.

HAD MONEY TO BURN.

Drug Clerk Stole Currency and Threw It in the Furnace.

La Crosse, Wis., Oct. 11. — Several nights ago the drug store of Hebberd & Co. was entered and $30 stolen from the till. Paul Tonnar, a clerk in the store, was arrested. He admitted having stolen the money, but just before his arrest he threw $15 in the furnace in order that it would not be found on his person.

Shortage Is Charged.

Fond du Lack, Wis., Oct. 11. — Philip Schaeffer, local agent for the Pabst Brewing company, was arrested last evening at the instance of his bondsmen, the American Surety company, New York, on a warrant charging that he is $924 short in his accounts.

Will Jump No More Trains.

Morris, Minn., Oct. 11.—The eight-year-old son of Dr. H. A. Hein, with another boy of the same age, were playing near the Great Northern railroad tracks and they attempted to get upon a moving freight train. Young Hein will lose a foot as a result.

Has Reached Forty Years.

Zumbrota, Minn., Oct. 11.—The fortieth anniversary of Rev. Brown's ministry, a Norwegian Lutheran minister, was celebrated here. There were about 500 people present.

SHE MAY BE DEAD

THE STATUS OF MISS STONE'S CASE IS NOT SO REASSURING.

HER LIFE IS IN GREAT DANGER

STATE DEPARTMENT RECEIVES INFORMATION NOT MADE PUBLIC.

BULGARIAN TROOPS ARE BUSY

THREE BATTALIONS SCOURING THE COUNTRY IN SEARCH OF BRIGANDS.

Washington, Oct. 13.—The state department has heard again by cable from United States Consul General Dickinson and Secretary of Legation Spencer Eddy touching the progress of the negotiations looking to the release of Miss Stone. None of the details were made public, however, and all that can be gathered as to the status of the case is that the conditions are by no means as reassuring as were expected.

-o-

Sofia, Oct. 12.—Three battalions of the Sixth Bulgarian infantry regiment marched through the country between Dubnitza and Samakov and searched the villages of the Riloklostern district, in one of which it was reported the brigands had concealed Miss Stone. Col. Geschof, at the head of a searching party composed of 300 bulgarian infantry, and 500 dragoons, is scouring the ranges of Dospat and the Rhodope Gelbirgen.

The American consul general at Constantinople has arrived at Sofia with an Evangelical pastor from Philippopolis as dragoman, and both are taking energetic steps with the Bulgarian government to effect Miss Stone's release.

Hallo, the reputed leader of the gang, who killed Stambouloff, has met his fate. Suspected of being associated in the capture of Miss Stone, he was shot on the frontier near Kostendil. Though $5,000 reward had been placed on his head for the murder of Stambouloff, Hallo was too influential a ruffian for the Bulgarian police to arrest.

Four additional brigands have been captured near Taccpino and a band of twenty, fully armed, were discovered near Dubnitza and driven into the mountains again.

SULTAN IS RESPONSIBLE.

Reparation for Miss Stone's Abduction Will Be Demanded.

London, Oct. 13.—After detailing the history of the abduction of Miss Stone, the Spectator remarks: "President Roosevelt and the Washington cabinet maintain justly that the sultan is responsible, and it is his misgovernment which has provoked and protected brigandage, and they intend to demand reparation from the porte. It will not be limited, we imagine, to $125,000. The porte will be required to punish the authors of the outrage; and as Turkey is sure to shuffle and America is tired of being played with, a naval demonstration is quite on the cards. The sultan will of course yield to the first show of force.

UNCLE SAM ROBBED.

Package Containing Several Thousand Dollars Is Rifled.

Buffalo, Oct. 13.—It transpired yesterday that a month ago $3,200, the receipts of the Buffalo customs house, had been stolen, evidently while in transit from Buffalo to the subtreasury in New York. The consignment of money as sent from Buffalo contained, according to Cashier Boyeson $8,200. Of this sum $7,700 was in paper and the rest in gold and silver. The money stolen was all in paper currency. The discovery of the theft was made at New York. Collector Beck said he thought the thieves were known and that their arrest was but a matter of a short time.

MURDERER WRITES A CONFESSION

Man Who Is Now Serving Time for the Crime Is Innocent.

South Bend, Ind., Oct. 13.—James Braddie, in a letter written Sept. 23 at Buffalo, N. Y., to Gov. Durbin of Indiana, claims that Louis Jaquith, who is serving a term of life imprisonment at Michigan City, Ind., for the murder of Policeman Samuel Cooper of South Bend, is not guilty. He further claims that he (Braddie) fired the fatal shots, and that he now makes confession because he is seriously ill. He has not, however, given himself up to the authorities, and states that it is not his intention to do so. Shortly after his conviction Jaquith's wife went insane.

MURDEROUS HIGHWAYMEN.

Two Masked Men Brutally Beat a Partially Demented Farm Hand.

Siddell, Ill., Oct. 13. -- Yesterday two masked men entered the home of G. D. Rowand, one mile east of this city, and finding John Orr, a partially demented farm hand, alone, beat him in a horrible manner to make him divulge the whereabouts of money. They finally succeeded in obtaining $700 and escaped. The victim's conditions is very critical.

Mexican Outlaw Convicted.

Dallas, Tex., Oct. 13.—Gregorio Cortez the Mexican outlaw, for whom an exciting man hunt was kept up for two weeks in the lower Rio Grande valley last spring was yesterday convicted at Karnes City of murdering Sheriff Morris of Karnes county and sentenced to hang.

Bank Robbery.

Beatrice, Neb., Oct. 13.—Word is received here that the State Bank of Narka, Kan., was broken into by burglars who blew open the safe and took a large sum of money. Bloodhounds were sent on a special train.

Injuries Prove Fatal.

Chicago, Oct. 13—John Keter, a prominent stockman of Galesville, Wis., died yesterday in Mercy hospital from injuries received while attempting to board a train at the Union stock yards Oct. 6.

PROF. HALL'S WORK.

The Director Discusses the Artesian Basin Survey.

Prof. C. M. Hall, of the North Dakota Agricultural college, and director of the Co-operative Survey of North Dakota, in an interview in the Fargo Forum, says:

"Having just returned from Washington, where I have been in the interest of the co-operative survey of North Dakota, which was organized last winter, I feel greatly pleased, both over the results of the year's work and the prospect for the future.

"Any undertaking of the nature of long-continued investigations, such as come under the head of this survey, requires some time to become thoroughly organized. Considering this fact, the results of the first season's work, secured with but limited assistance, are most gratifying.

"During the present year, under the hydrographic division of the work, gage stations have been established at Fargo, Grand Forks and Pembina on the Red River, and at Crookston, Minnesota, on the Red Lake River, for the purpose of keeping a record of the discharge of the streams and the daily rise and fall of the rivers at these points. There has also been determined, where possible, the exact height reached by the water during the different destructive floods of the Red river, provision being made for accurate records in the future. It is the purpose to show, by these observations, and the records of the rainfall, the percentage of our rainfall which is carried off by drainage during different seasons and under different conditions; the rapidity with which the streams act in draining the lands after heavy rains; the ability of the different portions of the stream to carry off surplus water; where the greatest danger lies in time of flood; where artificial means can best be employed for increasing the capacity of the stream; also, when it is most practical to hold water back by means of dams and reservoirs—when its influx with the Red river would cause dangerous floods. In connection with this work, systematic studies have been begun on Devils lake in the way of observing the fluctuation in height, and data are also being collected for the purpose of obtaining its past history, as near as possible, from the earliest settlers and from the traditions of the Indians. A gage will be kept in the lake hereafter, which will accurately record its rise and fall.

"Under the geographical division of the survey, the study of the stratigraphy of the water-bearing rocks or formations underlying North Dakota has been begun along the eastern part of the state, where they come nearest the surface. A careful mapping of the eastern limit of this Dakota artesian basin is being undertaken, and with very satisfactory results. This basin has been clearly shown to underlie the greater part of Cass and Richland counties, where the investigation has been pursued, and promises to be found a valuable source of water to many districts to the northwest and south of this district.

"Under the soil division, the work begun has consisted of a collection of a great variety of soils, representing the typical areas under which the soils have a similar geographical origin. This feature of the survey will be enlarged during another year.

"The results of the preliminary work of this year have been most gratifying. It has brought to the attention of the federal surveys the great importance of North Dakota as an agricultural or food-producing state and of the resources of the Red river valley, the most fertile valley for its area in the Western hemisphere; also, of the necessity for investigations along the Red river, properly to direct the efforts made judiciously to use and control this stream. Again, the great artesian basin, which carries vast quantities of water from the Rocky mountains well into the Red river valley, is attracting much attention. The possibilities for profitable irrigation are being brought out, to an extent surprising, even to the people of North Dakota. Too much value can hardly be placed on the effect that such advertising has on a new state. Already letters of inquiry are being received concerning our resources, due directly to the knowledge throughout the East of these investigations, conducted largely by the support of the federal surveys.

"The help which this survey has received in inaugurating this work in North Dakota is most highly appreciated. The federal departments at the national capital have responded freely, making allotments for this work far exceeding the small appropriation made by the state, and the management of the Great Northern, Northern Pacific and Soo railroads have, through their assistance, made it possible to extend the work further than it would otherwise have been possible. The work for the coming year will be broadened and much extended. It will be conducted under four divisions. Under the hydrographic division, the gage stations along the Red river and on Devils lake will continue and be made permanent.

"The geological division will continue investigations for the geology and stratigraphy of the Dakota artesian basin, and publish a preliminary report of the area already mapped in the southeastern portion of the state.

"The soil division of the department of agriculture will probably have a party in the state for a time, making special investigations and mapping of soils.

"The topographic survey, under the United States geological survey promises to assist by having a party in North Dakota to continue the topographic mapping already begun, which will furnish the accurate section base maps so necessary for the other surveys.

"There are in charge of each of these divisions trained men, working under the heads of these surveys in Washington. The nature of the work requires specially trained men, but it is our desire to engage for these parties, just as far as possible, men from our own state. For this purpose there will be, another year, positions open for two or three such men. These men must have had some college work, and some special training in the sciences. It is hoped we will never have to go out of our own state to find them. The present outlook for the survey is most promising, and the small outlay made by the state in establishing this work was surely bread cast upon the waters."

IS TO BE HANGED

MAJ. BRAGANDA SENTENCED BY THE PHILIPPINE COMMISSION.

GUILTY OF TERRIBLE BUTCHERY

SUPERINTENDED THE SLAUGHTER OF A HUNDRED SPANISH PRISONERS.

NATIVES ARE VERY RESTLESS

INSURGENT LEADER MALVAR TRANSFERS HIS OPERATIONS.

Manila, Oct. 15.—The military commission has sentenced Maj. Braganda to be hanged. He is the officer who ordered the assassination of 103 captive Spaniards while the insurgents under his command were fleeing from an American force. He personally superintended the slaughter.

The authorities believe that Malvar, the rebel leader, has transferred his operations to the mountainous districts of Bulacan. There are numerous evidences of restlessness on the part of the natives. The speeches made by Congressman Weeks and the interviews given by him concerning the Filipinos have displeased the Philippine commission and raised a storm of indignation in the Manila newspapers.

The police force at Banana, province of Batangas, has been disarmed and the chief of police and several others have been placed under arrest on charges of belonging to an insurgent society and using their offices to obtain information for the insurgents.

There is intense feeling among the natives in San Fernando, province of Pampanga, over the killing of a native by a soldier. Strong patrols are out in both San Fernando and Bacolor to prevent a hostile demonstration.

FOR COMMON END.

Pope Says Americans Should Be Aided in Pacification of the Philippine Islands.

London, Oct. 15. — A dispatch from Rome to the Central News says Mgr. Chappelle, the apostolic delegate to the Philippines, had a long conference with the pope on the condition of church matters in those islands. The archbishop made a favorable report on the actions of the United States in the archipelago and the security with which American rule gives to the church throughout the islands. The pope expressed the opinion that all Christians ought to aid the Americans in the pacification of the Philippines.

SHERIFF FOUND DEAD MAN.

After Seriously Injuring His Wife and Daughter a Man Kills Himself.

San Francisco, Oct. 15.—At the Agnew stock farm yesterday Charles Douglas attacked his wife and fifteen-year-old stepdaughter with a heavy water pitcher and seriously injured them. When the sheriff came to arrest Douglas he shot and killed himself. Mrs. Douglas was formerly the widow of H. J. Agnew, who made a fortune as a sugar planter in the Hawaiian islands and who later established the Agnew stock farm.

ROBBERS USE NITRO-GLYCERINE.

Break Into a Bank and Get Away With $1,500.

Rantoul, Ill., Oct. 15. — The Bank of Marysville at Potomac, a village twenty miles east of this city, was entered by robbers early yesterday morning and between $1,200 and $1,500 in currency and silver taken. To get into the safe two charges of nitro-glycerine were used. A young man by the name of Moorehouse heard both explosions and started to ascertain the cause. When he reached a point near the bank he was stopped by one of the robbers who was standing guard and held prisoner until the men escaped on a handcar.

FIRE FIENDS HOLDS SWAY.

Business Section of a California Town Wiped Out.

San Jose, Cal., Oct. 15. — The most destructive fire in the history of Los Gatos occurred early yesterday. The entire business section of the town was wiped out. The area covered by the fire is estimated at about four acres. Property variously estimated in value from $100,000 to $150,000 was destroyed. A dozen or more business blocks, several manufactories, a livery stable, a church and many dwellings were burned. The fire department was powerless to cope with the flames. A number of men were injured but none seriously.

NO NEW CARDINALS

While Cardinal Gibbons Lives No Other American Will Be Elevated.

Baltimore, Oct. 15. — The Sun prints the following: "The Sun has been for some time in possession of information gained from one in close touch with the Vatican that no new cardinals will be created at the coming consistory, but if any names are presented no prelate from the United States will be honored. This information is in harmony with what is said to be the intention of Pope Leo that no other American cardinal will be created so long as Cardinal Gibbons lives."

Attempted Bank Robbery.

Norwalk, Ohio, Oct. 15. — Burglars made an unsuccessful attempt to rob the Monroeville National bank yesterday morning. The inner safe was blown but the noise aroused the inhabitants and the burglars were forced to flee without having secured any booty.

Fatal Battle With Bandits.

Albuquerque, N. Mex., Oct. 15.—Deputy Sheriff William Maxwell of Holbrooke, Ariz., and another officer named Trefolia were killed in a recent battle with outlaws near Springerville.

LEMLY FALLS DOWN.

Attempts to Show That Schley Was Notified That the Spanish Fleet Was Not at Cienfuegos.

Washington, Oct. 12.—Just before the Schley court of inquiry adjourned yesterday Judge Advocate Lemly introduced Lieut. J. H. Holden, formerly watch official of the Scorpion, as a witness. Lieut. Holden signed the entry in the Scorpion's log giving the particulars of the receipt of a message for Commodore Schley from the Eagle which that vessel had brought from Capt. McCalla on May 19, 1898, when the flying squadron, then bound for Cienfuegos, fell in with Capt. McCalla's subsquadron, which had just left that port. The government had sought to show that by this message Commodore Schley had been notified that the Spanish fleet was not in the harbor of Cienfuegos, and Lieut. Commander Southerland of the Eagle had testified that he had megaphoned to the Scorpion that there were only a torpedo boat and several cannoneros in the harbor. Capt. Lemly told the court yesterday that the log of the Scorpion did not show the receipt of the message in this form and that he was prepared to admit that the evidence did not carry that message to Commodore Schley. Other witnesses of the day were Lieut. Commander W. H. Schuetz, who served on the Iowa, and Lieut. A. W. Grant, who was on the Massachusetts, who testified concerning the general campaign of the flying squadron. Lieut. Edwards F. Leiper concluded his testimony begun the day before.

DENIED BY DEWEY.

Admiral Sampson Again Makes a Request for Representation.

Washington, Oct. 11. — William H. Stayton, the New York attorney who some time ago asked to be allowed to represent Rear Admiral Sampson before the Schley court of inquiry, and whose application was denied by the court, yesterday made a similar request and was again denied by Admiral Dewey, who said:

"The court considers that Rear Admiral Sampson is not an interested party in the case now before it, and is therefore not entitled to appear either in person or by counsel before this court, and therefore you are informed that when the court considers anything has arisen in the court to make it necessary for Rear Admiral Sampson to be represented due notice will be sent him."

BUYING HORSES HERE.

British Officers Arrive in New York to Secure Cavalry Remounts.

New York, Oct. 12.—The earl of Fingal and Capt. Cooper of the East Lancashire regiment, who arrived on the Oceanic, have come to this country for the purpose of buying remounts for the British cavalry in South Africa. Sir Frederick Young, K. C. M. G., was also a passenger on the Oceanic. He is on his way to Canada to attend the laying of a cornerstone for an extension to the Kingston university at Kingston, Ont., on Oct. 15, and to be present at the reception to the duke and duchess of Cornwall and York.

DEGREE FOR IRELAND.

St. Paul Prelate Will Attend the Yale Bi-Centennial.

New Haven, Conn., Oct. 12.—It was announced yesterday that Archbishop Ireland of St. Paul will be here four days for the Yale bi-centennial. It was stated some time ago that he was to receive a degree from Yale. Yale officials received word yesterday that Canon Fletcher, vicar of the Wrexam, Wales, vestry, will be for the bi-centennial. He is the rector of the church in the town in which Elihu Yale resided and where the remains of the founder of Yale university are buried.

SETON THOMPSON ARRESTED.

Charged With Violating the Game Laws of Colorado.

Denver, Oct. 12. — Ernest Seton Thompson, the noted writer on wild animals, and John Goff, Colorado's famous guide who accompanied President Roosevelt on his mountain lion hunt, have been arrested in Rio Blanco county on the charge of violating the game laws of Colorado. The specific charges against the men were of baiting a bear trap with venison and running dogs after deer. Both gentlemen deny the charges against them.

ROYALTY FRIGHTENED.

Will Not Visit a Town Where There Was a Dynamite Explosion.

Vienna, Oct. 12.—A terrific explosion of dynamite destroyed twelve houses and killed three persons and injured fourteen others at Kruschewatz, Servia, where King Alexander and Queen Draga intended to pay a visit. The official account of the explosion says it was caused by the carelessness of the keeper of the shop where the dynamite was stored. Their majesties have abandoned their proposed visit to the town.

AFGHAN FRONTIER.

Russian Minister of War Making a Significant Visit.

Paris, Oct. 12.—The Liberte publishes what purports to be a St. Petersburg dispatch stating that Gen. Kouropatkin, the Russian minister of war, has started for Central Asia. His ultimate destination, according to the dispatch, is Koutscht, on the Russo-Afghan frontier, where there are 40,000 Russian troops.

King's Malady Not Serious.

New York, Oct. 12.—London advices say the king has been forced by adverse rumors respecting his health to follow Queen Victoria's example and allow the public to know what is going on at court. The news is favorable.

Barn and Stock Burned.

Fort Dodge, Iowa, Oct. 12.—Fire destroyed the large barn and farm buildings of C. H. Pierce, twelve miles west. Four horses and a valuable bull perishe. Ninety tons of hay and several hundred bushels of corn also burned.

Stole a Team of Horses.

Woonsocket, S. D., Oct. 12.—Murphy Smith, a young man who drifted into this country with the tourist element last fall, stole a team of horses of Wilt burton, a farmer, Tuesday, and started south. The sheriff is on his trail.

In the Forest.

BY LOUIS T. WEADOCK.

(Copyright, 1901, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

Phil Paquette, woodsman, never loved any girl until he saw Annette, the brown-eyed daughter of the boss of the Michigan lumber camp in which he and a hundred others worked all winter.

He came upon her in a clearing one day where she was spreading a feast of grain before a flock of birds. With her was Hammond, the only man in the world that Paquette had time enough to hate.

Hammond was tall and fair and perfectly familiar with the English language. Phil was big, with broad shoulders and clear eyes, and to the strong man's contempt of the weak he added the hate of a man who thinks he should have the something that another has.

So he stood with folded arms and watched the girl's snugly fitting jacket brush close to Hammond's arm and saw her laugh into Hammond's face, and he vowed that he would save the girl from Hammond. Paquette had let into his wild brain the idea that the girl was as far above the assistant boss of the camp as the stars are above the Saginaw river, by whose banks he and the rest labored. So he watched Hammond.

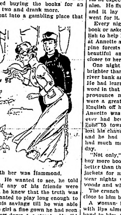
He saw that the girl talked to him often and carelessly he listened once or twice. The talk was about books of which he had heard but dimly, and of plays of which until then he had never heard at all. One day he said to Annette's father:

"I'll want to go to town today."

He wanted to tell him his errand, but refrained.

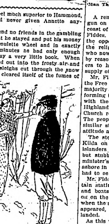
In his pocket he had the savings of the winter, and he meant to spend it in books that he, too, might read and be worthy of talking to the boss' daughter. But he had never bought books before and he had often bought whisky. So to get courage enough to go into a shop and ask for a book he spent some of his money for drink. Then he postponed buying the books for an hour or two and drank more.

He went into a gambling place that he knew. He wanted to see, he told himself, if any of his friends were there, but he knew that the truth was that he wanted to play long enough to increase his savings till he was able to buy the girl a fine gown he had seen in a window down the street. He did not intend to give it to her himself. He meant to slip it into the house and ask one of the women to put it in her room and she would come in and find it and not know who had sent it. Then he could look at her when she wore it and say to himself that she was wearing something that he had given her and then he knew that in his mind he would feel much superior to Hammond, who had never given Annette anything.



With her was Hammond.

He found no friends in the gambling place, but he stayed and put his money on the roulette wheel and in exactly twenty minutes he had only enough left to buy a very little book. When he walked out into the frosty air and saw the sleighs cut through the snow his mind cleared itself of the fumes of the drink and his conscience reproached him.



"I am lookin' for Mr. Hammond."

"If she knew what an unworthy man I am," he said to himself bitterly, "she would not care if I never bought a book."

He purchased a copy in English of Montaigne, that poet of whom he remembered that his father in France had often spoken, and all the way to the camp he tried to read by the unsteady kerosene lamp in the smoking car.

He looked about for Annette as soon as he reached the camp, but she had gone to town, they told him. Then he looked to see if Hammond was about. As he expected, Hammond was in town also. He flung the book into the snow and it lay there an hour before he went for it.

Every night after that he read the book or asked the men who knew English to help him. Every day he looked at Annette and saw that the air of the pine forests was making her more beautiful and that Hammond clung closer to her than ever.

One night when the stars were brighter than usual he lay out near the river bank and hugged himself for joy. He had learned the meaning of every word in that book of essays. He could pronounce most of them and there were a great many he could spell in English off hand. Surely, he thought, Annette was closer to him than she ever had been. Besides he had not gone to town since that day, he had lost his chance to buy Annette a dress and he had saved his money till he had much more than he had on that day.

"Not only," he said proudly, "can I buy more books, but I can buy a gown better than the first and I can buy new jackets for myself and new shoes to wear nights when I come out of the woods and when she may see me."

The crunch of footsteps on the snow close to him brought him to his feet.

A woman in ragged clothing and with lips almost blue reached out her hand to him, then tumbled at his feet.

"Who can you be?" he asked. "You do not belong here. No, I never saw you before. How have you come all the miles from the town?"

She could not speak and he poured whisky down her throat. She revived a little.

"I am looking for Mr. Hammond," she said. "They told me in the town that he worked out here. I am his wife. Here is my ring. He left me a year ago and told me never to follow him, but I love him and have come to ask if he will not come back to live with me."

"Hammond!" Paquette sniffed; "Hammond!"

She fell back as if he had struck her.

"He is my husband," she said proudly. "I love him."

Then was Paquette confronted with the opportunity of his life. He knew that to bring the poor, tired woman to the bright room in which Hammond was sitting with Annette was to crush Hammond and to save Annette. But what if Annette should love Hammond? It would break her heart to see this woman claim him.

The woodsman took off his cap and ran his fingers through his curly hair.

"Hammond," he said, as if trying to think, "Hammond. I am sorry, but there is no one here by that name. I am sure. But you have come too far and you are tired. Take my flask and this money, and I'll go with you to the railroad station."

During the walk he told her that she might find Hammond some place in town and the money he gave her was more than she had seen in months.

When the rear lights of the train were swallowed up in the shadows toward town Paquette walked slowly back to camp. As he passed the lighted windows of the front room he looked in shamefacedly. Annette with flushed cheeks was talking to Hammond and her hand was in his.

Paquette swore under his breath and then walked fast to the river bank. He flung his precious copy of Montaigne far out into the black river and then turned back to his cabin.

"Annette loves him," he said doggedly. "I did right."

BOYCOTT THEIR MINISTER.

Man Threatened with Starvation by His Dissenting Parishioners.

A remarkable boycott has been begun on the island of St. Kilda, off the coast of Scotland, against the Rev. Mr. Fiddes. It is a forcible expression of the opposition of his parishioners to the religious views of the minister, who now is threatened with starvation by reason of the refusal of the islanders to help him transport his winter supply of provisions.

Mr. Fiddes, who was a minister of the Free Church of Scotland, joined the majority of the General Assembly in forming the United Free Church along with the United Presbyterians. The Highland congregations of the Free Church refused to join the new body. The people of St. Kilda have taken a similar stand, and bitterly resent the attitude adopted by Mr. Fiddes.

The steamer Hebrides called at St. Kilda on Thursday with stores. The islanders took away their own goods, but stubbornly refused to take their minister's stock of coal and provisions ashore in the ferry. Consequently they had to be kept on the vessel.

Mr. Fiddes sent a message to the captain stating that he would have men and boats waiting to take the goods off on the vessel's arrival at Obbe, but when the steamer reached there no one appeared, and the goods could not be landed.

As this was the last trip of the vessel this season, Mr. Fiddes is in danger of being left without his usual supplies for nine months.

It is stated in Glasgow that the United Free Church will not allow their representative to remain in this awkward predicament, and that a relief expedition will be organized.—New York Press.

BALLOON EXPERIMENTS

Serve to Point a Moral by Bringing Undeserved Compliments.

How completely and honestly people can deceive themselves, and how risky it is for one to "believe his own ears," was illustrated the other day by an experiment of the Rev. Mr. Bacon, an Anglican clergyman, who is engaged in experimenting with wireless telegraphy and war balloons for the British War Office. He sent notices to the papers throughout the kingdom that he would on a certain date, at a certain hour, ascend in a balloon from the Crystal Palace and fire off a collection of fog signals from beneath his car. People were asked to listen for the sounds of the explosions and to report the results of their observations.

Mr. Bacon made his ascension all right, and when some 100 feet above the earth applied the electric current to one of his bombs. The result was nil. He tried another, and that, too, refused to explode. In fact, no one of his signals would work, and he descended to earth again.

In due time there came in to him from all over the country letters from persons who had heard the explosions which did not take place and who were able to give any amount of data concerning them.—New York Press.

Demand for Apartment Houses.

In view of the enormously increased activity in building apartment houses in New York in the last three years, the statement of real estate dealers that the supply is still inadequate to the demand is significant. Moreover, prices of apartments have increased very materially. An average apartment, as the average was five years ago, might have rented for from $800 to $1,000. Apartments that are now merely "average apartments" rent for nearly twice as much. Of course, they are much more attractive and convenient. Not only is better taste shown in designing them, but more money is spent in finishing them. For the best apartments in New York one must pay six or eight times that amount of rent. —New York Sun.

Pay for Senators

Few Members of the United States Make Money

In the United States senate are several wealthy men, but there are some of the most influential members of that body who depend upon their salaries for support. To two-thirds of the senators the annual salary of $5,000 is a consideration not to be despised. There are few perquisites to eke out this comparatively meager compensation—none, in fact, worth mentioning. The government provides one or two clerks to attend to the senators' correspondence, which is always heavy; it allows a minimum of free stationery, and it returns some of his traveling expenses. There is opportunity, of course, to make money through speculation, and some senators avail themselves of it. One senator, who was a large holder of Washington real estate, increased its value very materially by steering legislation for street improvements in its direction, while every manipulation of tariff schedules and of internal revenue taxation affecting steel and iron, tobacco, whisky and sugar, reveals the close connection between the senate of the United States and Wall street. But this acquisitiveness, to call it by no harsher name, is after all, confined to the few senators who are noted for their commercial instincts.

The majority of senators do not speculate. They content themselves with their modest salary; and how they manage to live upon it is a daily wonder. The demands upon the senatorial purse are incessant. Every senator is persistently approached by stranded constituents, who expect, and generally receive, financial assistance. Unless he elects to live in absolute retirement it is also incumbent upon him to maintain some social position. Occasionally a senator will come to Washington with the idea he can be something or somebody upon $5,000 a year. It does not take many months to show him the futility of the effort. In fact, it is impossible for a senator to save anything from his salary, unless he hides in a back street, burying himself like a hermit, neither entertaining or being entertained. In the diplomatic service the leading ambassadorial positions are bestowed upon men whose entourage can be maintained by their private fortunes, and the time does not seem to be far distant when the senate of the United States will be composed in a large degree of rich men simply because a poor man cannot afford to accept the position. It is to the credit of the senate that wealth is not yet the standard by which its members judge each other. There are millionaires in the senate who occupy insignificant places who are never consulted by their colleagues and who simply follow where others lead. On the other hand, men who possess brains are consequential factors in determining legislation, although in material wealth they may be as poor as church mice. A man cannot rise to eminence in the senate by wealth alone. Herein, it seems to me, is much basis for felicitation. Until this condition changes the senate will continue to be what it is today, the greatest legislative body in the world. Of course, the time may come when the sordid influences which measure a man by the size of his bank account may control the senate. Let us, at least, be thankful that this time has not yet arrived, and let us hope for the sake of the republic that it will never come—Philadelphia Times.

Perpetual Youth

Paris Physician Believes He Has Discovered Antidote for Age Poison

According to a Parisian correspondent of the London Express, Professor Gautier, a distinguished member of the Institut de France, has advanced a startling theory on the subject of "Perpetual Youth." In isolating the bacteria of physical fatigue he has found that it is a poison strongly resembling ptomaine poison in nature. From this Professor Gautier concludes that fatigue can, by the use of disinfectants, be avoided like any other poison, and consequently man, no longer suffering from wear and tear, need not weaken or age.

To live forever and never grow old has always been considered unattainable except in an illegitimate fashion, such as making a bargain with the "evil one," who always cheated the human party to the contract. To find out now that it was only bacteria that stood in the way is to realize how human nature has erred from all time. But this raises the suspicion that the professor is also fallible, and a close reading of the above, assuming that he has been correctly reported, confirms the suspicion. The "bacteria of physical fatigue" are something new in physiology, and that they are a poison resembling ptomaine poison is another novelty not less startling. Also that disinfectants can help one to get these bacteria out of the system is highly debatable, seeing that man has been trying for ages to eject far less insidious foes by means of drugs without conspicuous success. The necessary quantity of disinfectants for the purpose would, indeed, help man to obtain eternal life, but in another world.

His Royal Highness.

A good story is told of England's heir apparent, who recently made the grand imperial tour. He was riding on a London 'bus incog. not many months ago, and, being of an inquiring turn of mind, asked the driver, beside whom he sat, his reason for exclaiming, whenever he whipped up one of the horses, "Come up, your royal highness, will you?" "Why do you call him royal highness?" asked the duke. "Well, sir," he replied civilly, "'cause he's so 'orty and lazy, and good for nothing! See?" His royal highness did not pursue the subject, but afterward told the story to his friends with great glee, and so it got into print.—Detroit Free Press.

There's No Place Like Home

That Is the Sentiment of Children of London's Slums

The children of London's slums think there is no place like home, be it ever so squalid and poverty-stricken. "They miss the flaming naphtha lamps, the winkle barrows, the hokey-pokey man and all the other things that have been their lifelong companions," said Father Stanton of St. Alban's, Holborn, yesterday, when asked by the Daily Mail representative how the children of the slums take to their summer outings in the country.

"Then, too, they are afraid of the dark at night, and are lost in the daytime in the country," continued the kindly faced, great-hearted friend of thousands of street arabs and gutter gamins. They have all sorts of reasons for preferring the city to the country, and some of them are perfectly inexplicable. One little boy wrote to me after his outing last year and said he didn't like the country because while there a wasp had stung him.

"Another youngster took a day at Brighton with me in preference to two weeks in the country, and could give no reason for his choice." It never entered the modest mind of this favorite of the slum children why it was.

"They like going out in vans best of all," the father went on, "and then they eat green fruit and thoroughly enjoy themselves. But though they like the hubbub of the city best, and are really glad to get back to it, their brown cheeks and bright eyes tell a merry tale when they return. Then you should hear the amusing stories they tell, and you would see how they cramped, warped and stunted little minds have been opened up by a glimpse of the green wonderland they know so pitifully little about. Never mind what they say about it, it's the good the outing does them that we are after."—London Mail.

The Old Gentleman's Wife.

The old gentleman had returned to the home of his boyhood for the first time in ten years or more, and, as on the last occasion he had written "and wife" after his name on the hotel register. Of course the keeper of the hotel was glad to see him and grasped him warmly by the hand. 'Ain't grown a day older than when you was here last," he said. "No?" said the old gentleman, half inquiringly. "Not a day," returned the tavern-keeper, emphatically. "You wife seems to have changed more'n you." "Yes?" "Oh, yes; leastways she does to me. Looks thinner than when you was here last." "Indeed?" "Yes. She ain't near so fleshy as she was, accordin' to my recollection. Seems like she's taller, too, an' her hair don't look just the same to me, an' an'——" "And," put in the old gentleman, softly, "she's not the same wife, you know."—Boston Journal.

At the Big Fib Club.

The Big Fib Club met on Tuesday evening at the usual place. The guest of the evening was a railroad manager. Several railway stories were told to encourage the guest, who at last broke in: "Speaking of fast runs, the fastest I ever made was on the road in the West, when we went eleven miles so quickly that the telegraph poles looked like a fence. Arriving at our journey's end, we put up the train and were resting ourselves, when we glanced up the line and saw a dark streak approaching at terrific speed. We were astonished for a moment, but as it slowed up we at once recognized the shadow of the train we had just brought in!" The members of the club rose in silence, and, after electing the guest a full member, adjourned.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

MRS. IDA L. ROSER

Grand-Niece of Ex-President James K. Polk, Writes to Mrs. Pinkham Saying:

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I have been married for nearly two years, and so far have not been blessed with a child. I have, however, suffered with a complication of female troubles and painful menstruation, until very recently.

MRS. IDA L. ROSER.

"The value of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was called to my attention by an intimate friend, whose life had simply been a torture with inflammation and ulceration, and a few bottles of your Compound cured her; she can hardly believe it herself to-day, she enjoys such blessed health. I took four bottles of your Compound and consider myself cured. I am once more in fine health and spirits; my domestic and official duties all seem easy now, for I feel so strong I can do three times what I used to do. You have a host of friends in Denver, and among the best count, Yours very gratefully,—MRS. IDA L. ROSER, 326 18th Ave., Denver, Col."—$5000 forfeit if above testimonial is not genuine.

If you are ill, don't hesitate to get a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound at once, and write to Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., for special advice—it is free.

WENT FOR THE KISS HIMSELF.

Infatuation of Charles Hoyt for an Actress Who Did Not Reciprocate His Attentions.

Julian Mitchell, at present stage manager for Weber & Fields, was one of the late Charles Hoyt's most intimate friends, and for many years acted as general stage manager for all of the humorist's productions.

Early in his career as a playwright, says Mitchell, and before he had met his first wife, Flora Walsh, Hoyt became infatuated with one of his actresses after seeing her for the first time. She did not reciprocate his early attentions, and on her first public appearance Hoyt came behind the scenes and handed Mitchell a bouquet of flowers.

"Deliver these to Miss ——, in her dressing room," he ordered. "Don't tell her who sent them;" then, hesitatingly, "but if you don't tell her, I'll fire you."

"I understand," said Mitchell.

After the performance the playwright approached Mitchell, who was very deaf, and shouted in his ear:

"How did Miss —— receive my gift, and what did she say?"

"Nothing," replied Mitchell.

"What did she do?" inquired Hoyt, in astonishment.

"She kissed me," answered Mitchell.

Hoyt paused a moment. Then he remarked:

"Say, Mitchell, you buy the flowers to-morrow night, and I'll deliver them."—New York Times.

PASSED FOR A BOY

VERMONT YOUNG WOMAN LEAVES HOME AND DONS MALE ATTIRE.

GETS A JOB AS AN OFFICE BOY

RUNS ERRANDS AND AROUSES NO SUSPICION AS TO HER SEX.

SMOKES CIGARETTES LIKE A BOY

BUT SHE LOAFS AROUND HER FORMER HOME AND IS RECOGNIZED.

New York, Oct. 11.—Dressed in boy's clothing, Miss Myra Morgan, a twenty-year-old woman of Heartwellville, Vt., ran away from home three weeks ago. She came to this city and obtained a situation as an office boy with a down-town firm. So well did she carry out her part that during the week in which she held her place running errands and making herself useful around the office, she aroused no suspicion as to her sex, and had she not made the mistake of spending her evenings in the neighborhood where her family lived until two years ago, and consequently being recognized, she might still be masquerading as a boy and drawing a salary of $5 a week.

Charles Morgan, the father of the girl, practiced as a physician in Harlem for many years. His last address before he moved from this city was One Hundred and Twenty-fourth street and Madison avenue. About two years ago he gave up his practice and bought an interest in a hotel in Heartwellville. Three weeks ago Myra disappeared.

As an Office Boy.

Two or three days later a boy, apparently about sixteen years old, walked into the offices of the H. W. Johns Chemical Manufacturing company, at 100 William street, and asked for a job.

"The boy seemed so respectable and so anxious for work," Charles E. Horton, one of the managers of the company, said to-day, "that I engaged him. I asked him for a reference and he gave me one, but if I remember rightly we did not write to the reference. We did not take the trouble, because he was a bright, curly-headed little chap, and looked thoroughly honest in every way.

"He worked well and was quick in running errands and we were thoroughly satisfied with him, but after being with us about a week he said he was going to visit a sick sister in Vermont, and asked us if we would keep his place open for him. I told him I could not promise that, and after leaving the office that night he never showed up again. A few days afterward I was informed that the 'he' was a 'she' and that our industrious office boy was a young woman belonging to a very respectable family. Nobody could have guessed her real sex. She looked a boy and acted as a boy except that she was a little shy."

Smoked Cigarettes.

To Mr. Horton the girl gave Myron Morgan as her name. Working in the same office was a clerk named Townsend, who had known her and her parents when they lived in Harlem. He was struck by the resemblance of the new office boy to Myra Morgan, and also by the similarity of the names. He hesitated to mention what was in his mind until he had something more tangible to go upon. The opportunity came at the beginning of last week. He was walking with a friend in Harlem who also knows the Morgans well, when they met the new "office boy" strolling along the street with another youth and smoking a cigarette with that abandon which only office boys and district messengers seem able to acquire. Townsend mentioned his suspicions to his friend, and together they questioned the "boy."

She quickly broke down, and confessing her identity promised to return home. Next day she left her employment and returned to Vermont.

AMERICAN TEACHER CAPTURED.

Filipinos Treat Him as a Non-Combatant.

Manila, Oct. 11. — The insurgents recently captured a school teacher who was traveling under a native police escort. They treated the teacher as a noncombatant, took him to their camp, where he was entertained, and afterward released him unharmed near an American garrison.

A few days ago a body of rebels captured the armed police of the village of Taynbas. The police force consisted of eleven natives, who were probably willing victims.

A company of Macabebes and a detachment of the Twenty-first infantry attacked 300 rebels who were entrenched at Batangas, the capital of the province of the same name. Lieut. Bean was killed. The Americans ran short of ammunition and retired temporarily. On the arrival of reinforcements they made another attack on the rebels and routed them. The rebel loss is unknown.

NEGRO SECRETLY REMOVED.

Authorities Outwit a Mob of Would-Be Lynchers.

Madison, Fla., Oct. 11.—Will Jones, the negro desperado who killed two people and seriously wounded several others Wednesday, has been secretly removed to Tallahassee. He is wounded in nearly a dozen places and is expected to die. Late Wednesday night a mob of would-be lynchers appeared at the jail and demanded the negro, but he had been taken away. Another of Jones' victims, Anderson, the white man who was hunting when shot, is dead. This makes three persons killed by Jones.

London, Oct. 11. — A newspaper here says that the war in South Africa has drained all the horse-breeding districts of Europe of animals suitable for mounted infantry. English agents in Hungary alone try to buy 8,000 monthly, paying about $150 a head. Agents are also buying whatever animals are suitable in the United Kingdom and Australia. THE NEWS,

By John W. Eastman.

PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY.

1.50 PER YEAR IN ADVANCE.

A Kansas man says wheat should produce 262 bushels to the are and here are the figures to prove it: In a bushel of wheat there are about 700,000 grains. One and one-half bushels of wheat sown to the acre means 1,050,000 grains for that area. If each grain germinates and produces five stalks there will be 5,250,000 stalks to the acre. Supposing that each of these stalks produces a head and each head has thirty-five grains, we have 183,750,000 grains to the acre, and reducing this to bushels by dividing by 700,000 we have 262. A very good yield indeed and easily figured out, but the average farmer will be content with a pitiful old crop of twenty-five bushels to the acre and will struggle patiently along with less sometimes.

The farmer doesn't have to solicit the patronage of anyone, says an exchange. He doesn't have to enter into competition and strive with the neighbor, he doesn't have to depend on donations reluctantly doled out like many ministers; in fact he can be the most independent man on God's green earth if he manages his affairs in a business like manner. He has more time and equal opportunities for improving the mind, he has less allurements for corrupting his morals, and his occupation is conducive to the highest development of his physical powers, He can be on intimate terms with his family and at peace with the world and he can worship God under his own grape vine and apple tree, none daring to molest or make him afraid.

If you want to file on a piece of government land it will not be necessary to go to Crookston Make your filing in Thief River Falls before L. G. Browning, U. S. commissioner for the district of Minnesota.

THE THIEF RIVER FALLS NEWS.

VOL. XVIII. THIEF RIVER FALLS, MINN., THURSDAY, OCTOBER 24, 1901. NUMBER 42.

CITY POLITICS

Warming Up as the Date of Election Gets Near.

CONTESTS FOR ALL

And Very Few Know Where They Are At.

City politics continue to be the absorbing subject of conservation and probably will be until the polls close on the evening of November 5th. Petitions to be placed upon the official ballot can be filed with the city clerk up to 12 o'clock Saturday evening, Oct. 26. Next week the News will publish a full list of the candidates.

The contest for mayor between Frank H. Kratka and S. T. Johnson is a friendly one, neither candidate is loosing any sleep over the result.

Either N. W. Tarrant or W. C. Smiley would fill the office of municipal judge in a creditable manner. They may not have a knowledge of technical law points but they possess honesty, common sense and good judgement, and that is an important qualification.

M. C. Harlow has yielded to the request of a number of Second ward citizens, and will be a candidate for alderman in that ward. Mr. Harlow is heavily interested in farm and city property in this vicinity, and is a progressive and wide awake man.

Matt Barzen, who has so ably represented the Second ward for the past two years, is undecided whether or not he will again be a candidate. Either one would make a creditable alderman, but the friends of Mr. Harlow argue that he would have time to give the office more attention than any one else.

This city does not possess a more progressive man than Charles A. Robbecke, and the fact that he has consented to become a candidate for alderman-at-large is exceedingly good news. The fact that Mr. Robbecke has been so successful in conducting his own business is the best reason he should be asked to help run the city's affairs and his fair dealing and upright life in this city for a long term of years has won him the confidence and respect of the entire community. He is a good man and will surely be elected by a large majority.

If the office of municipal judge is such an important one, it should be filled by a person who has at least a reputation for honesty. This we consider is of more importance than knowledge of law.

If any proof of the popularity of D. N. Winton in this city was needed, it was clearly demonstrated Monday when a petition nominating him for alderman-at-large was circulated. Everyone heartily indorsed his candidacy, and were greatly pleased that Mr. Winton had consented to make the run. If he is not elected by the largest majority given any candidate in city, the News will miss its guess.

The petition nominating J. W. Wallin for city treasurer was circulated the first of the week. Mr. Wallin has been city treasurer since the memory of man runeth not to the contrary, and is always elected without opposition. He has the confidence of all the people, and will continue to guard the city's strong box as long as voters have anything to say about it.

Minnesota legislatures have always been composed largely of attorneys, and although many attempts have been made to pass a bill which would allow only attorneys to hold the office of municipal judge, the proposition has always been voted down by a large majority. And it can be further stated that ninety per cent of the municipal judges in the state are not attorneys.

A friend in this city the first of the week received a letter from S. F. Staples, who is now traveling the Pacific coast stating that he would be pleased to serve as alderman providing the residents of the East Side desired he should.

The fight for alderman from the Third ward will probably be between A. B. Helgeson and S. F. Staples, although Frank Bourque and H. E. Mussey are mentioned as possible candidates. Mr. Bourque is a fighter, and if he decided to enter the race would make things decidedly interesting.

THIEF RIVER FALLS NEWS

By John W. Eastman.

THIEF RIVER FALLS, MINN

When we are yielding the peaceable fruits of righteousness, it will not be difficult for us to remain unyielding to the tempter.

None of the Pullman cars owned by the company is now idle, and orders for more, which cannot be met, are being constantly received.

Great Britain imported last year about 250,000,000 pounds of tea, of which 55 per cent came from India, 37 per cent from Ceylon, 7 per cent from China.

The champion sneak thief lately did a neat trick in Greenwood, Iowa. About two hours after his release from jail he sneaked into the prison and stole his photograph from the rogues' gallery.

A curious find is reported from one of the Chincha islands, off the coast of Peru. In a bed of guano an old ship's compass was lately dug up, which, when cleaned, was found to be in working order. The case of the instrument is brass, and it bears the engraved inscription "Jno. Warren, Chepeside, City of London. Maker. 1699." The compass has been sent to a museum in Lima.

The test-point of a sermon is not its climax, but the minute after it is finished—as the preacher announces the closing hymn. If the hearer says to himself, "The sermon is done," then is that sermon a failure. But if the hearer says, "It is time now for the sermon to begin in my daily life," then is that sermon a success. A discourse is but a string of idle words until it becomes incarnated in some living soul.

Albert Foos, of Taswell, Ind., recently filed affidavits against six society girls who gave him a public kissing. Foss is a music teacher and boasted at several parties that he had never been kissed by a girl. The six girls laid for him on the street and kissed him until he cried "enough." He was greatly mortified and went before a justice of the peace and caused the arrest of the girls. They were released on bail.

One hundred feet from a manhole, with all escape cut off, three workmen, who were digging in a sewer in Nineteenth street, New York, made a rush to safety when an explosion of naphtha gas occurred, but the flames swept over them, and they were compelled to lie on their faces in thick mud to escape being burned to death. They were unconscious when found by Policeman File, who bravely entered the sewer which but a moment before had been spouting fire.

Reapportionment of representation in Canada after a new census is a simpler matter than in the United States. When the Dominion was formed the rule was adopted that the Province of Quebec should always have sixty-five members of the Lower House of Parliament. The population of Quebec, divided by sixty-five, furnishes, therefore, the basis of representation for the other provinces. Under the new apportionment, while Quebec remains stationary, Ontario and the Maritime Provinces will lose representatives, and British Columbia and Manitoba will gain.

"I made no money by my hymns," said a feeble old man of seventy-seven, a resident of the Isle of Wight, who was recently examined in bankruptcy proceedings. This was the author of "There's a Friend for Little Children." Misfortune had overtaken him, and he seemed to be utterly without resource—until Christian England heard of his plight. Then subscriptions were everywhere started and funds contributed for his relief, and now he may look forward to peaceful years. A hymn that sings its way to hearts and consciences is not necessarily profitable to its author; but if we could measure, in money, its worth to humanity, how rich he would grow!

Encke's little comet, named after the French astronomer who first discovered its periodicity, is now on one of its every three-and-a-half-year visits to the earth's gaze. No other known comet has a period so short, and probably, in consequence, none other has a recorded history so large. Many other comets are domesticated, so to speak, celebrating occasional old home weeks of their own. Twice had a well-known astronomer hunted down a comet, only to find that a rival comet-hunter was a few hours ahead of him. The third time he was confident the prize was really his, and the news of the new discovery was circulated. "I think," wrote his friend, "you will find it is my comet of six years ago come back." So it was, and the disgusted reply came by wire, "Why don't you keep your comets chained up?"

Among all the noble and magnificent benefactions credited to American men of wealth in recent years, we know of none more wisely and worthily bestowed than that of the late Lewis Elkin, of Philadelphia, who left the bulk of his fortune of $2,000,000 in trust to create a fund for the benefit of disabled women teachers who have taught in the public schools of that city for 25 years, and have no means of support. The fund will provide the beneficiaries with an annuity of about $400 each. The bequest is noteworthy because it is almost without precedent.

The News Of the Week

Washington Notes.

Estimates for the navy for the fiscal year show an increase of over $20,000,000.

Booker T. Washington of Tuskegee, Ala., recently dined with President Roosevelt.

Senator Cullom will probably be appointed as chairman of the senate foreign relations committee.

An organization has been effected in Washington for the purpose of erecting a McKinley memorial arch.

The latest rumor of a change in President Roosevelt's cabinet is contained in a special from Washington to the Chicago Chronicle, which says that Former Senator William E. Chandler of New Hampshire may succeed John D. Long as secretary of the navy.

President Roosevelt has accepted honorary membership in the William McKinley National Memorial Arch association, and gave his approval of its purpose of erecting, by national popular subscription, a memorial arch at the Washington approach of the Memorial bridge.

Personal Mention.

At a banquet in Chicago, Sir Thomas Lipton was presented with a loving cup.

Lansing Warren, editor and publisher of the Milwaukee Sentinel, died of typhoid fever.

Earl Russell is coming to America, where he will drop his title and apply for American citizenship.

It has just leaked out that George R. Sims, the London journalist and dramatic author, was married to Elizabeth Wykes last August.

A reception was tendered to Rev. John Baptist Scalabrini, bishop of Piacenzia, Italy, at the Catholic club in New York recently. Archbishop Corrigan was in attendance.

Judge J. D. Kimball of Hot Springs, Ark., is dead, aged sixty-seven years. He was a native of North Carolina, and moved to Arkansas in 1836. He had held many public offices, and was known as "The Father of the New Arkansas Capital."

The most notable wedding seen in San Francisco for many months was that of Miss Caro Crockett, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Crockett, and Lawrence M. Scott, son of Irving M. Scott, head of the Union Iron works and builder of the famous battleship Oregon.

Mrs. Grace Snell Walker, daughter of the murdered millionaire, A. J. Snell, and recently divorced from her husband, James T. Walker, former manager of the Fountain house at Waukesha, has secured the permission required by the laws of Wisconsin to marry again. It is credibly reported that she will become the wife of James S. Evans, of the Chicago Short Story Publishing company.

Crimes and Criminals.

William F. Miller, of Franklin syndicate fame, has been granted a new trial.

The New York court of appeals has granted Roland Molineaux a new trial.

A car inspector has been arrested, charged with the theft of bonds, jewelry and other property valued at $70,000.

It is alleged that the alleged fraudulent timber peculations on the White Earth reservation will amount to $40,000.

One of the most notorious horse thieves in the country, and who was once nearly lynched in Minnesota, was caught in Chicago recently.

At the Agnew stock farm, near San Francisco, Charles Douglas attacked his wife and fifteen-year-old stepdaughter with a heavy water pitcher and seriously injured them. When the sheriff came to arrest him he shot and killed himself. Mrs. Douglas was formerly the widow of H. J. Agnew, who made a fortune as a sugar planter in the Hawaiian islands.

The Butler county grand jury at Hamilton, Ohio, returned indictments for manslaughter against Sylva Bishop and his wife, Leota, faith curists. Last July their eight-year-old child, Esther, was terribly burned by a gasoline explosion, and the Bishops refused to call a doctor. They surrounded the child's bedside, offering prayers for her recovery. Coroner Sharker, in his verdict, said that medical attention would have saved the girl's life.

Foreign Gossip.

Emperor William has conferred upon Field Marshal Count von Waldersee the order of Pour le Merite, with oak leaves.

Gen. Methuen, who is operating near Marico, has captured and destroyed great quantities of foodstuffs belonging to the Boers.

A dispatch from Hamburg asserts that there is no foundation for the rumor that cases of bubonic plague have developed in Cuxhaven.

The Berlin municipality has decided not to send a formal address to the empress on her birthday, Oct. 22, but to send a congratulatory telegram.

Emperor William, in consequence of crop failures, has remitted more than half the rents payable by peasants on crown lands near Colmar, Prussia.

The health authorities at Bremen have adopted special quarantine regulations against vessels from Asiatic ports on the Black sea, owing to an outbreak of the plague.

It is reported that Maude Gonne has eluded the vigilance of the authorities, and is on her way to South Africa. The authorities of the principal ports have been notified to watch for her arrival.

In the forthcoming budget, according to El Imparcial, Gen. Weyler, Spanish minister of war, will ask an increase of expenditure exceeding 2,000,000 pesetas for the payment of pensions and military rewards in connection with the recent war with the United States.

The celebration in honor of the eightieth birthday of Prof. Virchow ended with a reception following the banquet in the lobby of the lower house of the Prussian diet. The octogenarian savant declared that he was not fatigued. Among the best addresses presented was one from the Chicago Medical society.

A war between Russian and Japan over Korea is predicted by Dr. Nicholas Senn, professor of surgery in the University of Chicago, who has arrived at San Francisco from a tour of the Orient.

M. Santos Dumont, the Brazilian aeronaut, made another attempt recently to win the Deutsch prize, but owing to an accident to the rudder of his flying machine, he was obliged to return after proceeding fifty yards.

The London Daily News expresses much regret at having published, last month, an unfounded statement that Consuelo, duchess of Marlborough, intended to attack the Christian Science movement in the United states.

Casualties.

The industrial building at the Epileptic hospital at Gallipolis, Ohio, was burned recently, entailing a loss of $100,000. The cause of the fire is unknown. No inmates were in the building.

A fast meat train on the Wabash railroad ran into the rear end of a southbound passenger train standing in the station at Foulton, Iowa. The Milwaukee sleeper and a coach were burned, together with the depot. The engineer and fireman of the freight train were injured. No passengers were hurt.

David Wark, twenty years old, was killed in a peculiar manner in Philadelphia. With others, he had been playing foot ball, and the ball lodged in the globe of an electric light. The lamp was lowered, and Wark seized the spheroid, when he fell back dead. The ball had become wet in the grass and was charged with electricity.

Michael F. Creman, aged thirty-six years, and his son Joseph, aged ten, were asphyxiated by illuminating gas at the home of Mr. Creman's brother in Philadelphia, where they boarded. It is believed the electrical attachment to the gas fixture became disarranged, permitting the gas to escape. Mr. Creman was manager of the publishing house of Henry Altemus & Co., and a singer of some repute.

Otherwise.

U. B. Kellogg, George H. Wellington and Harry L. Bryan of Lafayette, Ind., have closed a contract with an English syndicate for the purchase of 60,000 acres of zinc lands near Joplin, Mo. The price is $350,000.

Gen. Dyrenfurth, commander-in-chief of the Union Veterans' union, has been informed by President Roosevelt that it would be impossible for him to attend the convention at Chicago the latter part of this month.

The board of governors of the national bureau of identification, an auxiliary of the National Association of Chiefs of Police, unanimously decided to transfer the headquarters of the bureau, now located at Chicago, to Washington.

The American Shipbuilding Company of Cleveland has closed a contract with the Western Transit Company of Buffalo for a new packet freight steamer to cost $275,000. The new boat will be built at South Chicago and will come out next June.

The party of senators and representatives that have been visiting the Philippines, left Manila recently for home, on board the United States transport Sheridan. Before leaving they had an interview with Aguinaldo, who, however, was reticent.

At a recent meeting, the St. Louis world's fair national committee selected Miss Helen Gould of New York as a member-at-large of the board of lady managers. Twenty members in addition to Miss Gould are to be selected, two by each of the eight commissioners and four at-large.

The National Funeral Directors' association concluded its annual convention at Charleston, S. C. Fred Hulberg of New York was elected president for the ensuing term. Milwaukee was selected as the next place for holding the convention.

Ernest Seton-Thompson, the noted writer on wild animals, and John Goff, the guide, who were arrested by Game Warden Bush in Rio Blanco county, Colorado, charged with violating the game laws, were acquitted on trial of the case at Meeker.

At the annual fall meeting of the board of trustees of Princeton university, ex-President Cleveland was elected a member of the board, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Rev. Geo. T. Purvis of New York. Mr. Cleveland was sworn in at the university library.

Ed Dorrington, sixteen years of age, was shot and killed instantly; Earl King, seventeen, was fatally wounded, and James Considine, fourteen, was shot through the back and hips by Jesse Sherman, who caught the boys poaching on his rabbit preserves at Leadville, Colo. Sherman asserts that the gun was accidentally discharged while he was running.

Friends of Dr. George S. Gagnon of New York are alarmed over his disappearance. Dr. Gagnon left the city last spring, after informing his friends that he intended to build a hotel at West Baden, Ind. He left instructions for the shipment of his horses to that place. Recently James Renwick, who represented Dr. Gagnon in the matter, received word that the horses and carriages were still in the freight yards at West Baden.

Orders have been issued from army headquarters at Omaha detailing a board of army officers to investigate and report plans for a new post to be built at Des Moines. The new post, when completed, will accommodate a full cavalry regiment of twelve troops, and the buildings will be of brick and stone and thoroughly modern.

Kid Broad and Dave Sullivan fought a twenty-round draw in the arena of the International Athletic club at Fort Erie, N. Y. It was their fifth encounter in the ring, and though opening slowly, it finished as fast as could be desired.

DR. SHAW STAYS IN MINNESOTA.

He Has Decided to Refuse the South Dakota Offer.

St. Paul, Oct. 19. — Thomas Shaw, professor of animal industry at the state college of agriculture, will not leave Minnesota. He has decided to refuse the offer from the South Dakota college of agriculture. The South Dakota offer was tempting to Prof. Shaw, both because of the financial considerations and because of the opportunities it would have given him for work along the lines in which he is especially interested. Among the influences that helped to guide him to his decision were the many expressions of public sentiment that have come to him urging him to stay in the state. But it did not need the danger of losing him to make Minnesota appreciate Prof. Shaw. The people of the state have always held him in high esteem for his labors for the advancement of Minnesota agriculture.

GETS LIGHT SENTENCE.

George Robinson Sentenced to Three Months in County Jail.

La Crosse, Wis., Oct. 19.—After having been chased by sheriffs, bloodhounds and city officers and terrorizing residents all over this county, George Robison is sentenced to the county jail for three months, the only charge that could be made against him being that of larceny. He was arraigned before Judge Brindley on the charge of burglary, but William Shaft, whose house it is alleged he entered, could not identify him, consequently he was discharged. A few minutes later, however, he was rearrested on a charge of stealing apples from Mrs. Hannah Pfaff, to which he pleaded guilty.

SEVEN HORSES BURN.

Farmer Loses Barn and Contents by Fire.

Dell Rapids, S. D., Oct. 19.—A serious fire broke out in the barn and granary on the farm of David Dickey, who lives near Hartford, Saturday night, and proved a very serious loss to Mr. Dickey. The barn, seventy-five tons of hay, his seed wheat and barley, seven work horses, some colts and calves, and other things contained therein were consumed. He had only $500 in insurance, and it is estimated that his loss will amount to about $2,000. The origin of the fire is unknown, but it is thought to be the cowardly work of incendiaries.

FEARS FOR STEAMER GARONNE.

Vessel Plying Between Puget Sound Ports and Alaska Is Overdue.

Seattle, Wash., Oct. 19.—The steamship St. Paul arrived yesterday from Nome. The vessel had more than $1,500,000 in treasure. The Garonne had not put in an appearance at Nome when the St. Paul left Sept. 6, and anxiety was felt for her safety. The report was current that the steamer Centennial had gone on the beach near Teller. No lives were reported lost and the vessel was said to be well on the beach, but resting easily on a bed of sand.

UNIQUE TRANSACTION.

Farmer Makes $500, LOSES $800 and Is $300 to the Good.

Sioux Falls, S. D., Oct. 19.—William Byrne, a resident of Spink county, had the unique experience of making $500 on a single land transaction and at the same time losing $800 on the same deal. Last spring he secured an option on 640 acres for $2,700. Recently, before the option expired the owner offered him $500 if he would release his option. Byrne accepted the offer. Now the owner of the tract has been offered $4,000 in cash for it.

MUCH LAND IS SOLD.

State Auditor Says That Sales Amount to 100,000 Acres.

St. Paul, Oct. 19.—States Auditor R. C. Dunn has wired Deputy S. G. Iverson that the state land sales in Kittson and Red Lake counties will bring the total sales for the year up to 100,000 acres, the limit allowed by law. Mr. Iverson will, therefore, notify the auditors of Morrison and Benton counties that the sales to have been held in those counties will have to be given up this year.

DRANK HIMSELF TO DEATH.

Dies From the Effects of Drinking Quart of Whisky at One Time.

Wausau, Wis., Oct. 19.—A tramp entered a saloon at Marathon City, just west of here, at 5 o'clock, lifted a quart bottle of whisky from the back bar and drank its contents. He went into convulsions and at 12:30 expired from alcoholic poisoning.

Pays for Itself in One Year.

Sioux Falls, S. D., Oct. 19.—A Kingsbury county farmer named Gabriel Hetland has, as the result of his experience this year, furnished proof of the statement so frequently made that it is possible to pay for a tract of land in South Dakota with the proceeds of a single season's crop. Last spring Hetland purchased forty acres of school land, paying $15 per acre for it. He sowed flax on the land. The crop from the forty acres brought him the sum of $670, or $70 more than he paid for the land.

Postoffice Named McKinley.

Washington, Oct. 19.—Assistant Postmaster General Bristow yesterday ordered the establishment of a postoffice to be named "McKinley" in Franklin county, Wash., thirteen miles west of Eureka. This is the first office so named since the death of the late president.

Large Cattle Shipment.

Dayton, Iowa, Oct. 19.—Andrew Johnson, one of the leading farmers and stockmen of this place, together with his son Warren, arrived here yesterday afternoon with the largest shipment of cattle ever brought into Dayton, and they were a fine lot of cattle.

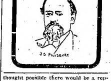
Little Girl Cremated.

Sauk Rapids, Minn., Oct. 19. — The three-year-old daughter of Peter Anderson, living a mile from Ronneby, was burned to death last night. She was playing at a brush-heap fire.

PILLSBURY IS DEAD

Minnesota's Philanthropist and Ex-Governor Passes Away Early This Morning at His Home in Minneapolis.

Minneapolis, Oct. 19.—Ex-Gov. John S. Pillsbury died at 2:45 this morning. The physician and family were encouraged to a slight extent by the seeming improvement in Mr. Pillsbury's condition Wednesday, and it was thought possible there would be a repetition of the rather remarkable experience with another member of the family. Two years before his death George A. Pillsbury lingered at the point of death for several days, and then recovered sufficiently to look after business to a limited extent. However the improvement on Wednesday was hardly sufficient to create even slight hope.



R. B. FINCH DEAD.

General Passenger and Freight Agent of the South Shore.

West Superior, Wis., Oct. 19.—R. B. Finch, general passenger and freight agent of the Duluth, South Shore & Atlantic railroad in this city, died suddenly of heart failure. His death was totally unexpected, as he had been at his office but the day before.

Dogs in the Soup.

Lead, S. D., Oct. 19.—It is now known that the band of Pine Ridge Indians that visited the Black Hills cities, including Lead, got away with a great many dogs. Owners of fine-bred animals find them missing now, and there is evidence to prove that the Indians stole them and made meat of them. A Lead man was invited to partake of a meal at the Indian camp, but he declined when he saw a dog's foot, with the claws on, floating on top of the soup.

Girls the Complainants.

Red Wing, Minn., Oct. 19. — George Sherman of Pine Island, this county, has been indicted by the grand jury for abusing Bessie Barteau, who is less than fourteen years old. William A. Coffin, the constable from Crow Wing county who brought Maud Grant, a fourteen-year-old girl to the training school, was indicted for criminally abusing the girl in his charge.

Arrested on Serious Charge.

Donaghu, a former resident of this county, has been arrested in Kansas Storm Lake, Iowa, Oct. 19. — J. M. City by Sheriff Jackson of Woodbury county, on the charge of selling mortgaged property, being some cattle which he mortgaged to the Commercial State bank of this place, but which the bank is unable to get any track of now.

O'Connor Chosen President.

Grand Forks, N. D., Oct. 19. — The Irish-American club held its annual meeting and elected the following officers: President, M. J. O'Connor; treasurer, M. F. Murphy; secretary, T. W. Neville. It was decided to hold the annual ball on the evening before Thanksgiving, and it is proposed to make it the affair of the season.

Pleases the Hills.

Deadwood, S. D., Oct. 19.—Black Hills people are greatly pleased over the reduction in freight rates and passenger fares over the Northwestern line. It was first stated the lowering of the rates would apply only to the eastern part of the state, but it has since been authoritatively stated that the Black Hills will also get a reduction.

Fifty Dollars for Two Quail.

Dubuque, Iowa, Oct. 19. — Frances Oglesby is the name of the first man ever arrested in Dubuque county for violating the game law by shooting quail out of season. He only killed two birds, but they are the most expensive birds he ever had, as they cost him, costs and all, just $50, which he has paid.

La Crosse Boy at West Point.

La Crosse, Wis., Oct. 19.—Chris Jensvold of this city, who was recently appointed to West Point academy by Congressman Esch, is playing right half-back on the West Point football team. Before going to that place he was on the La Crosse high school team.

Prominent Lawyer Sued.

Fonda, Iowa, Oct. 19. — Action has been brought against Attorney Wurtsbaugh, a prominent politician of this place, for $1,000 by his former wife, who some years ago obtained a divorce, for the non-support of her little child, a girl of ten years.

Stewart's Eye Destroyed.

Ironwood, Mich., Oct. 19.—Guy Stewart had an eye destroyed by the blowing out of an igniting tube on a gasolene engine used to run a wood sawing machine.

Court Grants Temporary Injunction.

Madison, Wis., Oct. 19.—The supreme court has granted the application of the Viroqua club for a writ of prohibition against the authorities of Viroqua who seek to inforce the law prohibiting the sale of liquor against the club.

Saunders Postoffice Robbed.

Fargo, N. D., Oct. 19.—The postoffice at Saunders, on the Milwaukee road six miles south of Fargo, was robbed, but only $1 worth of stamps were secured. The men who did the job left no clue.

EVERY ELEMENT IN MOURNING.

Common Sorrow Over John S. Pillsbury's Death.

Minneapolis, Oct. 20. — The death of Former Governor John S. Pillsbury yesterday morning caused profound sorrow in all elements of society. The more prominent business men of Minneapolis esteemed him as a public-spirited man whose advice was sound. The working classes of the city had long recognized Mr. Pillsbury as a man of kindly sympathy and humanity, who was always ready to encourage any organization or movement calculated to ameliorate the condition of the common people. The army of students at the university, while familiar with the fact that Mr. Pillsbury was ill, had hardly looked for his death, and his passing away came as a sad surprise. There was one general sentiment in favor of the abandonment of the Minnesota-Grinnell football game scheduled for Northrop field for this afternoon. The body of the distinguished Minnesotan will lie in state to-morrow morning from 10:30 to 12 o'clock in the First Congregational church, corner of Fifth street and Eighth avenue southeast. The funeral services will be held in the same church at 2 o'clock. The interment will be at Lakewood cemetery. The faculty or at least a delegation representing the faculty will have charge of the remains as they lie in state. This was in accordance with the desire of the relatives of the deceased.

DEATH ENDS BANQUET.

Minneapolis Man Stricken With Apoplexy After Finishing a Speech.

St. Paul, Oct. 20.—Death ended suddenly yesterday afternoon a banquet given at the Hotel Ryan by the St. Paul real estate exchange to the real estate men of Minneapolis. I. C. Seeley, sixty-five years old, a former president of the Minneapolis exchange, was stricken with apoplexy and died within forty minutes. He had just completed a speech in reply to the welcome extended in behalf of the St. Paul exchange by W. C. Read, when he fell to the floor. Physicians were hastily summoned but he expired within forty minutes.

LAFOLLETTE RECOVERING.

He Will Next Monday Resume His Duties at Madison.

Milwaukee, Oct. 20. — The situation has cleared slightly this week in the matter of the health of Gov. La Follette, though there is still more or less mystery about it. He has been at the farm of Dr. Philip Fox, ten miles from the capital, all the week, and Secretary Murphy says he will be ready to resume the duties of his position next Monday. The latest report from the governor is that he has engaged two saddle horses, and that he proposes to do some riding during his convalescence whether his physician approves of it or not.

Highest Award on Cocoa and Chocolate.

Buffalo, N. Y., Oct. 10, 1901.—The judges at the Pan-American exposition, Buffalo, have awarded three gold medals to Walter Baker & Co. (Limited), Dorchester, Mass., for the superiority of their breakfast cocoa and all of their cocoa and chocolate preparations and the excellence of their exhibit. This is the 37th highest award received by them from the great expositions in Europe and America.

Searching for a Brute.

Wheatland, N. D., Oct. 20. — The people of Ayr are enraged over an attempt by a bootlegger to criminally assault a fourteen-year-old farmer girl. The brute drove the girl out of town a few miles, but she proved to alert for him and escaped to a neighbor's house before the fellow accomplished his purpose. At last reports he had not been apprehended, but probably will be soon, as the citizens are out en masse.

Sheep in Good Condition.

Rapid City, S. D., Oct. 20. — Joseph Watterson, sheep inspector for the Western South Dakota Cattlemen's association, has finished his inspection of the sheep of this section, and reports that he finds them in an unusually good condition. The sheep owners are in better condition than ever to care for their flocks, and there will be comparatively few losses, even though the winter should be a hard one.

To Kill the Indian's Ducks.

White Earth, Minn., Oct. 20.—Senator Brower, his law partner, George Stewart, Frank Randal, Dr. Hubert, superintendent of the state reformatory, Dr. Hoyt and Louis Wakeman, all residents of St. Cloud, have obtained permission from Agent Michelt to hunt on the reservation. In company with Gus H. Beaulieu of this place they expect to put in several days in hunting ducks.

Awarded the Highest Prize.

Buffalo, N. Y., Oct.—The New Domestic Sewing Machine Co. has today been awarded, at the Pan-American Exposition, the highest prize, the coveted gold medal, for the best family sewing machine.

Insane Over Elopement.

Aberdeen, S. D., Oct. 20.—Paul Voy of Groton, who eloped with the young daughter of a near neighbor recently, is now reported as being violently insane. He has been placed under treatment in hopes of restoring his mind.

Must Pay for Water Privileges.

Fergus Falls, Minn., Oct. 20. — The city attorney began suits against about thirty of the residents along the Union avenue sewer to collect $33 from each of them for the privilege of tapping the sewer. The sewer was built for the accommodation of the hospital, and, instead of assessing the cost against abutting property the council passed an ordinance providing that whenever any one tapped it he should pay $33 for the privilege.

May Have Been Killed.

Rapid City, S. D., Oct. 19. — Frank Leman is concerned over the disappearance of his son Phil, who has not been seen for a week. The boy started to gather up some cattle. It is thought he was thrown from his horse and killed.

Girls Away from Home—Traits of Character Observed in Those Who Live Together in a Big Boarding House.

GIRLS AWAY FROM HOME.

I lived for some time in a boarding house for girls exclusively, where a hundred made their homes, engaged in offices, stores, schools of music and public schools and medical and dental colleges. As most of those girls spent their evenings in the house, frequent opportunities were afforded for observing the effect produced by sympathetic songs, the talk of home, or perhaps the recital of an accident which occasionally befell some unfortunate little newsboy. Such incidents, while trifling in themselves, served to remove the outer shield and sterner mien with which many true girls must of need envelop themselves while making their way in the world.

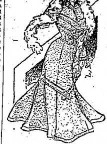
Those girls appreciated and sympathized with the little newsboy's efforts in getting his pennies together each day. They also loved the songs of home, the sentiment seeming to reach and affect the hearts of those who, through the force of circumstances, were separated from home and its surroundings. An agreement was entered into by the girls in that house that, when on crowded cars, they would surrender to age, irrespective of sex, seats they might be occupying, and when not very tired, or if they had been sitting a greater part of the day at their work, then the seat should be surrendered to laborers with tin pails going home after a long day of hard labor.

Helping the Urchins.

One of the girls, who was engaged in keeping books in a large wholesale house, and whose work kept her long hours (from 7 in the morning until 6 at night), on coming home in the evening always brought the paper with her, bought of the little newsboys on the street. Asked why she did not have it delivered and pay for it by the week, as it would be cheaper than buying it on the street, she replied that she preferred paying as she did so the newsboys could get their little rake-off. Of course, it was only a penny or two, but it was a good deal for the boys when they worked hard for it.

This girl, when any of the other girls were unfortunately out of a situation, always tendered assistance, sometimes paying their board for two or three weeks until they could procure employment. As her situation paid her a good salary, she was quite independent, and this, by some not well acquainted with her, was misconstrued as a manifestation of boldness and the absence of womanly gentleness and refinement.—Exchange.

VELVET GOWN.



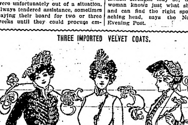
Strapped and corded with the same. Half-fitted Eton, finished with silver buttons. The skirt is in seven gores, with habit back.

SINGLE LIFE NOT LONELY.

The man's heart may be restless and unsatisfied, but that is not always the chief evil of life in the masculine heart. The lack of power to mend and make—the inability to produce an atmosphere of home—the wretchedness of being ill with only stranger women, timid of approach and chary of soothing and smoothing touch—the want of insight as to what ails discomforting trifles, really make one feel that the old maid has greatly the advantage in the single-handed combat with life's ills.

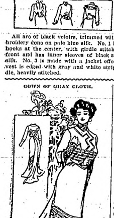
A woman is never alone while she has a work-basket and her knitting, and she must be desperately ill if she cannot tell the dullest attendant how to shake up her pillows and make a cup of tea. The physical man, in hours of distress, cries out for a compassionating hand, no matter what his mental strength may be; the lonely woman knows just what she wants, and can find the right spot for an aching head, says the New York Evening Post.

THREE IMPORTED VELVET COATS.



All are of black velours, trimmed with scroll design in fine metallic embroidery done on pale blue silk. No. 1 has a vest of white satin, closing with hooks at the center, with girdle stitched closely. No. 2 fastens at the side front and has inner sleeves of black silk, coat-tail back stitched with black silk. No. 3 is made with a jacket effect, with irregular sailor collar. The vest is edged with gray and white striped silk in crosswise folds; wide girdle, heavily stitched.

GOWN OF GRAY CLOTH.



With vest and stitched folds of black silk. Collar and under-sleeves of deep yellow lace.

STRANGE WOMEN.

Among the villagers on the Volga in the province of Samara a curious sect of women has made its appearance. It was originated by an elderly peasant woman in Soznova, called the "Blessed Mother." These women have fled from the villages around into a remote district, where they live singly in holes dug out of the face of the hill. They lead a life of fasting and prayer, and believe themselves called from the world, which they think is shortly about to perish in a general conflagration. The "Blessed Mother" has "10 wise virgins" as a sort of bodyguard, and the sect believes that these eleven women are possessed of miraculous powers.—London Globe.

COOKING SCHOOL.

Dumpling for Chicken Stew.

Into a pint of flour sift a heaping teaspoonful of salt. Now rub in a tablespoonful of shortening and wet with enough milk to make a dough that can be rolled out. Roll and cut into rounds and drop these into the boiling gravy. They should be done in ten minutes.

Marshmallow Layer Cake.

Cream a cup of butter with two cups of sugar, and then smooth and light add the well-beaten yolks of six eggs, a cup of milk and two cups of prepared flour alternately with the stiffened whites of six eggs. If the butter is too thin, add a little more flour, flavor with vanilla and bake in layer tins.

Apple Snow.

Stew peeled and sliced apples until they are so soft that they can be rubbed through a colander. There should be a pint of this apple sauce. Set aside until cold. Beat the whites of three eggs to a stiff froth, and into this beat the apples by the spoonful, alternately with a cup of powdered sugar. When very stiff add a teaspoonful of lemon juice, turn into chilled glasses and serve very cold.

AN ELEPHANT'S SKIN.

Thick as a Plank, but Can Be Grafted.

We have all heard of skin being grafted on to human beings, but of all wonderful surgical achievements that of grafting a square yard of skin on to an injured elephant is certainly the most wonderful on record. This latest triumph of animal surgery was performed on a circus elephant named Belle, which sustained a painful accident. Just as she was getting out of a railroad car it received a sudden jolt, owing to the brake failing to act properly. The elephant was thrown down and struck her shoulder heavily on a small iron cage that was standing near. The skin was partially torn off and generally lacerated over a space of quite one square yard in extent. Inflammation set in and was followed by considerable fever, and the elephant, which was the more valuable because she had a calf, was in grave danger of losing her life. The specialists decided that a wholesale operation in skin grafting was the only thing that would do the elephant any good, but an elephant's skin is as thick as a plank, so it was not an easy undertaking. The great operation was undertaken forthwith in the menagerie hospital, and Belle's own son was the first elephant selected to supply new pieces of skin. The young animal's skin was peculiarly suitable for the purpose, as it is tender, yet healthy, and vigorous. Moreover, as he is growing, he will have plenty of new skin, and he will not miss a little purloined at the present time. Belle was placed on the ground in the operating theater and secured with heavy chains to immovable posts. The wound in her shoulder was carefully washed with the usual antiseptic fluids. At the same time an antiseptic spray was kept continually playing in the air. The new skin was taken from the young elephant in those places where he appears to have a great deal more than he needs. Cocaine was liberally applied where the cuts were to be made. A heavy knife was used to cut off the coarse outer part of the skin. Then a razor was employed to slice off the tender part that was to be transferred to the wounded elephant. This was taken off in strips about six inches long and one inch wide. The strips were pressed upon the wounded surface and held down by great bands of plaster. In exactly six days the new skin was found by the doctors to be firmly adhering to Belle's shoulder. Another elephant was then called in, and some pieces of his skin were removed in the manner already described. By this time the raw surface was so greatly reduced in size that Belle began to show signs of relief from her worst symptoms. Certain hopes of her recovery were entertained from that time. Every week a new elephant will be called upon to yield up some of his skin for the sake of his suffering sister. This will be continued until the wound is entirely covered with skin. The elephants make the sacrifice in a cheerful spirit, and it is calculated that fifteen will be required before matters are set right. It is confidently expected that this operation will prove an epoch-making triumph in the history of pachydermatous dermatology.—London Express.

May Kiss the Teacher.

Miss Julia Wilson, a school teacher in White county, Indiana, has introduced a new method by which to prevent tardiness among her pupils, says the Chicago Record-Herald. She announced before the school that she would kiss the first arrival every morning. Miss Wilson is a handsome lass of 18 summers, and the boys declare she is "sweet as a peach." The first morning after her announcement as early as 5 o'clock a number of the oldest school boys were roosting on the fence awaiting their pretty school teacher's arrival. At 8 o'clock the entire school was there. The Township Trustees also put in an appearance. Miss Wilson kept her promise.

A WIRELESS TORPEDO

English Submarine Destroyer Steered by Use of Marconi System . .

For some time experiments have been carried out with a new torpedo invented by a young electrician, Mr. Cecil Varicas of Weymouth, England. The most salient characteristic of this new weapon is that its passage and course through the water can be directed and controlled either from the shore or the conning tower of a battle ship. As is well known, the course of the present Whitehead torpedo is maintained by a wonderfully complex appliance known as the gyroscope, fitted within the weapon. The cost of the Whitehead torpedo is about $10,000, and although its destructive qualities are so tremendous, yet its chances of striking the target are very remote, especially if the object at which it is fired happens to be moving. If it should miss the target the projectile simply continues on its journey until its propelling force is exhausted, when it drifts at the mercy of the waves.

But the difficulty has, it is believed, at last been surmounted by the invention of Mr. Varicas. By means of his device the torpedo, while traveling at express speed through the water, and several hundreds of feet away from the point of discharge, without any wire or other connection, may be controlled as expeditiously and as easily as if an operator were on board to manipulate its diminutive rudder. How is this accomplished? Simply by means of wireless telegraphy.

Externally the torpedo is exactly the same as the Whitehead projectile. The dimensions are precisely the same, and the propeller is of equal caliber. The interior, however, is vastly different. The explosive charge and the driving engines are placed in the same positions, but the gyroscope, the most expensive piece of mechanism, is dispensed with. In its place is substituted a delicate electrical apparatus for actuating the rudder.

The apparatus upon the shore or battleship for the transmission of the electrical waves to the traveling torpedo comprises a powerful induction coil and a small handwheel, reversible in either direction. This the officer manipulates in the same manner as the steering wheel of a vessel, the torpedo turning to the right or left, according to the movements of the wheel.

The celerity and facility with which the torpedo answers the movements of the helm, notwithstanding its distance from the transmitter, are remarkable.

It was dispatched straight out to sea, continuing in a straight line until it had traveled 200 yards, which point was the maximum range over which the ether waves could be transmitted in this particular instance. It then simply circled round and round until its propelling power was exhausted. The range over which the ether waves may be transmitted simply depends upon the intensity of the electric current, and, since Marconi can establish communication over 30 miles, torpedoes might be manipulated at the same distance.

When the projectile enters the water from the tube a float is detached, and this serves the same purpose as Marconi's high mast.

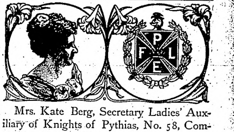
Politeness Made to Pay

Courtesy Is the Best Policy and Gives Satisfaction

It pays to be polite even to the humblest of mortals. From a sordid standpoint courtesy is the best policy and besides the satisfaction one derives from its exercise is sufficient recompense in itself. Not infrequently an act of politeness serves as a magic key to unlock the doors that lead to fame and fortune. It is averred that one of the most eminent French statesmen of to-day, M. Delcasse, owes his brilliant career to a simple act of politeness to a lady. He began his working life as a very obscure and poorly paid school teacher, and won Gambetta's favor by the grace and courtesy with which he presented him with a hamper of Ariege beans, of which the great statesman was very fond. This somewhat prosaic incident was the first turning point in young Delcasse's fortune. Gambetta invited him to dinner and was so pleased with his intelligence that he procured for him the post of private secretary to a very wealthy deputy. One day when the secretary was traveling by train with the deputy and his wife he observed that the lady was much annoyed by an illbred passenger who persisted in smoking in her presence. M. Delcasse's action was characteristically prompt. Without a word he seized the man's cigar and threw it out of the window. For this act of courtesy the lady, when her husband died shortly after, rewarded M. Delcasse with her hand and with the fortune that has made his brilliant career possible. One of the leading advocates at the French bar owes his present position to a similar act of gallantry. In the early '80's, when he was a young clerk in Paris, "passing rich" on the equivalent of $200 a year, he was traveling from Orleans to Paris when he heard screams proceeding from an adjoining compartment. Opening the door, he proceeded along the footboard to the compartment from which the sounds proceeded and saw a young lady struggling in the grasp of a powerful and well dressed ruffian. Springing into the compartment, Maitre M—— seized the rascal, and, after a brief struggle, pinned him to the floor of the carriage, where he held him until the train stopped and he could be given into custody.—Chicago Chronicle.

Sarcey's Criticisms Not Classified.

Francisque Sarcey was prevented by his sudden death from making a selection from the dramatic criticisms he had written during forty years for preservation in book form. There was material enough for about eight ordinary volumes. His successor, Larroumet, and his son-in-law, Brisson, selected from this enough to fill seven volumes.



Mrs. Kate Berg, Secretary Ladies' Auxiliary of Knights of Pythias, No. 58, Commercial Hotel, Minneapolis, Minn., After Five Years Suffering Was Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—Whatever virtue there is in medicine seems to be concentrated in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I suffered for five years with profuse and painful menstruation until I lost flesh and strength, and life had no charms for me.

Only three bottles of your Vegetable Compound cured me, I became regular, without any pains, and hardly know when I am sick.

Some of my friends who have used your Compound for uterine and ovarian troubles all have the same good word to say for it, and bless the day they first found it."—MRS. KATE BERG.

SERIOUS CHARGES

SENSATIONAL TESTIMONY BROUGHT OUT IN THE CAPE NOME CASE.

CONSPIRACY AND CORRUPTION

JUDGE NOYES AND M'KENZIE ALLEGED TO HAVE BEEN IN COLLUSION.

CONTROLLED COURT PROCESSES

M'KENZIE SAID TO HAVE RULED AUTOCRATICALLY FOR MONTHS.

San Francisco, Oct. 19.—Another day of testimony by Attorney W. T. Hume in the contempt case of Judge Noyes, District Attorney Woods and others of Nome, brought out even stronger and more sensational charges of conspiracy and corruption between Judge Noyes and Alexander McKenzie for practical control of all court processes for their benefit in the Arctic mining camp.

Rumors of the collusion by which McKenzie was appointed receiver of all the richest mining claims have been received, but Hume is the first to give a plain account of the way McKenzie is said to have become and ruled autocratically for months, taking claims away from owners by force and working them for his own profit. Hume explained in great detail the demand made by McKenzie for one-quarter of the law practice of Hubbard, Beeman & Hume, and that profits from this business were mainly for Judge Noyes and himself. McKenzie explained, according to Hume, that he had spent $60,000 to secure the position of United States district judge for Noyes; that Noyes' transportation, hotel bills and other personal expenses were paid by McKenzie, and that Noyes would sign any orders that he presented. McKenzie further declared, according to Hume, that if Hume's firm wished to have any cases heard they must give him

A Quarter Interest

in their business, and another must go to District Attorney Woods. He asserted, Hume testified, that he did not want the revenue from this quarter interest for himself, but he added: "Judge Noyes is weak, vacillating and uncertain; I have had a great deal of trouble to hold up, he has no money and I had to pay all his expenses, and he has got to have something out of it. Now, you must give half of your business; half is enough for you three, but the other half I must control."

Then Hume went on to tell of Judge Noyes' signing papers in a hotel room before suit was actually brought, and of armed men kept in wagons all day in front of Hume's office waiting for legal orders signed by Noyes, by warrant of which they dispossessed by force rightful owners of rich mines. Hume also told of the to evade the writ of the circuit court of appeals. Judge Noyes was to go through the motions of issuing an order to McKenzie to turn over gold dust in his possession, the proceeds of mines that Hume alleged were jumped by him, but it was understood at consultations between the judge and McKenzie that the circuit court had no jurisdiction over McKenzie, as he was an officer of the court. The judge also promised McKenzie the services of the United States marshal to prevent the gold dust from being removed from the bank.

In court to-day Judge Noyes' counsel attempted to break the force of Hume's testimony by introducing affidavits in which Hume declared that McKenzie had never been a go-between to secure favor of the court. Hume pronounced his signature to this affidavit a forgery. Despite strong efforts by Lawyer McLaughlin of Minneapolis to break down Hume's testimony no material contradictions were brought out.

ROBBERS USE MATCHES AND IRONS

Compel a Man to Give Up the Keys to His Store and Then Rob It.

New Lexington, Ohio, Oct. 19.—Six masked men entered the residence of Charles Tague at McCuney, this county, and at the point of revolvers bound and gagged the whole family. They required Mr. Tague to go into the yard with them, where they relieved him of his watch and a considerable sum of money. The keys to his store were then demanded, but he refused to give them up. His shoes were removed and his feet were roasted with matches and hot irons until he gave up the keys. The bandits then entered the store, which they looted entirely. Taking their victim's horse and buggy the gang loaded in a quantity of goods, the contents of the safe and other booty and drove off. There was considerable delay in sending in an alarm, and they got a good start of the sheriff, who is now in pursuit. The buggy has been located and bloodhounds are on the track of the men.

Bondsmen Must Pay.

Chaska, Minn., Oct. 19.—The jury in the case of the state against the bondsmen of Bongard, the defaulting county treasurer, who is now serving a term in the penitentiary at Stillwater, returned a judgment for the plaintiff of $7,305.28. The suit was hard-fought and consumed much time. In the case of the state vs. Holm, the defendant was convicted of assault in the second degree and fined $50 and directed to furnish a $300 bond to keep the peace hereafter. Holm viciously assaulted his stepson, Postmaster Nelson of Carver.

Runaway Boy Killed.

Sioux City, Iowa, Oct. 19.—Two weeks ago Thomas Higlin, aged thirteen, ran away from his home at Alta. He was traced as far as Sioux City, where the trail was lost. Last Sunday a body was found floating in the Missouri at Omaha, so badly decomposed that it must have been in the water a week. The father was called to Omaha yesterday, and he identified the body as that of his son. It is supposed the boy was knocked off a bridge by a railroad train.

Alleged Murderer Captured.

Butte, Mont., Oct. 19.—Patrick F. Hayes, who is alleged to have shot and killed William McCaine last Saturday, was captured last evening near Elk Park canon, about fifteen miles from here, and brought to this city early this morning. He refuses to say anything concerning the shooting and will not even admit that he is the man wanted. His identity, however, has been proved beyond a doubt.

YALE'S BICENTENNIAL.

Celebration Is Opened With Religious Exercises.

New Haven, Conn., Oct. 22.—Yale University began yesterday the celebration of the 200th anniversary of the founding of Yale college. The bicentennial of the great institution of learning was ushered in with ceremonies essentially religious. The services were performed in accord with the devout and reverent traditions of the old New England days when the little handful of clergymen gathered together and with prayerful supplications asked divine blessing upon the institution which they had conceived and fought for. The old hymns were sung and powerful sermons were uttered. The city, proud in its function as a seat of learning, had bedecked itself in Yale's colors and presented a splendid spectacle. Blue draperies were intertwined with new cut evergreen and this general scheme of color was only broken by the graceful folds of the stars and stripes. Within the chapel where the bicentennial was inaugurated the services were participated in by an assemblage as imposing as the exercises were simple.

The service began at 10:30 a. m. A chant by the choir was followed by the Lord's Prayer. President Hadley read a lesson from the Scriptures and after the Te Deum the vast congregation sang Psalm lxv. Rev. Joseph Hopkins Twitchell of Hartford, the senior fellow of the corporation, preached the sermon. The closing hymn was "I love thy kingdom, Lord," written by Rev. Timothy Dwight, D. D., LL. D., president of Yale college from 1795 to 1817. Then was sung the doxology and the benediction was pronounced by Rev. Timothy Dwight, president of the university from 1866 to 1899. Meanwhile special bicentennial services were held in other churches of the city.

ADMIRAL BUNCE DEAD.

Cancer Causes the Death of the Civil War Naval Hero.

Hartford, Conn., Oct. 22.—Rear Admiral Francis M. Bunce, U. S. N., retired, died Saturday morning at his home here of cancer of the throat. He was born Dec. 25, 1836, and was appointed to the naval academy May 28, 1852. He served with distinction in the Civil war, taking part in the blockade of Wilmington, N. C., and the capture of Morris Island, S. C., July 10, 1863; he commanded the expedition which cooperated with Gen. Gilmore in the reduction of the Confederate works on the island, and was in the attack on Fort Sumter, Sept. 8, 1863. He served on the monitor Patapsco in the siege of Charleston. In November, 1863, he was wounded by the premature explosion of a shell in the turret of the Patapsco. He was on the staff of Admiral Dahlgren and received honorable mention time and again for gallant conduct. After the war he achieved distinction in taking the monitor Monadnock from Philadelphia to San Francisco, that being the first extended voyage of an ironclad. He received a captain's commission in 1883 and was made a commodore in 1896. In 1895 he was given the rank of rear admiral.

SIDNEY, N. S., FIRE SWEPT.

Business Portion of Thriving Nova Scotia Town Is in Ruins.

Halifax, N. S., Oct. 22.—The prosperous and thriving town of Sidney was almost swept out of existence yesterday by a fierce conflagration which started about 2 o'clock. The flames, which were fanned by the forty-five-mile gale, swept through the principal business portions of the town, causing ruin and devastation. Four blocks of the finest business buildings are in ashes. The only thing that saved the city from total destruction was a heavy rainstorm which set in after dark and, as the wind decreased in fury, the firemen and hundreds of miners succeeded in getting the fire under control. Over sixty buildings are in ashes and many more are badly scorched.

New Bank Being Organized.

Luverne, Minn., Oct. 22.—A state bank with a capital of $15,000 is in process of organization at Magnolia, a village east of here in this county. The promoters are A. Walker and G. W. Turner of Magnolia and M. V. Kennedy of Adrian. The latter has lately been connected with the State Bank of Adrian. The erection of a brick building will be begun soon.

Fatally Shot at a Dance.

Marion, Ind., Oct. 22.—At a country dance at the home of Harley Marshall, near Upland, last night, Arsie Deeren shot Harley Marshall and Lee Larkins. Larkins was an innocent bystander and received a wound from the bullet that passed through Marshall. Marshall and Larkins will both die from the wounds in their breasts. Deeren is in jail.

Killed by an Explosion.

Marietta, Ohio, Oct. 22.—In an explosion at the machine shops of Pattin Bros. & Co. yesterday D. P. Pattin, one of the principal owners, was killed and the building completely destroyed. Mr. Pattin was lighting a match to find a leak of gas and the explosion followed. The property loss is over $20,000.

Big Fire in Omaha.

Omaha, Neb., Oct. 22.—Fire which originated in W. L. May & Co.'s wholesale grocery did $140,000 damage to that concern and adjoining wholesale houses. The flames started on the fourth floor of the grocery house and quickly communicated with other buildings, and before the firemen arrived all were in flames.

Stabbed Her Brother-in-Law.

Cleveland, Ohio, Oct. 22.—Mrs. Mary Lowe stabbed her brother-in-law, T. R. Lowe, to death last night with a butcher knife. The crime was the outcome of a quarrel between the woman and Lowe.

Expelled From Germany.

Kiel, Oct. 22.—The Kieler Zeitung announces that eleven residents of the village of Klobenhand, near the Danish frontier, have been expelled for publicly advocating the reunion of Schleswig with Denmark.

FOR SCHOOL FUND

RECENT LAND SALE BY STATE AUDITOR DUNN GIVES IT BIG LIFT.

MOST SUCCESSFUL EVER HELD

NEARLY ONE-HALF OF THE PURCHASERS ARE FARMERS FROM IOWA.

$1,000,000 FOR THE SCHOOLS

AVERAGE PRICE RECEIVED FOR LAND WAS ABOUT $10 PER ACRE.

St. Paul, Minn., Special, Oct. 21.

"The sale of state lands concluded Friday gives the permanent school fund the biggest boost it has ever received," said State Auditor R. G. Dunn when seen at his residence last evening. "About $1,000,000 is added to the permanent school fund, which will yield an annual income of $40,000. In addition to this, the fund receives a large sum from the delinquent interest paid just previous to the sale."

The sale was by far the most successful ever held by the state. In all 127,250 acres of land were sold at an average price of $10 per acre. About four-fifths of the lands were school lands.

Both in the price secured and the demand for the lands the sale was a record-breaker. Fully 25,000 more acres could have been sold in Red Lake and Kittson counties had there been no limit to the total that may be sold in any one year. It was also necessary on this account to postpone until next year the sale of any land in Morrison and Benton counties.

Half Are Iowa Farmers.

Mr. Dunn attributes much of the success of the sale to the extensive advertising that was done. In addition to advertising in Minnesota papers, notices of the sale were published in a prominent Iowa paper. As a result, hundreds of inquiries were received from farmers of the older states. More than 40 per cent of the new settlers in the Red river valley, he says, are from Iowa.

"They are just the kind of settlers the state needs," said Mr. Dunn. "Having sold their Iowa farms at high prices, they are not only able to purchase larger farms in Minnesota, but in addition to the machinery and stock they bring to the new farms have sufficient surplus capital to erect substantial buildings and have a bank account. They are well-to-do from the start."

The high price received for the lands was due to a large extent to Mr. Dunn's personal action in entirely disregarding the appraiser's values, the minimum price at which the land could be sold. In over instance he raised the appraised value at least $1, and in many instances much more an acre. No land was sold for less than $7 an acre.

Heads Off Speculation.

This action was taken by Mr. Dunn under the law which gives the state auditor power to withdraw any piece of land from the sale, when he deems it to the best interests of the state to do so. Whenever the minimum price fixed by him could not be obtained, the land was withdrawn from the sale. This prevented speculators from securing the land without paying an adequate price for it.

The sale was also a banner one in the amount of delinquent interest paid on lands sold in previous years. When the land is sold a cash payment of 15 per cent is required. The balance may be paid at any time within forty years, and bears 4 per cent interest. As the interest becomes delinquent, the lands are resold unless the interest is paid up to date previous to the day of sale. In Polk county alone, about $40,000 delinquent interest was paid the day before the sale.

Delinquent Interest Paid.

Fully nine-tenths of the land advertised as delinquent was withdrawn from sale, because of the interest being paid. This brings an immense amount of money into the treasury at once. As the larger part of the lands sold are school lands, the permanent school fund will be greatly aided by this item in addition to the proceeds of the sale.

As near as can be estimated the total sale by counties was:

County—	Acres.	Average price per acre.	Total.
Wadena	3,875	$7.91	$30,258
Becker	6,300	[illegible]	27,500
Clay	7,720	14.60	112,740
Otter Tail	21,500	7.31	157,080
Norman	6,745	12.91	87,100
Polk	23,560	11.22	264,243
Marshall	23,160	8.06	186,282
Kittson	8,980	10.98	98,505
Red Lake	11,880	10.60	125,928
Roseau	10,500	8.30	87,000
Beltrami	3,600	7.00	25,200
Totals	127,250	$10.00	$1,272,500

SANTOS-DUMONT WINS PRIZE.

Sails His Airship Successfully Around Eiffel Tower.

Paris, Oct. 21.—M. Santos-Dumont, the young Brazilian aeronaut, made an ascension in his new dirigible balloon from the park station of the Aero club at 2:42 Saturday afternoon, doubled the Eiffel tower and returned successfully to St. Cloud in twenty-nine and one-half minutes, but the guide ropes were not seized immediately and it took forty and three-fifths seconds more to bring the balloon down. Consequently a discussion has arisen as to whether M. Santos-Dumont has won the prize of $20,000 offered by M. Henry Deutsch for any aeronaut who could make the trip in thirty minutes. A committee has been appointed to decide the matter. M. Deutsch is willing to pay the prize, declaring that Santos-Dumont has complied with the conditions. Santos-Dumont himself insists that he has won it fairly and that if the committee decides against him he will not make another effort. M. Santos-Dumont proved to the satisfaction of every one who witnessed the voyage that he can steer his balloon at will and propel it against the wind.

Americans Win.

Memphis, Tenn., Oct. 20.—The last of the exhibition games between the American and National league teams in this city was played to-day before a large crowd. The Americans won 9 to 4.

Comiskey's Kickers Win.

Chicago, Oct. 20.—Comiskey's Association football team defeated the Milwaukee team here to-day six goals to one.

TESTIMONY FOR SCHLEY

Will Be Concluded by the End of Next Week.

Washington, Oct. 19.—Just before the Schley court of inquiry adjourned yesterday Attorney Rayner, counsel for Admiral Schley, informed the court that he hoped to be able to conclude the presentation of testimony for the applicant by the close of next week. He added that he thus far had not had opportunity to consult with witnesses who are still to be heard. He therefore asked that an adjournment be taken until Monday.

Speaking for the court Admiral Dewey said he was most happy to grant the request. Accordingly the court adjourned until 11 o'clock Monday.

The list of witnesses examined yesterday included eight names, but the interrogation of the last of the witnesses called had not been concluded when the day came to a close. The last witness was Lieut. B. W. Wells, Jr., who served during the war with Spain as Admiral Schley's flag lieutenant or private secretary. The other seven persons heard during the day were in the order in which they were called, Lieut. Commander Reginald F. Nicholson, who was navigator of the Oregon; Medical Director Charles M. De Valin, a surgeon; Capt. J. L. Hunnum, retired engineer; Lieut. Thomas E. Carter, Ensign W. P. Cronan, Carpenter J. B. Warford, all of whom served on the Brooklyn, and J. L. Hanley, who was chief machinist on board the Texas.

Lieut. Commander Nicholson told the story of the battle of July 3 as he saw it from the deck of the Oregon. He said the movements of the Oregon had not been controlled by signals from the Brooklyn and he expressed the opinion that the Oregon was nearer the Colon than the Brooklyn was. Mr. Hanley said that the port engines of the Texas had not been stopped during the battle of July 3.

DROP FORTIFICATIONS CLAUSE.

New Canal Treaty Will Be Signed in Washington.

Washington, Oct. 19.—Lord Pauncefote will sail for the United States on the 26th inst., before the British cabinet council has had an opportunity to review the protocols which embody in principal the proposed new Hay-Pauncefote canal treaty. It is thought here, however, that the fact will not delay sensibly the final negotiations, which will take place here between Secretary Hay and Lord Pauncefote, for it is the intention that the new treaty, like that which it will replace on the docket of the senate, shall be finally drafted and signed in the city of Washington. It is said that when the new document is framed the "fortifications" clause will have been found to have dropped out, leaving the United States at liberty to fortify the canal, but it is distinctly stated that it is not obliged to do so, and, in fact, there is no present intention of erecting fortifications, which, it is stated, would be much more expensive than a fleet of battleships and less useful.

HACKETT WILL RETIRE.

Assistant Secretary of the Navy Will Resume His Law Practice.

Washington, Oct. 19.—Mr. Frank W. Hackett, assistant secretary of the navy, will ask to be relieved from that office shortly. He will resume his law practice in Washington. He had intended to do so on the first of October, but remained at the request of Secretary Long, who on account of the death of President McKinley and domestic afflictions, has been obliged to be away from the department. Judge Charles H. Darling of Bennington, Vt., will succeed Mr. Hackett. Judge Darling is strongly recommended by Senator Proctor and many other prominent citizens of Vermont. He is understood to be a successful practitioner in the courts of Vermont and a man of high character and standing. For many years he was a judge of the municipal court of Bennington.

BANK CLERKS MISSING.

Directors Say That the Bank's Interests Are Not Affected.

Lowell, Mass., Oct. 19.—Albert G. Smith, teller, and Lewis K. Smith, bookkeeper of the Merchants' National bank, have been missing since Thursday night and their absence has led to an examination of their assets. The directors of the bank had a meeting that lasted till early morning and as a result made a statement to the effect that the bank's interests are not affected. The statement is as follows:

"The bank is absolutely sound. The first knowledge that we had of any trouble was the failure of the men to appear at the bank this morning at the usual time. That fact alone in a bank would call for an investigation. We do not know what the investigation will reveal. It has not been completed as yet and will not be until to-morrow. A final statement will be made at that time."

Diegnan Breaking Down.

Stuart, Iowa, Oct. 19.—Osborn W. Diegnan, who was with Hobson on the Merrimac when it was sunk at Santiago, writes his mother here that he will retire from the navy shortly on account of his health. He is now at Mare Island hospital, where he is ill with nervous prostration, a disorder that has been coming on ever since his trying experience on the merimac.

Workmen Hall Burns.

Redfield, S. D., Oct. 19.—The A. O. U. W hall at the village of Northville, north of here, was entirely destroyed by fire at an early hour yesterday morning. The hall was valued at $3,000; insurance, $1,000. The larger part of the building was occupied by W. H. Pinkerton with a furniture store, worth $12,000, which was totally destroyed; insurance, $3,000.

May Have Been Killed.

Rapid City, S. D., Oct. 19.—Frank Leman is concerned over the disappearance of his son Phil, who has not been seen for a week. The boy started to gather up some cattle. It is thought he was thrown from his horse and killed.

Died From His Wounds.

Brainerd, Minn., Oct. 19.—Alfred Norton, who was brought to this city from the Boy river country on Monday last suffering from a bullet wound in the thigh, is dead.

MORE MEN KILLED

NINTH INFANTRY IS AGAIN ATTACKED BY BOLOMEN IN SAMAR.

TEN DEAD AND SIX INJURED

INSURGENTS ARE DRIVEN OFF WITH OVER A HUNDRED KILLED.

FIVE HUNDRED AGAINST FORTY-SIX

TWO GUNBOATS DISPATCHED TO THE SCENE OF THE CONFLICT.

Manila, Oct. 19.—Five hundred bolomen yesterday attacked a detachment of forty-six men of Company E of the Ninth regiment at Bangajon, on the Gandara river, Island of Samar, killing ten and wounding six. The remainder of the company arrived on the scene in time to prevent further slaughter and routed the enemy, killing over a hundred of them. It is believed that the enemy only retired for reinforcements. As soon as the news was received at Catbalogan two gunboats were dispatched, Gen. Smith going in person to the scene.

Chaffee Reports It.

Washington, Oct. 19.—Following brief cablegram from Gen. Chaffee reporting the fight of the Ninth infantry in Samar was received at the war department:

"Manila, Oct. 18.—Corbin, Adjutant General, Washington: Forty-six men, Company E, Ninth United States infantry, under First Lieut. George W. Wallace, in field, Lower Gandara, Samar, were attacked by 500 bolomen Oct. 16. Our loss, ten killed, six wounded; names not received. Eighty-one of the enemy left dead on the field. Enemy beaten off. —Chaffee."

STEAMER IS SUNK.

Piston Rod Knocks a Hole in the Bottom of the Vessel.

Chicago, Oct. 19.—The Barry line steamer State of Michigan was lost about three miles north of Muskegon yesterday. The crew was saved. The piston rod broke through the cylinder and punched a hole through the bottom of the boat. The crew, numbering fifteen, took to the small boats, and with the assistance of the life saving crew, succeeded in reaching shore in safety. The Michigan was light, en route to Manistee for a load of salt for Chicago. She was valued by her owners at $25,000, and it is understood carried a liberal insurance.

MAY SUSPEND CONSTITUTION.

King of Greece Said to Be Contemplating Such a Move.

Athens, Oct. 19.—A sensation has been caused here by the statement that King George intends to suspend the present Greek constitution and institute one less democratic, and which would greatly increase the royal prerogatives. The king is convinced, according to the statement, that the Greeks are not prepared for their present liberties, but need a stronger government. The Democrats are preparing to bitterly oppose the project, saying its trial would lead to a revolution.

Money for Harvard.

Boston, Oct. 19.—Harvard college benefits by the will of Miss Harriet N. Lowell, just probated. After the payment of $10,000 in private gifts one-half the remainder of her estate is given outright to Harvard college to be used by the medical faculty. The other half goes to Lazell E. Partridge for life, and at his death it goes to the college. The estate includes much Boston real estate. Miss Lowell made her fortune in the millinery business.

Burglary and Assault.

Rochester, N. Y., Oct. 19.—Frank McLaughlin, a boxmaker, was arrested last night charged with burglary and assault on two old women whose house in the heart of the city was entered last Tuesday afternoon by three men who represented themselves as gas works employes, and brutally beat the women to make them reveal the location of their diamonds and money. The women identified McLaughlin when he was taken before them last night.

Sister Goodman at Ladysmith Siege.

Fargo, N. D., Oct. 19.—Sister Goodman, who was with the English forces at Ladysmith and the sole nurse in charge of the convalescent hospital, is the guest of Mrs. J. F. Cchoenliger of Fargo. During the bombardment of Ladysmith she dug a trench with a pick and shovel to afford protection for thirty patients under her charge.

Claimed to Be 160 Years Old.

London, Oct. 19.—A dispatch to the Daily Mail from Athens records the death at Khuti, Albania, of Ismail Hudjo, who claimed to be the oldest man in the world. It is said that he was 160 years old. His faculties were unimpaired, and he had all his teeth when he died. He leaves 200 descendants.

Woman Burned to Death.

Cedar Falls, Iowa, Oct. 19.—Fire caused by a gasoline stove destroyed the country residence of Broder Andreasen and burned his wife to death. She leaves seven small children.

Veteran Journalist Suicides.

Vancouver, B. C., Oct. 19.—A special from Winnipeg says that Nicholas Flood Davin, a veteran journalist and former member of parliament, shot himself dead yesterday in his room in the Clarendon hotel.

Storms on Isle of Man.

London, Oct. 19.—Disastrous floods are raging on the Isle of Man. Trains are stopped, bridges have been destroyed, reservoirs wrecked and ships in the harbors torn from their moorings.

NOTORIOUS BRIGAND CAPTURED.

Credited With Having Committed Twenty-Five Murders.

Rome, Oct. 17.—The notorious brigand Mussolino has been captured, after a fierce resistance, at Urbino. He had long terrorized Calabria, and is credited with having committed twenty-five murders. Owing to the sympathy shown him by the peasantry he had always escaped capture, despite the immense reward the government offered for his arrest. His career as an outlaw began two years ago, when he was liberated from what he considered an unjust imprisonment. He vowed to kill the fifteen witnesses who were responsible for his conviction, and he is said to have actually dispatched twelve.

THINK HIM AN ANARCHIST.

Canadian Comes Over to "Show Up Uncle Sam."

Norfolk, Va., Oct. 17.—A white man named Ambrose Martell, fifty years of age and a native of Canada, was arrested to-day on suspicion of being an anarchist. The man was walking up and down near the Confederate monument, haranguing a crowd. Among other things he said that he had come here to "show up Uncle Sam," and when he used the expression "Long live anarchy!" he was arrested. At the station nothing could be made of his incoherent utterances. The charge against him is "disorderly."

EXPLOSION OF GASOLINE.

Causes the Death of Two Persons and Fatal Injuries to a Third.

Bangor, Me., Oct. 17.—A terrific explosion, probably of gasoline, in the second floor kitchen of Nathaniel Ladd's restaurant on Harlow street yesterday, brought almost immediate death to Miss Haney, whose apartments adjoined, and Mrs. Mary F. Carrigan, the second cook, and fatal burns to John Barry, a waiter. The explosion wrecked two floors and falling debris caused minor injuries to a number of people.

TELEPHONE LINE CHANGE.

Winona Company Buys the Phoenix Lines.

Winona, Minn., Oct. 17.—The Winona Telephone company has purchased from the Phoenix Telephone Company of Rushford its toll lines and exchanges at Rushford, Lanesboro and other places in Fillmore and Houston counties. The consideration named is $15,000. The purchase increases the toll lines of the Winona company to 700 miles, all of which will be available to Twin City independent companies when the toll line from there to here is completed this fall.

SAVES BIG ROLL.

Masked Robbers Are Fooled by Fargo Man.

Fargo, N. D., Oct. 17.—John McGuire, an elevator agent at Woods, twenty-five miles southwest of Fargo, was sitting in his room with his wife, when a masked man opened the door and thrust a revolver in his face, demanding his money. McGuire had two packages, one of bills and the other of silver, and a few small bills, amounting to $50. He gave the robber this and saved the big roll.

MARRIES SON'S WIDOW.

Peculiar Act of a Cousin of W. J. Bryan.

Cairo, Ill., Oct. 17.—Jonathan R. Bryan, aged fifty-four, a banker and man of affairs of Dixon, Tenn., and a cousin of the Nebraska politician, was married here to the widow of his son, Mrs. Eva C. Bryan of Murray, Ky., a comely woman of twenty-three years. The ceremony was performed at the court house by Judge William Dewey and was witnessed by Congressman George W. Smith of this district and ex-Gov. William Warder.

CANNING TRUST ORGANIZES.

Canned Goods Companies of Iowa to Merge With Big Capital.

Marshalltown, Iowa, Oct. 17.—Representatives of twenty canning companies in Iowa and one in Nebraska are in secret session at Cedar Rapids to formulate plans for the organization of a trust embracing all the principal plants west of the Mississippi. It is proposed to have a paid up capital of $1,000,000, and it is hoped to complete the organization within two weeks.

FARMING TOO SLOW.

Plowing Is Abandoned and Oil Leases Are Being Signed.

Butler, Pa., Oct. 17.—Instead of finishing the fall plowing the farmers of Concord, Washington, Clay and Oakland townships of Butler county are calculating how much bonus money they can squeeze out of the leases of oil lands. An oil excitement has started in the county, leases have been up to unheard-of prices and lands are selling outright at great prices.

HEAD WAS CRUSHED.

Logging Camp Foreman Killed While Coupling Cars.

Menominee, Mich., Oct. 17.—Guy W. Clark, foreman for Holmes & Son, loggers, was killed in camp near Pembine, at Brown's Spur. He was coupling cars and the projecting ends of logs struck him in the head, fracturing his skull. The accident happened at 1 o'clock p. m. and he died at 7 in the evening.

QUICK WITH GUNS

SERIOUS SHOOTING AFFRAY IN A CAFE IN WEST VIRGINIA.

TWO MEN ARE FATALLY INJURED

PROMINENT MERCHANT RESENTS INSULTS OF INTOXICATED MEN.

A DEPUTY SHERIFF INTERFERES

PHYSICIAN ATTEMPTS TO ACT AS PEACEMAKER AND IS SHOT.

Welsh, W. Va., Oct. 19.—As the result of one of the worst tragedies enacted in this little city in years two men are fatally wounded and one seriously hurt. The shooting occurred in the Palace hotel cafe. The fatally injured are Robert Hufford, a prominent merchant, shot three times, and Dr. C. R. McDaniel, one of the best known physicians in the county. John Waldron, deputy sheriff, was seriously wounded.

Shortly before midnight Hufford was taking a lunch in the hotel cafe when a crowd of strange men entered, apparently intoxicated. They passed several remarks which Hufford took as insults and he hurled a heavy glass at one of them and closed in for a fist encounter. At this juncture Deputy Sheriff Waldron rushed in to separate the participants in the battle, as also did Dr. McDaniel, who was seated at a near-by table. Hufford was jerked rather roughly by the deputy sheriff and which he turned on the officer. Waldron is quick with a gun and in an instant he also brought his revolver into action. Shots were rapidly exchanged and the usually quiet little cafe was the scene of the wildest excitement. Dr. McDaniel being a warm friend of both men rushed into the frey, pleading a cessation of hostilities, only to be pierced through with a 38-caliber bullet. The firing continued and Hufford was the next to fall. He was shot three times, the last bullet penetrating his left breast. Deputy Waldron, although shot, was able to walk from the cafe. The details of the tragedy were soon spread and the excitement was intense, friends of both parties being loud in their remarks of praise or condemnation. It looked as though another tragedy might occur. Cooler heads prevailed, however, and Sheriff Waldron was placed under guard at the hotel while the two fatally injured men were carried to a physician's office.

He Quickly Pulled a Gun

THE SCHLEY COURT.

Eight More Witnesses Testify in Behalf of the Applicant.

Washington, Oct. 19.—The presentation of Admiral Schley's side of the controversy was continued before the court of inquiry yesterday, eight witnesses being examined. Of these five were ensigns and the entire eight had served on board the Brooklyn with Admiral (then commodore) Schley. The first of the day's witnesses was Lieut. Charles Webster, who had begun his testimony Wednesday. He was followed by Lieut. Commander T. D. Griffin, who had charge of the powder division on the Brooklyn during the fight off Santiago, and he was succeeded by Ensigns C. A. Abele, John Halligan, Jr., Ulysses S. Macy, James M. Hand and Ralph N. Marble. The last witness of the day was Medical Director Paul Fitzsimmons, who was chief surgeon of the flying squadron. While Ensign Hallgan was on the stand Mr. Rayner sought to bring out information as to the American ships in sight at the beginning of the battle of July 3, but Judge Advocate Lemly objected on the ground that the question was intended to show the absence of the New York, and the interrogatory was withdrawn. Ensign Marble stated that he had heard Capt. Sigsbee tell Commodore Schley when he came aboard the Brooklyn on May 26 that the Spaniards were not at Santiago.

OUSTED FROM HIS PASTORATE.

Clergyman Accused by His Congregation of Lack of Patriotism.

Marysville, Kan., Oct. 19.—Rev. F. J. Rice, pastor of the Baptist church at Marysville, has been accused by his congregation of lack of patriotism and ousted from his pastorate. On the Sunday following the death of President McKinley it is alleged the minister failed either to pronounce an eulogy upon the late chief executive in his sermon or to refer to his death in his prayers. Words of sympathy for the afflicted wife were spoken but the application was not clear enough to satisfy all his hearers.

Wealthy Widows Swindled.

Chicago, Oct. 19.—On the charge of swindling wealthy widows out of large sums on the pretense of being desirous of marriage, William J. White was arrested by detectives from central headquarters. The arrest was made on a warrant procured by Mrs. D. R. Chaffee, owner of an apartment building, who avers that she lost $7,000 to the man. His scheme, the police say, was to advertise for a wife, a wealthy widow preferred, who would invest in his invention. Large returns were promised. His victims are alleged to have been found in several large cities besides Chicago.

Clubhouse Destroyed.

Detroit, Mich., Oct. 19.—Fire last night destroyed the club house of the Detroit Boat club on Belle Isle, burning with it a number of small yachts and racing shells belonging to the clubmen. The total loss is about $40,000.

Killed by the Cars.

Lima, Ohio, Oct. 19.—J. H. Van Wormer, a wealthy oil producer whose home is in Bradford, Pa., was run over and killed by a Lake Erie & Western train at St. Mary's yesterday afternoon.

FAREWELL TO TOWNE.

Duluth Citizens Tender the ex-Senator a Banquet.

Duluth, Minn., Oct. 18.—Eight hundred men of all shades of political opinion sat down at the farewell banquet tendered by Duluth citizens to Charles A. Towne at the armory last night, while fully 500 ladies were present in the galleries to hear the speeches by William J. Bryan, Mr. Towne and others after the discussion of the menu. The affair was non-partisan and carried out the intention of the promoters to make it a testimonial to Mr. Towne's personal popularity among his friends and neighbors. Scores of prominent Democrats, however, were present from all parts of the state to add their tribute and listen to the eloquence of their brilliant leaders. Mr. Bryan's subject was "Moral Courage," and he took occasion to shower encomiums on the guest of the evening for his notable display of that quality in 1890, at the time of his spectacular farewell to the Republican party to follow silver. He said: "Some may be disposed to stamp the word 'failure' upon the political career of your distinguished guest, but he has set an example that must weigh heavily on the side of civic virtue. He has faced without flinching a fire as hot and as hellish as ever came from cannon's mouth, and he has won a victory greater and more glorious than ever, crowned the life of one who fawned at the feet of power or bartered away his manhood to secure an office."

PRIEST CHARGED WITH ASSAULT.

Young Girl Claims to Have Been Terribly Ill-Treated.

Neillsville, Wis., Oct. 18.—The examination of Father Jungblud, the Catholic priest, and Lizzie Nolan, his housekeeper, charged with assault upon a girl, took place yesterday before Justice Dudley. Several witnesses testified as to wounds received by the girl, Mary Prieuer, including the doctors who treated her. The girl testified that two days preceding the arrest she was bound around the arms with a rope and hung to a hook in the ceiling, remaining each day from some time in the morning until some time in the afternoon, during which time only her tiptoes were allowed to touch the floor. She was whipped, she testified, because she could not remember the hard words in her catechism. The defendants were bound over to await further action. Bail was fixed at $2,500 in each case. They were committed to jail in default of bail.

DEATH ENDS SUIT.

Remarkable Legal Battle for Possession of Child.

La Crosse, Wis., Oct. 18.—By the death of little Edward Petter, the infant child of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Petter at Colby, Wis., a hard legal battle for its possession has come to an end. Albert Petter is a grocer in this city, and by his order the remains were shipped to this city from Colby, where the mother is at present living. Last May, shortly after the birth of the child, Mr. and Mrs. Petter were granted a divorce by Judge Fruit, who gave the custody of the child to the mother. She removed to Milwaukee, and later Potter attempted to gain possession of the child through the Milwaukee courts but was unsuccessful. Mrs. Petter then moved to Colby with the child, but the matter was still pending in the courts. The death of the child has ended the quarrel.

DIE BY HUNDREDS.

Strange Disease Attacks Deer and Antelope in Montana.

Helena, Mont., Oct. 18.—State Game Warden W. F. Scott left Helena last night for Malta, from where he will proceed to the Little Rockies in Northern Montana to inquire into the report that many hundreds of deer and antelope are dying in that section from some unknown disease resembling anthrax. State veterinarian M. E. Knowles has received reports that the unknown malady has extended over a considerable portion of Northern Montana, and it is feared that it may be communicated to stock.

KNOCKED OUT BY DROPS.

Wabasha Man Said to Have Administered Chloral to a Friend.

La Crosse, Wis., Oct. 18.—What is thought to be the first case under the Wisconsin law making it a felony to administer knock-out drops is that against a man thought to be Dennis Cronon of Wabasha, who, it is charged, took a friend, a riverman, to a saloon here and poured chloral in a glass of his beer. The victim fell forward in a deep sleep. It is alleged Cronon rifled his friend's pockets. He is still too drowsy to talk. The penalty is not less than $5,000 fine or ten years at hard labor.

COTTAGES FOR WORKMEN.

Lumber Company Will Provide Residences for Employes.

Crookston, Minn., Oct. 18.—The Crookston Lumber company has decided to erect cottages for its workmen, and has purchased a tract of ground across the Great Northern tracks from its mills for that purpose. Yesterday the company let to Hans Morberg of this city the contract for the erection of fifteen cottages, to be completed in the spring.

IS SLIGHTLY BETTER.

But There Is No Hope for Gov. Pillsbury's Recovery.

Minneapolis, Oct. 18.—Former Governor John S. Pillsbury, who is lying near to death's door at his home, rallied slightly last night. He was as well as he was before the relapse Sunday. The improvement, however, is thought to be only temporary, and no hope is entertained for his recovery.

Under a Serious Charge.

Dell Rapids, S. D., Oct. 18.—Arthur J. Bouck, a young man living near Trent, S. D., has been arrested on complaint of Miss Mary Cronin of Moody county on the charge of assault, accomplished by administering "knock-out" drops.

Successful Land Sale.

Warren, Minn., Oct. 18.—Auditor Dunn held a sale of state lands yesterday, and never before has there been such a crowd present. About 20,000 acres were sold at an average price of $8 to $9 per acre.

PUNISHING REBELS

RELENTLESS CAMPAIGN IS BEING WAGED ON THE ISLAND OF SAMAR.

ANOTHER SLAUGHTER PREVENTED

MURDEROUS PLOT OF BOLOMEN FRUSTRATED BY AN OFFICER.

WAS INSTIGATED BY A PRIEST

PLANNED TO ANNIHILATE THE GARRISON OF AMERICAN SOLDIERS.

Manila, Oct. 22.—Advices from Samar are to the effect that Gen. Hughes, commander of that district, and Gen. Smith are carrying on a relentless campaign against the rebels there, and thousands of the malcontents are fleeing to the adjacent islands.

Numerous columns of American troops are operating along the coast, while the work in the interior is being done by the Macabebes, the native scouts whose work on the island of Luzon called forth so much praise from the American commanders. The troops there have evidently determined that the rebels will not take them unprepared again. They now constantly carry their rifles, and have them within reach even at meals and when they go to bed.

Another Slaughter Prevented.

Owing to the vigilance of Lieut. Thomas M. Baines, Jr., of the Ninth United States infantry, another slaughter of American troops by insurgents has been avoided.

Lieut. Baines discovered a prisoner re-entering, through a hole in the wall, a cell at Carbiga, Island of Samar, where several Filipinos were confined. An investigation showed that the plan was to fill the jail with bolomen and to call the guard, which would be necessary to get the door open, and then to attack the garrison. It also developed that the instigators were a priest and the presidente, both of whom have been arrested, together with several other prominent persons. Other attempts have been discovered, but fortunately frustrated, at Pambujan and other points in Samar. Several persons have been arrested in connection with these.

Rushing Reinforcements.

Reinforcements are being rushed to Samar. Three hundred and thirty marines under Lieut.-Col. Mancil C. Goodrell, have gone there on board the United States cruiser New York, and two battalions of the Twelfth infantry will start immediately for the same destination.

United States officers from other provinces that were supposed to be pacified have recently arrived in Manila, and they say that the news of the American disasters spread like wildfire among the natives, who scarcely attempted to conceal their delight.

The Manila constabulary discovered a large quantity of steel wagon springs which were being shipped to various districts. Investigation showed that these were to be used in manufacturing bolos.

The troops in Samar anticipate hard fighting. Brig. Gen. Jacob H. Smith, who is in command, has visited most of the ports and instructed the commanders that the insurrection must be hammered out and Gen. Lukban, the insurgent leader, captured. Already the movement of troops has begun.

KILLED BY BOLOMEN.

Chaffee Sends Casualty List of Recent Samar Engagements.

Washington, Oct. 22.—The names of the killed and wounded in Company E, Ninth infantry, in the engagement with bolomen on the Candara river, island of Samar, last Wednesday, are given in a cablegram received by the war department from Gen. Chaffee. The cablegram follows:

"Manila, Oct. 19.—Adjutant General, Washington: With reference to my cablegram of 18th, following casualties Candara river, Oct. 16, Company E, Ninth infantry:

"Killed: George Tenchant, William H. Ritchie, Edward F. Burns, Carl M. Johnson, William Loftin, Jack Picopits, Charles Wilson, Orville J. Decomgoole.

"Died from wounds received in action: First Sergeant William F. Gormley, John D. Kelley.

"Wounded: Martin G. Lyons, lung, wounded in neck, serious; Robert L. Hampton, lung, skull, serious; Jack M. Russell, thigh, serious; Henry Stierle, cheek, serious; Eugene Dewitt, thigh, serious; Frank McAndrew, back, head, slight; Musician Charles W. Buck, shoulder, slight. —Chaffee."

IN OPEN REBELLION.

Kruger Receives Advices That Cape Colony Is Disaffected.

London, Oct. 22.—"Mr. Kruger has received a report from Mr. Schinkburger that the greatest part of Cape Colony is in open rebellion," says a dispatch to the Daily Mail from Brussels, "and that the Boers have armed 16,000 Afrikanders within the last three months."

Surprised by Canadians.

Pretoria, Oct. 22.—A force of Canadian scouts surprised a Boer laager near Balmoral. The Boers fled after a short fight. The Canadians had two killed and an officer and two men wounded.

LANDSLIDE IN THE BARBADOES.

Five-Hundred-Acre Tract Covered and Nearly One Hundred Houses Destroyed.

Kingston, Jam., Oct. 22.—Mail advices from Barbadoes give particulars of a landslide covering 500 acres of land in the district of Boscobel. Nearly a hundred houses were destroyed and the island's best plantations were ruined. The district was devastated. The governor has started a relief fund.

STEAMER ON A ROCK.

Meets With a Bad Accident During a Heavy Fog.

Detroit, Oct. 22.—The passenger steamer City of Cleveland, of the Detroit and Cleveland line, ran on a rock about 6 o'clock yesterday morning during a heavy fog just east of Ballard's reef, and stove a large hole in her bottom amidships. The water rushed in with great force and the steamer gradually filled until she rested on bottom with, however, her main deck still above water. The shock was so slight that none of the forty passengers who were asleep in their berths were awakened, and there was no alarm. Many of them did not know of the accident until they were aroused to get aboard the steamer Newsbery and proceed to Detroit, where they were landed about 10 o'clock. It is impossible, at present, to estimate the damage done to the vessel.

MUSCLE AND WIT.

Former Should Be Used More and Latter Less.

Chicago, Oct. 22.—Prof. Charles Zueblin of the Chicago university addressed the teachers' federation on "Democracy and Education." The speaker made a strong plea for technical education. He asserted that if Andrew Carnegie would give his money to technical schools it would be of greater benefit to communities than libraries. Speaking of head work and hand work Prof. Zeublin said he was acquainted with professors of civics who did not know the first thing about the practical work of getting something done for the people. He pointed out the disastrous effects brought about by too many persons trying to make a living by their wits instead of their muscles. A more perfect fraternity is the object to be achieved, he said.

GIVES UP LIBERTY THROUGH LOVE

Escaped Convict Causes Friend to Betray Him That Family Might Get Reward.

Wichita, Kan., Oct. 22.—Joseph Pabst, escaped convict, for whose recapture a reward of $50 was offered, caused a friend to betray his whereabouts at Hutchinson that the reward of $50 might be collected and given to his wife and children, who need the money.

Grabbed by Britain.

London, Oct. 22.—"The British cruiser Pylades reports," says a dispatch to the Daily Mail from Sydney, N. S. W., "that she has annexed Ocean island, west of the Gilbert islands. The island, which has hitherto been a British protectorate, is rich in phosphate."

Burglars Disappointed.

Brookings, S. D., Oct. 22.—Burglars blew up the Aurora bank safe but did not succeed in getting into the strong box. They secured several dollars of loose money in the outside drawer.

SHE BREAKS DOWN

ALLEGED PAL OF GREAT NORTHERN ROBBERS GIVES WAY TO EMOTION.

BOUND OVER TO THE GRAND JURY

WOMAN DECLARES THAT SHE CAME BY THE LOOT HONESTLY.

DETECTIVES ARE HARD AT WORK

ALL EFFORTS TO LOCATE CONFEDERATES PROVE UNAVAILING.

Nashville, Tenn., Oct. 19.—Anna Rogers, alias Maud Williams, was arraigned for trial before Justice Vaughn yesterday on the charge of attempting to pass forged bank notes, loot of the Montana train robbers, and in default of $10,000 was remanded to jail.

A dramatic scene followed the decision. For the first time the woman gave way to emotion and sobbed. The court room was crowded with spectators anxious to get a glimpse of the prisoner. Presently she appeared, attired in the same garb she wore upon the afternoon of her arrest, wearing a big picture hat with ostrich feathers. She looked careworn, still her face was stern and cold, devoid of the gentleness which characterizes one of her sex. As the grand jury was in session the judge at once. After that the prisoner declared she had come by the loot honestly. At this juncture she broke down and became hysterical. Seeing an opportunity to secure a confession, perhaps, the officers tried to talk with her. In a moment she recovered herself, however, and resumed her defiant air. She refused to give any information. The prisoner is now held for violating the state laws, but after a consultation with United States District Attorney Tillman it was decided to ultimately transfer the case to the federal courts. Supt. Gaylor of the Pinkerton agency has received plenty of information but nothing of a definite character has turned up. A local crook told the police that if they would obligate themselves to divide the reward he would turn the three men up and that they were in the crowd at the trial. Supt. Gaylor left last night and through which he will land at least one of the robbers. Several other expert Pinkertons are en route here. Before leaving Supt. Gaylor said that there was little in the story of President and General Manager Elliott of the express company, telegraphed from St. Paul, about a New Orleans clew which the express people were working on and which would possibly result in the escape of the bandit on account of the publication of the Rogers woman's arrest at Nashville. He says this clue was investigated by the Pinkerton men and was found to be groundless. In all $83,000 was stolen instead of $43,000, the latter figure representing only the unfinished bank notes.

Bound Her Over

Believes He Has a Clue

LARGE SUM IS MISSING.

Trusted Bank Messenger Mysteriously Disappears.

New York, Oct. 19.—George Armitage, a messenger in the employ of the New Amsterdam National bank at Broadway and Thirty-ninth street, left the bank on Tuesday morning to collect a lot of checks and drafts. On Tuesday he failed to return and now the police are looking for him. The bank's officers express a fear that he has met with foul play. The police don't seem to believe anything of the kind. Yesterday morning the bank received by express the wallet which Armitage had carried. In it were most of the checks and drafts entrusted to him for collection. The sum of $5,936.58 was unaccounted for. Armitage is about twenty-two years old. He had been employed in the bank six months. Since then he has been employed as bank messenger, and every one in the bank had come to have great faith in him. At times he carried large sums of money around with him and he always did his work faithfully.

SAILORS HAVE GRIEVANCES.

Throw Things Overboard to Bring Officers to Their Senses.

Berehaven, Ireland, Oct. 19.—The gunsights and other fittings of the British first-class battleship Magnificence, flagship of Rear Admiral William Acland, second in command of the Channel squadron, have been cast into the sea by members of the crew in order to bring about the righting of grievances which the crew complains of.

Took Laudanum Route.

Omaha, Oct. 19.—A. Clark Redick, a member of the real estate firm of Redick Bros. of this city, committed suicide last night by taking an overdose of laudanum. The motive is unknown. Young Redick's father is one of the largest owners of real estate in the city.

Will Entertain Lipton.

New York, Oct. 19.—According to the London correspondent of the Tribune the American society in London is arranging a complimentary dinner for Sir Thomas Lipton on his return to London.

SENATOR DAVIS' BODY REMOVED.

Taken to Washington to Be Interred in Arlington.

St. Paul, Oct. 22.—The body of Senator Davis is no longer in Minnesota, the state with which his fame is historically associated for all time. And the removal of the body may have resulted from an unfortunate misunderstanding, a conviction that the senator's fellow citizens were unwilling to grant to him that honor after death which they willingly granted to him in life. Influenced, it is rumored, by such conviction, Mrs. Anna Agnew Davis, the senator's widow, yesterday had the body removed from the vault at Oakland cemetery and started for Washington last night with the remains. She will at once reinter the body in the national cemetery at Arlington, and at her own expense she will erect over the grave of the great Minnesotan a monument worthy of his works. The remains will be received at Washington by the depot quartermaster of the district and by Sergeant-at-Arms Ramsdell of the senate. The body will be conveyed at once to Arlington. It will be reinterred Tuesday noon in a choice location among the officers' graves. The service will be read by the rector of Epiphany church, Washington.

ELECTRIC LINE TO TWIN CITIES.

Road to Be Built Which Will Connect Many Minnesota Cities.

Chicago, Oct. 22.—It was learned yesterday that the survey recently made for a line of railroad between Minnesota City, Minn., and St. Paul and Minneapolis, and which has caused much speculation in railroad circles in the Northwest, is not in the interest of either the Chicago Great Western or the Chicago & Northwestern, as has been generally believed. The survey, it is stated, was for an electric line to connect Minnesota City with the Twin Cities, touching many Minnesota towns which are without railroad communication with either St. Paul or Minneapolis. The enterprise was promoted by St. Paul and Minneapolis parties and the money necessary to complete the line is furnished by Chicago and Philadelphia capitalists. Construction work will begin next spring. Connection will be made with the Twin City Rapid Transit railway and entrance thus given to all parts of St. Paul and Minneapolis. The road is undertaken as a purely passenger line.

CRIPPLE'S BRAVE DEED.

Boy Who Walked With Crutches Saves Child From Drowning.

La Crosse, Wis., Oct. 22.—Edgar Edberg, a fourteen-year-old cripple who has never walked during his life without the aid of crutches, rescued little six-year-old Willie Foley from death by drowning. The younger child was walking logs and slipped into the water. Edberg, unable to walk, dragged himself over the raft to where the Foley child was struggling in the water and pulled him on the raft. Several times while going across the rolling logs Edberg came near losing his own lift by drowning.

FOUR POACHERS ARRESTED.

Game Warden Fullerton Makes Arrests Which He Thinks Will Be a Good Lesson.

Jackson, Minn., Oct. 22.—Saturday afternoon four men, Renz, Colter, Olson and Collmten, were arrested and convicted of the illegal shooting and selling of game. Colter was fined $65 and the others $35 each. They also lost their boats, decoys and five guns. These men have been terrorizing the vicinity of Heron lake for the past two years. Sam Fullerton, the game warden, who arrested them, thinks that this will be quite a lesson and that such shooting will be stopped.

Monster Land Sale.

Fergus Falls, Minn., Oct. 22.—County Auditor Lincoln finished his computations relative to the state land sale which Auditor Dunn conducted in this county, Saturday, and finds that there were 21,097.46 acres of land disposed of at the sale, and that the total amount which this acreage brings will be $147,401.40, or almost an even $7 an acre. The amount of cash already received—15 per cent of the purchase price and interest on the balance to June 1 of next year—is $25,805.46. The sale cleans up all the poor land in the county and will probably the greatest sale in the history of the state.

Fires Caused by Cigar Stubs.

Sioux Falls, S. D., Oct. 22.—Two fires are reported at Sisseton agency. The building known as Indian police headquarters, and which was a landmark in that part of the state, was burned to the ground. The fire was started from a cigar stub which had been carelessly thrown among some tinder. David Faribault, an Indian, also lost his barn and a horse from the same cause, lighted cigar stubs having been thrown on his hay.

Fatal Wrestling Bout.

Plainfield, Wis., Oct. 22.—The funeral of Harry Pratt, son of J. F. Pratt, a prominent and well-known citizen of Pine Grove, was held Saturday. Deceased was only twenty-one years old and his death was a very unusual one. He was in his usual health and the evening before he died he was wrestling with a companion and over-exerted himself, which caused his death that night.

Election Almost Unanimous.

Clear Lake, S. D., Oct. 22.—The special election resulted in the sale of the city hall by practically unanimous consent, only four votes being cast against the proposition. This insures a new opera house and hotel combined next season.

Still Among the Living.

Tyndall, S. D., Oct. 22.—The parents of George E. Meyers, a soldier in the Philippines, had given up their son for dead. Word reached them from the war department this week that he was injured in the back only slightly.

Lucre for a Lost Leg.

Fargo, N. D., Oct. 22.—Michael Corrigan was awarded a verdict for $7,625 in his damage case against the Northern Pacific for the loss of a leg while employed as a car repairer. He sued for $20,000.

DAIRY AND POULTRY.

INTERESTING CHAPTERS FOR OUR RURAL READERS.

How Successful Farmers Operate This Department of the Farm—A Few Hints as to the Care of Live Stock and Poultry.

Over Supply.

From Farmers' Review: Sometimes we hear the remark that in a few years there will be an over supply of poultry and poultry products at the rate at which the poultry business is increasing. The item that the United States receives in imports 15,000,000 dozen eggs yearly will hardly agree with the above. Not only are eggs imported, but pounds and pounds of dressed poultry. From this it would seem there is no danger of over production. We must remember that the population increases as fast or faster than the production of poultry increases and every year sees a great increase in the consumption of poultry. Just as rapidly as we produce and furnish to consumers eggs and poultry in attractive and palatable shape the consumption will increase; also the price. Americans especially do not kick much on the price they pay for eatables if the eatables are good. The appetite for eggs and poultry is enlarging very rapidly, but to get good prices for them the eggs must be fresh and the poultry fat and healthy.

Use care in gathering and sending the eggs to market; do not send them with dirty shells. Lately much has been said and a little proven that eggs whose shells have been washed will decay sooner because the washing destroys the gloss of the shell which is a covering for the pores, somewhat preventing air entering. However this may be, a washed egg never looks as fresh and glossy as a clean unwashed egg. But we do not want to market dirty eggs; so what will we do? Furnish lots of nice clean nests and have clean litter around and in front of the nests so the hens may get some of the dirt off their feet before going on the nest. Perhaps in future years we will have the hens educated to wipe their feet on cloths hung in front of their nests.

Have your eggs clean and fresh, your fowls healthy and fat; then market them in attractive packages and coops. Wherever possible market direct to the consumer. Do not worry about the other fellows getting all the custom of your town. The chances are they are sitting and worrying for fear some one else will cut a figure in the case. Doing this will never get you a buyer. Get up and hustle; emulate your best layers in the hustling and hunting line. Be brisk. Take some of your clean, fresh eggs in a nice clean basket and a nice dressed fowl or two. Be sure they are fat and plump, and call on some one you think would like your wares. If the first house don't buy, try another; some one will want them. Then engage more for the days that you can deliver them handily.

Never market an egg or a fowl that is not of attractive appearance. Remember a pleased customer is the best advertisement, and act accordingly. It won't be long until you can market all the surplus at a fair profit. Do not charge an exorbitant price, but charge enough to make some profit. Do not bewail because you cannot raise prize winners, but make good customers by furnishing good products.—Emma Clearwaters.

Outbreak of Contagious Disease.

There is at all times the possibility that disease of a contagious character may break out among the animals of a district or of a particular farm and people should be ready to act in such emergencies. As it is, we find over and over again that disease strikes a district and comes as a complete surprise with people quite unprepared and uninformed as to what should be done in the premises. We have seen this lately in the experience with anthrax, which came like a bolt out of a clear sky to the dairy farmers around Palatine, Ill. Thousands of times during the past twenty years agricultural papers have published articles giving full descriptions of the symptoms of this fell disease and telling people what to do should a case occur. Despite this fact when anthrax came into the locality indicated the farmers did not recognize it and some lost their lives by skinning carcasses and so acquiring the dreadful poison of the disease. This was but one phase of the matter and a new one has to be reported. In the district where the first outbreak occurred the veterinarian promptly recognized the disease and very wisely proceeded to stay its further progress by vaccination with reliable vaccine and with such success that out of 2,200 cows vaccinated but two died, representing a mortality of one-tenth of one per cent. This was surely a fine showing for the reliable vaccine used and quite properly made farmers of a neighboring district anxious to have their cattle vaccinated also. The veterinarian of that district tried to procure the same make of vaccine used around Palatine, but failed, as the supply had been exhausted.

This being the case, he was led to employ another alleged vaccine put upon the market without proper experimental tests to prove its reliability and protective merits. The results were disastrous. From 10 to 100 per cent of the cattle inoculated with this crude vaccine died and the results are not yet complete, as remaining cows are sick and likely to die. The manufacturers of the fatal vaccine will, of course, have to pay every penny of loss and damages also as the results of this wholesale introduction of anthrax virus into the district may be serious for years to come. It should be remembered in this connection that the new vaccine was used prior to the appearance of a case of anthrax in the district where it was used (Barrington); that it was used entirely with the object of preventing an outbreak and that it was employed wholesale without first trying it upon a few test cows. After injecting some three hundred head the cattle first inoculated commenced to sicken and die. Then all became sick and deaths occurred on every farm where the stuff had been used. Despite this fact, the affected cattle were allowed to roam at will over the pastures, the dead were buried in shallow graves, people came and went at will among the affected animals. One can scarcely credit the absolute foolishness and foolhardiness of such procedure. It has been stated time and again that anthrax is communicable to man, that its spores live practically for ever, that they may be brought to the surface from graves of anthrax-dead animals by earth worms and spread upon the grass years after the burial for the sure infection of other animals pasturing about the graves. It has been advised hundreds of times that animals dead of anthrax should be burned or buried deeply in quick lime and that people should not skin the carcasses. It should be understood without telling that cattle showing symptoms of the disease should be isolated and kept from spreading the germs upon the pastures. And, lastly, can one imagine anything more foolish than the wholesale use of a vaccine that had apparently been put out by the makers as an experiment? A test should have been made by the attending veterinarian, who had, however, confidence in the manufacturers' good name and known reliability, so that he cannot be deservedly blamed in the matter. What shall we say of a firm that would offer for sale a virus that evidently contained the virus in virulent form so that it would give the disease to the inoculated animal instead of preventing it from contagion? The courts will answer that question; meanwhile readers of the Review should take this lesson to heart and know how to act should anthrax appear in their districts.

Period of Fertility.

A correspondent of Farm-Poultry, writing to that paper says: I think you are responsible for saying in "Poultry Craft" "that you have known instances of hens laying fertile eggs eight days after male has been removed," and it is generally understood that eggs are usually fertile four days after removal of male; but, Mr. Editor, I am able to enclose you results of an experiment that I am now conducting which may interest you. The fifth day after males were removed I began saving five eggs from two pens, and on the tenth day I stopped, giving me six days' eggs. I stopped saving them because I was short for my customers, and because I thought at the time none could remain fertile for so long; but to my surprise the eggs laid ten days after cocks were removed proved fertile. Cocks were removed on night of July 13.

Now this experiment has been carried on by myself, and I have used every precaution to get only correct results. I have now a pen of three R. I. Reds undergoing a similar experiment, and I will report later on. I tested a Plymouth Rock pullet early in the season, and she gave me a fertile egg on the fourth day after male was removed.

Samuel Cushman says: "One most important reason for non-success in poultry raising is that beginners have no real conception of the requirements of the work." That applies to the men that raise poultry on a commercial scale. Most of the readers of this department of the Farmers' Review are farmers who carry a stock of poultry as an adjunct to their other farming. While it is perhaps true that even our farmers do not have a full conception of the work necessary to manage a large flock, yet it is also true that such farmers are keeping poultry under conditions infinitely better than the men that make that their sole business. The poultry as an adjunct to the farm is easily and naturally handled and it requires only a fair amount of study of the subject to make a success of it. We realize the fact that as yet with many of our farmers the light is only now breaking as to better poultry methods, but we are sure that progress is being made.

Near the big London cattle market at Islington there is every week an auction sale of American horses from Canada and the United States. The auctioneer wears a silk hat, white vest, light gloves and a large flower in his buttonhole.

Many of the old ways of making money with poultry are past and gone, and new ways are coming to the front. Today the profit only comes when these new and right ways are chosen.

Tho' the vine be bitter the grapes may be sweet.

Sour Cream.

One of the factors that enters into the production of choice butter is uniformity in the quality of the cream that enters into it, yet many patrons of creameries seem oblivious of this fact, or, knowing it, shirk their individual responsibility. The Vermont Experiment Station has recently issued a bulletin calling attention to the loss suffered through the carelessness or indifference of some creamery partons where cream gathering is practiced, the patrons owning hand separators. Under such a system some dairy farmers will not take pains to keep the cream sweet until it is delivered to the collector claiming that its sweet or sour condition does not affect their individual pockets. The Vermont Experiment Station officers say:

"There is not only a chance that the sour cream may injure the entire lot of butter, but there is almost certain to be a direct financial loss to the dairyman in another way. It is difficult and almost impossible to sample sour cream accurately, and it is difficult for the creamery receiving it to test it properly. Gas bubbles and increased viscosity or gumminess are at the bottom of the trouble. The error of sampling and testing will nine times out of ten be in the direction of a low result. In other words the creamery patron who keeps and delivers his cream in a sweet condition will ordinarily get a higher test and a larger check than he who allows his cream to sour, even though both creams be really of exactly the same grade. The chances are always in favor of an inaccurate test. It is doubtful whether it is wise to urge a creamery to make any special efforts to test sour cream properly. It ought not in the first place to receive it, and, in the second place, if the patrons cannot see how much it is to their interests, as well as to the interests of the creamery, to keep the cream sweet, an indirect fine may be laid upon them in this way by giving them the low test which sour cream is likely to receive."

The writer visited the dairy department of the Vermont Station this summer. Butter was being made every other day from "separated" cream. There the old Cooley creamers that had been used in the days when the gravity method was the only means of securing cream, were utilized to keep sweet the cream product of the off days when no butter was made. The Vermont Station evidently practices what it preaches and bases its opinions on actual results. The Station butter has a reputation and never lacks buyers at almost any high figure the consciences of the officials will permit them to charge for it.

Cows Killed by Sorghum.

From Farmers' Review: In answer to inquiries relative to the cows I had poisoned by sorghum I will say: Sorghum is not grown much in this neighborhood. I planted some this year for the first time. As the season was dry, the sorghum did not amount to much. My cattle got into it and ate it off clean to the ground. After that the sorghum sprouted some, and in about two weeks from the time the cattle were taken from it they got in again and ate the sprouts. They had not been in more than twenty minutes when I got there and drove them out, with the exception of one cow that was lying down and refused to get up. She acted as if she had colic. I gave her some medicine for that, but it did no good. She continued to get worse and inside of thirty minutes she was dead.

I looked at the other cows and saw that another one was lying down. I went to her and she acted the same way the other had and soon died. Then I saw that all the cows were sick. I at once formed the opinion that they were all poisoned, but from what I did not know. I got a pail and milked the cows and as there were four more cows now very sick I gave them sweet milk and salt water. From that on they improved and soon got over the trouble.

The two dead cows I cut open and examined their stomachs. I could find nothing but some sorghum leaves and a little grass. But their stomachs were all burned on the inside. I went to Madison the next day and saw Professor Lewis of the University of Wisconsin. I told him all about the case, and he said they died from the effects of eating second growth sorghum. He said that the first growth sorghum would not hurt them at all, but that two stalks of the second growth would kill a cow inside of an hour. People around here never knew that second growth sorghum was injurious. Professor Lewis said that the sweet milk I gave the other cows was the only thing that saved them.—Michael Adler, Jr., Dane County, Wisconsin.

Consul General Guenther reports that according to the St. Petersburg Gazette, the production of butter in Siberia has increased during the past few years to a marked degree. In the vicinity of Barnaul, for instance, there are at present 300 creameries against 2 in 1896. The demand for milk vessels has assumed such large proportions that a factory has lately been established at Kurgan, but as it cannot even approximately supply the demand, the greater part of the supply has to be procured from Moscow. The consul suggests that west Siberia might furnish a good market for United States manufacturers of milk vessels.

The Yellowstone Valley, which is forty miles long and three to eight miles wide is a great sheep raising district. It is in a high state of cultivation and has a good system of irrigation. Much alfalfa is grown there, some of the sheep being fattened on that alone.

USING POOR FOOD

Will Lead to the Eater's Degradation.

Probably the statement that persons of today do not live as well, in the matter of eating, as their ancestors, will be met with a vigorous denial; yet there is no doubt of its truth. The same cleverness which supplies us with so many comforts unknown to a previous generation has provided also food adulterations which, in many cases, are positively harmful. The London Lancet says: "There can be no doubt that during the past decade food has undergone a steady degradation, and this cannot be without a demoralizing influence upon the human race. It will be noticed that by far the majority of cases of tampering with food relate to the substitution of a cheaper article rather than to the addition of an injurious substance. The common defense is that modern conditions of life make substitution a necessity. It is difficult to see the logic of such a defense—at least in a number of instances. It is urged, for instance, that jam or marmalade cannot be made without the addition of glucose, which prevents the preserve from crystallizing. Now, long before glucose was a household word jams and marmalade were made—and very good they were, too—consisting entirely of sugar and fruit. In the same way we are told that beer must be brewed from sugar, and that brewing exclusively from malt presents untold difficulties. Again, golden syrup, which used formerly to be the refined syrup of molasses, now consists largely of artificial sugar, which is doubtless a more marketable product, but it is not the same thing as cane sugar. Even in the country good old-fashioned wheaten bread, with the fascinating brown color of rich wheaten flour, containing the entire nutritious portions of the berry and possessing that delightful wheaten flavor, now seldom, if ever, characteristic of bread, is difficult to obtain. The baker's loaf is, as a rule, a tasteless, insipid article, which requires a considerable appetite before the idea of eating it can be entertained. No wonder that the taste for bread is rapidly diminishing, and undoubtedly less bread is consumed than used to be the case. As is well known, bread contains almost every element of food necessary for existence; but we should be sorry for the person who tried to subsist entirely upon the modern uninteresting loaf made from blanched roller mill flour. It has recently been stated that the degradation of the teeth so noticeable among us now is due to roller milling having largely supplanted stone milling. We should not be surprised. The degradation of food is a very serious matter and is bound to lead sooner or later to the degradation of the eater. No movement could confer greater blessing upon the people than that which aimed at bringing about a return to the older and more rational methods of preparing food. Let us see more of the home made article than we now see; let us return to more palatable food that will do more good than the machine made stuffs and the endless series of substitutes. In all the schools throughout the land we would have the children taught the advantages of home made food, and how the bread, fruit, jam, or even beer and cider can be made at home. It would encourage a spirit of industry, it would give us palatable and nourishing articles to eat or drink and might have a very wholesome effect upon those who seem deliberately to attentuate food as much as possible or who pay no regard to its natural endowed palatability."

RELICS IN PORTO RICO

Queer Finds in the Island That Are Puzzling Archæological Experts.

New York possesses the only complete collection in existence of archæological treasures from Porto Rico. This is now in the American Museum of Natural History. It was largely made since the Spanish-American war, and an explorer who reached New York recently from the island says there are further archæological remains left there.

The native American people of Porto Rico are extinct. They could not endure Spanish oppression and become submissive slaves, as might an African native. But at one time they were an interesting people, well advanced in certain arts, as New York's new collection testifies. Some years ago the museum had a collection of ancient stone implements, but the treasures secured since the island came into our possession complete and round out that collection.

The stone objects were probably made by the ancestors of the Caribs. They differ greatly in fineness of finish, polish and artistic form from stone objects found in other places. The use of many of these objects is unknown. There was no written language on the island before its discovery, and the millions of Caribs and Arawaks who lived in the West Indies have since vanished. There has not been a single full-blood descendant of these people living in the region during the last half century. The names of places preserve a few of their words. But there is no tradition about the stone objects.

Strange Relics of Stone Age.

Among these specimens of the stone age are many peculiar rings or ovals of stone resembling horse collars in size and shape. Some weigh twenty pounds, others seventy, and they are found as deep in the ground as nine feet. Many are strangely and beautifully carved. Some of these resemble a coil or loop, with one end projecting beyond the coil where it seems to be tied.

Such fine stone carvings must have been intended for serious and important use, possibly religious, as religion above all other powers has led man to execute difficult and permanent work. They could not be collars to be worn for punishment, as too much art is lavished upon them, but they may have served in religious sacrifices.

Mystery of the Rings Unsolved.

The mystery which surrounds these curious stones is not yet solved, although over forty years ago the savants of Copenhagen, London and Paris were struggling with the problem, having but a few specimens. In 1873 Ortey y Tapia of Porto Rico brought some to New York. We now have many of them in the Museum of Natural History. The mystery of their use remains unsolved.

But there are other interesting forms. One resembles the lower half of such a collar as above described, but the carving seems to occupy a different position.

There is a little four-legged metate, or food-grinding stone, and pestles, which could have been used upon it. There is also one with four legs and the head and tail of an animal, while the back is flat or even dish-shaped and useful for grinding.

Beautifully Carved Images.

But these objects, the use of which may be surmised, are not so interesting as certain peculiarly carved and polished stones, reminding one of great snails with high backs and their heads on the ground. Some of these are really beautifully symmetrical, well polished and even and made of beautiful and variegated stone. What they could have been used for is unknown. Were they household gods, fetishes, objects worshiped by men or by women? It is possible that carvings may yet be found representing one of them in use, for the prehistoric people of Porto Rico were able to draw realistically, as is proved by the carved faces, some of which are fairly well executed, although some are crude.

Were Skilled Potters.

These people were also skillful as potters, and many little pottery heads are interesting as they differ from anything we have in the United States.

The early explorers did not observe the Mexican paper codices, says the New York Herald, but destroyed them in their zeal to obliterate all of the old religion, in order to make way for Christianity. Had we these books in even a small proportion of their abundance before the conquest we might find reference in them to the inhabitants of the islands to the east of Mexico, and so possibly solve these Porto Rican mysteries.

Women as Commercial Travelers.

The head of a St. Louis wholesale house was at Chicago on his way home from Buffalo recently. In the course of a chat with some business acquaintances he expressed the decided opinion that women make better drummers than men in some lines. "The fact is," said he, "that in some departments women seem to be able to do better than men. Not long ago it was generally believed that a woman could not sell anything on the road except books and certain articles of wearing apparel peculiar to her sex. The operations of the female drummer were for a long time confined to a very limited field. But in recent years she has branched out somewhat, and I simply state an open fact when I say that she may be regarded as a success on the road. In some instances she has proven herself a more valuable member than the men. Take certain lines, like tea, coffee, spices and things of that sort, and in a majority of instances she will place more goods than a man will in the same length of time. This is probably true of these articles because she can talk more intelligently about them. They are used in every home, and the average business woman one finds out in the world manages to keep up with the things needed by the housewife, and hence the woman drummer can make a fairly good talk about things of this kind. The woman drummer has come to stay."—Chicago Chronicle.

Lincoln from the South.

The statement has been made that in Roosevelt the south has a representative in the White House more closely allied to it by birth than any president since John Tyler. What of Lincoln? Col. Roosevelt is, indeed, half Georgian, but Lincoln was either a North Carolinian or a Kentuckian, and full-blooded at that, as both his father and mother were southern. Mary Todd, Lincoln's wife, was born in Kentucky, and she and all her brothers were intensely southern. Mr. Lincoln, therefore, was more closely allied to the south by birth and marriage than any other president since Tyler.—New York Press.

The Progress of a Novelist.

The diversity of Miss Mary E. Wilkins' literary gifts is to be further exemplified in a book of short stories entitled "Understudies." Since the earlier tales of New England life which were sufficient in themselves to make an enviable reputation for any author, we have learned to know Miss Wilkins as a story teller and a novelist in other fields and in other ways, and it has been interesting to follow her development as an artist. Only once did she deviate from the line of progress, and that was when she was tempted to enter into competition with the pseudo-historical romance—and fell. But in "The Portion of Labor," now appearing in Harper's Magazine, she has not only recovered herself, but; in our judgment, has climbed to a higher level of artistic attainment. Her new volume of "Understudies" also shows that in the short story her hand has not lost its cunning. Not only are these "Understudies" very delightful as love stories, but the conception of the idea which characterizes them is an original and attractive one, and, to the reader who cares to probe beyond the mere story, it will also be found to be interesting from a psychological standpoint.—Harper's Weekly.

Mrs. Dyer's Heart.

McCarron, Mich., Oct. 21.—In April last the sensational case of Mrs. Samuel G. Dyer of this place was reported in these columns. Mrs. Dyer has suffered for years with a very bad case of Heart Trouble, and was cured in a few weeks by Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Since then Mrs. Dyer has received hundreds of inquiries as to her condition, and many may be interested to learn that she is at present enjoying the best of health, and has not had the slightest return of the Heart Trouble.

Formerly she had to sit up in bed for hours to get relief; now she goes about as smartly as any lady of 62 years in the state. Dodd's Kidney Pills have made many friends in Chippewa county through their cure of Mrs. Dyer's case, and have proven beyond doubt that their cures are not only very complete, but absolute and permanent.

Jefferson as an Inventor.

Mr. Jefferson invented the copying press. He writes to Mr. Madison in 1787: "Having a great desire to have a portable copying machine, and having studied over some experiments with the principle of large machines made to apply in the smaller one, I planned one in England, and had it made. It answers perfectly. I have set a workman to making them, and they are in such demand that he has his hands full. I send you one. You must expect to make many essays before you succeed perfectly. A soft brush, like a shaving brush, is more successful than a sponge." He also sent a copying press to the Marquis de Lafayette as a present. He invented the revolving chair, now a familiar and necessary article of furniture in all offices and counting rooms. The Federalist newspapers used to call it "Mr. Jefferson's whirligig," and declared that he had devised it so as to look all ways at once.—Chicago Record-Herald.

ENORMOUS CROPS

North Dakota has just harvested a wonderful crop of wheat and flax. Reports from the various railway points along the "Soo" Line show yields of 25 to 35 bushels to the acre of wheat, and from 15 to 20 bushels of flax per acre. Flax is now bringing $1.25 per bushel. Most of the crop was raised on newly broken land, so that the first crop pays for the farm and all the labor, and leaves a handsome profit. There is still plenty of good free government land open for entry; also good openings to go into business in the new towns along the "Soo" Line. For descriptive circulars, maps and particulars, write to D. W. Casseday, Land Agent, "Soo" Line, Minneapolis, Minn.

BLOCKED NEAR MOUNTAIN TOP.

Explorers Brought to a Standstill Near Assiniboine's Summit.

Henry Grier Bryant, traveler and explorer, recently returned from a five weeks' trip in the Canadian Rockies, says the Philadelphia Public Ledger. With Walter Dwight Wilcox, a fellow of the Royal Geographical Society of London, who has often traveled and made scientific investigations thereabouts, Mr. Bryant organized an expedition to explore the region around the headwaters of the Elk and Palliser rivers—a district covering about 2,000 square miles, which has remained a blank on the government maps, and, if possible, to make an attempt to ascend Mount Assiniboine, the Matterhorn of the Rockies. The party, consisting of two Swiss guides, three cowboys and fourteen horses, with provisions and supplies, beside Mr. Bryant and Mr. Wilcox, left Banff, a station on the Canadian Pacific, on July 21, and struck through the woods to the south and up the Spray river in the direction of Mount Assiniboine. No one had ever succeeded in reaching the summit of this mountain, which is put down in the government survey as being 12,000 feet high. Every attack on the mountain before had been made from the north, but Mr. Bryant and his party decided to try it from the south, from which direction the ascent was believed to be easier. One of the Swiss guides was kicked by a horse before reaching the foot, and had to be left behind. Picking their way over stretches of snow and rocks and keeping as much as possible under the overhanging ridges, so as to be protected from a possible avalanche the party steadily pushed upward, but were brought to a standstill when only 800 feet from the top by a long traverse of snow, over which it would have been foolhardiness to attempt to pass. The expedition had reached 11,125 feet, however, the highest point ever attained. Mr. Bryant says that it is only a question of time before the summit will be reached, but as their time was limited the party was compelled to give it up.

COIN SOUVENIRS OF TRAIN.

McKinley's Funeral Car Runs Over Gold Pieces in Pennsylvania.

The desire for souvenirs upon the part of the large crowds lined along the railroad tracks at every point was a distinctive feature of the McKinley funeral train, says the Pittsburg Post. The most popular of all the methods adopted was the placing of coins on the track so that the train might pass over them, smashing flat the pieces of money as a mark of identification in years to come. This practice was not confined to any particular point or crowd, but was indulged in generally all along the route. The mutilated coins were afterward gathered up by their owners and displayed with much pride. At some stations, according to the train conductors, so many coins were placed on the rails that it caused a slight jar to the cars as they passed over them. Coins of different denominations aggregating at least several hundred dollars were strown along the track at Union station. Even these relic-hunters seemed to appreciate the occasion and surroundings, and, instead of making a rush for their property as soon as the train had passed, waited until it was out of sight before picking up the crushed coins, and by common mute consent each was allowed to have his or her own without the least quibbling among them. At Roup station a prominent and wealthy resident of the Shadyside district placed a $10 gold piece upon the rail. The approach of the train started to shake it off, but it managed to remain long enough to have just a small portion of it nipped off as if done by a knife. The owner is quite a collector of souvenirs and oddities, and when he picked up his coin he stated it would occupy the most prominent and conspicuous place in his large collection.

Great Bets in History.

Lord George Bentinck, in 1843, in betting on his horse Gaper, for the Derby, stood to win £150,000 ($720,000), but saved himself upon Cotherstone, and netted £30,000 ($144,000). At another time a bet of £90,000 ($432,000) against £30,000 ($144,000) was booked between old Lord Glasgow and Lord George Bentinck. The Marquis of Hastings bet and lost £103,000 ($494,400) on the Hermit's Derby. Bell & Co. of Wall street, in August, 1900, had $250,000 placed in their hands to bet on President McKinley's re-election, at odds of 2½ to 1. Their offer was absorbed in fractions. Lord Dudley bet £24,000 to £8,000 on Peter in a race at Ascot with a bookmaker named Morris. Peter was beaten. A syndicate headed by a man named Lambert won £90,000 on Don Juan in the Cesarewitch at Newmarket in 1883.—New York Herald.

Electricians' Gloves.

The Electric Laboratory of Paris has been carrying out recently a series of experiments bearing on the insulating qualities of electricians' gloves. As a result the members having the matter in charge have arrived at the conclusion that insulating gloves cannot be considered as affording efficient protection against the dangers connected with high-tension currents, and state that in their judgment it would even be better to prescribe their use altogether rather than to rely upon their efficiency in contact with dangerous connections. It is prudent, they say, to consider them useful only for working with those parts already insulated from the lines, such for example as the non-metallic hands of switches.—Philadelphia Times.

The Professor.

"It's remarkable, Annchen," said the absent-minded old German professor. "I can't step more than a few inches at a time in my new shoes."

"No wonder. You've put them on, and they are still tied together as they came from the store."—Philadelphia Times.

THE NEWS,

By John W. Eastman.

PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY.

The Polk County Journal greeted its readers last week as the Red River Valley Farm Journal, and will be devoted to the agricultural interests of the Red River Valley.

State Auditor Dunn says he is not a candidate for governor in 1902, but will support Van Sant. There are a great many people however, who will insist upon Mr. Dunn becoming a candidate in 1904.

This is the way the Duluth News Tribune comments upon the congressional situation: "In the Ninth districts they are playing "Pussy wants a corner," with Grindland, Steenerson, Comstock and Valentine in the corners and and Elmer Adams as Pussy. You know how the old game is played—some one may make a mistake, move and give the editor a corner on the whole game."

DUNN'S AUCTION

Sale of State Lands Was Well Attended.

State Auditor Dunn sold 6,000 acres of state school land at Red Lake Falls last Friday. Buyers were here from points in Nebraska Michigan, Illinois and Iowa, while farmers desiring to pick up adjacent lands and local buyers by the hundreds were "on deck." The total acreage advertised was over 25,000, but the great demand for lands in Clay, Marshall, Kittson, Roseau and Polk counties where sales had been previously held, had run to within 6,000 of the 100,000 acres named by law as the maximum amount to be sold in one year. The prices were much higher than expected, showing Red Lake county lands to be appreciated, and had 25,000 acres been offered, they would have been quickly taken.

Three squatters who settled on state land a year ago, made a plea for mercy and Bob Dunn heard no competing bids wh n $ w s offered by these men. Troubled hearts were made happy, for these homes are all the squatters have of this world's goods.

"God bless Bob Dunn," said a mother, who eagerly awaited news from her husband as to the outcome of his effects to save their home. The tears gathered and in her joy she huddled closer the crooning babe at her side.

The highest price paid was for a twenty acre tract in Rockbury, which brought $23.00 an acre. The minimum price was $7; average $10.60

MINNESOTA HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

THE THIEF RIVER FALLS NEWS.

VOL. XVIII. THIEF RIVER FALLS, MINN., THURSDAY, OCTOBER 31, 1901. NUMBER 43.

NEXT TUESDAY

November 5 Is Election Day in This City.

Next Tuesday—November 5th—will be election day, and there is every indication of a warm election. There is a contest for every elective office except treasurer and justices of peace. The official ballot is being prepared and the following is the names that will appear upon the same,

Mayor—Frank H. Kratka and S. T. Johnson.

City Treasurer—J. W. Wallin.

Municipal Jude—Francis Hibner, N. W. Tarrant and W. C. Smiley.

Alderman-at-Large—(vote for two)—C. A. Robbecke, D. N. Winton and Hans Langseth.

Alderman First Ward—C. L. Dobner and George Williams.

Alderman Second Ward—M. C. Harlow and Matt Barzen.

Alderman Third Ward—S. F. Staples and A. B. Helgeson.

There will not be a very heavy vote polled for the reason that a large number of men are now either in the woods or harvest fields, and the mill is also closed down. If the election had been held a month earlier there would probably have been over 600 votes cast, but now there will not be more than 400. There are some very good candidates and a few very poor ones, but if the voters use good judgement a satisfactory set of officials can be elected.

Born.

Thursday, Oct. 24, to Mr. and Mrs. C. Weiner, a daughter.

Sunday, Oct. 27, to Mr. and Mrs. A. Stenseth, a son.

Friday, Oct. 25, to Mr. and Mrs. John Mortinson, of Tweet, a son.

There has been filed in the U. S. court at Fergus Falls papers in civil actions which the government is instituting against A. L. Morris, Erick J. Swedback and Ole G. Lee, who are charged with cutting timber on government land in Beltrami county. The suit against Swedback is for $1,616.70 that against Morris is for $259.25 while that against Lee is for only $35. Swedback is said to have cut 187,780 feet of timber.

Minnesota ranks first in the number of bushels of wheat raised in 1900; third in the number of bushels of barley; first in the quality of flax; eleventh in the number of bushels of oats, and nineteeth in the number of bushels of corn produced.

Long Distance Talks

The Way We Reach Our Thousands of Customers.

Bargains are very expensive at times. Cheap clothing is always cheap—it's never satisfactory. Guaranteed clothing must be satisfactory, and that means much to the trade. This kind of merchandise is cheap at any price. We are the only clothing house in town that sells guaranteed clothes. We mean what we say—satisfaction or your money back. Remember us and remember what we have said.

We are two doors north of the I. O. O. F. hall.

THE C. O. D. CLOTHING HOUSE

A HEAVY PENALTY

Will be Visited Upon Anyone Who Destroys Survey Marks.

The government is making a vigorous effort to prevent the destruction of the land marks of its surveys. In the timber country especially it is often the case that these are purposely removed and timber is then cut under the pretense the parties were ignorant. The attention of the special deputies has been called to this and they have been instructed to enforce the provisions of the law in the future. This provides for imprisonment for a hundred days and a fine of $250, the informer to receive the of $250, in case any section corner, quarter post or meander mark is removed, or any witness tree defaced or cut down. This matter is important and violators will be carfully looked up during the coming winter.

The Junior C. E. of this city held a meeting last Sunday afternoon. The attendance was 36 with about six new members. Homer Mussey was appointed Secretary in the place of Ralph Douglas who lately resigned. The Society was divided into, three sections, each section to try and win the banner given every three months for attendance. Children if you want to join come to the I. O. O. F. Hall Sunday at 3 P. M. and you can have that privilege free of charge.

MUCH DAMAGE

Prairie Fires Burn Considerable Hay.

Prairie fires west of here in the towns of Bray and Norden did considerable damage last week. In a number of instances farmers lost their hay, and several small buildings were burned. The fires originated on the vacant school lands. On the reservation east of here a large tract of land was burned over, and a number of Indians houses and logs in the river were burned.

The Crookston Journal tells this story on Halvor Steenerson, the well known Crookston attorney: Halvor was walking on the side walk in the Saintly City the other day and meet Major Baumback the United States internal revenue collector, and a friend, and after shaking hands all around very cordially, the major, who is by the way always very fastidious about his personal appearance, called Mr. Steenerson's attention to the fact that his coat was buttoned up unevenly. Mr. Steenerson thanked him for calling his attention to the matter, but declared that it was so purposely. He had just met Congressman Eddy up on Robert street, and had noticed that his coat was buttoned that way, and as he came along he had got to thinking what a vote getter Eddy was, and had reached the conclusion that must be the popular way for a political aspirant to wear his coat and concluded to adopt it himself.

LAST EVENING

Mr. Daniel Shaw and Miss May Vaughan Married.

Last evening at the residence of Father Charles occurred one of the prettiest weddings ever celebrated in Thief River Falls, which united for life Mr. Daniel Shaw and Miss May Vaughan. The ceremony was witnessed by a number of friends, who afterwards went to the residence of Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Dobner where congratulations were extended and a bountiful wedding supper served.

Both the bride and groom are well known in this city and have a large circle of friends. Mr. Shaw is one of this city's progressive real estate dealers, who is doing much for the advancement of Northern Minnesota, while the bride is a handsome and accomplished young lady.

Mr. and Mrs. Shaw at once commenced housekeeping in the Lewin house on the East Side.

Rev. Dade Ordained.

Rev. C. W. Dade was ordained and installed as pastor of the Presbyterian church at an adjourned meeting of the Red River Valley Presbytery held in this city last Friday afternoon.

Many of our subscribers are doubtless also subscribers to The Pioneer Press, and in calling attention to and complimenting that paper on the newspaper par excellence that they have been getting out, we are but echoing the opinion of every person who has had the pleasure of reading that very admirable sheet. Of late The Pioneer Press has given more space to the news of the Northwest and a greater space to sporting news, and has changed the make up of the paper so as to enable the reader to find at a glance just the news he seeks. The brightest and cleverest writers of the Twin Cities are requisitioned to make a paper that will fairly bristle with news, non-partisan and and complete. Editorials that are clean cut, broad and fair. Special stories and features that must appeal to and interest every person who reads them. In fact at every point The Pioneer Press is a news paper and one that all the Northwest may well be proud of and submit in comparison with any paper published in any part of this broad country.

PAPER MILL.

One May Be Be Built Here Next Year.

Geo. W. Mason, well known in this city, arrived here last week from Wisconsin. Mr. Mason is the owner of a water power just south of the city, and is here to ascertain the amount of power that can be developed. If the result of his investigations are favorable, Wisconsin parties with whom he is interested will erect a paper mill here next year. There is unlimited quantities of material around here of which paper can be manufactured, and a mill that will give employment to 200 or more men the year round is one of our possibilities.

Valuable Relic Found.

Mr. Jones the Indian medicine man who has been stopping at the Columbia hotel in this city for some time, is quite an enthusiast on the subject of curios and relics and yesterday as he was going to the cemetery his practical eye detected imbedded in the bank at a point about five feet below the surface of the ground something which at first sight resembled a human skull, but was so slightly exposed that it had never before attracted the attention of the passers. The doctors curiosity was, however, at once aroused and he proceeded to investigate. And after removing a sufficient amount of the the clay in which it was firmly imbedded, he found the article was a large salt water sea shell, which had evidently lain in its bed undisturbed for many ages and probably centuries.

Where it came from and how it got there can never be more than a matter of conjecture. Its open side had at some time been dressed off very smoothly and evenly, and two holes, one on either end, suggest the probability that they had been made for the purpose of suspending the shell from them. The relic is very highly prized by the doctor.—Crookston Journal.

THIEF RIVER FALLS NEWS

By John W. Eastman,

THIEF RIVER FALLS, MINN

The Servian, Roumanian and Bulgarian railroads are owned exclusively by their respective governments.

Boston has added this year 40 portable school houses to its educational equipment, making a total of 56.

Belgium, in 1898, through the purchase of the Grand Central Belge and some minor private roads, became the possessor of the whole Belgian railroad system.

With voluntary subscriptions of $4,000 in hand, a committee in Atlanta, Ga., is making a house-to-house canvass to raise $25,000 to erect a monument ready by the first anniversary of Mr. McKinley's death, and to have President Roosevelt for orator of the day.

The widest possible publicity ought to be given to the action of the magistrate who has held for manslaughter a person who "rocked the boat," and thereby caused the death by drowning of some of those who were with him. The class of those who think it is funny to frighten timid people by this dangerous trick is large and perennial, and anything which will warn or educate them is a public service.

Sandow, the athlete, while in Lyons, France, was attacked in a cafe by some desperadoes with knives. He seized one of them by the back of the neck, lifted him in the air, and with the other hand clutched his feet. Swinging him upward, he brought him down with great force on the center of a table. This blow with a human mallet split the table in two, and the man went through it. The other scoundrels fled.

A duel between women took place the other day at an hotel in Paris. Mme. Louise Nequet, a woman of 30, who had been deserted by her lover, Leon Povison, instead of revenging herself on the latter, sought out her younger rival, Eugenie Cordelle, and challenged her in due form, the result being that Mlle. Cordelle was repeatedly stabbed. The savage encounter would have continued if Povison, who suddenly came upon the scene, had not sent for the police.

The efforts of the state of Alabama to punish persons found guilty of lynching deserve the heartiest praise. Already one man has been sentenced to imprisonment for life for lynching a negro accused of stealing chickens, and two others have been found guilty of murder in the second degree and sentenced to ten years' imprisonment for their part in the same outrage. The courage of the judge and the fidelity of the jury before whom these cases were tried, have been applauded no less warmly by the influential papers of the South than by their Northern contemporaries.

The Costa Rican government has granted to an American-German company a concession to 50,000 acres of coal and agricultural lands lying on both coasts of the country. The term of concession is fifty years, and the company is permitted to use for port purposes, 400 metres of land in every nautical mile of coast line. The company is exempt from import duties and taxation, and is granted railroad and telegraph privileges free. The only stipulation in the agreement is that the company must dispose of one-fifth of its capital stock of five million shares in Costa Rica.

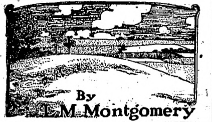
Intelligence has been received from Liberia of the death of a remarkable woman, Martha Ann Ricks, known as Aunt Martha, who made a journey from Liberia to England nine years ago for the purpose of visiting Queen Victoria. At the time of her death she was 85 years old. Her father was John M. Erskine, a slave who purchased his freedom and that of his children, and became a Presbyterian minister. Aunt Martha's greatest achievement was in 1841, when she successfully defended the Haddington Methodist Mission Station with three others against a cannibal chief and 300 natives.

Popular sympathy with a suffering animal and the readiness of the public to relieve such suffering were illustrated recently in St. Louis when a man risked his life to rescue a cat from a narrow ledge on the side of a lofty water tower. The cat had been pursuing a swallow, and although it had climbed down to the ledge alone, was unable to climb back. For several days it remained a prisoner, one hundred and seventy feet from the ground, and suffering severely from hunger and thirst. The man who discovered the cat's predicament climbed the two hundred and twenty-five steps to the top of the tower, and was lowered by a rope to the ledge, forty feet below.

The danger of living in a house that harbors consumptives is illustrated by the fact that of 6,273 patients officially examined by the German Imperial Board of Health 2,177, or 34.7 per cent, belonged to families that included other victims of tuberculosis.

A Frenchman has invented a sleep-producer consisting of bands of metal and other devices for the head, which is called the "vibrating coronet." Sovereigns, on the other hand, suffer from insomnia the moment they find their coronets shaky.

The Cure of the Fields



By L. M. Montgomery

I went adown the great green fields,
 Weary and spent with care;
My heart was sad, and my spirit had
 A burden sore to bear.
But they led me to pray in their own grand way,
 And I left my trouble there.

Great and green and calm were they,
 And they bade me be at rest;
For God was above, and his wondrous love
 In them was manifest;
And to me there came, at a tired child's claim,
 A benediction blest.

"Faith," said the grasses soft and low,
 Oh, but the sound was dear!
"Hope," said the light of the sunshine bright,
 How could I choose but hear?
"Love," said each voice, "and so rejoice,
 Child of the earth, nor fear."

I went my way from the great green fields,
 And I left my sorrow there;
For they had taught my puzzled thought
 The spirit of their prayer,
And I joyed to know that I could not go
 Beyond our Father's care.

When Love Laughed.

(Copyright, 1901, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

It is that I was in this country yet some time when I meet the fair Norah, an' she gave to me the smile of welcome. Oh, no, M'sieu', it is not that I make the flirt with her, but that I am given the introduce by the brave Heiney Gruber, who makes the pretzel at the place of the bakeshop. I am all the time gilding the frame of the pictures in my store. Yes. Heiney bring to me the fair Norah, an' say that she wish to have me to make the frame of the picture of her father, the grand M'sieu' Patrick Dempsey.

Then it is that I have ask Ma'mselle Norah that I may call and make my devoirs. An' she make the smile of sweetness and say to me like this:

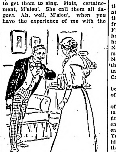
"Sure thing."

So it is that I am often making the call at the house of the Dempsey's. An' bye-an'-bye, the fair Norah she begin to make me the firs' name. An' her papa, he cannot like my firs' name in the French. You see, M'sieu', the firs' name which I have is that of Pierre, an' the papa of Norah, he do not like the French, nor can he make the pronouncing as it shall be, so he call me "Perry."

Mon Dieu, they are awful, these Americaine! The men! Not the women! No. No.

So it come that I have the track on the inside of the othair adorers of the fair Norah. For why? Ah, M'sieu', you ask such a question? Have I not the belle airs, the graces, the accomplishment, the charm of the true son of la belle France? Have you not seen it with your own eyes? Yes.

It is thus, M'sieu'. I take the charming Norah to the chowder party of her father's club an' to the baseball game an' to the hossracing an' to the opera. But not so much to the opera as to the drama. For Norah, she say that she cannot make to like the singing of the prime donne. No. No. It is not that she have not the divine love of the art, but she say that the dagoes get too fresh nowadays anyway, an' it is not to the good to give them the encouragement by spending the money to get them to sing. Mais, certainement, M'sieu'. She call them all dagoes. Ah, well, M'sieu', when you have the experience of me with the fair sex then you will know as I do how to please them. So it is that I take her no more to the opera, but rather to the show where the man stick the hatchet in the head of the other man an' the audience laugh to the very much. Yes. An' I buy the ice cream an' the sodywater. Oh, M'sieu', when one is with the Romans he mus' make the Rome howl. Yes. An' so I have adap' myself to the circumstance an' thus win the heart of the adorable Norah.

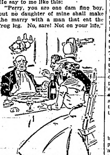


"I have the hand on my heart."

Thus it is that one day I make to her the questioning that she be my wife. I have the hand on my heart, M'sieu', an' make the speech with the grace of only the true gentleman. Ah, you should have seen me, M'sieu'. When I pr'pose it is as the picture from the fan of Watteau, for grace, not for the garments, that is. Yes. An' Norah, she make the blush—oh, the divine blush—an' she drop the eye an' say I mus' see the p'pa.

So I make the call upon M'sieu' Patrick Dempsey at the office of himself, where he sell the street paving. An' I tell to him of my great love that I have for Norah, an' he laugh at me. Mon Dieu! He laugh the bitter laugh—what you call the hoss laugh. Yes. He say to me like this:

"Perry, you are one dam fine boy, but no daughter of mine shall make the marry with a man that eat the frog leg. No, sare! Not on your life,"



"It is not the chicken."

he say. "Begob, none of that will I hov in mine."

Of course, then my heart is to the break utterly. An' when I see Norah she weep upon my shoulder so that I have to spend fifty cents with the tailor to fix the coat once more. But you know the proverb that true love make the laugh at the locksmith. So he also make the merriment at the p'pa. Listen, I will tell it.

It is Norah that have the inspiration. An' it is I that make the inspiration the reality in action. I firs' have the conference with Antoine, my frien'. He is the chef at the Cafe Francaise, an' he say he will be mos' honor' to help me, an' more than mos' happy to be of assistance to the fair Norah. For he have seen her with me at the little supper on occasions. Now, behold, the nex' step is to ask the p'pa Patrick that he an' Norah take the petite dinner with me at the Cafe Francaise. He say:

"Sure, Perry, me boy. But, remember, no frogs; just the plain dinner of the Americans."

An' so it come that he have the seat of honor with me an' Norah at the table. An' I tell him that we have the fine spring chicken of France. An' he eat of the fine spring chicken. Oh, he eat with the mos' heartiness. Yes. Yes. He ask for more, an' Antoine himself bring the more an' urge him that he make himself eat to the full of him. An' at the last, he make the chuckle an' say:

"Perry, they may not know much in France, but, begob, they know how to raise chickens, an' how to fry thim, too, bedad."

Then it is that I am near to the fall out from my chair for the laughter, an' Norah, she too is making the giggle. An' when P'pa Patrick see the laugh that we make he ask what the joke is.

An' Norah she smile an' say:

"Oh, p'pa, dear, it is such a gran' joke on you. It is not the chicken, but the leg of the frog that you have eaten so intensely."

Now, behold the nobility of the M'seul' Dempsey, who have often tol' me that he is from the line of the kings of Irelan'. He look at me an' then at Norah, an' then he laugh until the waiters all look to the table. Then he say:

"Sure, ye are two of the young divil, I must say. But it will be a good t'ing that we have all the frog-eatin' in the family, so Perry, lad, you may have her, an' God forgive the trick ye've played on her poor ol' hungry daddy. But are there any more of thim Frinch chickens in th' kitchen?"

So you see, M'sieu', it is true that the man of gallantry will fin' no obstacle too much to the greatness when he have the grand passion in the heart of him. An' it is also true that the way to the heart of the p'pa-in-law is through the stomach. Yes, it is so.

THE GARROTE IN MANILA.

High Sheriff May be Compelled to Use It at An Execution.

High Sheriff Peterson is wondering how it feels to garrote a man, says the Manila New American. The subject was suggested to him by the discovery that there was a murder case on the docket of Judge Odlin's court and that the mode of punishment prescribed by the Spanish code, under which the courts are now operated, is death in the chair.

The murderer is Lorenzo Antipardo, charged with killing a native policeman last September in Tondo. If convicted and condemned to death, so the learned say, there is but one way to carry out the sentence: Section 101 of the code reads: "The penalty of death shall be executed by garrote upon a scaffold."

The subject seemed to prey upon the sheriff's mind all day yesterday. He wore a preoccupied look and at times was seen to give his hands a sharp, twisting motion, followed by a look of shock and disgust, as in the imagination he heard the neck crack or listened to the strangled victim's dying struggle for breath.

Opinions differed as to the form of the machine by which the death penalty was executed in years gone by. Originally it consisted of a chair with an upright post for a back. To this was attached an iron collar, which fitted around the criminal's neck. Through the post passed a screw, the point of which pressed upon the back of the neck of the man in the chair. One turn of the crossbar handle of this screw forced the point through the cervical vertebrae of the condemned and killed him instantly. This was the machine used in Cuba. Spanish lawyers say that in the Philippines the apparatus differed in that the pointed screw and collar were absent. The back post had a broad board behind the head, through two holes in which passed ropes. The ends of the ropes were fastened to a short board, narrow enough to pass under the chin and cover the throat. The other ends of the rope wound round a drum, and when this was turned the throat piece was drawn back till the victim's wind was shut off—and—strangulation—followed. If properly worked the shock killed instantly or rendered the man unconscious, but if the executioner faltered slow death by suffocation ensued and the struggles of the unfortunate were terrible to witness and listen to.

Might Have Been Worse.

While things were humming in the ballet-room of the New York Metropolitan Opera House one day last week a section of the ballet was called to the fore to rehearse an "Indian" ballet. There was nothing in the girls' costumes to indicate the character of the dance, but as they came whooping and gyrating down the stage in front of Albertieri with their tin tomahawks, some one looking on remarked: "What? You got a Carrie Nation ballet?" "No," said Albertieri wearily: "Eet eez no zo bad as zat. Eeet ees only Indians."

Milling in Minnesota.

With its several hundred monster mills Minnesota easily leads the country in its milling industry. The annual output of Minneapolis mills amounts to over 13,000,000 barrels, and the combined capacity of the state's mills is considerably over 100,000 barrels a day. The Minneapolis mills are the finest in the world, and one system of five of them grinds about 20,000,000 bushels of wheat a year.

Diversion.

There was an old cheesemonger I knew once who was fined for having a lump of bacon fat stuck under the profit side of his butter scales. I spoke to him about it as delicately as I could. "I didn't ought to ha' done it so clumsy, o' course," he said. "But you see my weights was all wrong, too, and that might ha' meant imprisonment. So I had to divart suspicion."—London King.

No Horse Races for Buenos Ayres Officials.

The mayor of Buenos Ayres has issued an order prohibiting those municipal employes who handle the public funds from attending the races. An investigation has shown that on race days a majority of the office holders were not to be found at their posts, but at the race track.

His Admission.

"I hear that you are engaged, Goldthorp," said Sterlingworth. "Is it time for congratulations?" "Well, I won't acknowledge that," replied the happy young man, "but I'm about to confer upon a certain young lady the right to select my neckties for me."—Detroit Free Press.

THE TIME TO LAUGH.

SOME GOOD JOKES, ORIGINAL AND SELECTED.

The Big Bostonian Got a Seat, but Had to Take Keen Retort in the Bargain —A Quiet Retreat—Uncle Rastus' Philosophy.

PERFECTLY PLAIN.

Uncle 'Rastus, who was seeking information concerning mushrooms, had been referred by a preternaturally solemn student to the professor of botany, and with hat in hand he was addressing that dignitary.

"Would yo' mind tellin' me, Mistah Mandrake," he said, "how to 'stinguish a musharoon f'm a toadstool?"

"Willingly," replied the professor. "In the first place, you must remember that the amanita phalloides, or deadly agaric, closely resembles the agaricus campestris, or edible fungus, which is our common variety and absolutely innocuous. Next, it will be necessary to fix firmly in your mind the distinguishing marks or characteristics of the agaricus campestris, which are these: A pileus not covered with excrescence-like scales; gills of a brownish purple when mature; stalk solid and approximately cylindrical; ring near middle of stalk; base not bulbous and not sheathed by membrane. The distinguishing characteristics of the amanita phalloides, or deadly agaric, are these: Pileus destitute of distinct excrescences; white gills, hollow stalk; large ring, and prominent bulb at base, with membraneous upper margin. Bearing these points of differentiation fully in mind, you will never be at a loss to determine which variety you encounter in any given case."

"Yes, suh," said Uncle 'Rastus, turning his hat round and round in his fingers. "I un'stan' dat all right, but how's I gwine tell 'em apaht?"—Chicago Tribune.

HE GOT A SEAT.

A man who looked from his physical proportions as if he could back up any remark he might care to make in public boarded a Boston (Mass.) car the other night. The car was filled, but the man happened to get in a row which held only four passengers. None of them made any sign of an indication to move up and give him a seat. He hinted repeatedly, but received no encouragement, and finally said gruffly, so as to be heard by every passenger in the car:

"These benches are made for five human beings or four car hogs."

His rebuke caused a general laugh, which was quickly turned on him when one of the four men arose to leave the car. As he stepped off he remarked:

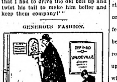
"You are mistaken. These benches were made for four—three human beings and one car hog. Take your seat."

A QUIET RETREAT.

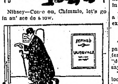
"The doctor recommended me to go to a farmhouse for two weeks this summer," said the man of nerves, "and I'm wondering if he ever passed a night outside of a city. On my first night the tree toads kept me awake, on my second the roosters crowed from midnight on, and in my third a big bullfrog in the horse pond didn't permit me to close my eyes. I got up next morning and told the farmer I couldn't stand it and must go, and he heard me in surprise and said:

"'Why, man, I've had summer boarders here who got so lonesome nights that I had to drive the old bull up and twist his tail to make him beller and keep them company!'"

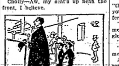
GENEROUS FASHION.



Nibsey—Come on, Chimmie, let's go in an' see de show.



Cholly—Aw, my seat's up neah the front, I believe.



Chimmie—Dere's no use talkin', a dood is some good, after all.

NOW HE KNOWS.

"I have read a good deal about killing mosquitoes with kerosene," said the breathless man who had climbed six flights of stairs to ask the question, "and I wish you would tell me how they do it."

"They drown them in it," responded the answers-to-queries editor. "If you bet that they soak them in the kerosene and touch a match to them you have lost. Call again."

FOOLING A THEATER AUDIENCE.

Apropos of the wave of melodrama now almost engulfing the local stage, Justice Jerome recalls this story of his father, the late Lawrence R. Jerome, who as "Larry" Jerome was one of the best known of the old school of practical jokers and "men about town." With a friend Mr. Jerome was watching the progress of a real heart thriller of the old days, the plot, of course, revolving about the disposition of a mortgage that threatened to thwart the happiness of the heroine—the charming Mrs. John Hoey, in her day as popular as any actress of these times. With the plot at its thickest, the heroine in despair, the villain triumphant, and the outlook in every way dark for the persecuted girl as the curtain was descending at the end of the third act, "Larry" Jerome, with tears rolling down his cheeks, rose from his seat and in most impassioned tones, his voice broken with sobs, but audible all over the house, exclaimed to his companion:

"By heaven, Tom, I'll pay that mortgage myself!"

Then this consummate old joker and clever actor strolled out into the lobby to enjoy one of the biggest sensations a first night audience at Wallack's had had in their lives. Incidentally, too, the ruse of Jerome's helped materially to the making of the play.—New York Times.

JOHNNY ON THE CAMEL.

The camel is a large and homely animal and has warts on its knees. You can ride a camel if you want to, but I would rather pay 15 cents and walk. Still, if anybody needs exercise and has a camel I think he ought to ride him. The camel is a very patient animal. He will chew his victuals five minutes and still not have them ready to swallow, but keeps on chewing. The camel frequents deserts and caravans, and has one or two lumps on his back. He is often spoken of in the Bible and in Ben-Hur. We ought to read our Bibles every day and be good. Once there was a lion that dared a camel to run a race, and the camel took him up. They ran three times around the glittering arena and neither one was ahead, but when they dashed under the wire on the home stretch the camel straightened out his neck and won by nearly six feet. The camel has three compartments in his stomach and his hair is useful for making shawls and paint brushes.

"Weary," said Mr. Waggles side partner, as they reposed on a slant of tender turf beside the quiet highway, "do you know what Jigsby's been a-sayin' about you?"

"Nop," said the great man, as he looked longingly into the void of his battered can; "wot's he been sayin'?"

"He says," replied the side partner, "that you was once so hard up that you actually sawed an armful o' wood fer a widder woman."

"It's easy enuff to see wot that story means," said the great wanderer gloomily.

"Wot does it mean, Weary?"

"It means blackmail; that's wot it means."

"You said," asserted the irate customer, "that this tonic would make hair grow."

"I did," admitted the clerk.

"Oh, that's all right," answered the clerk promptly. "You have no hair to grow. If you had the tonic would work all right. What more can you expect?"

How Successful Farmers Operate This Department of the Farm—A Few Hints as to the Care of Live Stock and Poultry.

Autumn Feeding.

When a starving man is taken out of a boat in midocean he is hungry. The folk who rescue him have abundance of food and wealth of sympathy, but they have also a proper amount of common sense resulting from experience. The hungry man does not possess this common sense; he would gorge himself if allowed to do so. The rescuers are kind folk but they seem cruel when out of their abundance they allow him but a meager meal. They know, however, that "full feeding" would injure the starving man—experience has taught them the necessity and advantages of "going slow." Is not this somewhat akin to circumstances and facts attending the fall feeding of swine? This year there are many hungry hogs. They have fared sparingly for months, but rescuing rains came lately and food has been furnished at the later day when hope had about vanished in many localities. The hog would naturally "hog" himself if allowed to get at all the food his appetite could dispose of, but it would be as unsafe for the hog to gorge himself as for the starved sailor man suddenly surrounded with plenty. And yet there will be lots of this dangerous "stuffing" with new feed this fall. It is a process of ruining hogs that goes on unchecked every fall. In average years when corn is plentiful it is followed worse than will be the case this autumn when corn in many districts is somewhat of a luxury. But despite the fact that corn is scarce there is doubtless some food that the owner of hogs will feel that he can now spare in large quantities to make up for the lack of food during the dry months when pastures were withered and other foods scarce and high priced. Such food will give by far the best results if it is fed in small quantities at first and gradually increased in amount after the swine become accustomed to it. At the same time the best results are to be had each year when the corn is balanced with other rations to make a complete food for the young hogs. They require all the constituents of food that go to form bone and blood and muscle. If they are given all the young corn they can eat the first result will be to set up indigestion and where this takes place the food does not give the desired gain of weight daily. If the corn does not cause indigestion and the hog commences to assimilate it thoroughly and consequently put on weight fast that is no proof that the corn is doing the work expected of it. It is making lots of fat before the young animal has a frame to carry the weight safely and the result in many cases is that the bones being weak the legs "give" at the ground and the pig walks upon its pastern joints. If, on the other hand, the hog be gradually accustomed to the abundant food supply of fall and the corn be mixed with a due proportion of nitrogenous food such as skim milk, ground middlings, barley, oats, bran, oilmeal or any of the other grain foods and products along with clover hay there will be produced a healthy, normally strong and fully developed frame and supply of muscle and blood which will enable the animal to lay on fat later on without sickness or accident. We are fully convinced that while the pig is kept growing from weaning time to winter feeding there need be no appearance of fat about it. The main thing is to encourage the growth of frame, large digestive organs, fully exercised lungs, ample supply of healthy blood and disposition to hustle rather than loaf and sleep. Given this kind of young hog as the result of judicious fall feeding and there is little difficulty or danger in placing it later upon a full feed of corn and it is this kind of hog that returns the largest return of gain for amount of food consumed. We must be excused for drumming this advice into the young beginners so persistently, but we shall continue to do so until the idea becomes generally accepted as correct. Already the results of the discussion of this subject of hog growing and feeding along sensible lines are seen in the general interest taken in the publications of the various agricultural experiment stations regarding swine—experiments which a few years ago were apt to be considered needless and uninstructive. It has also led to a general inquiry regarding the improvement of brood sows and methods by which litters may be increased and more milk furnished for their nourishment.

Skim-Milk Calves.

A report of the Kansas Experiment Station says: Feeders find that the average skim-milk calf does not make profitable gains in the feed lot and will not buy him. Farmers find that the difference in price between an ordinary skim-milk calf and one that has run with the cow is frequently greater than the profits made from milking, and they drop dairy work. The Kansas Experiment Station recently fattened 130 head of calves for baby beef. These were divided into nine lots—one lot of ten had been raised by hand with skim-milk, and another lot of ten had run with their dams in small pastures until weaning. Both lots were put in fattening yards at weaning and were fed for seven months on alfalfa hay and corn. The results are as follows:

Calves raised with dam gained 435 pounds per head; amount of corn required to make 100 pounds gain, 475; amount of alfalfa required to make 100 pounds' gain, 472.

Skim-milk calves gained 440 pounds; amount of corn required to make 100 pounds' gain, 439; amount of alfalfa required for 100 pounds' gain, 436 pounds.

The skim-milk calves were fed until weaning on sterilized skim-milk with a grain ration composed of equal parts of corn and Kafir corn, with all the alfalfa hay they would eat. They were fed in this way twenty-two weeks and made an average daily gain of one and a half pounds per calf. The feed to raise these calves to weaning cost $5.27 per head. As the results show, they were in good condition for feeding when weaned and the experiment shows strongly the good feeding qualities of the skim-milk calf and the profits that can be made from it, when the calf is properly handled from birth to weaning and then pushed for baby beef. The college herd of scrub cows, bought without regard to their value for the dairy, produced in a year, at creamery prices, milk worth $37.75 per cow. The skim-milk calves which were fattened in this experiment were of mixed breeding and were selected without regard to their value for the production of baby beef. They brought an average of $40 each when marketed at about a year old.

Of Interest to Guernsey Breeders.

The American Guernsey Cattle Club has adopted an "advanced registry for cattle of that breed," with the object of encouraging greater development of the milk capacities in the cows. The secretary sends the Farmers' Review a statement of the requirements, which are as follows:

All cows admitted must equal or exceed one of the following records:

Years' Milk Record—If record is commenced the day the animal is two years, or previous to that day, she must produce within one year from that date 6,000 lbs of milk. For each day the animal is over two years old at the beginning of her year's record the amount of milk she will be required to produce in the year will be established by adding 3.65 lbs for every such day to the 6,000 lbs required when two years old. This ratio is applicable until the animal is five years old, when the required amount will have reached 10,000 lbs., which will be the amount of milk required of all cows five years old or over.

Years Butter Fat Record—If record is commenced the day the animal is two years old, or previous to that day, she must produce within one year from that date 250.5 lbs butter fat. For each day the animal is over two years old at the beginning of her year's record, the amount of butter fat she will be required to produce in the year will be established by adding .1 (one-tenth) of a pound for each such day to the 250.5 lbs. required when two years old. This ratio is applicable until the animal is five years old, when the required amount will have reached 360 lbs., which will be the amount of butter fat required of all cows five years or over.

Seven Days' Butter Fat Record—If record is commenced the day the animal is two years old, or, previous to that day, she must produce within seven days from that date 10 lbs butter fat. For each day the animal is over two years old at the beginning of her seven-day record, the amount of butter fat she will be required to produce in the seven days will be established by adding .00456 (456 hundred thousandths) of a pound for each such day to the 10 lbs. required when two years old. This ratio is applicable until the animal is five years old, when the required amount will have reached 15 lbs., which will be the amount of butter fat required of all cows five years or over.

The above yearly standards are based upon one complete year's record from the time of beginning, regardless of the time lost by being dry or calving during that period, should such be the case.

The per cent of butter fat shall be determined by the Babcock test. For the purpose of estimating the amount of butter from the amounts of butter fat produced, we recognize the rule approved by the Association of Agricultural Colleges and Experiment Stations, namely, "add one-sixth to the amount of butter fat." It should be understood, however, that in all records made for or published in the Advanced Register the amount of butter fat produced will only be given.

For further information, Guernsey breeders should write to the secretary, W. H. Caldwell, Peterboro, N. H.

An Illinois breeder of swine says: Having selected the breed, you should use great care in the choice of breeding animals. Let them be the best specimens and not the culls or those that will not sell. No successful breeder does or can sell his best female animals. They are worth more to him than to anyone else, especially if he expects to remain in the business. The best and most profitable animals are those you have raised yourself and whose ancestry you know.

T. J. Van Matre: A life-long experience and observation have confirmed me in the belief that there is no branch of farming or stock-raising conducted with a reasonable amount of judgment, and persistently staid with one year after another that will do better by the farmer than hog husbandry; provided always that your farm is adapted to corn and clover, because these are the main essentials in the cheap production of pork.

Dairy Notes.

It is impossible to have clean dairy products without at the same time having clean utensils and apparatus, with clean rooms and pure air. This is true of the work in the creamery and the dairy as well as in the farm house. The creamery is better suited to the control of conditions than the farm house, but in spite of that fact many creameries are not kept clean nor are the utensils with which the employes work kept clean. Yet with live steam and proper arrangement of steaming boxes there is no need of allowing dirt to accumulate. It requires some science to wash utensils properly. Tinware should not be plunged into hot water at first, but should be first rinsed in luke-warm water. After the milk has been rinsed off the vessel may be washed in water as hot as the hands can bear, and soap may be used. After the washing has been thoroughly done the last rinsing should be in boiling hot water. Then the vessel should be put into the steam tank and thoroughly steamed till all bacterial life has disappeared. As a last touch expose the tins to sunlight. It is believed that one of the best ways of cleansing dairy glassware is to soak it in water heated gradually and in which has been dissolved a quantity of alkali. After soaking till the glass is apparently clean rinse it in hot water and allow it to drain. The heat in the glass will dry it. The creamery or dairy building should be washed daily with soap and hot water. Where separators are used the slime should be daily burned up. This will destroy the disease germs that too often exist in it. It has been found that in very many cases the germs of tuberculosis exist in immense quantities in this slime. The germs being quite heavy are thrown by the centrifugal motion into the refuse. If the refuse be simply thrown out of doors the germs become dry and float in the air to be breathed by animals and human beings and perhaps be carried into the milk and milk products. Burning is preferable to burying in all cases.

The following suggestions as to the methods to be used in creameries are the result of experience and will be found useful: Do not spare the scrubbing brush in cleaning the creamery. Brushes and soap, though used in considerable quantities, are money well invested. . . . An old creamery man says that the refrigerator room should be cleaned and aired once a week. Some of the refrigerator rooms are kept in a foul condition, the manager evidently desiring not to disturb the continuity of the low temperature. Even at a low temperature it is possible for dirt to exert a bad influence on the products that are exposed to it. The germs, though latent for a time, may become active when exposed to a temperature suitable for their development. . . . The skimmilk tank should have constant attention. The manager of the creamery cannot afford to have it become foul, as sooner or later that foulness will be brought back to the creamery in the milk of the patrons that use their sweet milk cans for the purpose of taking home the skimmilk. In warm weather, at least, the skimmilk tank should be emptied every day and washed out, and care must be taken to do the work thoroughly. This is one of the greatest sources of bad flavor in butter. . . . The cans of the patrons should be also kept in mind and the creamery manager can well afford to have them thoroughly washed and steamed out frequently. How often will depend on conditions and the degree of cleanliness prevalent among the patrons.

The Yearly Milk Yield.

Professor Dean of the Guelph Experiment station says that no cow that gives less than 6,000 pounds of milk per year should be retained in the farmer's herd of milch cows. The standard set by the professor is one easily in reach of all the farmers now living in dairy sections, or in sections where beef production has not been made the main thing in stock raising. Taking the year as a whole, 6,000 pounds a year means only an average of about 16 pounds of milk per day, or about eight quarts, an average of four quarts at a milking. Certainly this is a moderate demand on the performance of the cow. Of course we realize that during a part of the year the cow is dry, but this period is not often more than a month in duration, and for the first six months the milk flow is so large that the average for the year is not difficult to reach. The farmer will find it very easy to ascertain the weight of his milk, and no such experience is required as in the case of the Babcock milk test. Every farmer that keeps milch cows should have scales in his barn for the weighing of the milk. The men that follow their milk yields continually say that it requires less than a minute per cow per day to do this. The farmer can then act intelligently. At the end of a year he can tell what his cows are doing in the way of producing revenue. Of course the comparative richness of the milk should be known, but this may be ascertained by periodic tests for fat. Even without this test, the scales will do good work in showing the farmer what his cows are doing.

A bushel of corn makes four and one-half gallons of spirits, making it cost 13½ cents at 60 cents a bushel for corn. At 45 cents the spirits cost 10 cents, a difference of 3½ cents.

ETIQUETTE AND TRUTH.

Imitations are so perfect nowadays that they deceive the very elect, and those who esteem themselves connoisseurs should be careful how they admire the fine lace, jewel and tapestries belonging to their friends, lest they should lose their reputation for discrimination.

"What would you do in a case like this?" said an honest but tactful woman the other day. "I have a bit of arras framed into my library and wall which is a capital imitation of the best Beauvais tapestry, but after all it is not genuine and I never have pretended that it was. Some time ago Mrs. ———, who prides herself on her knowledge of curios of every description and is herself a great collector of tapestries, came to see me. 'What a beautiful specimen of Beauvais!' she said as she was going out and noticed the panel. 'Where did you get it?' Now, what was I to say? To tell her it was an imitation was to show her her mistake, which would undoubtedly vex and mortify her, while I did not like to take the credit dishonestly, as far as I was concerned, of allowing her to believe my imitation tapestry was genuine. I concluded, however, it would be more tactful to let the matter pass without enlightening her, so I simply said, 'I got it in Paris,' and changed the subject; but now comes my dilemma. She is one of the patronesses of a loan exhibition which they are getting up for charity, and this morning I had a note from her asking me if I would do them the favor of lending them my 'beautiful specimen of Beauvais tapestry.' I am at my wits' end to know what I ought to do about it. Of course, if I refuse it will seem churlish, and under the circumstances I certainly cannot explain!"—Daily News.

FOR BRIDAL ATTENDANCE.

Ingenuity is racked these days to devise fanciful costumes for bridesmaids and train-bearers. Close lace caps for the little train-bearers are a fancy of the hour. At a recent wedding in St. George's, Hanover square, London, the bride's train was borne by three little girls in empire gowns of ivory and white chine silk veiled in white chiffon, with fichus of the chiffon and high mauve sashes. They carried baskets of mauve sweet peas and wore the close little lace caps. At another wedding there were two train-bearers who wore quaint long-waisted Stuart frocks of white satin and had white chiffon fichus caught together with white roses. The roses were used also to border the close lace caps which the little maidens wore. There were nine bridesmaids at this last wedding and they were dressed in rose gowns with attention paid to every detail, says the Daily News. Their dresses were of white mechlin lace over silk. The frills of the skirt were strewn with pink rose petals, and heading the frills all around were garlands of pink roses and foliage. The waists had transparent yokes and sleeves and were finished with fichus of ruffled net covered with garlands of pink roses and foliage. The sleeves were caught at the elbow with roses. The hats were composed entirely of rose petals, the crowns were wreathed with roses, and there were great bunches of them on the turned-up brims.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS.

Starch left over after the ironing day should not be thrown away. A little boiled Defiance starch added to the hearthstone used on doorsteps will make them last longer and cold-water starch can be allowed to settle, when the liquid can be poured off and the rest left to dry for use again.

A little carbolic acid in the water used to wipe floors and woodwork will keep the room free from fleas and various small insects that often infest a summer cottage, particularly if it is located in the woods. The same treatment is of value in the city house if the presence of bad vermin is suspected.

The best background for pictures is plain terra cotta or brown paper. A woman who is the proud possessor of many old prints and engravings has them in her dining-room. The walls are covered with wrapping paper, or something that looks very like it, and above is a frieze of orange distemper. The picture rails and woodwork are white. The hangings are of orange-colored velveteen. All the furniture is mahogany.

Schools in Porto Rico.

The expense of maintaining schools in Porto Rico is very high if we consider the amount spent for the small number of pupils enrolled. Education, however, is always essential to success. In our country the people are being educated to the fact that there is a sure cure for indigestion, dyspepsia, constipation, nervousness and malaria, fever and ague, and that medicine is Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. Try it. Our Private Die Stamp is over the neck of the bottle.

POULTRY.

A Half-Column of Don'ts and Nevers.

Don't breed a Hamburg that has a single comb.

Never use a "clay-breasted" Partridge Cochin female.

Never use a bronze turkey tom that has a slim shank.

Never use a bird that shows any tendency to knock-knees.

Never breed extremes in form or color if at all avoidable.

Never use a bird that has a natural deformity of any kind.

Never use a bird that is inferior in size to its sex of its breed.

Avoid white birds that have straw-colored backs and wing bows.

Never discard goose or gander because of its age—the older the better.

Never use a pullet to sell eggs from until you have tested her laying qualities.

Never mate a male of any breed that is easily cowed by all the other males.

Never use one that has a scant leg and toe feathering, if a feather-legged breed.

Never use a Pekin duck that does not walk quite erect, nor one that has a short body.

Never use one of the pinkish-white shanks if its breed calls for yellow or dark yellow shanks.

The Teacher's Wife.

Clarissa, Minn., Oct. 28th.—Mrs. Clara Keys, wife of Charles Keys, school teacher of this place, tells a wonderful story.

For years her life was one of misery. Her back ached all the time, her head ached all the time, her back ached all the time; neuralgia pains drove her to desperation. She used much medicine, but failed to get any relief till she tried Dodd's Kidney Pills.

"Very soon after I began using Dodd's Kidney Pills all my aches and pains vanished like the morning dew. I consider this remedy a God-send to suffering womanhood."

Encouraged by their success in her own case, Mrs. Keys induced her mother, an old lady of 74 years, to use Dodd's Kidney Pills for her many aches and pains. Now both mother and daughter rejoice in perfect freedom from illness or suffering, which is something neither had enjoyed for years before.

Care of the Complexion.

Many persons with delicate skin suffer greatly in winter from chapping. Frequently the trouble arises from the use of impure soap and cheap salves. The face and hands should be washed only in clear, hot water with Ivory Soap. A little mutton tallow or almond oil may be used after the bath to soften the skin.

GHOST ON GUARD

SO DEAD MAN'S TREASURE IS DUG UP IN THE DAYTIME.

GHOSTLY FIGURE WAVED THEM OFF

THREE NIGHTS IN SUCCESSION MEN FIND A SHADE HOLDING VIGIL.

WATCHING OVER ITS TREASURE

KETTLE HALF FILLED WITH SILVER REWARDS THE SEARCHERS.

Goshen, N. Y., Oct. 28. — About six months ago the body of "Long John" Noonan, an eccentric man who for years has lived alone, was found in a lonesome little hut on the William H. Cole farm near State Hill. "Long John" had been dead for at least two weeks and his body had been horribly eaten by rats. He was known to have a considerable amount of money, but the closest search failed to reveal its whereabouts.

The last man to see Noonan alive was Everett Decker, who saw him going across the fields with a kettle in his hand. Curiously enough Decker was one of the men who found the body. He also searched for the kettle with the assistance of neighbors, but the search was finally given up and the incident forgotten until about a week ago, when two young men named Hardick and Kirby told of seeing a spectral figure sitting under a tree in a field across the road from Noonan's hut.

The story was received with incredulity, but the young men clung to it, and remembering the legend of the kettle went at night to dig beneath the tree, but the ghostly figure still sat there and warningly waved them off. They went three nights in succession, but each time found the ghost at his lonely vigil. Finally it occurred to Kirby to go in the day time, and after digging beneath the tree he found the kettle. It was covered with an old piece of table oilcloth and half filled with silver.

NEGLECT RICH MAN'S SON.

Teachers in Michigan School Allow Studies to Be Ignored.

Ypsilanti, Mich., Oct. 28.—A member of last spring's graduating class of the state normal is this year in a small town in the Upper Peninsula spending eight hours a day as private tutor to a fourteen-year-old boy who, although he was last year in the eighth grade of a public school, cannot read words of two syllables and is no less ignorant in other branches.

The boy is the son of a wealthy lumberman, and as he is strongly averse to study of any description has been allowed by his teachers to pass from one grade to another without doing any of the required work. The father practically owns the town and the teachers feared to antagonize him through his son, so permitted the boy to spend his time in idleness in the schoolroom. The father had no idea of such a state of affairs until one day this summer he asked the boy to read before company, when, by discovering his lamentable ignorance in this line, he was led to investigate the whole subject of his education.

CLOSES WITH ENTERTAINMENT.

Indiana Federation of Women's Clubs Adjourns at Auburn.

Auburn, Ind., Oct. 28.—The closing session of the Federation of Women's Clubs was greeted with an audience that overflowed the spacious hall. In absence of Mrs. Henrotin of Chicago Miss Dietrickson of the university at Greencastle was heard. She recently visited Norway, her native country, and told of many of its customs and ideas, singing songs in her own native tongue and in English. Dr. Buchtel of Auburn rendered a violin solo. Mrs. Kelso of Chicago closed the program with a number of songs and extracts from Kipling's works. The first federation meeting was called to order with a tack hammer and the present meeting with Mrs. H. B. McCord's stocking darner.

PRESIDENT'S BIRTHDAY.

Mr. Roosevelt's Forty-Third Anniversary Falls on Sunday.

Washington, Oct. 28.—Yesterday was the forty-third anniversary of the birth of President Roosevelt. Occurring on Sunday, there was no formal celebration and the day was spent very quietly. Dr. Nichols, a friend from Baltimore, was at the White House a portion of the day and in the evening Commander Cowles was a guest at dinner. The president attended religious services at Grace Reformed church as usual.

Italian Claims the Men Were Trying to Swindle Him.

Denver, Oct. 28.—Mike Vittle, an Italian, shot John Njelm, Oscar Hill and W. J. Freeman in a quarrel over the ownership of a saloon at Nineteenth and New Haven streets. Njelm will die and the others are seriously wounded. Vittle says the men were trying to swindle him.

Rural Mail in Northern Minnesota.

Crookston, Oct. 28.—Postmaster Elkon has received word from the department of the establishment of the first rural mail delivery rout in Northern Minnesota. The route will be about six miles in length and will run from here to Gentilly. All persons living within eighty rods of the stage route may avail themselves of the service. The service will begin Dec. 2.

LUMBER IN ASHES.

Ten Million Feet of Lumber Is Destroyed, Causing a Loss of About $200,000.

Iron River, Wis., Oct. 27.—Fire yesterday destroyed ten million feet of lumber at the Alexander & Edgar yards here. The loss will amount to about $200,000. The lumber was all of the best quality. The fire simply burned itself out. There was a strong wind and no way to stop the fire. The wind happened to be right on the mill or the greater portion of the town would have been destroyed. The fire is supposed to have started from a spark from the mill. There was difficulty in getting the water works started, and the pump at the mill was out of order. An engine was called from Superior, forty-nine miles away, but it arrived too late. The lumber is all insured.

CHILD ROASTED.

Seriously Burned in Hot Ashes, but May Live.

Grand Forks, N. D., Oct. 27.—Gottlieb Klein and his wife, with their one child, aged two years, live near Washburn, in a small shanty. At the rear of the cabin is a hole in the ground into which ashes have been dumped to prevent coals from blowing about. A few days ago the two parents went to visit a neighbor, leaving the child at home. Before leaving Mrs. Klein removed the ashes from the stove and threw them into the hole. During their absence the child in some way got out of the house and went on a tour of exploration around the premises. He fell into the hole, on top of the hot ashes, and there he remained until the arrival of his parents, about two hours later. The child was terribly burned, and suffered fearfully, but when last heard from was thought likely to live.

WOLVES KILL SHEEP.

One Farmer Has Lost 100 Sheep the Past Year.

Granite Falls, Minn., Oct. 27—Wolves in this county are attacking the sheep herds. Mr. Langmaid, a farmer living in Minnesota Falls township, reports that he has had a hundred sheep killed by the wolves this season. Mr. Griswold had eleven killed in one night recently. Mr. Langmaid has to send a man or boy out with the sheep when they are in the pasture just to keep the wolves away. Some good sport might be gotten out of a hunt as well as some practical good done. Wolves are frequently seen prowling along the highway by farmers coming to town.

DODGES BULLETS.

Bold Attempt of Three Men to Hold Up a Storekeeper.

Grand Forks, N. D., Oct. 27.—Three men entered the second-hand store of M. Rosenswag on Third street about 7 o'clock, and while two of them engaged Rosenswag in conversation the third drew a revolver and demanded money. Rosenswag failed to comply and the robber sent a bullet past his ear. Rosenswag ducked behind the counter in time to dodge a second bullet and made a long dive through the window into the street, cutting his had on the broken glass, as he went through. Two arrests were made on suspicion.

MYSTERIOUSLY MISSING.

Butterfield, Minn., Man Disappears—Had Money With Him.

Comfrey, Minn., Oct. 27. — John D. Rupp, a resident of Butterfield, a town near here, has disappeared. His absence dates from last May. During that month he was known to have had a check cashed for a large amount of money. Soon after this he disappeared and no clew has yet been discovered that tends to throw any light on the subject. He was about forty-five years old, single, and is said to have had considerable money. His brother has arrived from Kansas and is endeavoring to solve the mystery.

ANOTHER DOWIE CONVERT.

Belvidere, Minn., Farmer Joins the Zion City Colony.

Red Wing, Minn., Oct. 27. — W. E. Holst, a well-to-do farmer who has lived for many years in Belvidere, this county, has sold his property and joined Dowie's Zion City. He has a wife and several children. Mr. Holst was converted to the Dowie Creed by some pamphlets sent him. He sold his farm for $6,100 but it is not known whether he turned over all his money to the alleged prophet.

The Dietic and Hygienic Gazette says: "Walter Baker & Co., of Dorchester, Mass., U. S. A., have given years of study to the skilful preparation of cocoa and chocolate, and have devised machinery and systems peculiar to their methods of treatment, whereby the purity, palatability, and highest nutrient characteristics are retained. Their preparations are known the world over, and have received the highest endorsements from the medical practitioner, the nurse, and the intelligent housekeeper and caterer."

GET RICH BOOTY

ROBBERS AT BEREA, OHIO, LOOT A SAFE OF $100,000 AND ESCAPE.

LARGE SAFE IS BLOWN TO ATOMS

EXPLOSION DAMAGES THE HARDWARE STORE IN WHICH IT STANDS.

DILIGENT SEARCH FOR THIEVES

LARGE PART OF PLUNDER IS PROPERTY OF BALDWIN UNIVERSITY.

Bera, Ohio, Oct. 29.—One of the boldest safe robberies ever perpetrated in this vicinity occurred at an early hour Saturday morning in almost the heart of the village. The hardware store of Lawrence & Brightman was entered, the large safe was cracked, and the robbers made good their escape with more than $100,000. Baldwin university bears the heaviest loss. C. C. Brightman, the junior member of the firm, is also the treasurer and trustee of Baldwin university, and all of the valuable papers of the institution which were left in Brightman's custody were kept in the safe. Bonds, notes and mortgages of the university aggregating $100,000 in value were secured by the robbers. Many of the notes held by Baldwin university were of long standing and bore numerous indorsements, making it impossible to produce them in duplicate.

No Clue to Thieves.

A diligent search for the thieves has been instituted, but as yet no clew as to their whereabouts or identity has been established. A fact regarded as most singular is that the explosion of the safe was hear by parties residing a half-mile north and more than that distance southwest of the center of town, while those residing in the business district were unaware that an explosion had occurred. The force of the explosion was most terrific. The safe was constructed on fire and burglar proof principles, yet the heavy doors were twisted from their hinges as if made of paper, and large pieces of the safe doors were firmly imbedded in the walls of the building, one section weighing fifty pounds being blown clear through a partition into an adjoining room. Six men are believed to have been engaged in the affair.

STILL A PRISONER.

Nothing Is Made Public Regarding Progress of Negotiations.

Samakoff, Bulgaria, Oct. 29, 5:30 p. m.—The release of Miss Stone, the missionary, has not yet been effected.

Constantinople, Oct. 27.—During the last few days there has been a voluminous exchange of dispatches in cipher between Spencer Eddy, secretary of the United States legation, and Consul General Dickinson, who is now in Sofia, regarding the efforts to rescue Miss Stone. The legation is reticent and nothing has been made public as to the progress of the negotiations.

Washington, Oct. 29.—The state department officials had no news to give out to-day regarding Miss Ellen M. Stone, the American missionary now in the hands of the Bulgarian brigands. They are continuing unceasingly in their efforts to obtain her release, and again to-day messages were sent to Consul General Dickinson, now at Sofia, and to Spencer Eddy, the charge at Constantinople, urging immediate efforts for the establishment of communication between the missionaries and the captors of Miss Stone. The officials continue hopeful of ultimately securing her release.

London, Oct. 29. — "A trustworthy report is in circulation here," says a dispatch from Sofia to the Daily Telegraph, "that Miss Stone is in the village of Belitza, close to the frontier."

TEARS SHED FOR POWERS.

He Is Again Convicted as Accessory to Goebel's Murder.

Georgetown, Ky., Oct. 29.—Ex-Secretary of State Caleb Powers Saturday was again convicted of accessory before the fact to the murder of Gov. William Goebel in January, 1900 and was for the second time sentenced to imprisonment for life. The second trial began Oct. 8. Arguments were limited so that the case went to the jury at 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon, and a verdict of guilty soon followed. Powers sat pale and motionless when the verdict was announced by the foreman, B. S. Calvert, his old schoolmate. Opposite Powers, on the other side of the courtroom with the attorneys, sat Arthur Goebel, brother of the late senator and governor. The attorneys of Powers shook his hand and expressed aloud their belief in his innocence. Women crowded around him and tears were shed. A motion for a new trial was overruled and the case will be appealed.

END OF OLD MINNESOTA.

Dismantled and Torch Applied for Final Destruction.

Eastport, Me., Oct. 29.—The torch has been applied to the old warship Minnesota, brought here a few months ago to be broken up for the metal in her hull, and the woodwork has been almost entirely consumed. It is said that the old Tennessee will be brought here later to meet a similar fate.

Pays Her Fine.

Sioux Falls, S. D., Oct. 29—Mrs. Sarah J. Flynn of Lake Preston, who pleaded guilty in the United States court a few days ago to the charge of making a fraudulent application for a pension, alleging that she was the widow of Silas J. Flynn, who served during the Civil war in the Seventeenth Independent New York artillery, appeared before Judge Carland of the federal court to receive her sentence. She was fined $1,000, which she paid to the clerk of the court before she left the court room.

IOWA IS BEATEN AT LAST.

Hawkeyes' Long List of Victories Checked by Gophers.

Minneapolis, Oct. 29. — Iowa will no longer boast of an uncrossed goal line, and to the husky Gophers belongs the glory of defeating the heavy Hawkeyes for the first time in three years. The game was one of the fiercest and cleanest ever witnessed on Northrop Field. It was a wonderful exhibition of strength and sinews. Minnesota warned Iowa that in playing Capt. Williams it would violate one of the rules adopted by the "Big Nine" conference, and five minutes before the game Iowa decided it would not be wise to play him. Griffith, the little seventeen-year-old brother of Iowa's last year's captain, played at quarter and won the admiration of the grand stand for his pluck and ability.

Iowa played a hard game and is deserving of much credit. For thirty minutes the score was 0 to 0, and the contest was not won until the last whistle had sounded. Final score, 16 to 0.

DOWNED BY BADGERS.

Wisconsin Team Too Heavy for the Kansas Boys.

Madison, Wis., Oct. 29.—Kansas went down to defeat before Wisconsin Saturday by a score of 50 to 0, hopelessly outplayed from start to finish. Kansas in her tandem plays with guards and tackles back proved a puzzle to the Badgers up to the end of the game, but the Badgers outweighed and outgeneraled the visitors.

SHOT BY ROBBERS.

North Dakota Man Hesitates When Told to Hold Up His Hands.

Larimore, N. D., Oct. 29.—Last evening Tolef Halverson and Christ Sandland were riding from Park River to Larimore on a freight train. While getting out of a car at Junction, two miles west of here, they were met by two masked men who ordered them to throw up their hands. Sandland, instead of complying, started to run. He was fired at twice, but he continued running. One of the robbers took after him and upon catching him placed the revolver against his neck and fired. The highwaymen then led their two victims out half a mile on the prairie, where they went through them. The robbers took $25 from Halverson and $23 from Sandland. The latter also had a certified check for $250. It is believed the highwaymen came down on the same train and knowing that Christ had this money expected to secure it, not knowing he had purchased a certified check. Sandland will probably die. His relatives live at Park River, and are quite prominent people.

MRS. GEBHARD SET FREE.

Divorce Granted, but on the Woman's Petition.

Sioux Falls, S. D., Oct. 29.—Fred Gebhard, for years the close friend of Mrs. Langtry, was given a surprise when the hearing of his suit for divorce came up in court Saturday. Gebhard secured his liberty, but not in the way he desired, for the divorce was granted to Mrs. Gebhard, who, before her marriage, was Louise Morris, a belle of Baltimore. Judge Jones, before whom the hearing in the case was held, decided that Gebhard instead of Mrs. Gebhard was guilty of willful desertion. In Gebhard's divorce suit, which was filed on Sept. 30 last, he charged his wife with having deserted him in September, 1899. Mrs. Gebhard, accompanied by her mother, Mrs. Morris of Baltimore, arrived here Saturday. Soon after her arrival she filed a cross-bill, in which she charged that it was she and not her husband who had been deserted. Gebhard replied to this, denying the allegations.

GRADE CROSSING ACCIDENT.

Three Persons Killed and One Seriously Injured.

Milwaukee, Oct. 29. — Three persons were killed and one seriously injured by being struck by a train en route to Chicago on the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul road while driving over a grade crossing at Oakwood, a small town fifteen miles south of here.

Splendid Military Record.

La Crosse, Wis., Oct. 29.—First Lieut. Otto Kunard of Company B, W. N. G., of this city, has resigned his command with a splendid military record. Pressing business matters are given as the reason for his resignation. Lieut. Kunard went to Porto Rico as second lieutenant, and after the battle of Coamo was promoted to first lieutenant for bravery. His successor has not yet been named.

Studying Trempeleau Mountain.

Winona, Minn., Oct. 29. — Over 100 normal students went to Trempeleau mountain for the purpose of studying the line of geography. They were under the charge of Prof. J. M. Holzinger. Luncheon was taken along and the entire day was spent at the mountain. A special train was provided on the Burlington to bring them home early in the evening.

Corn-Husking in South Dakota.

Sioux Falls, S. D., Oct. 29.—Farmers generally throughout the state have commenced the work of husking their corn. Help is very scarce and the corn will not be handled very rapidly. In many parts of the state the corn will average forty bushels to the acre, according to the yields of that which has thus far been husked.

Boy Burns to Death.

Dell Rapids, S. D., Oct. 29.—The five-year-old son of Roy Renning, a farmer living near Wentworth, met a horrible death. His father was burning stubble and the child's clothes caught fire and he burned to death.

First Time in Ninety Years.

La Crosse, Wis., Oct. 29. — Mrs. P. Peterson, aged ninety, was forced to call a doctor for the first time in her life, the occasion being an accident, breaking her hip and wrist. She is hale and hearty otherwise and was about her household duties when injured by falling on the basement stairs.

Loses His Home.

Dodge Center, Minn., Oct. 29. — The house of Oscar Sanford burned yesterday morning. Most of the contents was saved.

SCARE FILIPINOS

GEN. CHAFFEE ORDERS PRACTICE PARADES OF ALL THE TROOPS.

TO IMPRESS RESTLESS NATIVES

STRINGENT MEASURES TO SUPPRESS INSURRECTION IN SAMAR.

CONDITIONS IN CEBU BRIGHTEN

LOREGA HAS SURRENDERED WITH HIS ENTIRE FORCE AND SUPPLIES.

Manila, Oct. 29. — Gen. Chaffee has ordered that hereafter so-called practice parades shall be held here every week, in which all the Manila troops will participate. The object of these parades will be to impress the restless population. The military authorities have made elaborate preparations to defend life and property in the remotely possible event of there being trouble here.

Dispatches from Catbalogan, Samar, say that stringent and energetic measures are being taken to suppress the insurrection in that island. Gen. Smith has notified all the presidentes and head men of the Pueblos that in order to avoid trouble they must surrender all arms and turn over the men implicated in the Batangas massacre before Nov. 6, threatening that otherwise the presidente will be sent to the Island of Guam, the

the Villages Destroyed

and their property confiscated. The marines under Maj. Littleton W. T. Waller have been stationed at Batanga and Basy and ten gunboats are vigorously patrolling the southern coast. Several villages of head men have been destroyed. Naval Cadet Loveman Noa, commanding the gunboat Mariveles, who had gone ashore at Nara Nipa, South Samar, to prevent smuggling, was attacked by insurgents. He lost his revolver and was shot and boloed.

Lieut. Louis J. Van Schaick reports that an attack by insurgents on the municipal police and scouts at Sabing, one scout was killed and two of the police were captured. The insurgents secured two Krag-Jorgensen rifles, two shotguns and 200 rounds of ammunition. Lieut. Van Schaick has been ordered to occupy the suburg of Sabing.

Fight With Insurgents.

The constabulary report a fight with insurgents near Passi, province of Iloilo, Island of Panay, in which twenty-five insurgents were killed and three captured, together with a quantity of arms and ammunition.

The news from Gen. Hughes regarding conditions in the Island of Cebu is encouraging. Lorega has surrendered with his entire force and one cannon and seven rifles, while Gen. Hughes is negotiating for the surrender of Maxilot, who styles himself "Governor Politico-Militar." His surrender will mean the pacification of the province.

NO MORE "SENORS" IN LUZON.

American Titles, "Mr." and "Mrs." and "Miss," to Supersede Spanish Personages Hereafter.

Washington, Oct. 29.—Yesterday was issued a circular in Southern Luzon doing away with the Spanish titles of "don, senor, senora and senorita," and gives for those appellations the American equivalent, "Mr., Mrs. and Miss."

KING EDWARD HAS CANCER.

London Newspaper Asserts That Three Operations Have Been Performed.

London, Oct. 29.—Reynold's Weekly is the first British paper to assert that King Edward is suffering from cancer of the throat. In yesterday's issue it declares that since his majesty's accession three operations have been performed for the removal of papilloma on the left vocal chord and that one was removed from the right vocal chord last week.

"Assistance was hastily summoned," says this journal, "as his majesty was breathing with difficulty, and an immediate operation was performed. But it was regarded as only a temporary relief, the injured ephilium now having become a cancerous growth and serious developments are expected."

ENGLAND ANGRY WITH HOLLAND.

British Government Asks the Dutch Ministry to Recall Its Consul at Pretoria.

Brussels, Oct. 29.—The relations between Holland and Great Britain again appear to be somewhat strained. According to intelligence which is being circulated here Great Britain asked Holland to recall her consul at Pretoria because he was suspected of facilitating treasonable correspondence. Holland has given the consul indefinite leave of absence.

Big Forest Fire Raging.

Colorado Springs, Colo., Oct. 29. — A big forest fire is raging on the mountain range in the vicinity of Garfield mountain, directly south of Pike's Peak. The fire started yesterday afternoon from an unknown cause, and, driven by a high wind, spread over a big area. The blaze is easily discernible from this city. So far as can be learned there are no houses in danger, but much damage will be done to timber.

In a Fit of Jealous Rage.

Kansas City, Oct. 29.—Ross Sheridan, a well known and highly connected young man of Independence, Mo., in a fit of jealous rage, yesterday shot and mortally wounded "Writ" Berkey, his rival.

Town Destroyed by Fire.

London, Oct. 29.—"The town of Bobruisk, in the government of Minsk, has been destroyed by fire," says a dispatch to the Daily Mail from St. Petersburg, "and several lives have been lost."

CZOLGOSZ'S LAST HOURS.

Officials Anxious to Deprive the Execution of Notoriety.

Auburn, N. Y., Oct. 29. — The time which Leon F. Czolgosz, the assassin of President McKinley, has to live is reckoned by hours now, but there has been no relaxation of the stringent rule under which the prisoner has been secluded since his confinement. Auburn prison was closed yesterday to any who sought the assassin, and so it will remain until the prisoner has paid the penalty which the law exacts. In fact the plan to deprive Czolgosz living of any notoriety has been extended to deprive Czolgosz dead of notoriety. Immediately after the execution the clothing of the murderer with the vast accumulation of mail that came to the prison for him will be burned, and if possible the request of the parents of the dead man for his remains will be evaded. It is feared that the removal of his body to Cleveland would lead to scenes of an unfortunate nature, and the prison officials are anxious to avoid anything of the kind. The plan of burning the clothing and letters of the murderer will prevent the exhibition of relics by those who pander to the morbid. The hour of 7 on Tuesday morning is the time set by Warden Mead for the execution.

AN ACTIVE ADMIRAL.

Crowninshield to Take Charge of European Squadron.

Washington, Oct. 29.—Secretary Long announced Saturday that Admiral A. S. Crowninshield, chief of the navigation bureau at present, would be detached from that position and take command of the European squadron next March, being relieved of his present duties by Admiral Henry C. Taylor. The secretary said that this plan had been arranged last April, when, upon the expiration of Admiral Crowninshield's four years' commission as chief of the navigation bureau, he was recommissioned for another term. The date was fixed as March 9 next, because on that day Admiral Crowninshield, who now holds the title of ex-officio, as head of the navigation bureau, will become a rear admiral in fact, through the ordinary course of retirement and promotion.

ENRAGED MAN'S DEED.

Denied a Sight of His Children, He Kills His Wife and Himself.

Chicago, Oct. 29. — Because he was denied the sight of his two little children, James Kennedy, a laborer, yesterday murdered his wife and killed himself. The couple was married twelve years ago, but quarreled recently and separated. Kennedy called on his wife yesterday and asked to see the children. Fearing that he meant to take them away from her she told him they had gone to church. In a few minutes, however, when they heard their father's voice, they came running from a bedroom where they had been hidden by the mother. This enraged Kennedy and, pulling a revolver, he fired three shots into his wife, killing her. He then turned the revolver on himself, and when found a few minutes later was dead.

SEVERAL BADLY BURNED.

Baby Overturns a Lamp and Starts a Conflagration.

Pittsburg, Oct. 29.—Thirteen-months-old Robbie Busler last night at his home, No. 40 Arch street, Allegheny, pulled a lighted lamp from a table and was so badly burned that he can live but a few hours. His mother, Mary Busler, in her efforts to save the baby, was seriously burned about the head and breast. Her recovery is doubtful. Three neighbors, Peter Grimes, Patrick McDermott and James McGovern, were all painfully burned about the face and hands while extinguishing the flames which enveloped the mother and child and threatened the destruction of the house. In her excitement Mrs. Busler ran into the yard with her clothing ablaze. It became necessary for her rescuers to literally tear her clothing from her.

UNCLE SAM IS WATCHFUL.

Government Prevents Big Shipment of Arms and Ammunition to South America.

San Francisco, Oct. 29. — Suspicious circumstances surrounding a big shipment of arms and ammunition on the Chilean steamer Lea, now lying in this port, has led to action by the United States authorities to prevent any possibility of the warlike goods reaching the hands of Central American insurgents. The cases contain 4,500 Remington rifles and bayonets and 2,500,000 ball cartridges.

BLACK HILLS BLAZE.

Fire Destroys a Large Cyanide Plant at Ragged Top.

Deadwood, S. D., Oct. 29.—The large cyanide plant at Ragged Top, owned and operated by the Spearfish Mining Company of Colorado Springs, Colo., was completely destroyed by fire early Saturday morning. Loss, $50,000; insurance about half. The fire started in the lower part of the building and, there being no fire protection, it was soon a total wreck. The loss to mining interests also will be considerable until the mill can be rebuilt.

Miser Dead, Money Hidden.

La Crosse, Wis., Oct. 29.—In the undertaking rooms at North Bend, a small town near here, lie the remains of David Randall, who has lived the life of a recluse in a hut near that place for years. He had no relatives and thus far the remains have not been claimed. He had been a miser and is thought to have left $500,000 hidden away, no one knowing the hiding place.

"Topeka Joe" Is Located.

Toledo, Oct. 29.—J. B. Evans, better known as "Topeka Joe," the famous postoffice robber who escaped jail here recently, has been located in the woods near Sarnia, Can., and a posse of men is on his track. There is a heavy reward for his capture.

Miss Minnie Dorothy Pepper, granddaughter of Millionaire Christian Pepper of St. Louis, has announced to her friends her engagement to Hall Hamilton of Topeka, Kan. Both are members of James K. Hackett's company.

SWEDEN'S SOCIAL SYSTEM.

Palace at Stockholm the Scene of Brilliant Functions.

W. E. Curtis, writing to the Chicago Record-Herald, says:

The palace is the center of the social system in Sweden, and only certain persons are eligible to invitations to the king's balls and dinners. All officers of the militia are included in the list, and all the peasants in the riksdag, though their wives are never invited.

Interesting stories are told of the appearance of these gentlemen at the palace. Nearly one-half of the members of the lower house of parliament are peasants, and they always go to the balls, because they consider it a part of their official duty, and wish to show the respect they owe the king. No doubt they are also prompted by curiosity to witness the splendor and the desire to eat at the king's table and to drink his wines. Most of them have no dress clothes, but attend in the ordinary peasant costumes. Those from Dalarne add to the picturesqueness of the scene, but, however humble and uncouth their attire may be, their native dignity is always apparent.

Two balls are given at the palace annually, on the 21st of January, the birthday of the king, and upon the national holiday. Invitations are issued in the name of the grand marshal of the court, and read "By the king's most gracious command," etc. The cards state that ladies who intend to dance are expected to wear white gowns without trains, and ladies who do not expect to dance, black gowns with trains. No formal acceptances or regrets are expected, but those who cannot attend must return the invitation cards to the marshal ten days before the date. The guests are invited from 8:30 to 12 o'clock, and everything is over and the lights are out at 1. Supper is served at 11.

The grand chamberlain receives in behalf of the king, and at 9:30 every guest is expected to be present. No person is admitted to the palace after that hour, for precisely at the half-hour the royal family enter, preceded by the king in naval or military uniform, with the queen by his side. Their majesties are followed by their sons and daughters. The first dance is always led by the king and queen, the remainder of the set being made up of distinguished guests.

After the first dance the king and queen always retire from the floor and mingle freely with their guests. The queen usually retires early because of her delicate health, but the rest of the family remain to the end, and his majesty always escorts the wife of the dean of the diplomatic corps or some other lady of distinction to the supper table, where, as soon as the wine is served, the ranking prince or official present is expected to propose his health. The latter responds with a little speech of thanks and welcome, and then the formality is over. The guests are expected to enjoy themselves as they would at any ordinary function until midnight, when the grand marshal takes his place at the exit. This is the signal for departure, and within an hour the ball rooms and banquet halls are deserted.

SWEDEN'S NAVY.

Most Effective of Its Size in the World.

The navy of Sweden is comparatively small, but, for its numerical strength, it is probably the most effective in the world. At least, that is the opinion of competent critics. The total force numbers 4,500 officers and men on a peace footing, which may be increased to 8,600 from the reserve on a few hours' notice. The fleet consists of ten first-class cruisers and battleships, four second and seven third-class, five torpedo-catchers, fifteen torpedo boats and twenty gunboats of small tonnage, the armament of the fleet being 290 guns and ninety-seven rapid-firing guns. All the vessels were built in Sweden.

Every Swede is a sailor. He is brought up on the water and taught in childhood to swim and sail a boat, and although the shipping industry is not as extensive as in Norway, the national interest in aquatic sports is probably greater and more general than in any other nation. The long line of seacoast and 1,100 lakes within Swedish territory give abundant opportunity for the exercise of this inclination. Hence, in case of war, the navy could be recruited indefinitely with competent men.

King Oscar takes a deep personal interest in naval affairs, because his early life was spent in the navy, his commission as lieutenant bearing the date of June 19, 1845. When he was called to the throne, he at once commenced to plan for the improvement of that branch of the service, and for many years was his own minister of marine. He has also done much to encourage the maratime spirit among the people, being president of the Royal Yacht-club and presiding over its annual meetings, which are always held in the palace to suit his convenience. He takes an active part in the organization and promotion of the naval reserve, and never loses an opportunity to show his zeal in the development of the shipping industry and the aquatic pastimes.

Nor is the king a paper sailor. On special occasions he has shown great bravery and presence of mind at sea, and of his sixty decorations and medals he values none higher than that which was awarded him by the Humane society of France in 1862, when he saved the lives of three people at the risk of his own.

H. A. Preus' Academy.

The H. A. Preus academy, at Albion, Wis., was dedicated last Monday by the Rev. O. P. Vangsnes. The school succeeds to the property of Albion academy, which consisted of twelve acres of land in the center of the town and three old buildings. Among those who participated in the exercises were the Rev. Messrs. R. O. Brandt, L. S. J. Reque, Linnevold and Gullixsen. The institution will be conducted under the auspices of the Norwegian Lutheran synod.

DID HE GET THERE?

It Is Believed That Sverdrup Has Reached the North Pole.

A strong belief exists in Scandinavia that Capt. Sverdrup, of the Fram, has reached the North pole and is now returning home.

Capt. Sverdrup has been away on his expedition around Greenland for forty months. As Lieut. Peary did not see him in the north of Greenland, it is thought the brave Norwegian never intended to go round Greenland to reach the pole.

In the summer of 1899 Sverdrup was on the northwest coast of Greenland. Lincoln's sea, to the north thereof, was ice-free the following summer, according to Peary. Scientists declare there is a strong probability that Sverdrup seized the opportunity and reached the pole. No fear is entertained as to the safety of the expedition, which was provisioned for five years.

Captain Otto Sverdrup started from Christiania in the Fram in June, 1898. Rumors reached Gothenburg recently that Lieut. Peary came across Sverdrup on the western coast of Greenland, but no positive information has yet come to hand. When Sverdrup set out, taking an expedition of eighteen persons and food for five years, it was with the intention of exploring the northern coast of Greenland by rounding it, but the possibility of his making a dash for the pole itself was not out of the question. He had previously accompanied Nansen in his voyage with the Fram.

MARKS AN ERA.

Dr. Gustave Andreen, President of Augustana College.

The installation of Dr. Gustaf Andreen as president of Augustana college and theological seminary at Rock Island, Ill., marks an era for that institution. Since its foundation, forty years ago, it has been in charge of Swedish Lutheran clergymen, natives of Sweden. Dr. Andreen is a native of the United States, and has never taken holy orders. It is assumed that his purpose will be to make Augustana college a great secular school, as well as a preparatory department to the theological seminary.

Dr. Andreen was born in Baileytown, Ind, thirty-seven years ago. He graduated at Augustana college, and taught several years at Bethany college, Lindsborg, Kan. After acquiring the degree of doctor of philosophy at Yale, he was appointed to the chair of Scandinavian languages and literature. With the exception of two years spent in post-graduate work in the universities of Europe, he has been connected with Yale college since 1893.

HONORED WILLIAM M'KINLEY.

Memorial Services Were Held in Christiania, Norway.

On the day that the remains of the late President McKinley were interred at Canton, memorial services were held at St. Edmund's church, Christiania, Norway. The services were attended by the officers and crew of the United States cruiser Buffalo, which was in the harbor, by high Norwegian officials and by the foreign consuls. The church was packed. The exercises opened with the hymn, "Oh, God, Our Help in Ages Past," followed by the lesson from I. Corinthians and prayers. "Nearer, My God, to Thee," was one of the hymns on the programme, which ended with the "Dead March" in Saul and benediction.

While the services were in progress the customary salutes were fired from the Buffalo. The arrangement of the memorial was due, principally to the thoughtfulness of Consul-General Borderwich, citizen of Minnesota.

Death Takes Pastor Deck.

Johan Vilhelm Deck, one of the most popular of pulpit orators of Denmark, and a zealous religious worker, went to his reward Sept. 30. He was a prodigious worker, and was also able to accomplish much by his ability to concentrate his thoughts. He wrote without interruption while children played the piano and games in the same room. His work in recent years has been in connection with home missions.

Wants the South Pole.

Prof. Otto Nordenskjold and his company sailed on the Antarctic from Gothenborg last Wednesday. Half the town was down at the docks, and the expedition was given rousing cheers as it left the shore. The party will include about thirty scientists and sailors. The vessel will be commanded by Capt. C. A. Larsen, an old seadog, who was a member of the German Stella Polare expedition to the Antarctic regions in 1892-94.

TOLD BY SCHLEY

ADMIRAL TELLS HIS STORY OF THE CAMPAIGN IN HIS OWN WAY.

CHARGES ARE TORN TO TATTERS

WAS ORDERED NOT TO EXPOSE HIS SHIPS TO HEAVY BATTERIES.

HE DENIES DISOBEYING ORDERS

SHIPS WERE COALED AT THE VERY EARLIEST OPPORTUNITY.

Washington, Oct. 26.—Rear Admiral Schley took the stand in his own defense at 2:05 o'clock yesterday afternoon. As he placed his hand on the Bible held by Admiral Dewey, who administered the oath, every eye was on the man whose naval record is at stake.

After giving his name, rank and present station, Schley said he was a commodore during the Spanish war, in command of the flying squadron, and narrated his progress from Hampton Roads to Key West. He began his long story in a calm, measured tone, which indicated neither embarrassment nor anxiety.

All three admirals composing the court wheeled about in their chairs so as to face the witness and paid strict attention to all he said. Attorney Rayner asked no question at first, but allowed Admiral Schley to tell the tale in his own way. This was the climax of the famous trial. The gunners' workshop where the court meets was jammed with people and seats were at a premium. One of Schley's statements was that he assured Sampson

That He Would Be Loyal

to the cause they both represented, to which Sampson answered that no one knowing his (Schley's) character would think otherwise. He related his conversation with Sampson in which the commander-in-chief said that he had orders to divide the two squadrons, one to blockade Havana and the other to take care of Cienfuegos. Schley was ordered to proceed to Cienfuegos and maintain a blockade and given confidential instructions that under no circumstances must he expose his ships to the fire of heavy batteries until the Spanish warships had been disposed of. Admiral Schley then described his trip to Cienfuegos. On the way he met McCalla on the Marblehead and later the Eagle, which told him there was no news of the enemy. The following day he came across the Cincinnati and the Vesuvius, and Capt. Chester of the former told him of the ships there. Key West was mentioned as a coaling place. Chester told him that he knew a place in the vicinity where it was certain vessels could coal. He described his blockade of Cienfuegos, saying the vessels were closer in at night than in the day time, and that the vessels were kept in feigned disorder to invite the Spaniards to come out. He then related the manner in which it was discovered positively that the enemy was not within the harbor, and stated that within two hours after receiving this information the squadron was under way bound for Santiago. He defended his course in keeping the vessels together — holding the faster vessels for the slower.

Difficulty of Coaling

"We proceeded as a unit," he said, "and I hold that to do otherwise would be unmilitary and unwise in changing base with a fleet. I hold that useful auxiliaries and supplies should never be abandoned except under the greatest necessity."

Sigsbee's Poor Memory.

The blockade of Santiago was then fully described, the tactics employed at Cienfuegos being followed closely. He told of meeting Sigsbee on his arrival at Santiago and the assurance of that officer that the Spaniards were not within. Admiral Schley was very positive in his statement regarding his conversation with Capt. Sigsbee. He did not question the latter's veracity, but did think that his recollection was decidedly at fault. Capt. Sigsbee's exact language was: "No, they are not in there; I have been in very close."

With reference to the arrival of the Harvard on the 27th and his conference with Capt. (now admiral) Cotton, Admiral Schley said that he had never received the dispatch reporting in positive terms the presence of the enemy at Santiago.

"I never saw it," he said with intense earnestness. "I never saw it, and I am sure that Cotton never delivered it to me. If he had done so it would be among my papers, and it would have

Burnt Itself Into My Memory

so that I never could have forgotten it."

Describing the coaling situation, Admiral Schley said that a liberal supply was necessary. The enemy would not come toward the Americans, but would go in the other direction. Speaking of the collier Merrimac's breaking down, he said:

"This accident rendered coaling out of the question. I do not believe any prudent commander would have attempted to send a ship alongside an unmovable collier to take coal. The risk would be too great. The responsibility was mine, and it was too great to take the chances. I coaled at the earliest possible moment."

Admiral Schley then discussed the dispatch to the navy department regarding the disobedience of orders. He said that as translated this message was essentially different from the dispatch as he had framed it. He contended that there had been no disobedience; that he

in returning to Santiago, and held that the proper construction of his dispatch would relieve him of this charge. At this point the court adjourned.

Capt. Clark of the Oregon preceded Admiral Schley on the witness stand. He told his story of the fight in a simple manner, and it was listened to with rare attention. While he took no credit for it, Capt. Clark's narrative showed that the Brooklyn and Oregon bore the brunt of the battle and the chase. Capt. Clark's testimony showed that the New York—Sampson's flagship—arrived after the Colon had surrendered and all was over. The witness said Schley's manner was cheerful and natural when he met him on the New York after the battle ended.

The hearing yesterday was marked by several sensational incidents, chief of which was Judge Advocate Lemly's loss of temper and his sarcastic reference to Gen. Rayner as the "would-be governor of Maryland." Admiral Dewey was much displeased at this exhibition and called Lemly down hard.

WARNER MILLER VERY ILL.

Confined to His Room for Some Time and Mental Condition Causes Anxiety.

Utica, N. Y., Oct. 26.—Early in the summer Hon. Warner Miller, formerly United States senator and president of the Nicaragua canal commission, suffered nervous prostration, and, retiring to his house about a mile from Herkimer, declined to receive callers. Since then his condition has been growing worse, and is now said to be serious. Various business ventures, of which one was the Nicaragua canal, in which he was deeply interested, have caused him much concern. He has been strong and vigorous, but now there are grave fears for his recovery, and his mental condition is such as to cause much anxiety.

"KIT" IS CAUGHT.

Charged With Stealing Three Hundred Head of Oregon Ponies.

Chicago, Oct. 26. — "Kit" Chitwood, wanted in Lewiston, Idaho, on a charge of horse stealing, passed through here yesterday in charge of Sheriff A. W. Krautinger from Memphis.

Chitwood is accused of stealing 300 head of Oregon range ponies and shipping them to Kansas City, where they were sold. Chitwood then went to Memphis, where he was arrested. Chitwood denies that he stole the horses, but says he makes a business of loaning money on consignments to shippers and charges them for the use of the money. In the present case, Chitwood says, he agreed to furnish the money necessary for transportation and he was to receive a share of the proceeds when the stock was sold. He says the man to whom he furnished the money is trying to place the responsibility upon him.

WHY NOT CHEAPER?

Coal Production This Year Is Beyond Any Previous Record.

Philadelphia, Oct. 26.—The production of anthracite coal in Pennsylvania this year will be the largest in the history of the trade. Approximately the output will be about 10,000,000 tons more than in 1900. The production last year was 45,107,484 tons; in 1899, 47,666,000 tons, and in 1898, 41,898,800 tons. For nine months of this year the shipment of coal has amounted to 40,309,786 tons, as against 34,602,710 tons for the same period last year. These figures only relate to the actual shipments and do not include that used at the mines and by the coal companies.

PAYMENT OF ALL CLAIMS.

Turkey Is Disposed to Settle French Difficulty.

Paris, Oct. 26.—It is stated on good authority that Turkey is disposed to settle the French difficulty on the basis of the full payment of all the claims. The delay is caused by the anxiety of the porte to seek the most advantageous manner of raising a loan, because the fast of Ramadan and the feast of Beiram are approaching and it will be necessary to pay all the officials two months' salary. Consequently money is scarce.

OLD AGE AND YOUTH.

Relatives of the Principals Very Naturally Objected.

Kokomo, Ind., Oct. 26.—December and May were wedded in the persons of Milton Garrigue, commander of the Indiana G. A. R., aged seventy years, and Miss Marie Thomas, who has seen but seventeen summers. By this alliance the child-bride becomes a great grandmother. It is the culmination of a clandestine courtship of six months, and marks the victory of the lovers over bitter opposition of relatives, which at one time assumed a violent form.

DEATH OF 1,000 NEGROES.

Tillman Says Roosevelt's Action Will Necessitate It.

Guthrie, Okla., Oct. 26.—Senator Tillman of South Carolina, who is here on a tour, said: "The action of President Roosevelt in entertaining that nigger (Booker T. Washington) will necessitate our killing a thousand negroes in the South before they will learn their place again."

Murderers Garroted.

Havana, Oct. 26.—Andreas Rodriguez and Aniceto O'Farrill, negro murderers, were executed yesterday by the garrote. A fellow prisoner acted as executioner, receiving an ounce of gold for each execution, together with a reduction of six years in the term for which he was imprisoned. Death was apparently instantaneous. Lieut. Edward Carpenter was present to represent the military government.

Youngest Life Convict.

La Porte, Ind., Oct. 26.—The youngest known life convict in the country began his imprisonment at the state prison at Michigan City yesterday. He is Smith Jones, thirteen years old, and was convicted of murder in the first degree in the Warrick county circuit court. The crime was so cold blooded that instead of sending the lad to the reform school the judge sent him to prison.

Injured While Watching a Corpse.

La Crosse, Wis., Oct. 26.—Mrs. Carl Wilcox of Abraham's Station, while sitting up with a corpse of a friend, felt too great a draft of air from an upper chamber. She left the corpse to shut a window and struck her head on a rafter which knocked her unconscious. She may not recover. It is thought her skull is fractured.

GOES OVER FALLS

WOMAN ACCOMPLISHES A FEAT NEVER BEFORE PERFORMED.

TRIP OVER NIAGARA IN A BARREL

BUFFETED BY ANGRY WATERS BUT ESCAPES CONTACT WITH ROCKS.

WOMAN LIVES TO TELL THE TALE

SLIGHT SCALP WOUND AND SHOCK TO NERVES THE ONLY EFFECTS.

Niagara Falls, N. Y., Oct. 26.—Mrs. Anna Edson Taylor, a widow aged forty-three years, born in Auburn, N. Y., yesterday went over the horseshoe fall of Niagara in a barrel, and lives to tell the story of her experience. Such a feat was never before accomplished, and, indeed, never attempted except in the deliberate commission of suicide.

She made the trip in a barrel. Not only did she survive, but she escaped without a broken bone. Her only apparent injuries were a scalp wound one and one-half inches long, a slight concussion of the brain, some shock to her nervous system and bruises about the body. She was conscious when taken out of the barrel. The doctors in attendance upon her said that though she was

Somewhat Hysterical,

her condition is not at all serious, and that she will probably be out of bed in a few days. Mrs. Taylor's daring trip covered a mile ride through the Canadian rapids before she reached the brink of the precipice. Her barrel, staunch as a barrel could be made, was twisted and buffeted through those delirious waters, but escaped serious contact with rocks. As it passed through the smoother, swifter waters that rushed over into the abyss it rode in an almost perpendicular position, with its upper half out of the water. As it passed over the brink it rode at an angle of about 45 degrees on the outer surface of the deluge, and descended gracefully to the white foaming waters one hundred and fifty feet below. True to her calculations the anvil fastened to the bottom of the barrel kept it foot downward and so it landed. Had it turned over and landed on its head Mrs. Taylor's head must have been crushed and her neck broken. The occupied eighteen minutes. It was 4:23 o'clock when the barrel took its leap. Half way to the Maid of the Mist landing it was caught in what is known as the Maid of the Mist eddy and held there until it floated so close to the shore that it was reached by means of a pole and hook and drawn in upon the rocks at 4:40 o'clock, seventeen minutes after it shot the cataract. The woman was lifted from the barrel and half an hour later she lay on a cot at her boarding place, Niagara Falls, on the American side. She said she would never do it again, but that she was not sorry she had done it, "if it would help her financially." She said she had prayed all during the trip, except during a few moments of unconsciousness just after her descent.

Ride Through the Rapids

Mrs. Taylor is a school teacher and recently came here from Bay City, Mich.

FATAL CHILDISH QUARREL.

One Boy Stabs Another With a Needle, Killing Him Instantly.

Chicago, Oct. 26. — A large basting needle, such as is used by tailors, was the weapon which David Bernstein, aged thirteen years, stabbed seventeen-year-old Harry Himmelfarb to death last night. Yesterday younger brothers of the boys had a childish quarrel. When the older boys met last night on the street near their homes they took up the quarrel of the little fellows. Himmelfarb, who is a coat-maker's helper, pulled from a half-finished coat he was carrying home, a big basting needle. He plunged it into young Bernstein's thigh and ran. Bernstein, mad with pain, pursued him, and, drawing the needle from his leg as he overtook his adversary, he held Himmelfarb with one hand while with the other he drove the long needle into his heart, the boy dropping dead where he stood. Bernstein then fled to his home, where he was shortly afterward arrested by the police.

COULD NOT LIVE APART.

Man and Woman Attempt Suicide and the Woman Succeeds.

Denver, Colo., Oct. 26.—Mrs. Nellie Hardifer, wife of Philip Hardifer, a contractor of this city, is dead from morphine poisoning and W. H. Flanders, a Lyons, Colo., hotel man, is in a hospital and may die from the same cause. "We fixed it up to die together for we loved each other and could not live apart," said Flanders, who is a married man. Should Flanders recover he will be charged with murder.

Wisconsin Statistics.

Washington, Oct. 26.—The census bureau yesterday issued a bulletin on the persons of school age, males of militia and voting age and foreign-born males twenty-one years of age and over in Wisconsin. The summary follows: School age, 730,685; militia age, 425,825; voting age, 570,715; foreign-born males, 257,627.

Killed a White Prairie Chicken.

Webster, S. D., Oct. 26. — While out hunting Frank Gruby, a local sportsman, killed a white prairie chicken. The feathers are pure white and there can be no doubt of the genuineness of the bird, which is now being mounted.

Farmer Loses Stables and Hay.

Plankinton, S. D., Oct. 26.—A fire occurred at the home of Charles Conlan, a farmer living near Plankinton. All the stables and about 150 tons of hay were destroyed. Loss is estimated at $6,000; no insurance.

State Auditor Dunn says he is not a candidate for governor in 1902, but will support Van Sant. There are a great many people however, who will insist upon Mr. Dunn becoming a candidate in 1904.

This is the way the Duluth News Tribune comments upon the congressional situation: "In the Ninth districts they are playing "Pussy wants a corner," with Grindland, Stepnerson, Comstock and Valentine in the corners and and Elmer Adams as Pussy. You know how the old game is played—some one may make a mistake, move and give the editor a corner on the whole game."

DUNN'S AUCTION

Sale of State Lands Was Well Attended.

State Auditor Dunn sold 6,000 acres of state school land at Red Lake Falls last Friday. Buyers were here from points in Nebraska Michigan. Illinois and Iowa, while farmers desiring to pick up adjacent lands and local buyers by the hundreds were "on deck." The total acreage advertised was over 25,000, but the great demand for lands in Clay, Marshall, Kittson, Roseau and Polk counties where sales had been previously held, had run to within 6,000 of the 100,000 acres named by law as the maximum amount to be sold in one year. The prices were much higher than expected, showing Red Lake county lands to be appreciated, and had 25,000 acres been offered, they would have been quickly taken.

Three squatters who settled on state land a year ago, made a plea for mercy and Bob Dunn heard no competing bids wh n S w s offered by these men. Troubled hearts were made happy, for these homes are all the squatters have of this world's goods.

"God bless Bob Dunn," said a mother, who eagerly awaited news from her husband as to the outcome of his effects to save their home. The tears gathered and in her joy she huddled closer the crooning babe at her side.

The highest price paid was for a twenty acre tract in Rockbury, which brought $23.00 an acre. The minimum price was $7; average $10.60

NEXT TUESDAY

November 5 Is Election Day In This City.

Next Tuesday—November 5th—will be election day, and there is every indication of a warm election. There is a contest for every elective office except treasurer and justices of peace. The official ballot is being prepared and the following is the names that will appear upon the same,

Mayor—Frank H. Kratka and S. T. Johnson.

City Treasurer—J. W. Wallin.

Municipal Jude—Francis Hibner, N. W. Tarrant and W. C. Smiley.

Alderman-at-Large—(vote for two)—C. A. Robbecke, D. N. Winton and Hans Langseth.

Alderman First Ward—C. L. Dobner and George Williams.

Alderman Second Ward—M. C. Harlow and Matt Barzen.

Alderman Third Ward—S. F. Staples and A. B. Helgeson.

There will not be a very heavy vote polled for the reason that a large number of men are now either in the woods or harvest fields, and the mill is also closed down. If the election had been held a month earlier there would probably have been over 600 votes cast, but now there will not be more than 400. There are some very good candidates and a few very poor ones, but if the voters use good judgement a satisfactory set of officials can be elected.

Born.

Sunday, Oct. 27, to Mr. and Mrs. A. Stenseth, a son.

Friday, Oct. 25, to Mr. and Mrs. John Mortinson, of Tweet, a son.

There has been filed in the U. S. court at Fergus Falls papers in civil act ons which the government is instituting against A. L. Morris, Erick J. Swedback and Ole G. Lee, who are charged with cutting timber on government land in Beltrami county. The suit against Swedback is for $1,616.70 that against Morris is for $259.25 while that against Lee is for only $35. Swedback is said to have cut 187,780 feet of timber.

The Way We Reach Our Thousands of Customers.

Bargains are very expensive at times. Cheap clothing is always cheap—it's never satisfactory. Guaranteed clothing must be satisfactory, and that means much to the trade. This kind of merchandise is cheap at any price. We are the only clothing house in town that sells guaranteed clothes. We mean what we say—satisfaction or your money back. Remember us and remember what we have said.

We are two doors north of the I. O. O. F. hall.

THE C. O. D. CLOTHING HOUSE

A HEAVY PENALTY

Will be Visited Upon Anyone Who Destroys Survey Marks.

The government is making a vigorous effort to prevent the destruction of the land marks of its surveys. In the timber country especially it is often the case that these are purposely removed and timber is then cut under the pretense the parties were ignorant. The attention of the special deputies has been called to this and they have been instructed to enforce the provisions of the law in the future. This provides for imprisonment for a hundred days and a fine of $250, the informer to receive the of $250, in case any section corner, quarter post or meander mark is removed, or any witness tree defaced or cut down. This matter is important and violators will be carfully looked up during the coming winter.

The Junior C. E. of this city held a meeting last Sunday afternoon. The attendance was 36 with about six new members. Homer Mussey was appointed Secretary in the place of Ralph Douglas who lately resigned. The Society was divided into three sections, each section to try and win the banner given every three months for attendance. Children if you want to join come to the I. O. O. F. Hall you can charge. —Sec.

MUCH DAMAGE

Prairie Fires Burn Considerable Hay.

Prairie fires west of here in the towns of Bray and Norden did considerable damage last week. In a number of instances farmers lost their hay, and several small buildings were burned. The fires originated on the vacant school lands.

On the reservation east of here a large tract of land was burned over, and a number of Indians houses and logs in the river were burned.

The Crookston Journal tells this story on Halvor Steenerson, the well known Crookston attorney; Halvor was walking on the side walk in the Saintly City the other day and meet Major Baumbach the United States internal revenue collector, and a friend, and after shaking hands all around, very cordially, the major, who is by the way always very fastidious about his personal appearance, called Mr. Steenerson's attention to the fact that his coat was buttoned up unevenly. Mr. Steenerson thanked him for calling his attention to the matter, but declared that it was so purposely. He had just met Congressman Eddy up on Robert street, and had noticed that his coat was buttoned that way, and as he came along he had got to thinking what a vote getter Eddy was, and had reached the conclusion that must be the popular way for a political aspirant to wear his coat and concluded to adopt it himself.

LAST EVENING

Mr. Daniel Shaw and Miss May Vaughan Married.

Last evening at the residence of Father Charles occurred one of the prettiest weddings ever celebrated, in Thief River Falls, which united for life Mr. Daniel Shaw and Miss May Vaughan. The ceremony was witnessed by a number of friends, who afterwards went to the residence of Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Dobner where congratulations were extended and a bountiful wedding supper served.

Both the bride and groom are well known in this city and have a large circle of friends. Mr. Shaw is one of this city's progressive real estate dealers, who is doing much for the advancement of Northern Minnesota, while the bride is a handsome and accomplished young lady.

Mr. and Mrs. Shaw at once commenced housekeeping in the Lewin house on the East Side.

Rev. Dade Ordained.

Rev. C. W. Dade was ordained and installed as pastor of the Presbyterian church at an adjourned meeting of the Red River Valley Presbytery held in this city last Friday afternoon.

Many of our subscribers are doubtless also subscribers to The Pioneer Press, and in calling attention to and complimenting that paper on the newspaper par excellence that they have been getting out, we are but echoing the opinion of every person who has had the pleasure of reading that very admirable sheet. Of late The Pioneer Press has given more space to the news of the Northwest and a greater space to sporting news, and has changed the make up of the paper so as to enable the reader to find at a glance just the news he seeks. The brightest and cleverest writers of the Twin Cities are requisitioned to make a paper that will fairly bristle with news, non-partisan and and complete. Editorials that are clean cut, broad and fair. Special stories and features that must appeal to and interest every person who reads them. In fact at every point The Pioneer Press is a newspaper and one that all the Northwest may well be proud of and submit in comparison with any paper published in any part of this broad country.

PAPER MILL.

One May Be Be Built Here Next Year.

Geo. W. Mason, well known in this city, arrived here last week from Wisconsin. Mr. Mason is the owner of a water power just south of the city, and is here to ascertain the amount of power that can be developed. If the result of his investigations are favorable, Wisconsin parties with whom he is interested will erect a paper mill here next year. There is unlimited quantities of material around here of which paper can be manufactured, and a mill that will give employment to 200 or more men the year round is one of our possibilities.

Valuable Relic Found.

Mr. Jones the Indian medicine man who has been stopping at the Columbia hotel in this city for some time, is quite an enthusiast on the subject of curios and relics and yesterday as he was going to the cemetery his practical eye detected imbedded in the bank at a point about five feet below the surface of the ground something which at first sight resembled a human skull, but was so slightly exposed that it had never before attracted the attention of the passers. The doctors curiosity was, however, at once aroused and he proceeded to investigate. And after removing a sufficient amount of the the clay in which it was firmly imbedded, he found the article was a large salt water sea shell, which had evidently lain in its bed undisturbed for many ages and probably centuries.

Where it came from and how it got there can never be more than a matter of conjecture. Its open side had at some time been dressed off very smoothly and evenly, and two holes, one on either end, suggest the probability that they had been made for the purpose of suspending the shell from them. The relic is very highly prized by the doctor.—Crookston Journal.

The Polk County Journal greeted its readers last week as the Red River Valley Farm Journal, and will be devoted to the agricultural interests of the Red River Valley.

State Auditor Dunn says he is not a candidate for governor in 1902, but will support Van Sant. There are a great many people however, who will insist upon Mr. Dunn becoming a candidate in 1904.

This is the way the Duluth News Tribune comments upon the congressional situations: "In the Ninth districts they are playing. "Pussy wants a corner," with Grindland, Steenerson, Comstock and Valentine in the corners and and Elmer Adams as Pussy. You know how the old game is played—some one may make a mistake, move and give the editor a corner on the whole game."

DUNN'S AUCTION

Sale of State Lands Was Well Attended.

State Auditor Dunn sold 6,000 acres of state school land at Red Lake Falls last Friday. Buyers were here from points in Nebraska Michigan, Illinois and Iowa, while farmers desiring to pick up adjacent lands and local buyers by the hundreds were "on deck." The total acreage advertised was over 25,000, but the great demand for lands in Clay, Marshall, Kittson, Roseau and Polk counties where sales had been previously held, had run to within 6,000 of the 100,000 acres named by law as the maximun amount to be sold in one year. The prices were much higher than expected, showing Red Lake county lands to be appreciated, and had 25,000 acres been offered, they would have been quickly taken.

Three squatters who settled on state land a year ago, made a plea for mercy and Bob Dunn heard no competing bids when $[illegible] was offered by these men. Troubled hearts were made happy, for these homes are all the squatters have of this world's goods.

"God bless Bob Dunn;" said a mother, who eagerly awaited news from her husband as to the outcome of his effects to save their home. The tears gathered and in her joy she huddled closer the crooning babe at her side.

The highest price paid was for a twenty acre tract in Rockbury, which brought $23.00 an acre. The minimum price was $7; average $10.60

The fires originated on the vacant school lands. On the reservation east of here a large tract of land was burned over, and a number of Indians houses and logs in the river were burned.

The Crookston Journal tells this story on Halvor Steenerson, the well known Crookston attorney: Halvor was walking on the side walk in the Saintly City the other day and meet Major Baumbach the United States internal revenue collector, and a friend, and after shaking hands all around very cordially, the major, who is by the way always very fastidious about his personal appearance, called Mr. Steenerson's attention to the fact that his coat was buttoned up unevenly. Mr. Steenerson thanked him for calling his attention to the matter, but declared that it was so purposely. He had just met Congressman Eddy up on Robert street, and had noticed that his coat was buttoned that way, and as he came along he had got to thinking what a vote getter Eddy was, and had reached the conclusion that must be the popular way for a political aspirant to wear his coat and concluded to adopt it himself.

LAST EVENING

Mr. Daniel Shaw and Miss May Vaughan Married.

Last evening at the residence of Father Charles occurred one of the prettiest weddings ever celebrated in Thief River Falls, which united for life Mr. Daniel Shaw and Miss May Vaughan. The ceremony was witnessed by a number of friends, who afterwards went to the residence of Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Dobner where congratulations were extended and a bountiful wedding supper served.

Both the bride and groom are well known in this city and have a large circle of friends. Mr. Shaw is one of this city's progressive real estate dealers, who is doing much for the advancement of Northern Minnesota, while the bride is a handsome and accomplished young lady.

Mr. and Mrs. Shaw at once commenced housekeeping in the Lewin house on the East Side.

Rev. Dade Ordained.

Rev. C. W. Dade was ordained and installed as pastor of the Presbyterian church at an adjourned meeting of the Red River Valley Presbytery held in this city last Friday afternoon.

Many of our subscribers are doubtless also subscribers to The Pioneer Press, and in calling attention to and complimenting that paper on the newspaper par excellence that they have been getting out, we are but echoing the opinion of every person who has had the pleasure of reading that very admirable sheet. Of late The Pioneer Press has given more space to the news of the Northwest and a greater space to sporting news, and has changed the make up of the paper so as to enable the reader to find at a glance just the news he seeks. The brightest and cleverest writers of the Twin Cities are requisitioned to make a paper that will fairly bristle with news, non-partisan and and complete. Editorials that are clean cut, broad and fair. Special stories and features that must appeal to and interest every person who reads them. In fact at every point The Pioneer Press is a news paper and one that all the Northwest may well be proud of and submit in comparison with any paper published in any part of this broad country.

PAPER MILL.

One May Be Be Built Here Next Year.

Geo. W. Mason, well known in this city, arrived here last week from Wisconsin. Mr. Mason is the owner of a water power just south of the city, and is here to ascertain the amount of power that can be developed. If the result of his investigations are favorable, Wisconsin parties with whom he is interested will erect a paper mill here next year. There is unlimited quantities of material around here of which paper can be manufactured, and a mill that will give employment to 200 or more men the year round is one of our possibilities.

Valuable Relic Found,

Mr. Jones the Indian medicine man who has been stopping at the Columbia hotel in this city for some time, is quite an enthusiast on the subject of curios and relics and yesterday as he was going to the cemetery his practical eye detected imbedded in the bank at a point about five feet below the surface of the ground something which at first sight resembled a human skull, but was so slightly exposed that it had never before attracted the attention of the passers. The doctors curiosity was, however, at once aroused and he proceeded to investigate. And after removing a sufficient amount of the the clay in which it was firmly imbedded, he found the article was a large salt water sea shell, which had evidently lain in its bed undisturbed for many ages and probably centuries.

Where it came from and how it got there can never be more than a matter of conjecture. Its open side had at some time been dressed off very smoothly and evenly, and two holes, one on either end, suggest the probability that they had been made for the purpose of suspending the shell from them. The relic is very highly prized by the doctor.—Crookston Journal,

THIEF RIVER FALLS NEWS

By John W. Eastman.

THIEF RIVER FALLS, MINN

The Servian, Roumanian and Bulgarian railroads are owned exclusively by their respective governments.

Boston has added this year 40 portable school houses to its educational equipment, making a total of 56.

Belgium, in 1898, through the purchase of the Grand Central Belge and some minor private roads, became the possessor of the whole Belgian railroad system.

With voluntary subscriptions of $4,000 in hand, a committee in Atlanta, Ga., is making a house-to-house canvass to raise $25,000 to erect a monument ready by the first anniversary of Mr. McKinley's death, and to have President Roosevelt for orator of the day.

The widest possible publicity ought to be given to the action of the magistrate who has held for manslaughter a person who "rocked the boat," and thereby caused the death by drowning of some of those who were with him. The class of those who think it is funny to frighten timid people by this dangerous trick is large and perennial, and anything which will warn or educate them is a public service.

Sandow, the athlete, while in Lyons, France, was attacked in a cafe by some desperadoes with knives. He seized one of them by the back of the neck, lifted him in the air, and with the other hand clutched his feet. Swinging him upward, he brought him down with great force on the center of a table. This blow with a human mallet split the table in two, and the man went through it. The other scoundrels fled.

A duel between women took place the other day at an hotel in Paris. Mme. Louise Nequet, a woman of 30, who had been deserted by her lover, Leon Povison, instead of revenging herself on the latter, sought out her younger rival, Eugenie Cordelle, and challenged her in due form, the result being that Mlle. Cordelle was repeatedly stabbed. The savage encounter would have continued if Povison, who suddenly came upon the scene, had not sent for the police.

The efforts of the state of Alabama to punish persons found guilty of lynching deserve the heartiest praise. Already one man has been sentenced to imprisonment for life for lynching a negro accused of stealing chickens, and two others have been found guilty of murder in the second degree and sentenced to ten years' imprisonment for their part in the same outrage. The courage of the judge and the fidelity of the jury before whom these cases were tried, have been applauded no less warmly by the influential papers of the South than by their Northern contemporaries.

The Costa Rican government has granted to an American-German company a concession to 50,000 acres of coal and agricultural lands lying on both coasts of the country. The term of concession is fifty years, and the company is permitted to use for port purposes, 400 metres of land in every nautical mile of coast line. The company is exempt from import duties and taxation, and is granted railroad and telegraph privileges free. The only stipulation in the agreement is that the company must dispose of one-fifth of its capital stock of five million shares in Costa Rica.

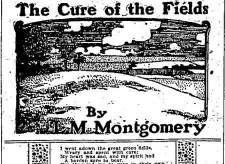
Intelligence has been received from Liberia of the death of a remarkable woman, Martha Ann Ricks, known as Aunt Martha, who made a journey from Liberia to England nine years ago for the purpose of visiting Queen Victoria. At the time of her death she was 85 years old. Her father was John M. Erskine, a slave who purchased his freedom and that of his children, and became a Presbyterian minister. Aunt Martha's greatest achievement was in 1841, when she successfully defended the Haddington Methodist Mission Station with three others against a cannibal chief and 300 natives.

Popular sympathy with a suffering animal and the readiness of the public to relieve such suffering were illustrated recently in St. Louis when a man risked his life to rescue a cat from a narrow ledge on the side of a lofty water tower. The cat had been pursuing a swallow, and although it had climbed down to the ledge alone, was unable to climb back. For several days it remained a prisoner, one hundred and seventy feet from the ground, and suffering severely from hunger and thirst. The man who discovered the cat's predicament climbed the two hundred and twenty-five steps to the top of the tower, and was lowered by a rope to the ledge, forty feet below.

The danger of living in a house that harbors consumptives is illustrated by the fact that of 6,273 patients officially examined by the German Imperial Board of Health 2,177, or 34.7 per cent, belonged to families that included other victims of tuberculosis.

A Frenchman has invented a sleep-producer consisting of bands of metal and other devices for the head, which is called the "vibrating coronet." Sovereigns, on the other hand, suffer from insomnia the moment they find their coronets shaky.

The Cure of the Fields



I went adown the great green fields,
Weary and spent with care;
My heart was sad, and my spirit had
A burden sore to bear.
But they led me to pray in their own grand way,
And I left my trouble there.

Great and green and calm were they,
And they bade me be at rest;
For God was above, and his wondrous love
In them was manifest;
And to me there came, at a tired child's claim,
A benediction blest.

"Faith," said the grasses soft and low.
Oh, but the sound was dear!
"Hope," said the light of the sunshine bright.
How could I choose but hear?
"Love," said each voice, "and so rejoice,
Child of the earth, nor fear."

I went my way from the great green fields,
And I left my sorrow there;
For they had taught my puzzled thought
The spirit of their prayer,
And I joyed to know that I could not go
Beyond our Father's care.

When Love Laughed.

(Copyright, 1901, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

It is that I was in this country yet some time when I meet the fair Norah, an' she gave to me the smile of welcome. Oh, no, M'sieu', it is not that I make the flirt with her, but that I am given the introduce by the brave Heiney Gruber, who makes the pretzel at the place of the bakeshop. I am all the time gilding the frame of the pictures in my store. Yes. Heiney bring to me the fair Norah, an' say that she wish to have me to make the frame of the picture of her father, the grand M'sieu' Patrick Dempsey.

Then it is that I have ask Ma'mselle Norah that I may call and make my devoirs. An' she make the smile of sweetness and say to me like this:

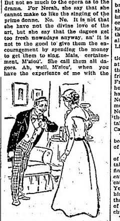
"Sure thing."

So it is that I am often making the call at the house of the Dempsey's. An' bye-an'-bye, the fair Norah she begin to make me the firs' name. An' her papa, he cannot like my firs' name in the French. You see, M'sieu', the firs' name which I have is that of Pierre, an' the papa of Norah, he do not like the French, nor can he make the pronouncing as it shall be, so he call me "Perry."

Mon Dieu, they are awful, these Americaine! The men! Not the women! No. No.

So it come that I have the track on the inside of the othair adorers of the fair Norah. For why? Ah, M'sieu', you ask such a question? Have I not the belle airs, the graces, the accomplishment, the charm of the true son of la belle France? Have you not seen it with your own eyes? Yes.

It is thus, M'sieu'. I take the charming Norah to the chowder party of her father's club an' to the baseball game an' to the hossracing an' to the opera. But not so much to the opera as to the drama. For Norah, she say that she cannot make to like the singing of the prime donne. No. No. It is not that she have not the divine love of the art, but she say that the dagoes get too fresh nowadays anyway, an' it is not to the good to give them the encouragement by spending the money to get them to sing. Mais, certainement, M'sieu'. She call them all dagoes. Ah, well, M'sieu', when you have the experience of me with the fair sex then you will know as I do how to please them. So it is that I take her no more to the opera, but rather to the show where the man stick the hatchet in the head of the other man an' the audience laugh to the very much. Yes. An' I buy the ice cream an' the sodywater. Oh, M'sieu', when one is with the Romans he mus' make the Rome howl. Yes. An' so I have adap' myself to the circumstance an' thus win the heart of the adorable Norah.

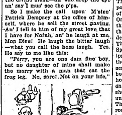


"I have the hand on my heart."

Thus it is that one day I make to her the questioning that she be my wife. I have the hand on my heart, M'sieu', an' make the speech with the grace of only the true gentleman. Ah, you should have seen me, M'sieu'. When I pr'pose it is as the picture from the fan of Watteau, for grace, not for the garments, that is. Yes. An' Norah, she make the blush—oh, the divine blush—an' she drop the eye an' say I mus' see the p'pa.

So I make the call upon M'sieu' Patrick Dempsey at the office of himself, where he sell the street paving. An' I tell to him of my great love that I have for Norah, an' he laugh at me. Mon Dieu! He laugh the bitter laugh—what you call the hoss laugh. Yes. He say to me like this:

"Perry, you are one dam fine boy, but no daughter of mine shall make the marry with a man that eat the frog leg. No, sare! Not on your life,"



"It is not the chicken."

he say. "Begob, none of that will I hov in mine."

Of course, then my heart is to the break utterly. An' when I see Norah she weep upon my shoulder so that I have to spend fifty cents with the tailor to fix the coat once more. But you know the proverb that true love make the laugh at the locksmith. So he also make the merriment at the p'pa. Listen, I will tell it.

It is Norah that have the inspiration. An' it is I that make the inspiration the reality in action. I firs' have the conference with Antoine, my frien'. He is the chef at the Cafe Francaise, an' he say he will be mos' honor' to help me, an' more than mos' happy to be of assistance to the fair Norah. For he have seen her with me at the little supper on occasions. Now, behold, the nex' step is to ask the p'pa Patrick that he an' Norah take the petite dinner with me at the Cafe Francaise. He say:

"Sure, Perry, me boy. But, remember, no frogs; just the plain dinner of the Americans."

An' so it come that he have the seat of honor with me an' Norah at the table. An' I tell him that we have the fine spring chicken of France. An' he eat of the fine spring chicken. Oh, he eat with the mos' heartiness. Yes. Yes. He ask for more, an' Antoine himself bring the more an' urge him that he make himself eat to the full of him. An' at the last, he make the chuckle an' say:

"Perry, they may not know much in France, but, begob, they know how to raise chickens, an' how to fry thim, too, bedad."

Then it is that I am near to the fall out from my chair for the laughter, an' Norah, she too is making the giggle. An' when P'pa Patrick see the laugh that we make he ask what the joke is.

An' Norah she smile an' say:

"Oh, p'pa, dear, it is such a gran' joke on you. It is not the chicken, but the leg of the frog that you have eaten so intensely."

Now, behold the nobility of the M'seul' Dempsey, who have often tol' me that he is from the line of the kings of Irelan'. He look at me an' then at Norah, an' then he laugh until the waiters all look to the table. Then he say:

"Sure, ye are two of the young divil, I must say. But it will be a good t'ing that we have all the frog-eatin' in the family, so Perry, lad, you may have her, an' God forgive the trick ye've played on her poor ol' hungry daddy. But are there any more of thim Frinch chickens in th' kitchen?"

So you see, M'sieu', it is true that the man of gallantry will fin' no obstacle too much to the greatness when he have the grand passion in the heart of him. An' it is also true that the way to the heart of the p'pa-in-law is through the stomach. Yes, it is so.

THE GARROTE IN MANILA.

High Sheriff May be Compelled to Use It at An Execution.

High Sheriff Peterson is wondering how it feels to garrote a man, says the Manila New American. The subject was suggested to him by the discovery that there was a murder case on the docket of Judge Odlin's court and that the mode of punishment prescribed by the Spanish code, under which the courts are now operated, is death in the chair.

The murderer is Lorenzo Antiparde, charged with killing a native policeman last September in Tondo. If convicted and condemned to death, so the learned say, there is but one way to carry out the sentence: Section 101 of the code reads: "The penalty of death shall be executed by garrote upon a scaffold."

The subject seemed to prey upon the sheriff's mind all day yesterday. He wore a preoccupied look and at times was seen to give his hands a sharp, twisting motion, followed by a look of shock and disgust, as in the imagination he heard the neck crack or listened to the strangled victim's dying struggle for breath.

Opinions differed as to the form of the machine by which the death penalty was executed in years gone by. Originally it consisted of a chair with an upright post for a back. To this was attached an iron collar, which fitted around the criminal's neck. Through the post passed a screw, the point of which pressed upon the back of the neck of the man in the chair. One turn of the crossbar handle of this screw, forced the point through the cervical vertebrae of the condemned and killed him instantly. This was the machine used in Cuba. Spanish lawyers say that in the Philippines the apparatus differed in that the pointed screw and collar were absent. The back post had a broad board behind the head, through two holes in which passed ropes. The ends of the ropes were fastened to a short board, narrow enough to pass under the chin and cover the throat. The other ends of the rope wound round a drum, and when this was turned the throat piece was drawn back till the victim's wind was shut off and strangulation followed. If properly worked the shock killed instantly or rendered the man unconscious, but if the executioner faltered slow death by suffocation ensued and the struggles of the unfortunate were terrible to witness and listen to.

Might Have Been Worse.

While things were humming in the ballet-room of the New York Metropolitan Opera House one day last week a section of the ballet was called to the fore to rehearse an "Indian" ballet. There was nothing in the girls' costumes to indicate the character of the dance, but as they came whooping and gyrating down the stage in front of Albertieri with their tin tomahawks, some one looking on remarked: "What? You got a Carrie Nation ballet?" "No," said Albertieri wearily: "Eet eez no zo bad as zat. Eeet eez only Indians."

Milling in Minnesota.

With its several hundred monster mills Minnesota easily leads the country in its milling industry. The annual output of Minneapolis mills amounts to over 13,000,000 barrels, and the combined capacity of the state's mills is considerably over 100,000 barrels a day. The Minneapolis mills are the finest in the world, and one system of five of them grinds about 20,000,000 bushels of wheat a year.

Diversion.

There was an old cheesemonger. I knew once who was fined for having a lump of bacon fat stuck under the profit side of his butter scales. I spoke to him about it as delicately as I could. "I didn't ought to ha' done it so clumsy, o' course," he said. "But you see my weights was all wrong, too, and that might ha' meant imprisonment. So I had to divart suspicion."—London King.

No Horse Races for Buenos Ayres Officials.

The mayor of Buenos Ayres has issued an order prohibiting those municipal employes who handle the public funds from attending the races. An investigation has shown that on race days a majority of the office holders were not to be found at their posts, but at the race track.

His Admission.

"I hear that you are engaged, Goldthorp," said Sterlingworth. "Is it time for congratulations?" "Well, I won't acknowledge that," replied the happy young man, "but I'm about to confer upon a certain young lady the right to select my neckties for me."—Detroit Free Press.

THE TIME TO LAUGH.

SOME GOOD JOKES, ORIGINAL AND SELECTED.

The Big Bostonian Got a Seat, but Had to Take Keen Retort in the Bargain—A Quiet Retreat—Uncle Rastus' Philosophy.

PERFECTLY PLAIN.

Uncle 'Rastus, who was seeking information concerning mushrooms, had been referred by a preternaturally solemn student to the professor of botany, and with hat in hand he was addressing that dignitary.

"Would yo' mind tellin' me, Mistah Mandrake," he said, "how to 'stinguish a musharoon f'm a toadstool?"

"Willingly," replied the professor. "In the first place, you must remember that the amanita phalloides, or deadly agaric, closely resembles the agaricus campestris, or edible fungus, which is our common variety and absolutely innocuous. Next, it will be necessary to fix firmly in your mind the distinguishing marks or characteristics of the agaricus campestris, which are these: A pileus not covered with excrescence-like scales; gills of a brownish purple when mature; stalk solid and approximately cylindrical; ring near middle of stalk; base not bulbous and not sheathed by membrane. The distinguishing characteristics of the amanita phalloides, or deadly agaric, are these: Pileus destitute of distinct excrescences; white gills, hollow stalk; large ring, and prominent bulb at base, with membraneous upper margin. Bearing these points of differentiation fully in mind, you will never be at a loss to determine which variety you encounter in any given case."

"Yes, suh," said Uncle 'Rastus, turning his hat round and round in his fingers. "I un'stan' dat all right, but how's I gwine tell 'em apaht?"—Chicago Tribune.

HE GOT A SEAT.

A man who looked from his physical proportions as if he could back up any remark he might care to make in public boarded a Boston (Mass.) car the other night. The car was filled, but the man happened to get in a row which held only four passengers. None of them made any sign of an indication to move up and give him a seat. He hinted repeatedly, but received no encouragement, and finally said gruffly, so as to be heard by every passenger in the car:

"These benches are made for five human beings or four car hogs."

His rebuke caused a general laugh, which was quickly turned on him when one of the four men arose to leave the car. As he stepped off he remarked:

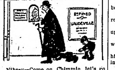
"You are mistaken. These benches were made for four—three human beings and one car hog. Take your seat."

A QUIET RETREAT.

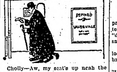
"The doctor recommended me to go to a farmhouse for two weeks this summer," said the man of nerves, "and I'm wondering if he ever passed a night outside of a city. On my first night the tree toads kept me awake, on my second the roosters crowed from midnight on, and in my third a big bullfrog in the horse pond didn't permit me to close my eyes. I got up next morning and told the farmer I couldn't stand it and must go, and he heard me in surprise and said:

"Why, man, I've had summer boarders here who got so lonesome nights that I had to drive the old bull up and twist his tail to make him beller and keep them company!'"

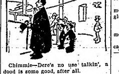
GENEROUS FASHION.



Nibsey—Come on, Chimmie, let's go in an' see de show.



Cholly—Aw, my seat's up neah the front, I believe.



Chimmie—Dere's no use talkin', a dood is some good, after all.

NOW HE KNOWS.

"I have read a good deal about killing mosquitoes with kerosene," said the breathless man who had climbed six flights of stairs to ask the question, "and I wish you would tell me how they do it."

"They drown them in it," responded the answers-to-queries editor. "If you bet that they soak them in the kerosene and touch a match to them you have lost. Call again."

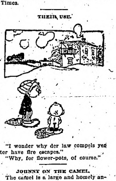
FOOLING A THEATER AUDIENCE.

Apropos of the wave of melodrama now almost engulfing the local stage, Justice Jerome recalls this story of his father, the late Lawrence R. Jerome, who as "Larry" Jerome was one of the best known of the old school of practical jokers and "men about town." With a friend Mr. Jerome was watching the progress of a real heart thriller of the old days, the plot, of course, revolving about the disposition of a mortgage that threatened to thwart the happiness of the heroine—the charming Mrs. John Hoey, in her day as popular as any actress of these times. With the plot at its thickest, the heroine in despair, the villain triumphant, and the outlook in every way dark for the persecuted girl as the curtain was descending at the end of the third act, "Larry" Jerome, with tears rolling down his cheeks, rose from his seat and in most impassioned tones, his voice broken with sobs, but audible all over the house, exclaimed to his companion:

"By heaven, Tom, I'll pay that mortgage myself!"

Then this consummate old joker and clever actor strolled out into the lobby, to enjoy one of the biggest sensations a first night audience at Wallack's had had in their lives. Incidentally, too, the ruse of Jerome's helped materially to the making of the play.—New York Times.

THEIR USE.



"I wonder why der law compels yer ter have fire escapes."

"Why, for flower-pots, of course."

JOHNNY ON THE CAMEL.

The camel is a large and homely animal and has warts on its knees. You can ride a camel if you want to, but I would rather pay 15 cents and walk. Still, if anybody needs exercise and has a camel I think he ought to ride him. The camel is a very patient animal. He will chew his victuals five minutes and still not have them ready to swallow, but keeps on chewing. The camel frequents deserts and caravans, and has one or two lumps on his back. He is often spoken of in the Bible and in Ben-Hur. We ought to read our Bibles every day and be good. Once there was a lion that dared a camel to run a race, and the camel took him up. They ran three times around the glittering arena and neither one was ahead, but when they dashed under the wire on the home stretch the camel straightened out his neck and won by nearly six feet. The camel has three compartments in his stomach and his hair is useful for making shawls and paint brushes.

SPOTTED.

"Weary," said Mr. Waggles side partner, as they reposed on a slant of tender turf beside the quiet highway, "do you know what Jigsby's been a-sayin' about you?"

"Nop," said the great man, as he looked longingly into the void of his battered can; "wot's he been sayin'?"

"He says," replied the side partner, "that you was once so hard up that you actually sawed an armful o' wood for a widder woman."

"It's easy enuff to see wot that story means," said the great wanderer gloomily.

"Wot does it mean, Weary?"

"It means blackmail; that's wot it means."

And then, the subject being a delicate one, it was permanently dropped.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

JUST WHAT HE SAID.

"You said," asserted the irate customer, "that this tonic would make hair grow."

"I did," admitted the clerk.

The customer removed his hat and showed a head as smooth as a billiard ball.

"I've been using that tonic for three months," he said.

"Oh, that's all right," answered the clerk promptly. "You have no hair to grow. If you had the tonic would work all right. What more can you expect?"

How Successful Farmers Operate This Department of the Farm—A Few Hints as to the Care of Live Stock and Poultry.

Autumn Feeding.

When a starving man is taken out of a boat in midocean he is hungry. The folk who rescue him have abundance of food and wealth of sympathy, but they have also a proper amount of common sense resulting from experience. The hungry man does not possess this common sense; he would gorge himself if allowed to do so. The rescuers are kind folk but they seem cruel when out of their abundance they allow him but a meager meal. They know, however, that "full feeding" would injure the starving man—experience has taught them the necessity and advantages of "going slow." Is not this somewhat akin to circumstances and facts attending the fall feeding of swine? This year there are many hungry hogs. They have fared sparingly for months, but rescuing rains came lately and food has been furnished at the later day when hope had about vanished in many localities. The hog would naturally "hog" himself if allowed to get at all the food his appetite could dispose of, but it would be as unsafe for the hog to gorge himself as for the starved sailor man suddenly surrounded with plenty. And yet there will be lots of this dangerous "stuffing" with new feed this fall. It is a process of ruining hogs that goes on unchecked every fall. In average years when corn is plentiful it is followed worse than will be the case this autumn when corn in many districts is somewhat of a luxury. But despite the fact that corn is scarce there is doubtless some food that the owner of hogs will feel that he can now spare in large quantities to make up for the lack of food during the dry months when pastures were withered and other foods scarce and high priced. Such food will give by far the best results if it is fed in small quantities at first and gradually increased in amount after the swine become accustomed to it. At the same time the best results are to be had each year when the corn is balanced with other rations to make a complete food for the young hogs. They require all the constituents of food that go to form bone and blood and muscle. If they are given all the young corn they can eat the first result will be to set up indigestion and where this takes place the food does not give the desired gain of weight daily. If the corn does not cause indigestion and the hog commences to assimilate it thoroughly and consequently put on weight fast that is no proof that the corn is doing the work expected of it. It is making lots of fat before the young animal has a frame to carry the weight safely and the result in many cases is that the bones being weak the legs "give" at the ground and the pig walks upon its pastern joints. If, on the other hand, the hog be gradually accustomed to the abundant food supply of fall and the corn be mixed with a due proportion of nitrogenous food such as skim milk, ground middlings, barley, oats, bran, oilmeal or any of the other grain foods and products along with clover hay there will be produced a healthy, normally strong and fully developed frame and supply of muscle and blood which will enable the animal to lay on fat later on without sickness or accident. We are fully convinced that while the pig is kept growing from weaning time to winter feeding there need be no appearance of fat about it. The main thing is to encourage the growth of frame, large digestive organs, fully exercised lungs, ample supply of healthy blood and disposition to hustle rather than loaf and sleep. Given this kind of young hog as the result of judicious fall feeding and there is little difficulty or danger in placing it later upon a full feed of corn and it is this kind of hog that returns the largest return of gain for amount of food consumed. We must be excused for drumming this advice into the young beginners so persistently, but we shall continue to do so until the idea becomes generally accepted as correct. Already the results of the discussion of this subject of hog growing and feeding along sensible lines are seen in the general interest taken in the publications of the various agricultural experiment stations regarding swine—experiments which a few years ago were apt to be considered needless and uninstructive. It has also led to a general inquiry regarding the improvement of brood sows and methods by which litters may be increased and more milk furnished for their nourishment.

Skim-Milk Calves.

A report of the Kansas Experiment Station says: Feeders find that the average skim-milk calf does not make profitable gains in the feed lot and will not buy him. Farmers find that the difference in price between an ordinary skim-milk calf and one that has run with the cow is frequently greater than the profits made from milking, and they drop dairy work. The Kansas Experiment Station recently fattened 130 head of calves for baby beef. These were divided into nine lots—one lot of ten had been raised by hand with skim-milk, and another lot of ten had run with their dams in small pastures until weaning. Both lots were put in fattening yards at weaning and were fed for seven months on alfalfa hay and corn. The results are as follows:

Calves raised with dam gained 435 pounds per head; amount of corn required to make 100 pounds gain, 475; amount of alfalfa required to make 100 pounds' gain, 472.

Skim-milk calves gained 440 pounds; amount of corn required to make 100 pounds' gain, 439; amount of alfalfa required for 100 pounds' gain, 436 pounds.

The skim-milk calves were fed until weaning on sterilized skim-milk with a grain ration composed of equal parts of corn and Kafir corn, with all the alfalfa hay they would eat. They were fed in this way twenty-two weeks and made an average daily gain of one and a half pounds per calf. The feed to raise these calves to weaning cost $6.27 per head. As the results show, they were in good condition for feeding when weaned and the experiment shows strongly the good feeding qualities of the skim-milk calf and the profits that can be made from it, when the calf is properly handled from birth to weaning and then pushed for baby beef. The college herd of scrub cows, bought without regard to their value for the dairy, produced in a year, at creamery prices, milk worth $37.75 per cow. The skim-milk calves which were fattened in this experiment were of mixed breeding and were selected without regard to their value for the production of baby beef. They brought an average of $40 each when marketed at about a year old.

Of Interest to Guernsey Breeders.

The American Guernsey Cattle Club has adopted an "advanced registry for cattle of that breed," with the object of encouraging greater development of the milk capacities in the cows. The secretary sends the Farmers' Review a statement of the requirements, which are as follows:

All cows admitted must equal or exceed one of the following records:

Years' Milk Record—If record is commenced the day the animal is two years, or previous to that day, she must produce within one year from that date 6,000 lbs of milk. For each day the animal is over two years old at the beginning of her year's record the amount of milk she will be required to produce in the year will be established by adding 3.65 lbs for every such day to the 6,000 lbs required when two years old. This ratio is applicable until the animal is five years old, when the required amount will have reached 10,000 lbs., which will be the amount of milk required of all cows five years old or over.

Years Butter Fat Record—If record is commenced the day the animal is two years old, or previous to that day, she must produce within one year from that date 250.5 lbs butter fat. For each day the animal is over two years old at the beginning of her year's record, the amount of butter fat she will be required to produce in the year will be established by adding .1 (one-tenth) of a pound for each such day to the 250.5 lbs. required when two years old. This ratio is applicable until the animal is five years old, when the required amount will have reached 360 lbs., which will be the amount of butter fat required of all cows five years or over.

Seven Days' Butter Fat Record—If record is commenced the day the animal is two years old, or previous to that day, she must produce within seven days from that date 10 lbs. butter fat. For each day the animal is over two years old at the beginning of her seven-day record, the amount of butter fat she will be required to produce in the seven days will be established by adding .00456 (456 hundred thousandths) of a pound for each such day to the 10 lbs. required when two years old. This ratio is applicable until the animal is five years old, when the required amount will have reached 15 lbs., which will be the amount of butter fat required of all cows five years or over.

The above yearly standards are based upon one complete year's record from the time of beginning, regardless of the time lost by being dry or calving during that period, should such be the case.

The per cent of butter fat shall be determined by the Babcock test. For the purpose of estimating the amount of butter from the amounts of butter fat produced, we recognize the rule approved by the Association of Agricultural Colleges and Experiment Stations, namely, "add one-sixth to the amount of butter fat." It should be understood, however, that in all records made for or published in the Advanced Register the amount of butter fat produced will only be given.

For further information, Guernsey breeders should write to the secretary, W. H. Caldwell, Peterboro, N. H.

An Illinois breeder of swine says: Having selected the breed, you should use great care in the choice of breeding animals. Let them be the best specimens and not the culls or those that will not sell. No successful breeder does or can sell his best female animals. They are worth more to him than to anyone else, especially if he expects to remain in the business. The best and most profitable animals are those you have raised yourself and whose ancestry you know.

T. J. Van Matre: A life-long experience and observation have confirmed me in the belief that there is no branch of farming or stock-raising conducted with a reasonable amount of judgment, and persistently staid with one year after another that will do better by the farmer than hog husbandry; provided always that your farm is adapted to corn and clover, because these are the main essentials in the cheap production of pork.

Dairy Notes.

It is impossible to have clean dairy products without at the same time having clean utensils and apparatus, with clean rooms and pure air. This is true of the work in the creamery and the dairy as well as in the farm house. The creamery is better suited to the control of conditions than the farm house, but in spite of that fact many creameries are not kept clean nor are the utensils with which the employes work kept clean. Yet with live steam and proper arrangement of steaming boxes there is no need of allowing dirt to accumulate. It requires some science to wash utensils properly. Tinware should not be plunged into hot water at first, but should be first rinsed in luke-warm water. After the milk has been rinsed off the vessel may be washed in water as hot as the hands can bear, and soap may be used. After the washing has been thoroughly done the last rinsing should be in boiling hot water. Then the vessel should be put into the steam tank and thoroughly steamed till all bacterial life has disappeared. As a last touch expose the tins to sunlight. It is believed that one of the best ways of cleansing dairy glassware is to soak it in water heated gradually and in which has been dissolved a quantity of alkali. After soaking till the glass is apparently clean rinse it in hot water and allow it to drain. The heat in the glass will dry it. The creamery or dairy building should be washed daily with soap and hot water. Where separators are used the slime should be daily burned up. This will destroy the disease germs that too often exist in it. It has been found that in very many cases the germs of tuberculosis exist in immense quantities in this slime. The germs being quite heavy are thrown by the centrifugal motion into the refuse. If the refuse be simply thrown out of doors the germs become dry and float in the air to be breathed by animals and human beings and perhaps be carried into the milk and milk products. Burning is preferable to burying in all cases.

The following suggestions as to the methods to be used in creameries are the result of experience and will be found useful: Do not spare the scrubbing brush in cleaning the creamery. Brushes and soap, though used in considerable quantities, are money well invested. . . . An old creamery man says that the refrigerator room should be cleaned and aired once a week. Some of the refrigerator rooms are kept in a foul condition, the manager evidently desiring not to disturb the continuity of the low temperature. Even at a low temperature it is possible for dirt to exert a bad influence on the products that are exposed to it. The germs, though latent for a time, may become active when exposed to a temperature suitable for their development. . . . The skim-milk tank should have constant attention. The manager of the creamery cannot afford to have it become foul, as sooner or later that foulness will be brought back to the creamery in the milk of the patrons that use their sweet milk cans for the purpose of taking home the skimmilk. In warm weather, at least, the skimmilk tank should be emptied every day and washed out, and care must be taken to do the work thoroughly. This is one of the greatest sources of bad flavor in butter. . . . The cans of the patrons should be also kept in mind and the creamery manager can well afford to have them thoroughly washed and steamed out frequently. How often will depend on conditions and the degree of cleanliness prevalent among the patrons.

The Yearly Milk Yield.

Professor Dean of the Guelph Experiment station says that no cow that gives less than 6,000 pounds of milk per year should be retained in the farmer's herd of milch cows. The standard set by the professor is one easily in reach of all the farmers now living in dairy sections, or in sections where beef production has not been made the main thing in stock raising. Taking the year as a whole, 6,000 pounds a year means only an average of about 16 pounds of milk per day, or about eight quarts, an average of four quarts at a milking. Certainly this is a moderate demand on the performance of the cow. Of course we realize that during a part of the year the cow is dry, but this period is not often more than a month in duration, and for the first six months the milk flow is so large that the average for the year is not difficult to reach. The farmer will find it very easy to ascertain the weight of his milk, and no such experience is required as in the case of the Babcock milk test. Every farmer that keeps milch cows should have scales in his barn for the weighing of the milk. The men that follow their milk yields continually say that it requires less than a minute per cow per day to do this. The farmer can then act intelligently. At the end of a year he can tell what his cows are doing in the way of producing revenue. Of course the comparative richness of the milk should be known, but this may be ascertained by periodic tests for fat. Even without this test, the scales will do good work in showing the farmer what his cows are doing.

A bushel of corn makes four and one-half gallons of spirits, making it cost 13¼ cents at 60 cents a bushel for corn. At 45 cents the spirits cost 10 cents, a difference of 3¼ cents.

ETIQUETTE AND TRUTH.

Imitations are so perfect nowadays that they deceive the very elect, and those who esteem themselves connoisseurs should be careful how they admire the fine lace, jewel and tapestries belonging to their friends, lest they should lose their reputation for discrimination.

"What would you do in a case like this?" said an honest but tactful woman the other day. "I have a bit of arras framed into my library and wall which is a capital imitation of the best Beauvais tapestry, but after all it is not genuine and I never have pretended that it was. Some time ago Mrs. ——, who prides herself on her knowledge of curios of every description and is herself a great collector of tapestries, came to see me. 'What a beautiful specimen of Beauvais!' she said as she was going out and noticed the panel. 'Where did you get it?' Now, what was I to say? To tell her it was an imitation was to show her her mistake, which would undoubtedly vex and mortify her, while I did not like to take the credit dishonestly, as far as I was concerned, of allowing her to believe my imitation tapestry was genuine. I concluded, however, it would be more tactful to let the matter pass without enlightening her, so I simply said, 'I got it in Paris,' and changed the subject; but now comes my dilemma. She is one of the patronesses of a loan exhibition which they are getting up for charity, and this morning I had a note from her asking me if I would do them the favor of lending them my 'beautiful specimen of Beauvais tapestry.' I am at my wits' end to know what I ought to do about it. Of course, if I refuse it will seem churlish, and under the circumstances I certainly cannot explain!"—Daily News.

FOR BRIDAL ATTENDANCE.

Ingenuity is racked these days to devise fanciful costumes for bridemaids and train-bearers. Close lace caps for the little train-bearers are a fancy of the hour. At a recent wedding in St. George's, Hanover square, London, the bride's train was borne by three little girls in empire gowns of ivory and white chine silk veiled in white chiffon, with fichus of the chiffon and high mauve sashes. They carried baskets of mauve sweet peas and wore the close little lace caps. At another wedding there were two train-bearers who wore quaint long-waisted Stuart frocks of white satin and had white chiffon fichus caught together with white roses. The roses were used also to border the close lace caps which the little maidens wore. There were nine bridemaids at this last wedding and they were dressed in rose gowns with attention paid to every detail, says the Daily News. Their dresses were of white mechlin lace over silk. The frills of the skirt were strewn with pink rose petals, and heading the frills all around were garlands of pink roses and foliage. The waists had transparent yokes and sleeves and were finished with fichus of ruffled net covered with garlands of pink roses and foliage. The sleeves were caught at the elbow with roses. The hats were composed entirely of rose petals, the crowns were wreathed with roses, and there were great bunches of them on the turned-up brims.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS.

Starch left over after the ironing day should not be thrown away. A little boiled Defiance starch added to the hearthstone used on doorsteps will make them last longer and cold-water starch can be allowed to settle, when the liquid can be poured off and the rest left to dry for use again.

A little carbolic acid in the water used to wipe floors and woodwork will keep the room free from fleas and various small insects that often infest a summer cottage, particularly if it is located in the woods. The same treatment is of value in the city house if the presence of bad vermin is suspected.

The best background for pictures is plain terra cotta or brown paper. A woman who is the proud possessor of many old prints and engravings has them in her dining-room. The walls are covered with wrapping paper, or something that looks very like it, and above is a frieze of orange distemper. The picture rails and woodwork are white. The hangings are of orange-colored velveteen. All the furniture is mahogany.

Schools in Porto Rico.

The expense of maintaining schools in Porto Rico is very high if we consider the amount spent for the small number of pupils enrolled. Education, however, is always essential to success. In our country the people are being educated to the fact that there is a sure cure for indigestion, dyspepsia, constipation, nervousness and malaria, fever and ague, and that medicine is Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. Try it. Our Private Die Stamp is over the neck of the bottle.

POULTRY.

A Half-Column of Don'ts and News.

Don't breed a Hamburg that has a single comb.

Never use a "clay-breasted" Partridge Cochin female.

Never use a bronze turkey tom that has a slim shank.

Never use a bird that shows any tendency to knock-knees.

Never breed extremes in form or color if at all avoidable.

Never use a bird that has a natural deformity of any kind.

Never use a bird that is inferior in size to its sex of its breed.

Avoid white birds that have straw-colored backs and wing bows.

Never discard goose or gander because of its age—the older the better.

Never use a pullet to sell eggs from until you have tested her laying qualities.

Never mate a male of any breed that is easily cowed by all the other males.

Never use one that has a scant leg and toe feathering, if a feather-legged breed.

Never use a Pekin duck that does not walk quite erect, nor one that has a short body.

Never use one of the pinkish-white shanks if its breed calls for yellow or dark yellow shanks.

The Teacher's Wife.

Clarissa, Minn., Oct. 28th.—Mrs. Clara Keys, wife of Charles Keys, school teacher of this place, tells a wonderful story.

For years her life was one of misery. Her back ached all the time, her head ached all the time, her back ached all the time; neuralgia pains drove her to desperation. She used much medicine, but failed to get any relief till she tried Dodd's Kidney Pills.

"Very soon after I began using Dodd's Kidney Pills all my aches and pains vanished like the morning dew. I consider this remedy a God-send to suffering womanhood."

Encouraged by their success in her own case, Mrs. Keys induced her mother, an old lady of 74 years, to use Dodd's Kidney Pills for her many aches and pains. Now both mother and daughter rejoice in perfect freedom from illness or suffering, which is something neither had enjoyed for years before.

Care of the Complexion.

Many persons with delicate skin suffer greatly in winter from chapping. Frequently the trouble arises from the use of impure soap and cheap salves. The face and hands should be washed only in clear, hot water with Ivory Soap. A little mutton tallow or almond oil may be used after the bath to soften the skin.

GHOST ON GUARD

SO DEAD MAN'S TREASURE IS DUG UP IN THE DAY-TIME.

GHOSTLY FIGURE WAVED THEM OFF

THREE NIGHTS IN SUCCESSION MEN FIND A SHADE HOLDING VIGIL.

WATCHING OVER ITS TREASURE

KETTLE HALF FILLED WITH SILVER REWARDS THE SEARCHERS.

Goshen, N. Y., Oct. 28. — About six months ago the body of "Long John" Noonan, an eccentric man who for years has lived alone, was found in a lonesome little hut on the William H. Cole farm near State Hill. "Long John" had been dead for at least two weeks and his body had been horribly eaten by rats. He was known to have a considerable amount of money, but the closest search failed to reveal its whereabouts.

The last man to see Noonan alive was Everett Decker, who saw him going across the fields with a kettle in his hand. Curiously enough Decker was one of the men who found the body. He also searched for the kettle with the assistance of neighbors, but the search was finally given up and the incident forgotten until about a week ago, when two young men named Hardick and Kirby told of seeing a spectral figure sitting under a tree in a field across the road from Noonan's hut.

The story was received with incredulity, but the young men clung to it, and remembering the legend of the kettle went at night to dig beneath the tree, but the ghostly figure still sat there and warningly waved them off. They went three nights in succession, but each time found the ghost at his lonely vigil. Finally it occurred to Kirby to go in the day time, and after digging beneath the tree he found the kettle. It was covered with an old piece of table oilcloth and half filled with silver.

NEGLECT RICH MAN'S SON.

Teachers in Michigan School Allow Studies to Be Ignored.

Ypsilanti, Mich., Oct. 28.—A member of last spring's graduating class of the state normal is this year in a small town in the Upper Peninsula spending eight hours a day as private tutor to a fourteen-year-old boy who, although he was last year in the eighth grade of a public school, cannot read words of two syllables and is no less ignorant in other branches.

The boy is the son of a wealthy lumberman, and as he is strongly averse to study of any description has been allowed by his teachers to pass from one grade to another without doing any of the required work. The father practically owns the town and the teachers feared to antagonize him through his son, so permitted the boy to spend his time in idleness in the schoolroom. The father had no idea of such a state of affairs until one day this summer he asked the boy to read before company, when, by discovering his lamentable ignorance in this line, he was led to investigate the whole subject of his education.

CLOSES WITH ENTERTAINMENT.

Indiana Federation of Women's Clubs Adjourns at Auburn.

Auburn, Ind., Oct. 28.—The closing session of the Federation of Women's Clubs was greeted with an audience that overflowed the spacious hall. In absence of Mrs. Henrotin of Chicago Miss Dietrickson of the university at Greencastle was heard. She recently visited Norway, her native country, and told of many of its customs and ideas, singing songs in her own native tongue and in English. Dr. Buchtel of Auburn rendered a violin solo. Mrs. Kelso of Chicago closed the program with a number of songs and extracts from Kipling's works. The first federation meeting was called to order with a tack hammer and the present meeting with Mrs. H. D. McCord's stocking darner.

PRESIDENT'S BIRTHDAY.

Mr. Roosevelt's Forty-Third Anniversary Falls on Sunday.

Washington, Oct. 28.—Yesterday was the forty-third anniversary of the birth of President Roosevelt. Occurring on Sunday, there was no formal celebration and the day was spent very quietly. Dr. Nichols, a friend from Baltimore, was at the White House a portion of the day and in the evening Commander Cowles was a guest at dinner. The president attended religious services at Grace Reformed church as usual.

Italian Claims the Men Were Trying to Swindle Him.

Denver, Oct. 28.—Mike Vittie, an Italian, shot John Njelm, Oscar Hill and W. J. Freeman in a quarrel over the ownership of a saloon at Nineteenth and New Haven streets. Njelm will die and the others are seriously wounded. Vittie says the men were trying to swindle him.

Rural Mail in Northern Minnesota.

Crookston, Oct. 28.—Postmaster Ellison has received word from the department of the establishment of the first rural mail delivery route in Northern Minnesota. The route will be about six miles in length and will run from here to Gentilly. All persons living within eighty rods of the stage route may avail themselves of the service. The service will begin Dec. 2.

LUMBER IN ASHES.

Ten Million Feet of Lumber Is Destroyed, Causing a Loss of About $200,000.

Iron River, Wis., Oct. 27.—Fire yesterday destroyed ten million feet of lumber at the Alexander & Edgar yards here. The loss will amount to about $200,000. The lumber was all of the best quality. The fire simply burned itself out. There was a strong wind and no way to stop the fire. The wind happened to be right on the mill or the greater portion of the town would have been destroyed. The fire is supposed to have started from a spark from the mill. There was difficulty in getting the water works started, and the pump at the mill was out of order. An engine was called from Superior, forty-nine miles away, but it arrived too late. The lumber is all insured.

CHILD ROASTED.

Seriously Burned in Hot Ashes, but May Live.

Grand Forks, N. D., Oct. 27.—Gottlieb Klein and his wife, with their one child, aged two years, live near Washburn, in a small shanty. At the rear of the cabin is a hole in the ground into which ashes have been dumped to prevent coals from blowing about. A few days ago the two parents went to visit a neighbor, leaving the child at home. Before leaving Mrs. Klein removed the ashes from the stove and threw them into the hole. During their absence the child in some way got out of the house and went on a tour of exploration around the premises. He fell into the hole, on top of the hot ashes, and there he remained until the arrival of his parents, about two hours later. The child was terribly burned, and suffered fearfully, but when last heard from was thought likely to live.

WOLVES KILL SHEEP.

One Farmer Has Lost 100 Sheep the Past Year.

Granite Falls, Minn., Oct. 27.—Wolves in this county are attacking the sheep herds. Mr. Langmaid, a farmer living in Minnesota Falls township, reports that he has had a hundred sheep killed by the wolves this season. Mr. Griswold had eleven killed in one night recently. Mr. Langmaid has to send a man or boy out with the sheep when they are in the pasture just to keep the wolves away. Some good sport might be gotten out of a hunt as well as some practical good done. Wolves are frequently seen prowling along the highway by farmers coming to town.

DODGES BULLETS.

Bold Attempt of Three Men to Hold Up a Storekeeper.

Grand Forks, N. D., Oct. 27.—Three men entered the second-hand store of M. Rosenswag on Third street about 7 o'clock, and while two of them engaged Rosenswag in conversation the third drew a revolver and demanded money. Rosenswag failed to comply and the robber sent a bullet past his ear. Rosenswag ducked behind the counter in time to dodge a second bullet and made a long dive through the window into the street, cutting his hand on the broken glass as he went through. Two arrests were made on suspicion.

MYSTERIOUSLY MISSING.

Butterfield, Minn., Man Disappears—Had Money With Him.

Comfrey, Minn., Oct. 27. — John D. Rupp, a resident of Butterfield, a town near here, has disappeared. His absence dates from last May. During that month he was known to have had a check cashed for a large amount of money. Soon after this he disappeared and no clew has yet been discovered that tends to throw any light on the subject. He was about forty-five years old, single, and is said to have had considerable money. His brother has arrived from Kansas and is endeavoring to solve the mystery.

ANOTHER DOWIE CONVERT.

Belvidere, Minn., Farmer Joins the Zion City Colony.

Red Wing, Minn., Oct. 27. — W. E. Holst, a well-to-do farmer who has lived for many years in Belvidere, this county, has sold his property and joined Dowie's Zion City. He has a wife and several children. Mr. Holst was converted to the Dowie Creed by some pamphlets sent him. He sold his farm for $6,100 but it is not known whether he turned over all his money to the alleged prophet.

The Dietic and Hygienic Gazette says: "Walter Baker & Co., of Dorchester, Mass., U. S. A., have given years of study to the skilful preparation of cocoa and chocolate, and have devised machinery and systems peculiar to their methods of treatment, whereby the purity, palatability, and highest nutrient characteristics are retained. Their preparations are known the world over, and have received the highest endorsements from the medical practitioner, the nurse, and the intelligent housekeeper and caterer."

Prominent Republican Dead.

La Crosse, Wis., Oct. 27.—Alexander McMillan, one of the most prominent Republicans of the state, a former member of the state legislature and a former mayor of this city, died yesterday, aged seventy-six.

Run Over and Killed.

Bloomer, Wis., Oct. 27. — August Lambery was run over and instantly killed by a traction engine six miles from here. He was walking near the engine when he slipped and fell between the wheels.

Mrs. Doak, wife of F. M. Doak, a St. Louis millionaire, a guest at Hotel del Coronado, San Diego, Cal., has been robbed of $5,000 worth of jewelry, including several diamond rings and several pins.

Convicted of Assault.

Red Wing, Minn., Oct. 27.—George Sherman of Pine Island has been convicted of a criminal assault on a fourteen-year-old girl named Bessie Darteau, and will be sentenced to the state prison.

GET RICH BOOTY

ROBBERS AT BEREA, OHIO, LOOT A SAFE OF $100,000 AND ESCAPE.

LARGE SAFE IS BLOWN TO ATOMS

EXPLOSION DAMAGES THE HARDWARE STORE IN WHICH IT STANDS.

DILIGENT SEARCH FOR THIEVES

LARGE PART OF PLUNDER IS PROPERTY OF BALDWIN UNIVERSITY.

Bera, Ohio, Oct. 29.—One of the boldest safe robberies ever perpetrated in this vicinity occurred at an early hour Saturday morning in almost the heart of the village. The hardware store of Lawrence & Brightman was entered, the large safe was cracked, and the robbers made good their escape with more than $100,000. Baldwin university bears the heaviest loss. C. C. Brightman, the junior member of the firm, is also the treasurer and trustee of Baldwin university, and all of the valuable papers of the institution which were left in Brightman's custody were kept in the safe. Bonds, notes and mortgages of the university aggregating $100,000 in value were secured by the robbers. Many of the notes held by Baldwin university were of long standing and bore numerous indorsements, making it impossible to produce them in duplicate.

No Clue to Thieves.

A diligent search for the thieves has been instituted, but as yet no clew as to their whereabouts or identity has been established. A fact regarded as most singular is that the explosion of the safe was hear by parties residing a half-mile north and more than that distance southwest of the center of town, while those residing in the business district were unaware that an explosion had occurred. The force of the explosion was most terrific. The safe was constructed on fire and burglar proof principles, yet the heavy doors were twisted from their hinges as if made of paper, and large pieces of the safe doors were firmly imbedded in the walls of the building, one section weighing fifty pounds being blown clear through a partition into an adjoining room. Six men are believed to have been engaged in the affair.

STILL A PRISONER.

Nothing Is Made Public Regarding Progress of Negotiations.

Samakoff, Bulgaria, Oct. 28, 5:30 p. m.—The release of Miss Stone, the missionary, has not yet been effected.

Constantinople, Oct. 27.—During the last few days there has been a voluminous exchange of dispatches in cipher between Spencer Eddy, secretary of the United States legation, and Consul General Dickinson, who is now in Sofia, regarding the efforts to rescue Miss Stone. The legation is reticent and nothing has been made public as to the progress of the negotiations.

Washington, Oct. 29.—The state department officials had no news to give out to-day regarding Miss Ellen M. Stone, the American missionary now in the hands of the Bulgarian brigands. They are continuing unceasingly in their efforts to obtain her release, and again to-day messages were sent to Consul General Dickinson, now at Sofia, and to Spencer Eddy, the charge at Constantinople, urging immediate efforts for the establishment of communication between the missionaries and the captors of Miss Stone. The officials continue hopeful of ultimately securing her release.

London, Oct. 29. — "A trustworthy report is in circulation here," says a dispatch from Sofia to the Daily Telegraph, "that Miss Stone is in the village of Belitza, close to the frontier."

TEARS SHED FOR POWERS.

He Is Again Convicted as Accessory to Goebel's Murder.

Georgetown, Ky., Oct. 29.—Ex-Secretary of State Caleb Powers Saturday was again convicted of accessory before the fact to the murder of Gov. William Goebel in January, 1900 and was for the second time sentenced to imprisonment for life. The second trial began Oct. 8. Arguments were limited so that the case went to the jury at 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon, and a verdict of guilty soon followed. Powers sat pale and motionless when the verdict was announced by the foreman, H. S. Calvert, his old schoolmate. Opposite Powers, on the other side of the courtroom with the attorneys, sat Arthur Goebel, brother of the late senator and governor. The attorneys of Powers shook his hand and expressed aloud their belief in his innocence. Women crowded around him and tears were shed. A motion for a new trial was overruled and the case will be appealed.

END OF OLD MINNESOTA.

Dismantled and Torch Applied for Final Destruction.

Eastport, Me., Oct. 29.—The torch has been applied to the old warship Minnesota, brought here a few months ago to be broken up for the metal in her hull, and the woodwork has been almost entirely consumed. It is said that the old Tennessee will be brought here later to meet a similar fate.

Pays Her Fine.

Sioux Falls, S. D., Oct. 29.—Mrs. Sarah J. Flynn of Lake Preston, who pleaded guilty in the United States court a few days ago to the charge of making a fraudulent application for a pension, alleging that she was the widow of Silas J. Flynn, who served during the Civil war in the Seventeenth Independent New York artillery, appeared before Judge Carland of the federal court to receive her sentence. She was fined $1,000, which she paid to the clerk of the court before she left the court room.

IOWA IS BEATEN AT LAST.

Hawkeyes' Long List of Victories Checked by Gophers.

Minneapolis, Oct. 29. — Iowa will no longer boast of an uncrossed goal line, and to the husky Gophers belongs the glory of defeating the heavy Hawkeyes for the first time in three years. The game was one of the fiercest and cleanest ever witnessed on Northrop Field. It was a wonderful exhibition of strength and sinews. Minnesota warned Iowa that in playing Capt. Williams it would violate one of the rules adopted by the "Big Nine" conference, and five minutes before the game Iowa decided it would not be wise to play him. Griffith, the little seventeen-year-old brother of Iowa's last year's captain, played at quarter and won the admiration of the grand stand for his pluck and ability.

Iowa played a hard game and is deserving of much credit. For thirty minutes the score was 0 to 0, and the contest was not won until the last whistle had sounded. Final score, 16 to 0.

DOWNED BY BADGERS.

Wisconsin Team Too Heavy for the Kansas Boys.

Madison, Wis., Oct. 29.—Kansas went down to defeat before Wisconsin Saturday by a score of 50 to 0, hopelessly outplayed from start to finish. Kansas in her tandem plays with guards and tackles back proved a puzzle to the Badgers up to the end of the game, but the Badgers outweighed and outgenerated the visitors.

SHOT BY ROBBERS.

North Dakota Man Hesitates When Told to Hold Up His Hands.

Larimore, N. D., Oct. 29.—Last evening Tolef Halverson and Christ Sandland were riding from Park River to Larimore on a freight train. While getting out of a car at Junction, two miles west of here, they were met by two masked men who ordered them to throw up their hands. Sandland, instead of complying, started to run. He was fired at twice, but he continued running. One of the robbers took after him and upon catching him placed the revolver against his neck and fired. The highwaymen then led their two victims out half a mile on the prairie, where they went through them. The robbers took $25 from Halverson and $23 from Sandland. The latter also had a certified check for $250. It is believed the highwaymen came down on the same train and knowing that Christ had this money expected to secure it, not knowing he had purchased a certified check. Sandland will probably die. His relatives live at Park River, and are quite prominent people.

MRS. GEBHARD SET FREE.

Divorce Granted, but on the Woman's Petition.

Sioux Falls, S. D., Oct. 29.—Fred Gebhard, for years the close friend of Mrs. Langtry, was given a surprise when the hearing of his suit for divorce came up in court Saturday. Gebhard secured his liberty, but not in the way he desired, for the divorce was granted to Mrs. Gebhard, who, before her marriage, was Louise Morris, a belle of Baltimore. Judge Jones, before whom the hearing in the case was held, decided that Gebhard instead of Mrs. Gebhard was guilty of willful desertion. In Gebhard's divorce suit, which was filed on Sept. 30 last, he charged his wife with having deserted him in September, 1899. Mrs. Gebhard, accompanied by her mother, Mrs. Morris of Baltimore, arrived here Saturday. Soon after her arrival she filed a cross-bill, in which she charged that it was she and not her husband who had been deserted, Gebhard replied to this, denying the allegations.

GRADE CROSSING ACCIDENT.

Three Persons Killed and One Seriously Injured.

Milwaukee, Oct. 29. — Three persons were killed and one seriously injured by being struck by a train en route to Chicago on the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul road while driving over a grade crossing at Oakwood, a small town fifteen miles south of here.

Splendid Military Record.

La Crosse, Wis., Oct. 29.—First Lieut. Otto Kanard of Company B, W. N. G., of this city, has resigned his command with a splendid military record. Pressing business matters are given as the reason for his resignation. Lieut. Kanard went to Porto Rico as second lieutenant, and after the battle of Coamo was promoted to first lieutenant for bravery. His successor has not yet been named.

Studying Trempeleau Mountain.

Winona, Minn., Oct. 29. — Over 100 normal students went to Trempeleau mountain for the purpose of studying the line of geography. They were under the charge of Prof. J. M. Holzinger. Luncheon was taken along and the entire day was spent at the mountain. A special train was provided on the Burlington to bring them home early in the evening.

Corn-Husking in South Dakota.

Sioux Falls, S. D., Oct. 29.—Farmers generally throughout the state have commenced the work of husking their corn. Help is very scarce and the corn will not be handled very rapidly. In many parts of the state the corn will average forty bushels to the acre, according to the yields of that which has thus far been husked.

GEN. CHAFFEE ORDERS PRACTICE PARADES OF ALL THE TROOPS.

TO IMPRESS RESTLESS NATIVES

STRINGENT MEASURES TO SUPPRESS INSURRECTION IN SAMAR.

CONDITIONS IN CEBU BRIGHTEN

LOREGA HAS SURRENDERED WITH HIS ENTIRE FORCE AND SUPPLIES.

Manila, Oct. 29. — Gen. Chaffee has ordered that hereafter so-called practice parades shall be held here every week, in which all the Manila troops will participate. The object of these parades will be to impress the restless population. The military authorities have made elaborate preparations to defend life and property in the remotely possible event of there being trouble here.

Dispatches from Catbalogan, Samar, say that stringent and energetic measures are being taken to suppress the insurrection in that island. Gen. Smith has notified all the presidentes and head men of the Pueblos that in order to avoid trouble they must surrender all arms and turn over the men implicated in the Batangas massacre before Nov. 6, threatening that otherwise the presidento will be sent to the Island of Guam, the

and their property confiscated. The marines under Maj. Littleton W. T. Waller have been stationed at Batanga and Basy and ten gunboats are vigorously patrolling the southern coast. Several villages of head men have been destroyed. Naval Cadet Loveman Noa, commanding the gunboat Mariveles, who had gone ashore at Nara Nipa, South Samar, to prevent smuggling, was attacked by insurgents. He lost his revolver and was shot and boloed.

Lieut. Louis J. Van Schack reports that an attack by insurgents on the municipal police and scouts at Sabing, one scout was killed and two of the police were captured. The insurgents secured two Krag-Jorgensen rifles, two shotguns and 200 rounds of ammunition. Lieut. Van Schack has been ordered to occupy the suburb of Sabing.

Fight With Insurgents.

The constabulary report a fight with insurgents near Passi, province of Iloilo, Island of Panay, in which twenty-five insurgents were killed and three captured, together with a quantity of arms and ammunition.

The news from Gen. Hughes regarding conditions in the Island of Cebu is encouraging. Lorega has surrendered with his entire force and one cannon and seven rifles, while Gen. Hughes is negotiating for the surrender of Maxilot, who styles himself "Governor Politico-Militar." His surrender will mean the pacification of the province.

NO MORE "SENORS" IN LUZON.

American Titles, "Mr." and "Mrs." and "Miss," to Supersede Spanish Personages Hereafter.

Washington, Oct. 29.—Yesterday was issued a circular in Southern Luzon doing away with the Spanish titles of "don, senor, senora and senorita," and givek for those appellations the American equivalent, "Mr., Mrs. and Miss."

KING EDWARD HAS CANCER.

London Newspaper Asserts That Three Operations Have Been Performed.

London, Oct. 29.—Reynold's Weekly is the first British paper to assert that King Edward is suffering from cancer of the throat. In consequence of this it declares that since his majesty's accession three operations have been performed for the removal of papilloma on the left vocal chord and that one was removed from the right vocal chord last week.

"Assistance was hastily summoned," says this journal, "as his majesty was breathing with difficulty, and an immediate operation was performed. But it was regarded as only a temporary relief, the injured ephitium now having become a cancerous growth and serious developments are expected."

ENGLAND ANGRY WITH HOLLAND.

British Government Asks the Dutch Ministry to Recall Its Consul at Pretoria.

Brussels, Oct. 29.—The relations between Holland and Great Britain again appear to be somewhat strained. According to intelligence which is being circulated here Great Britain asked Holland to recall her consul at Pretoria because he was suspected of facilitating treasonable correspondence. Holland has given the consul indefinite leave of absence.

Big Forest Fire Raging.

Colorado Springs, Colo., Oct. 29. — A big forest fire is raging on the mountain range in the vicinity of Garfield mountain, directly south of Pike's Peak. The fire started yesterday afternoon from an unknown cause, and, driven by a high wind, spread over a big area. The blaze is easily discernible from this city. So far as can be learned there are no houses in danger, but much damage will be done to timber.

In a Fit of Jealous Rage.

Kansas City, Oct. 29.—Ross Sheridan, a well known and highly connected young man of Independence, Mo., in a fit of jealous rage, yesterday shot and mortally wounded "Writ" Berkey, his rival.

Town Destroyed by Fire.

London, Oct. 29.—"The town of Dobruisk, in the government of Minsk, has been destroyed by fire," says a dispatch to the Daily Mail from St. Petersburg, "and several lives have been lost."

CZOLGOSZ'S LAST HOURS.

Officials Anxious to Deprive the Execution of Notoriety.

Auburn, N. Y., Oct. 29. — The time which Leon F. Czolgosz, the assassin of President McKinley, has to live is reckoned by hours now, but there has been no relaxation of the stringent rule under which the prisoner has been secluded since his confinement. Auburn prison was closed yesterday to any who sought the assassin, and so it will remain until the prisoner has paid the penalty which the law exacts. In fact the plan to deprive Czolgosz living of any notoriety has been extended to deprive Czolgosz dead of notoriety. Immediately after the execution the clothing of the murderer with the vast accumulation of mail that came to the prison for him will be burned, and if possible the request of the parents of the dead man for his remains will be evaded. It is feared that the removal of his body to Cleveland would lead to scenes of an unfortunate nature, and the prison officials are anxious to avoid anything of the kind. The plan of burning the clothing and letters of the murderer will prevent the exhibition of relics by those who pander to the morbid. The hour of 7 on Tuesday morning is the time set by Warden Mead for the execution.

AN ACTIVE ADMIRAL.

Crowninshield to Take Charge of European Squadron.

Washington, Oct. 29.—Secretary Long announced Saturday that Admiral A. S. Crowninshield, chief of the navigation bureau at present, would be detached from that position and take command of the European squadron next March, being relieved of his present duties by Admiral Henry C. Taylor. The secretary said that this plan had been arranged last April, when, upon the expiration of Admiral Crowninshield's four years' commission as chief of the navigation bureau, he was recommissioned for another term. The date was fixed as March 9 next, because on that day Admiral Crowninshield, who now holds the title of ex-officio, as head of the navigation bureau, will become a rear admiral in fact, through the ordinary course of retirement and promotion.

ENRAGED MAN'S DEED.

Denied a Sight of His Children, He Kills His Wife and Himself.

Chicago, Oct. 29. — Because he was denied the sight of his two little children, James Kennedy, a laborer, yesterday murdered his wife and killed himself. The couple was married twelve years ago, but quarreled recently and separated. Kennedy called on his wife yesterday and asked to see the children. Fearing that he meant to take them away from her she told him they had gone to church. In a few minutes, however, when they heard their father's voice, they came running from a bedroom where they had been hidden by the mother. This enraged Kennedy, and, pulling a revolver, he fired three shots into his wife, killing her. He then turned the revolver on himself, and when found a few minutes later was dead.

SEVERAL BADLY BURNED.

Baby Overturns a Lamp and Starts a Conflagration.

Pittsburg, Oct. 29.—Thirteen-months-old Robbie Busler last night at his home, No. 40 Arch street, Allegheny, pulled a lighted lamp from a table and was so badly burned that he can live but a few hours. His mother, Mary Busler, in her efforts to save the baby, was seriously burned about the head and breast. Her recovery is doubtful. Three neighbors, Peter Grimes, Patrick McDermott and James McGovern, were all painfully burned about the face and hands while extinguishing the flames which enveloped the mother and child and threatened the destruction of the house. In her excitement Mrs. Busler ran into the yard with her clothing ablaze. It became necessary for her rescuers to literally tear her clothing from her.

UNCLE SAM IS WATCHFUL.

Government Prevents Big Shipment of Arms and Ammunition to South America.

San Francisco, Oct. 29. — Suspicious circumstances surrounding a big shipment of arms and ammunition on the Chilean steamer Lea, now lying in this port, has led to action by the United States authorities to prevent any possibility of the warlike goods reaching the hands of Central American insurgents. The cases contain 4,500 Remington rifles and bayonets and 2,500,000 ball cartridges.

BLACK HILLS BLAZE.

Fire Destroys a Large Cyanide Plant at Ragged Top.

Deadwood, S. D., Oct. 29.—The large cyanide plant at Ragged Top, owned and operated by the Spearfish Mining Company of Colorado Springs, Colo., was completely destroyed by fire early Saturday morning. Loss, $50,000; insurance about half. The fire started in the lower part of the building and, there being no fire protection, it was soon a total wreck. The loss to mining interests also will be considerable until the mill can be rebuilt.

Miser Dead, Money Hidden.

La Crosse, Wis., Oct. 29.—In the undertaking rooms at North Bend, a small town near here, lie the remains of David Randall, who has lived the life of a recluse in a hut near that place for years. He had no relatives and thus far the remains have not been claimed. He had been a miser and is thought to have left $500,000 hidden away, no one knowing the hiding place.

"Topeka Joe" Is Located.

Toledo, Oct. 29.—J. B. Evans, better known as "Topeka Joe," the famous postoffice robber who escaped jail here recently, has been located in the woods near Sarnia, Can., and a posse of men is on his track. There is a heavy reward for his capture.

Miss Minnie Dorothy Pepper, granddaughter of Millionaire Christian Pepper of St. Louis, has announced to her friends her engagement to Hall Hamilton of Topeka, Kan. Both are members of James K. Hackett's company.

SWEDEN'S SOCIAL SYSTEM.

Palace at Stockholm the Scene of Brilliant Functions.

W. E. Curtis, writing to the Chicago Record-Herald, says:

The palace is the center of the social system in Sweden, and only certain persons are eligible to invitations to the king's balls and dinners. All officers of the militia are included in the list, and all the peasants in the riksdag, though their wives are never invited.

Interesting stories are told of the appearance of these gentlemen at the palace. Nearly one-half of the members of the lower house of parliament are peasants, and they always go to the balls, because they consider it a part of their official duty, and wish to show the respect they owe the king. No doubt they are also prompted by curiosity to witness the splendor and the desire to eat at the king's table and to drink his wines. Most of them have no dress clothes, but attend in the ordinary peasant costumes. Those from Dalarne add to the picturesqueness of the scene, but, however humble and uncouth their attire may be, their native dignity is always apparent.

Two balls are given at the palace annually, on the 21st of January, the birthday of the king, and upon the national holiday. Invitations are issued in the name of the grand marshal of the court, and read "By the king's most gracious command," etc. The cards state that ladies who intend to dance are expected to wear white gowns without trains, and ladies who do not expect to dance, black gowns with trains. No formal acceptances or regrets are expected, but those who cannot attend must return the invitation cards to the marshal ten days before the date. The guests are invited from 8:30 to 12 o'clock, and everything is over and the lights are out at 1. Supper is served at 11.

The grand chamberlain receives in behalf of the king, and at 9:30 every guest is expected to be present. No person is admitted to the palace after that hour, for precisely at the half-hour the royal family enter, preceded by the king in naval or military uniform, with the queen by his side. Their majesties are followed by their sons and daughters. The first dance is always led by the king and queen, the remainder of the set being made up of distinguished guests.

After the first dance the king and queen always retire from the floor and mingle freely with their guests. The queen usually retires early because of her delicate health, but the rest of the family remain to the end, and his majesty always escorts the wife of the dean of the diplomatic corps or some other lady of distinction to the supper table, where, as soon as the wine is served, the ranking prince or official present is expected to propose his health. The latter responds with a little speech of thanks and welcome, and then the formality is over. The guests are expected to enjoy themselves as they would at any ordinary function until midnight, when the grand marshal takes his place at the exit. This is the signal for departure, and within an hour the ball rooms and banquet halls are deserted.

SWEDEN'S NAVY.

Most Effective of Its Size in the World.

The navy of Sweden is comparatively small, but, for its numerical strength, it is probably the most effective in the world. At least, that is the opinion of competent critics. The total force numbers 4,200 officers and men on a peace footing, which may be increased to 8,600 from the reserve on a few hours' notice. The fleet consists of ten first-class cruisers and battleships, four second and seven third-class, five torpedo-catchers, fifteen torpedo boats and twenty gunboats of small tonnage, the armament of the fleet being 290 guns and ninety-seven rapid-firing guns. All the vessels were built in Sweden.

Every Swede is a sailor. He is brought up on the water and taught in childhood to swim and sail a boat, and although the shipping industry is not as extensive as in Norway, the national interest in aquatic sports is probably greater and more general than in any other nation. The long line of seacoast and 1,100 lakes within Swedish territory give abundant opportunity for the exercise of this inclination. Hence, in case of war, the navy could be recruited indefinitely with competent men.

King Oscar takes a deep personal interest in naval affairs, because his early life was spent in the navy, his commission as lieutenant bearing the date of June 19, 1845. When he was called to the throne, he at once commenced to plan for the improvement of that branch of the service, and for many years was his own minister of marine. He has done much to encourage the maritime spirit among the people, being president of the Royal Yacht club and presiding over its annual meetings, which are always held in the palace to suit his convenience. He takes an active part in the organization and promotion of the naval reserve, and never loses an opportunity to show his zeal in the development of the shipping industry and the aquatic pastimes.

Nor is the king a paper sailor. On special occasions he has shown great bravery and presence of mind at sea, and of his sixty decorations and medals he values none higher than that which was awarded him by the Humane society of France in 1862, when he saved the lives of three people at the risk of his own.

H. A. Preus' Academy.

The H. A. Preus academy, at Albion, Wis., was dedicated last Monday by the Rev. O. P. Vangsnes. The school succeeds to the property of Albion academy, which consisted of twelve acres of land in the center of the town and three old buildings. Among those who participated in the exercises were the Rev. Messrs. R. O. Brandt, L. S. J. Reque, Linnevold and Gullixsen. The institution will be conducted under the auspices of the Norwegian Lutheran synod.

DID HE GET THERE?

It Is Believed That Sverdrup Has Reached the North Pole.

A strong belief exists in Scandinavia that Capt. Sverdrup, of the Fram, has reached the North pole and is now returning home.

Capt. Sverdrup has been away on his expedition around Greenland for forty months. As Lieut. Peary did not see him in the north of Greenland, it is thought the brave Norwegian never intended to go round Greenland to reach the pole.

In the summer of 1899 Sverdrup was on the northwest coast of Greenland. Lincoln's sea, to the north thereof, was ice-free the following summer, according to Peary. Scientists declare there is a strong probability that Sverdrup seized the opportunity and reached the pole. No fear is entertained as to the safety of the expedition, which was provisioned for five years.

Captain Otto Sverdrup started from Christiania in the Fram in June, 1898. Rumors reached Gothenburg recently that Lieut. Peary came across Sverdrup on the western coast of Greenland, but no positive information has yet come to hand. When Sverdrup set out, taking an expedition of eighteen persons and food for five years, it was with the intention of exploring the northern coast of Greenland by rounding it, but the possibility of his making a dash for the pole itself was not out of the question. He had previously accompanied Nansen in his voyage with the Fram.

MARKS AN ERA.

Dr. Gustave Andreen, President of Augustana College.

The installation of Dr. Gustaf Andreen as president of Augustana college and theological seminary at Rock Island, Ill., marks an era for that institution. Since its foundation, forty years ago, it has been in charge of Swedish Lutheran clergymen, natives of Sweden. Dr. Andreen is a native of the United States, and has never taken holy orders. It is assumed that his purpose will be to make Augustana college a recent secular school, as well as a preparatory department to the theological seminary.

Dr. Andreen was born in Balleytown, Ind, thirty-seven years ago. He graduated at Augustana college, and taught several years at Bethany college, Lindsborg, Kan. After acquiring the degree of doctor of philosophy at Yale, he was appointed to the chair of Scandinavian languages and literature. With the exception of two years spent in post-graduate work in the universities of Europe, he has been connected with Yale college since 1893.

HONORED WILLIAM M'KINLEY.

Memorial Services Were Held in Christiania, Norway.

On the day that the remains of the late President McKinley were interred at Canton, memorial services were held at St. Edmund's church, Christiania, Norway. The services were attended by the officers and crew of the United States cruiser Buffalo, which was in the harbor, by high Norwegian officials and by the foreign consuls. The church was packed. The exercises opened with the hymn, "Oh, God, Our Help in Ages Past," followed by the lesson from I. Corinthians and prayers. "Nearer, My God, to Thee," was one of the hymns on the programme, which ended with the "Dead March" in Saul and benediction.

While the services were in progress the customary salutes were fired from the Buffalo. The arrangement of the memorial was due principally to the thoughtfulness of Consul-General Borderwich, citizen of Minnesota.

Death Takes Pastor Deck.

Johan Vilhelm Deck, one of the most popular of pulpit orators of Denmark, and a zealous religious worker, went to his reward Sept. 30. He was a prodigious worker, and was also able to accomplish much by his ability to concentrate his thoughts. He wrote without interruption while children played the piano and games in the same room. His work in recent years has been in connection with home missions.

Wants the South Pole.

Prof. Otto Nordenskjold and his company sailed on the Antarctic from Gothenburg last Wednesday. Half the town was down at the docks, and the expedition was given rousing cheers as it left the shore. The party will include about thirty scientists and sailors. The vessel will be commanded by Capt. C. A. Larsen, an old seadog, who was a member of the German Stella Polare expedition to the Antarctic regions in 1892-94.

Scandinavian Notes.

Peter Nissen, who has achieved some notoriety by sailing through the Niagara rapids and whirlpool, in the "Fool-Killer," is a Dane.

Gold has been discovered near Kornsjoe, Norway. It is said to have been found in paying quantities, and a mine will be opened next spring.

Thorwald Hansen, Swedish-Norwegian vice-consul at New York, was married last Wednesday to Miss Constance Boyesen, his stenographer.

August Hyllestad, the noted pianist, who lived in America for twenty years, has returned to Copenhagen. He will act as Scandinavian correspondent for the New York Musical Courier.

Denmark has lost her oldest daughter. She was Maren Moller of Krejberg, who died last month at the age of 105 years, ten months and fifteen days. She was married in 1829, and outlived her husband by thirty-one years.

An increase in the duties on tobacco has been ordered by the Norwegian storthing, to take effect at once. The duty on leaf tobacco has been increased from 175 to 225 ore per kilogram; on manufactured tobacco, from 210 to 270 ore; on cigars from 500 to 600 ore per kilogram.

The postal statistics from Sweden for 1900 show that since the international money-order system was adopted, in 1885, the United States has sent 51,124,600 kroner more money to Sweden than the latter has sent to the United States. Fourteen-million dollars is a very neat balance in favor of Sweden.

TOLD BY SCHLEY

ADMIRAL TELLS HIS STORY OF THE CAMPAIGN IN HIS OWN WAY.

CHARGES ARE TORN TO TATTERS

WAS ORDERED NOT TO EXPOSE HIS SHIPS TO HEAVY BATTERIES.

HE DENIES DISOBEYING ORDERS

SHIPS WERE COALED AT THE VERY EARLIEST OPPORTUNITY.

Washington, Oct. 26.—Rear Admiral Schley took the stand in his own defense at 2:05 o'clock yesterday afternoon. As he placed his hand on the Bible held by Admiral Dewey, who administered the oath, every eye was on the man whose naval record is at stake.

After giving his name, rank and present station, Schley said he was a commodore during the Spanish war, in command of the flying squadron, and narrated his progress from Hampton Roads to Key West. He began his long story in a calm, measured tone, which indicated neither embarrassment nor anxiety.

All three admirals composing the court wheeled about in their chairs so as to face the witness and paid strict attention to all he said. Attorney Rayner asked no question at first, but allowed Admiral Schley to tell the tale in his own way. This was the climax of the famous trial. The gunners' workshop where the court meets was jammed with people and seats were at a premium. One of Schley's statements was that he assured Sampson to the cause they both represented, to which Sampson answered that no one knowing his (Schley's) character would think otherwise. He related his conversation with Sampson in which the commander-in-chief said that he had orders to divide the two squadrons, one to blockade Havana and the other to take care of Cienfuegos. Schley was ordered to proceed to Cienfuegos and maintain a blockade and given confidential instructions that under no circumstances must he expose his ships to the fire of heavy batteries until the Spanish warships had been disposed of. Admiral Schley then described his trip to Cienfuegos. On the way he met McCalla on the Marblehead and later the Eagle, which told him there was no news of the enemy. The following day he came across the Cincinnati and the Vesuvius, and Capt. Chester of the former told him of the ships there. Key West was mentioned as a coaling place. Chester told him that he knew a place in the vicinity where it was certain vessels could coal. He described his blockade of Cienfuegos, saying the vessels were closer in at night than in the day time, and that the vessels were kept in feigned disorder to invite the Spaniards to come out. He then related the manner in which it was discovered positively that the enemy was not within the harbor, and stated that within two hours after receiving this information the squadron was under way bound for Santiago. He defended his course in keeping the vessels together — holding the faster vessels for the slower.

Difficulty of Coaling

"We proceeded as a unit," he said, "and I hold that to do otherwise would be unmilitary and unwise in changing base with a fleet. I hold that useful auxiliaries and supplies should never be abandoned except under the greatest necessity."

Sigsbee's Poor Memory.

The blockade of Santiago was then fully described, the tactics employed at Cienfuegos being followed closely. He told of meeting Sigsbee on his arrival at Santiago and the assurance of that officer that the Spaniards were not within. Admiral Schley was very positive in his statement regarding his conversation with Capt. Sigsbee. He did not question the latter's veracity, but did think that his recollection was decidedly at fault. Capt. Sigsbee's exact language was: "No, they are not in there; I have been in very close."

With reference to the arrival of the Harvard on the 27th and his conference with Capt. (now admiral) Cotton, Admiral Schley said that he had never received the dispatch reporting in positive terms the presence of the enemy at Santiago.

"I never saw it," he said with intense earnestness. "I never saw it, and I am sure that Cotton never delivered it to me. If he had done so it would be among my papers, and it would have

Burnt Itself Into My Memory

so that I never could have forgotten it."

Describing the coaling situation, Admiral Schley said that a liberal supply was necessary. The enemy would not come toward the Americans, but would go in the other direction. Speaking of the collier Merrimac's breaking down, he said:

"This accident rendered coaling out of the question. I do not believe any prudent commander would have attempted to send a ship alongside an unmovable collier to take coal. The risk would be too great. The responsibility was mine, and it was too great to take the chances. I coaled at the earliest possible moment."

Admiral Schley then discussed the dispatch to the navy department regarding the disobedience of orders. He said that as translated this message was essentially different from the dispatch as he had framed it. He contended that there had been no disobedience; that he

In returning to Santiago, and held that the proper construction of his dispatch would relieve him of this charge. At this point the court adjourned.

Capt. Clark of the Oregon preceded Admiral Schley on the witness stand. He told his story of the fight in a simple manner, and it was listened to with rare attention. While he took no credit for it, Capt. Clark's narrative showed that the Brooklyn and Oregon bore the brunt of the battle and the chase. Capt. Clark's testimony showed that the New York—Sampson's flagship—arrived after the Colon had surrendered and all was over. The witness said Schley's manner was cheerful and natural when he met him on the New York after the battle ended.

The hearing yesterday was marked by several sensational incidents, chief of which was Judge Advocate Lemly's loss of temper and his sarcastic reference to Gen. Rayner as the "would-be governor of Maryland." Admiral Dewey was much displeased at this exhibition and called Lemly down hard.

WARNER MILLER VERY ILL.

Confined to His Room for Some Time and Mental Condition Causes Anxiety.

Utica, N. Y., Oct. 26.—Early in the summer Hon. Warner Miller, formerly United States senator and president of the Nicaragua canal commission, suffered nervous prostration, and, retiring to his house about a mile from Herkimer, declined to receive callers. Since then his condition has been growing worse, and is now said to be serious. Various business ventures, of which one was the Nicaragua canal, in which he was deeply interested, have caused him much concern. He has been strong and vigorous, but now there are grave fears for his recovery, and his mental condition is such as to cause much anxiety.

"KIT" IS CAUGHT.

Charged With Stealing Three Hundred Head of Oregon Ponies.

Chicago, Oct. 26. — "Kit" Chitwood, wanted in Lewiston, Idaho, on a charge of horse stealing, passed through here yesterday in charge of Sheriff A.W. Kratinger from Memphis.

Chitwood is accused of stealing 300 head of Oregon range ponies and shipping them to Kansas City, where they were sold. Chitwood then went to Memphis, where he was arrested. Chitwood denies that he stole the horses, but says he makes a business of loaning money on consignments to shippers and charges them for the use of the money. In the present case, Chitwood says, he agreed to furnish the money necessary for transportation and he was to receive a share of the proceeds when the stock was sold. He says the man to whom he furnished the money is trying to place the responsibility upon him.

WHY NOT CHEAPER?

Coal Production This Year Is Beyond Any Previous Record.

Philadelphia, Oct. 26.—The production of anthracite coal in Pennsylvania this year will be the largest in the history of the trade. Approximately the output will be about 10,000,000 tons more than in 1900. The production last year was 45,107,484 tons; in 1899, 47,665,000 tons, and in 1898, 41,898,800 tons. For nine months of this year the shipment of coal has amounted to 40,509,786 tons, as against 34,602,710 tons for the same period last year. These figures only relate to the actual shipments and do not include that used at the mines and by the coal companies.

PAYMENT OF ALL CLAIMS.

Turkey Is Disposed to Settle French Difficulty.

Paris, Oct. 26.—It is stated on good authority that Turkey is disposed to settle the French difficulty on the basis of the full payment of all the claims. The delay is caused by the anxiety of the porte to seek the most advantageous manner of raising a loan, because the fast of Ramadan and the feast of Beiram are approaching and it will be necessary to pay all the officials two months' salary. Consequently money is scarce.

OLD AGE AND YOUTH.

Relatives of the Principals Very Naturally Objected.

Kokomo, Ind., Oct. 26.—December and May were wedded in the persons of Milton Garrigue, commander of the Indiana G. A. R., aged seventy years, and Miss Marie Thomas, who has seen but seventeen summers. By this alliance the child-bride becomes a great grandmother. It is the culmination of a clandestine courtship of six months, and marks the victory of the lovers over bitter opposition of relatives, which at one time assumed a violent form.

DEATH OF 1,000 NEGROES.

Tillman Says Roosevelt's Action Will Necessitate It.

Guthrie, Okla., Oct. 26.—Senator Tillman of South Carolina, who is here on a tour, said: "The action of President Roosevelt in entertaining that nigger (Booker T. Washington) will necessitate our killing a thousand negroes in the South before they will learn their place again."

Murderers Garroted.

Havana, Oct. 26.—Andreas Rodriguez and Aniceto O'Farrill, negro murderers, were executed yesterday by the garrote. A fellow prisoner acted as executioner, receiving an ounce of gold for each execution, together with a reduction of six years in the term for which he was imprisoned. Death was apparently instantaneous. Lieut. Edward Carpenter was present to represent the military government.

Youngest Life Convict.

La Porte, Ind., Oct. 26.—The youngest known life convict in the country began his imprisonment at the state prison at Michigan City yesterday. He is Smith Jones, thirteen years old, and was convicted of murder in the first degree in the Warrick county circuit court. The crime was so cold blooded that instead of sending the lad to the reform school the judge sent him to prison.

Injured While Watching a Corpse.

La Crosse, Wis., Oct. 26.—Mrs. Carl Wilcox of Abraham's Station, while sitting up with a corpse of a friend, felt too great a draft of air from an upper chamber. She left the corpse to shut a window and struck her head on a rafter which knocked her unconscious. She may not recover. It is thought her skull is fractured.

WOMAN ACCOMPLISHES A FEAT NEVER BEFORE PERFORMED.

TRIP OVER NIAGARA IN A BARREL

BUFFETED BY ANGRY WATERS BUT ESCAPES CONTACT WITH ROCKS.

WOMAN LIVES TO TELL THE TALE

SLIGHT SCALP WOUND AND SHOCK TO NERVES THE ONLY EFFECTS.

Niagara Falls, N. Y., Oct. 26.—Mrs. Anna Edson Taylor, a widow aged forty-three years, born in Auburn, N. Y., yesterday went over the horseshoe fall of Niagara in a barrel, and lives to tell the story of her experience. Such a feat was never before accomplished, and, indeed, never attempted except in the deliberate commission of suicide.

She made the trip in a barrel. Not only did she survive, but she escaped without a broken bone. Her only apparent injuries were a scalp wound one and one-half inches long, a slight concussion of the brain, some shock to her nervous system and bruises about the body. She was conscious when taken out of the barrel. The doctors in attendance upon her said that though she was

Somewhat Hysterical,

her condition is not at all serious, and that she will probably be out of bed in a few days. Mrs. Taylor's daring trip covered a mile ride through the Canadian rapids before she reached the brink of the precipice. Her barrel, staunch as a barrel could be made, was twisted and buffeted through those delirious waters, but escaped serious contact with rocks. As it passed through the smoother, swifter waters that rushed over into the abyss it rode in an almost perpendicular position, with its upper half out of the water. As it passed over the brink it rode at an angle of about 45 degrees on the outer surface of the deluge, and descended gracefully to the white foaming waters one hundred and fifty feet below. True to her calculations the anvil fastened to the bottom of the barrel kept it foot downward and so it landed. Had it turned over and landed on its head Mrs. Taylor's head must have been crushed and her neck broken. The occupied eighteen minutes. It was 4:23 o'clock when the barrel took its leap. Half way to the Maid of the Mist landing it was caught in what is known as the Maid of the Mist eddy and held there until it floated so close to the shore that it was reached by means of a pole and hook and drawn in upon the rocks at 4:40 o'clock, seventeen minutes after it shot the cataract. The woman was lifted from the barrel and half an hour later she lay on a cot at her boarding place, Niagara Falls, on the American side. She said she would never do it again, but that she was not sorry she had done it, "if it would help her financially." She said she had prayed all during the trip, except during a few moments of unconsciousness just after her descent.

Mrs. Taylor is a school teacher and recently came here from Bay City, Mich.

FATAL CHILDISH QUARREL.

One Boy Stabs Another With a Needle, Killing Him Instantly.

Chicago, Oct. 26. — A large basting needle, such as is used by tailors, was the weapon which David Bernstein, aged thirteen years, stabbed seventeen-year-old Harry Himmelfarb to death last night. Yesterday younger brothers of the boys had a childish quarrel. When the older boys met last night on the street near their homes they took up the quarrel of the little fellows. Himmelfarb, who is a coat-maker's helper, pulled from a half-finished coat he was carrying home, a big basting needle. He plunged it into young Bernstein's thigh and ran. Bernstein, mad with pain, pursued him, and, drawing the needle from his leg as he overtook his adversary, he held Himmelfarb with one hand while with the other he drove the long needle into his heart, the boy dropping dead where he stood. Bernstein then fled to his home, where he was shortly afterward arrested by the police.

COULD NOT LIVE APART.

Man and Woman Attempt Suicide and the Woman Succeeds.

Denver, Colo., Oct. 26.—Mrs. Nellie Hardifer, wife of Philip Hardifer, a contractor of this city, is dead from morphine poisoning and W. H. Flanders, a Lyons, Colo., hotel man, is in a hospital and may die from the same cause. "We fixed it up to die together for we loved each other and could not live apart," said Flanders, who is a married man. Should Flanders recover he will be charged with murder.

Wisconsin Statistics.

Washington, Oct. 26.—The census bureau yesterday issued a bulletin on the persons of school age, males of militia and voting age and foreign-born males twenty-one years of age and over in Wisconsin. The summary follows: School age, 730,685; militia age, 425,825; voting age, 570,715; foreign-born males, 257,527.

Killed a White Prairie Chicken.

Webster, S. D., Oct. 26. — While out hunting Frank Gruby, a local sportsman, killed a white prairie chicken. The feathers are pure white and there can be no doubt of the genuineness of the bird, which is now being mounted.

Farmer Loses Stables and Hay.

Plankinton, S. D., Oct. 26.—A fire occurred at the home of Charles Conlan, a farmer living near Plankinton. All the stables and about 150 tons of hay were destroyed. Loss is estimated at $4,000; no insurance.

BED-TIME

After sunset, sort o' dusky, when it's neither night nor day,
When the lights away to west'ard change from crimson into gray,
When the katydids are callin' and firefly with his lamp
Goes a-strayin' through the evenin' where the maple leaves are damp,
There's a drowsy, dronin' murmur bows the sleepy, noddin' head,
When the whippoorwill is singing' and it's time to go to bed.

Down across the dewy pasture like the murmur in a shell,
Here an' there the drowsy, dreamy, far-off tinkle of a bell,
Comes the myriad cricket chorus blending in harmonic blur
With the heavy, boomin' rumble of the clumsy beetle's whir,
When the hard day's work is over and the weary horses fed—
When the whippoorwill is singin' and it's time to go to bed.

Paint the sun that mounts the heavens; paint the crimson afterglow;
Spread upon your living canvas all the sophistries you know;
Breathe the spirit of the masters into pictures of the day,
From the risin' of the sun until the hills begin to gray;
But you cannot paint the mysteries that charm the weary head,
When the whippoorwill is singin' and it's time to go to bed.

A Professional Visit.

BY FRANK H. SWEET.

(Copyright, 1901, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

It was bitterly cold, and the two figures threading their way down the mountain side bent to avoid the slanting particles of ice that stung their faces. Yet only the day before the sun had shone and May flowers had opened their petals to a soft breeze.

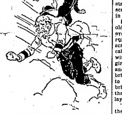
"Hurry! hurry! Doctor! for mercy's sake, hurry!" implored one of the figures, shouting in order to be heard above the wind, and the other figure, strong and athletic though it was, threw itself forward still more fiercely in vain endeavor to overtake the old man, who was plunging on ahead. "Hurry! hurry! hurry!" came back to him as part of the wind. "It's ten miles yet, an' she may be dyin'. For mercy's sake, hurry!"

Only a few hours before, just as the storm was bursting, the old man had appeared at the door of a small isolated hotel in the mountains and demanded a doctor, and when assured there was not one within twenty miles he had thrown up his hands with a despairing, "An' she may be dyin'! She may be dyin'!" Then suddenly straightening himself, he had asked harshly to be shown the road to the nearest doctor. At that moment the young man had appeared.

"I am not a doctor," he had said, "but I studied medicine two years before deciding upon the ministry. I have only just arrived, so I know nothing about the location of doctors here. As you are in a hurry, I may be better than none, and am at your service."

Hardly a word had been spoken since then, except the intermittent "Hurry! hurry!" Down slopes they had plunged, dodging trees and bowlders, slipping and stumbling, and up slopes they had climbed and scrambled, clinging by sheer force of fingers where they would often have fallen back, their one thought to cover distance as rapidly as possible. Mile after mile fell away behind them and still they bent their faces to the slanting particles of ice, the young man unable to see where he was going, but following his companion, who was apparently oblivious of fatigue or pain.

But suddenly as they hurried on the old man's foot caught in some projection and he was thrown violently forward. Almost instantly, however, he was upon his feet again and plunging on.—But only for a few steps; then he tottered and fell.



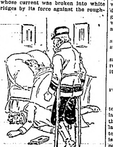
"Hurry! Hurry!" he called.

"Hurry! hurry!" he called. "I've broke my ankle, and can't keep up. Foller the ridge till ye come to a gulley with pine trees on one side. Keep through it, and then turn to the right. My cabin's in the oak scrub beyond."

"But you," protested the young man anxiously. "I cannot leave you like this. Let me attend to your ankle first."

"No, no, no!" screamed the old man harshly. "Go on, I tell ye. There's no time for me. I'm all right an' know every foot o' these mountains. If my ankle is broke, I can hobble along, an' will get there 'most as soon as you. Go on, I tell ye! Hurry! hurry! For mercy's sake, hurry! She may be dyin'!"

The young man sprang away obediently. Along the ridge and down the gulley he hurried, dodging the trees and rocks when he could see them, and bruising himself against them when he could not, the storm still beating in his face, but the bitter cold unnoticed in his haste. At the end of the gully he heard the rush and roar of turbulent waters, and presently came to the bank of a stream, thirty or forty feet wide, whose current was broken into white ridges by its force against the roughness of the river bed. The old man had not spoken of this. Doubtless he knew of a fording place, and had expected himself to lead the way across.



"He fell there after he saw me."

There was no time to look for a ford now, and without hesitation the young man flung himself into the icy water. He was a strong swimmer, but when he drew himself laboriously up the opposite bank he was breathing heavily. Another ten feet of the whirling icy current he felt would have been more than he could have overcome.

For a moment he lay panting and trembling; then rose stiffly to his feet. In his wet garments he would soon freeze unless he kept moving.

Far up the slope he could see the scrub oaks, and among them was doubtless the cabin. It was still miles away, and would require hard climbing to reach it. But the very exertion of such a climb would be the best means of keeping him from freezing. Up, up he climbed and crawled, all the time more slowly and painfully, his garments soon freezing stiff as boards and his fingers becoming red and bloodstained. But at last he reached the scrub, and soon after saw the cabin in which was the life he was to save.

It was late the next day when the old man followed him up the slope, even more slowly and painfully. It required several hours to hobble to the scrub, and several more to reach the cabin. When he pushed open the door with an improvised crutch, he saw a girl lying on a couch, her face pale and frightened, but her eyes clear and bright. For the first time tears began to fall from the old man's eyes, for the brightness of the girl's face told him that she was saved. Upon the floor lay the young man breathing heavily.

"He fell there after he saved me," the girl said, hurriedly, "but first he took some of his own medicine. He said he would try to get to the fire. I could only lie here and wait and watch. It's been awful, for maybe—Henry is dying. You must hurry for a doctor, uncle."

"Yes, yes; I'll hurry for one right off," said the old man thankfully; "he's earned that. But first I'll git him on the bed an' give him something hot to drink. I reckon mebbe he's got chilled and used up."

But as he bent over him, the young man opened his eyes; at first blankly, then with growing intelligence in them. "It's more exhaustion than anything else," he whispered, "that and the cold. I'll be all right in a day or two. Don't go for a doctor; you're not able. You might hand me my box of medicine. I fell on the floor. And—and——"

The old man bent lower.

"Is—is—El-sie doing well? You might—give her another spoonful from the glass."

The old man nodded, a surprised look coming to his face. But the young man had fallen back unconscious.

Three days later the two were outside the cabin together. The old man was sitting on a bench, his ankle bandaged.

"Your niece is all right now," the young man was saying. "If she has another attack, give her the medicine as I have directed. And you must be very careful of your ankle for a week or two—though for that matter I shall be back again—soon. I—you see—I used to know your niece. We attended schools in the same town. Then she disappeared, and I could not obtain her address."

"Yes," said the old man, "an' you've found her here?"

"I've found her here," simply, "and—and she says I may call again. But good-by."

The old man reached into his pocket "I wish I could give you something like what you've done for me's worth, Doctor," he said, wistfully, "but I can't. Elsie's paw was rich, but he died, an' Elsie came to live with me. I git my livin' huntin'. This is all the money I've got, but you must take it," and he held out a silver dollar.

The young man glanced at it smilingly, with refusal on his lips. But something in the old man's eyes made him change his mind. He took the dollar and slipped it into his pocket.

"Thank you," he said. "Now I must be going."

When he came to the crossing to which the old man had directed him, a tree fallen across the river, he paused and took some letters from his pocket. One of them he opened and read thoughtfully.

"Dear Jack: Allow me to congratulate you in advance upon your success in the suit. All that was needed was the evidence which you write you have secured. The money is unquestionably yours, and even the other side tacitly admits this, while counting for success upon quibble of the law. But you must be careful to have your evidence in court on the 20th, or the case will go by default. Five thousand dollars is not much, but it may be of great use to a young fellow like you. who is just starting out in life. Yours as ever,

——— ———."

The young man tore the letter into strips and dropped them into the swirling current of river.

"It is now the twenty-second," he said contentedly, "and the case has already gone by default. But what of it? I have found Elsie."

THE DRAGON SCREEN.

Porcelain Wall, the Only remnant of Beautiful grounds.

Very few people even in Pekin seem to have heard of it. For, of course, till lately none were allowed to drive along the excellent carriage road by the lake through the parklike grounds interspersed with rockeries. The screen is perhaps twenty feet high, and of porcelain throughout, and on it in high relief a row of dragons standing on their tails, and possibly five feet high, old gold, dull red, cream, dark blue, then over again, the two dark blue confronting each other in the center. What was that screen meant to shelter from the world? Now behind it there is only a scene of frantic desolution of the most complete vandalism—trees hacked and broken, marble columns razed to the ground, images torn from their lotus seats and cloven in two. Here a broken head lying in the grass, there a gilded hand, and behind, a little to the right on an eminence, a temple like that which crowns the hill at the Summer palace. Covered with a thousand images of Buddha outside, all of imperial yellow brilliantly shining, it caused the spectator to sigh and think how exquisite must have been the other destroyed building, since this required no protecting screen. "I do not deplore its destruction at all," says a German Sinologue, "the Chinese must be humbled somehow. Best humble them through their palaces and temples."—The Cornhill.

The Population of London.

To population of London, according to the authoritative and careful calculations of Mr. Welton, published in the December (1900) issue of the Royal Statistical Society's Journal, amounted to only 1,000 000 in 1801. This figure had doubled itself by 1841; and in 1891 the total reached 5,442,000, and by 1901 was probably 6,250 000. The area included, it should be said, is not precisely that of the census returns, so that the figures, though based upon the census returns, differ considerably from them. But practically we may say that in the lapse of a century the inhabitants of London multiplied sixfold. This enormous population, greater than that of many European states of the second class, is compressed within a space of about 130,000 acres, or, say, 200 square miles.—National Review.

Photograph Without a Camera.

It is often desired to photograph an engraving or plate in a book that cannot be taken from a library, and where the camera cannot be used. A means of taking the photograph in such cases, has been devised by an Englishman. He coats a cardboard with a phosphorescent substance, exposes it to sunlight or to the electric arc light, and then places it at the back of the engraving. He then closes the book, wraps it in a black cloth and leaves it so for from 18 to 60 minutes, according to the thickness of the paper, and thus obtains a fairly satisfactory negative

SABBATH IN SWEDEN.

It Is a Day When the Populace Seeks Pleasure.

We spent Sunday in Gothenburg and had an opportunity to observe the Swedish plan of Sabbath observance, writes William E. Curtis, who is in Sweden. In the morning the churches were all crowded and the services were very long. The pastors usually preached an hour, and, although the heat was oppressive and in some churches the sun blazed through the big curtainless windows until the air was almost stifling, the congregation sat through the two hours with commendable patience, and went home to their dinners edified.

About 2 o'clock in the afternoon people began to appear upon the streets carrying baskets and wraps and walking towards the parks. The street cars were crowded, and carriages were so numerous as to form processions, all driving the same way. Everybody seemed to be going somewhere. Long excursion trains were leaving every half hour from the railway stations. Toward evening we took a drive through the boulevards and parks into the suburbs, where the woods and lawns were alive with groups of grown people sitting on the grass, children running about among the trees and bushes and lovers wandering arm in arm through the shady lanes. The boulevards and driveways were thronged with all sorts of equipages, handsome carriages with coachmen and footmen in livery, and carts hauled by clumsy work horses loaded with plainly dressed men, women and children. The entire population of the city were engaged in a search of pleasure which they found in various forms. The cafes and restaurants were crowded all the afternoon and evening; gay music was provided at each other either by brass bands or orchestras.

ANIMALS APPRECIATE MUSIC.

Experiments Show That Harmonious Sounds Are Pleasing to Them.

Recent experiments undertaken to ascertain whether or not the lower animals are affected by instrumental music have proven to the entire satisfaction of those who conducted them that a powerful influence is exerted. A concert was given at a poultry show as an experiment. While the musicians were tuning their stringed instruments the fowls paid no attention, but as soon as they began to play they listened intently, and the only one among them that seemed dissatisfied was an old trukey cock. Though all his companions were perfectly quiet, he made more noise than usual. The concert was regarded as a success and as a convincing proof that poultry like string music.

That animals like to hear a violin played seems also to be clearly proved. Herr F. C. Baier, a German zoologist, played in their presence many times and found that the music pleased them. A puma at the first sound of the violin stretched himself at full length in his cage and listened quietly as long as the music was soft and low, but the moment it became loud and fast he sprang to his feet, lashed his sides with his tail and began to pace nervously up and down his narrow inclosure. A jaguar at the sound of lively music showed great uneasiness, but became quiet when soft music was played, and even further manifested his pleasure by thrusting his paws through the bars of his cage, so as to detain the violinist who was passing on in order to play for another animal.

Booming the Tomato.

The editor of the London Academy offered a prize for the best article in praise of the tomato. He received many answers from alleged tomato lovers, and out of the lot he picked one that is more poetical than tempting. That is, you read it and call it neat, but you don't go out and sample a tomato to see if what the essayist says of it is true. The eulogist closes his song of praise in this way: "I have had far more respect for Eve since I divined that the apple of love of paradise was really a tomato." But why should we divine that the fruit of endless discord was a tomato? This serpent loses half his dignity and most of his hypnotic influence when seen crawling around the tomato frames. Think of Eve offering Adam a bite of a tomato! It's absurd. People don't share tomatoes. Besides, the raw tomato without fixings, isn't attractive for any save vitiated appetites. It's different with the apple. The apple is the strawberry among the larger fruits. It's in a class by itself. It's good any way you want to serve it, even dried. No, we can't give up the apple—nor the serpent, with his tail securely twisted about the limb. The tomato is but a groundling—let it remain so.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

A Duke's Postage Stamps.

Among the gifts which have been presented to the Duke of Cornwall and York during his colonial tour is a complete collection of Australian postage stamps. The duke is an ardent collector, but there are some things in the philatelic world, it seems, which even a royal duke in a time of patriotic enthusiasm cannot command. It was proposed that Cape Colony should follow Australia's example and present the duke with a complete set of South African stamps. The idea had to be given up. It was found to be hopelessly impracticable and would have cost many thousands of pounds. For South Africa, in philately as in politics, is pre-eminently the country of changes and retrocessions and surcharges and errors. It is said that there are 1,100 South African varieties.

The winter is to be a season of flowers.

KAISER'S DRINKING GLASS.

Exhibited in a Shop Window, It Was Offered for Sale for $140.

In a shop window in Berlin is exhibited for sale an ornamental wine glass out of which the kaiser drank once. The price demanded is $140. But, as it has been in the window several days, would-be purchasers evidently think the price too high.

Attached to it is a notice, stamped with a notary's seal and a document written by the clerk of the Third Regiment of the Uhlans of the Guard, stating that Kaiser Wilhelm actually drank out of the glass March 7, 1900.

The matter causes infinite mirth among the Socialists and Radicals of Berlin.—New York World.

He Enjoyed the Shave.

He was one of those smooth-faced young men who chew gum because it's ladylike and smoke cigarettes because it's manly. He couldn't have stood under the mistletoe in a short-waist for five minutes without tempting something with a deep bass voice and whiskers to meander that way.

"Hair cut?" asked the barber, as he threw his head back on the rest.

"Naw, course not," indignantly replied the customer. "Can't yer see I want a shave?"

The barber heaved a weary sigh as he lathered the face, which looked like an advertisement for somebody's complexion balm. Then he picked up a neck razor, whipped it over the strop once, and scraped the lather off with the back of the instrument.

"By Jove, a shave makes a man feel better!" ejaculated the smooth-faced one, rubbing his hand gently over his skin.

"That's the fourth one o' them things to-day," growled the barber.—Denver Times.

Anxious Querist.

It was a female voice that came over the telephone wire this time.

"Is this the weather forecaster?"

"Yes, ma'am. Can I do anything for you?"

"Yes, sir. I would like to have you tell me how much longer this humidity is going to last."

"Pardon me, but why do you wish to know that?"

"Because I washed my hair a week ago, and I want to find out how much longer I've got to wait for it to dry."—Chicago Tribune.

Marked Among Men

Some Notable Defects of Famous People.

The face of Oliver Cromwell was disfigured with moles, pimples and warts. He must have been very proud of them, however, for when his portrait was being painted by Sir Peter Lely he swore he would not pay for it unless all these facial disfigurements were quite clearly shown.

Hogarth, the famous painter, has a prominent scar on his forehead which was the result of an accident in his early days. He made this appear still more prominent in a portrait of himself which he painted with his own hand.

The great Napoleon was subject to epileptic seizures, one of which, it has been said, lost him the battle of Waterloo, although most people believe his defeat was accomplished by the Duke of Wellington.

Lord Nelson lost one of his eyes, and his left arm had to be amputated as the result of a wound sustained in one of his numerous engagements. These deformities do not appear to have affected the great admiral's abilities, and on one famous occasion he found his blind eye particularly useful.

Wolseley Has Only One Eye.

Viscount Wolseley, the late commander-in-chief, has the use of only one of his eyes. He was deprived of the sight of the other in the Crimean war, a few days before the capture of Sebastopol.

As is well known, the Emperor William of Germany suffers from semi-paralysis of the left arm, and his father, the Emperor Frederick, died of a chronic affection of the throat.

Few people are aware of the curious throat trouble from which Lord Brougham, the eminent lord chancellor, was a constant sufferer. At the back of his throat there was a kind of a pouchlike cavity, which not only diverted the food from its proper channel, but caused him infinite pain.

Lord Byron, who was otherwise a magnificent specimen of a man, had a club foot, of which he was anything but proud. If, however, it detracted from his appearance and hindered locomotion, it did not hamper his genius Byron was possessed of a morbid fear of going out of his mind.

Insanity Not Uncommon.

Indeed, all poets are said to be more or less mad. Cowper was certainly subject to fits of lunacy, as was likewise Chatterton, who killed himself in a fit of derangement. The same is true of Rousseau, Cervantes, Southey and Swift.

Alexander Pope was a hunchback, with a very caustic tongue, which once resulted in his being as good as told that he was "a crooked little thing that asks impudent questions."

Throughout his life Sir Walter Scott could only walk with a limp. As a boy he was afflicted with paralysis, which left him permanently lame.

The late James Payn, the novelist, was extremely deaf, in which respect he resembled Edison, the world renowned electrician and inventor.

Milton was totally blind when he produced the masterpiece of his marvelous genius. From his youth up he suffered extremely from gout, which was the primary cause of the loss of his eyesight.

As anybody could gather from his works, Thomas Carlyle was a chronic dyspeptic. A state of irritation appears to have been his normal condition, and although in the absence of this peculiar ailment he might have been a far more amiable being, his writings would certainly have lost some of their most prominent characteristics.

Confucian maxims.

The "Analects" of Confucius were written by his disciples to chronicle the utterances of their "Most Holy Ancient Teacher." Confucius lived from 551 to 478 B. C., and was therefore contemporary with Daniel and Ezra. Of the many sayings recorded from his lips, none is more widely known than the Golden Rule he impressed upon his followers. One of them asked him, "Is there a single word which may serve as a rule for the whole of one's life?" "Is not shu (reciprocity) such a word?" replied the wise man. "Do not to others what you would not wish done to you." Others of his sayings are these: "Without virtue, both riches and honor seem to me like a passing cloud." "When I first began to study men, I heard words and gave credit for conduct. Now I hear words and observe conduct." "The perfect man loves all men. He is not governed by private affection and interest, but only regards right reason and the public good." "The perfect man is never satisfied with himself. He that is satisfied with himself is not perfect." "Patience is the most necessary thing in this world."

Famous Keepers of "Pubs"

Sussex Clergyman's Barmaid Sings in His Church Choir

Potter Palmer and the Astors are not the only people of wide reputation who are in the hotel business. In novels of English life it is always the retired butler who sets up a "pub"; but in English real life—which, by the way, is always vastly different from the life of the English novel—it is often "his ludship" who opens the hotel. Lord Spencer is the proprietor of two hotels in Northamptonshire. The one at Harleston is managed by Canon Bury, the rector of the parish. Lady Lechmere conducts the Spital Beck Inn on the road from York to Scarborough and does a thriving business. Her husband, Sir Frederick Lechmere, owns several hotels, which are under his direct control. The first peer to conduct an inn was "Dick" Croker's late neighbor, Lord Wantage, who for many years ran an establishment at Ardington and gave the proceeds to charity. The house differed from others of the sort inasmuch as soup as well as beer and spirits was sold over the bar in winter. The actor William Terriss, who was assassinated by a crazy man in London a short time ago, was an enthusiastic hotel keeper. He ran one of the most profitable public houses in London—the old Market House in Russell street, Covent Garden. He was not proprietor in name only, but always ordered his stock himself, attended to the books and had his real name, Lewin, over the door. The Bishop of Chester, who is much interested in public house reform, runs several establishments on lines which he has laid down. To one of them—the Sun at Sparkford—he gives his personal supervision. The Rev. Frederick Willett, a well-known clergyman of Sussex, manages a public house called the Anchor. The barmaid is a member of his choir. The Prince's Tavern, one of the best known houses in the west end of London, was until recently conducted by Miss Mariô Lloyd of music hall fame.—New York Press.

The Iron Ore Industry.

The first shipment of iron ore from the Lake Superior region was made in 1850, but it was not until 1860 that the shipments of Lake Superior ore annually exceeded 100,000 tons. Neither Connellsville coke nor any other coke exerted an appreciable influence upon the manufacture of pig iron in this country until after 1850. These dates show how late in the last century we began to utilize the raw materials that now have a world-wide reputation.

A Princess of Hawaii.

"That the former royal family of Hawaii had supernatural powers is still firmly believed by a very large number of the natives of those islands," says Chief Examiner Serven of the Civil Service commission. "When Commissioner Rodenberg and myself visited the city of Hilo, while we were on the islands recently, we were told the story of the rescue of that city from destruction by a volcano by Princess Emma of the Hawaiian royalty. The story was told us by the judge of the city and vouched for by half a dozen Americans who claimed to know personally.

"The volcano which was doing the damage is some 30 miles from the city. It began active operations, and the stream of lava which flowed from it started straight for the city of Hilo, covering an area about half a mile wide. The flow of lava was slow, as it gained only a small distance each day. It presented a solid wall of red-hot stone six or eight feet high, and remains to corroborate the story.

"As the lava approached the city the natives became much alarmed and were on the verge of panic, when a message came from Princess Emma. She said that when there was any danger of the destruction of the city by the lava, if she was informed of the same, she would come to Hilo and stop its flow. This message was just in time. The lava had reached to within half a mile of the city, and the princess was sent for in great haste. She came at once, bringing a live white dove, a sucking pig and a bottle of native rum. The populace of the city all followed her as she proceeded to the edge of the lava. When there she ordered the pig killed, and dipping up its blood with her fingers she sprinkled its drops on the lava, repeating the while some strange native lingo. The death of the dove followed, and its blood was likewise sprinkled on the flowing stone. Last came the rum, and this was poured as a sacrifice to the mystic power.

"The story ends here, for the lava never flowed another foot. The city of Hilo was saved, and Princess Emma, likewise all of the royal blood, can to this day wield all-powerful sway with the natives of Hawaii."

This year robes, especially for high toilets, are to be more worn than ever.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

THE NEWS,

BY JOHN W. EASTMAN.

PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY.

1.50 PER YEAR IN ADVANCE.

The Red Lake Falls Gazette endeavors to give the people of this city some advice about whom to elect municipal judge. But the advice will not be heeded.

C. L. Dobner should and will be elected to represent the First ward in the city council. He is a man of good judgment, is progressive and will make an excellent alderman.

If we want to have a progressive city we must elect progressive men to office. This city does not possess a more public spirited man than Charles A. Robbecke and his election will mean a step forward. He is in favor of water works and all other public improvements.

Remember and vote for two candidates for alderman-at-large. There are three candidates for this office—D. N. Winton, C. A. Robbecke and Hans Langseth. Mr. Winton is receiving the support of all factions in the city and will be elected without a doubt, thus confining the fight for the other seat in the council to Mr. Robbecke and Mr. Langseth.

* Elected.

The people turned out in full force Tuesday and as usual in such cases, won a great battle. Never in the history of the city was more interest taken in a city election, and never was a better ticket elected. All are representative business men, and will help to make this place the largest city in Northern Minnesota. The vote polled was quite large when it is considered that a large number of the residents of the city are now in the lumber camps, and the saw mill is closed down. A total of 376 votes were polled, divided as follows: First Ward, 151; Second Ward, 114; Third Ward, 111.

Hibner received 13 votes in both the First and Third wards. Let's see isn't 13 an unlucky number?

The residents of Meehan's addition did not vote—except a few who were made to swear in their ballots. The residents of that addition are as much interested in Thief River Falls as any resident of this city, and should be entitled to vote here. They all want to belong to the city, and there is no use in trying to keep then out.

The city machine worked hard for the success of Langseth, but evidently the voters did not.

D. N. Winton received a majority of 196, and C. A. Robbecke a majority of 162. And yet some people thought that their election was in doubt!

"Shep" Staples who is out in California, was not forgotten by the voters of the Third ward, where he resides, and was elected by the most decisive vote of any man on the ticket. Mr. Staples has a few friends in town and they worked hard for his success.

Lars Backe will not be elected city clerk again. M. K. Wall is a candidate for the office, and the friends of W. C. Smiley are also working to secure this plum for him.

N. W. Tarrant announces that he will appoint K. M. Hansen clerk of his court.

The election was duly celebrated.

Justices of Peace were elected as follows: First ward, Chesterfield Retallick; Second ward, Alex A. Sweaas; Third ward, Frank Cornousek.

Staples received several votes in the Second and First Wards. In fact the people all over town wanted to vote for him.

Judge Watts can run his own little court. "Nick" Tarrant will run ours.

There is some talk to the effect that the city officials elected by the council hold office for a term of two years, from the time of their election. It is absurd to think one council can elect officers for another or bind their acts. The people voted for a change—and they want it.

Those little handbills headed "Judge Watts Testifies" did not influence many of the voters. Who is Judge Watts, anyway?

The plat of Meehan's addition was accepted as an addition to the city as Thief River Falls by the city council. If it is not a part of the city what business had the council passing a resolution accepting the plat?

Crookston College opened its full term Sept. 9th. Its first winter term will open Nov. 4th. Board and furnished room in hotel or private family for $2.50 to $3.00 per week. Tuition $1.00 per week. Send for catalogue. Adress J. C. Sathre, Crookston, Minn.

Last year the total assessed valuation of Red Lake county real estate was $1,121,044, and this remains practically unchanged with the exception of the addition of those farms that have been proved up since the last real estate assessment.

A New Fuel Maker.

A Hallock correspondent of Farm Stock and Home tells the readers of that excellent paper of an invention which has for its purpose the manufacture of a fuel of straw which seems to be of great practical utility. It is claimed to be comparatively cheap and simple in its construction, and is easily moved from stack to stack, and this overcomes the necessity for moving the straw to the machine. The machine is set at the stack and the straw is fed into it and comes out in stove length fuel, the pieces being firm, smooth and neat in appearance. Thus the surplus straw which before had no value beyond its fertilizing value after decay, which is rarely utilized, becomes at once vested with immediate usefulness and value. The invention is a product of the genius of Captain Thos. Carney who lives near Hallock, and is claimed by its inventor to be a wonderful machine which indeed it is entitled to if it will accomplish the work it is alleged it will do, and bids fair to outclass the invention of Mr. Edison for the same purpose, mention of which was made in the Journal last week.

CRAZY MAN AND GUN.

He Clears the Streets and Is Boss of the Town.

Racine, Wis., Nov. 1. — A madman with a shotgun ruled the town of North Capt, this county, for hours Tuesday. The citizens fled in terror when he began shooting in all directions and they sought safety in cellars. The man, Johann Johnson, is still at large, and the sheriff and two deputies are seeking him. Johnson, who is a prosperous farmer, became violently insane, and, taking his shotgun, he left the house, telling his wife he had discovered a plot to poison him, and that he would settle with his enemies. He told a boy he met the names of two men he intended to kill. The boy gave the alarm and the men hid before Johnson reached town. Angered by his failure to find his intended victims, the maniac began firing promiscuously, and soon he had the streets to himself.

MAN WITH HISTORY.

Educated for the Ministry He Becomes a Freak in Side Show.

Sioux City, Iowa, Nov. 1. — A body, supposed to be that of a man with two or three histories, was found in a cornfield here yesterday. There was a bullethole in the back of his head and gashes across the throat. Doctors conjecture that the body has been in the field for six weeks. It is believed to be that of Samuel Crofton, who once was a minister in Humboldt, Tenn. Crofton never got a call to a pulpit that paid much money, and as he could not support himself on his restricted income he forsook the ministry. He gave his talents to the impersonation of a snake man in a side show that played in this neighborhood in August. When he dropped the snake-man business is not known. Neither is it known that he had enemies who would kill him.

SOUTH DAKOTAN KILLED.

Is Shot by a Farmer Near Norfolk, Nebraska.

Sioux City, Iowa, Nov. 1. — George Fetterly, whose parents live at Alpena, S. D., was shot and killed yesterday morning near Norfolk, Neb., on the farm of Christ Duerr. The farmer says he was awakened by a noise, and came out with a gun. Seeing a man leaving the stable with a bridle in his hands, he fired twice, killing the man instantly. Duerr gave himself up. Edmund George, who was with Fetterly, says they stopped for a drink, Fetterly going to the house. George heard three shots and left.

Victory for the Amalgamated.

Butte, Mont., Nov. 1.—Judge Knowles of the United States court has overruled the motion of the attorneys for August Heinze to remand to the state courts the case of John McGinnis and others against the Boston and Montana, an action aiming to prevent the acquisition of the Boston and Montana by the Amalgamated Copper company and to prevent the Boston and Montana from paying dividends or paying out any money pending the appointment of a receiver. The refusal of the judge to remand the case is considered a signal victory for the Amalgamated.

Davis Held to the Grand Jury.

St. Peter, Minn., Nov. 1. — Fred R. Davis, charged with the murder of William Youngren, was given his preliminary examination yesterday before Justice Miller. Upon the opening of court County Attorney Davis moved to dismiss the charge of murder in the first degree. A. A. Stone of this city appeared for Davis. The facts brought out at the examination were substantially the same as appeared at the time in the daily papers. At the conclusion Davis was bound over to the grand jury.

One Year for Robbery.

Aberdeen, S. D., Nov. 1.—John E. Dillon, charged with robbing Otto Tunby, entered a plea of guilty before Judge Campbell and received a sentence of one year in the penitentiary. Dillon's father, who is a highly respected citizen of Woonsocket, came here, and after learning the facts in the case, advised his son to plead guilty and get as light a sentence as possible. The old gentleman is almost heartbroken over the downfall of his son. The money was nearly all recovered.

Trout Fry for Winona Brooks.

Winona, Minn., Nov. 1. — A consignment of several thousand trout fry were received on Tuesday from the state fish hatchery for Winona county streams. The fry were taken from the train at Minnesota City by H. G. Smith, a member of the commission, and Judge D. E. Vance and Dan Baker, all three enthusiastic fishermen. The fry were placed in the waters of Rollingstone creek. They were unusually large, some of them being almost large enough to eat.

Bad Fire at Hastings.

Hastings, Minn., Nov. 1. — The old Milwaukee company warehouse east of the freight depot—containing tools, supplies, etc., of several of the company's employes—and the residence of Mrs. J. Z. Horak, occupied by J. T. Olson, were burned yesterday afternoon. The cause is supposed to have been a passing locomotive. The estimated loss to the company is upward of $2,000, covered by insurance. It is reported that Mrs. Horak had no insurance.

STAYED TOO LONG

TWO WOMEN AND FIVE MEN ARE LEFT BEHIND ON ISLAND OF GUAM.

CURIOSITY GETS THEM IN A FIX

LEFT TRANSPORT TO SEE SIGHTS AND VESSEL SAILS WITHOUT THEM.

MINNESOTA MAN AMONG THEM

HAVE ONLY THEMSELVES TO BLAME FOR INCONVENIENCES TO FOLLOW.

Manila, Sept. 27.—When the United States army transport Sheridan arrived in Manila bay last night, it was learned that seven of her passengers, two of whom were ladies, had been left upon the island of Guam. Among the unfortunates is Frank W. Spicer of Northfield, Minn., who left the United States to become a teacher in the government schools now being organized in the Philippine islands.

The Sheridan had anchored for the purpose of depositing and receiving mail, and Brig. Gen. F. D. Grant decided to make a hasty trip to the island. Many of the passengers were anxious to set foot upon terra firma after having been so long upon the water, but all who requested permission to land were informed by the quartermaster that the transport would continue her voyage upon the return of Gen. Grant and party, whether or not the other passengers were aboard.

The great desire of the seven to take in the sights of the island of Guam was uncontrollable, and after several hours of impatient waiting the little party decided to run the risk which has resulted in their present exile, for as soon as Gen. Grant came aboard. As the deserters took the bull by the horns, they have only themselves to blame for the inconveniences which will crowd upon them while waiting for another transport. So much thieving is reported to have occurred on the vessel that nearly every person had left in the care of the quartermaster all his money and valuables, and it is doubtful if the whole party can scrape up enough to buy a bunch of bananas.

The three vocations in life which are represented in the band that could not overcome their curiosity to see a strange land, its people and their customs, are chaplain, army officer and teacher. Well might they wish themselves butchers and bakers and candlestick makers; for the prayers of the chaplain, the protection of the army officer and the philosophy of the teacher can do little towards securing bread and meat for man when hungry and a bed for him when tired. With neither a change of clothing in a country where the mercury makes a daily visit to blood heat, nor an idea as to when another transport will call at their port, the sorrowful seven will probably favor the connection of Guam by cable with the civilized world. It would be well for those who expect to cross the Pacific on government vessels to remember that time, tide and army transports wait for no man.

KILLED IN A WRECK.

Freight Train Crashes Into a Work Train.

Valparaiso, Ind., Nov. 1.—Two men were instantly killed and a dozen injured in a collision at 7 o'clock this evening between the local freight on the Pennsylvania road and the work train of the Clifford Construction company of this city.

The dead are Joseph Clifford of the Clifford Construction company, Valparaiso; Conductor Tompkins of the work train.

Fatally injured, Charles Coyer of the Clifford Construction company; Brakeman Johnson.

The accident occurred on the grade at Plymouth. The work train was running on the time of the regular train, which was late. At the bottom of the steep hill at a sharp bend of the track the local, running at a high speed, crashed into the Clifford train, which consisted only of a locomotive and caboose, in which were the crew of fifteen men. Cars and locomotives were crushed and smashed into by it.

The dead and mangled men were buried in the mass of wreckage. The wrecking trains at Plymouth, Chicago and Fort Wayne were called out and started immediately for the scene. Trains on this division of the Pennsylvania road were delayed several hours.

Not a man in the crew escaped uninjured, and it is feared several of them are so badly wounded that death is inevitable.

Preferred the Higher Salary.

Chicago, Nov. 2. — The Rev. Frank Crane, who resigned the pastorate of the Hyde Park Methodist church to accept a call from the People's church, will preach the first sermon to his new flock a week from Sunday. Mr. Crane will receive a yearly salary of $7,500 (more than twice the salary of the Hyde Park church) and he will be the best paid minister in Chicago. He will surrender at the next meeting of the Rock River conference his license to preach as a Methodist minister.

Convicted of Murder.

Toronto, Ont., Nov. 2. — Fred Lee Rice was convicted here yesterday on the charge of murdering William Boyd. Rice is the only survivor of the notorious trio of Aurora bank burglars. The murder occurred on July 4 last. Boyd and another constable were escorting the three prisoners to the jail when some one threw two loaded revolvers into their carriage. In their desperate fight for liberty which followed Constable Boyd was shot through the head.

Stallings Denies Rumor.

Detroit, Mich., Nov. 1.—G. T. Stallings, half-owner and manager of the Detroit Baseball club, who, it was reported, had sold his interest to his partner, Jim Burns, to-night gave the Associated Press the following signed statement: "I have not sold my interests in the Detroit club to Mr. Burns or any one else, and my holdings are positively not for sale. I am working on my team every day, preparing for next season, and will present several new faces with the Tigers next spring."

UNITED AFTER MANY YEARS.

Three Brothers Meet After the Lapse of Half a Century.

La Crosse, Wis., Nov. [illegible]—After being separated for over half a century three brothers, Ferdinand Schultz, aged 92; Carl Schultz, 89, and Fritz Schultz, 87, were reunited at the home of Carl Schultz at Chippewa Falls, Wis. Fritz was the first to leave the home of his parents in Germany, going to Australia, where he became wealthy. Some years later Carl and Ferdinand sailed for America, but lost track of each other. Back in the eighties Ferdinand learned that his brother Carl was in New Ulm, Minn., and went there hoping to locate him. Arriving there he was informed that Carl had lost his life during the memorable tornado. This proved to be an error as Carl had moved to Chippewa Falls, but the fact was not discovered until a short time ago when Fritz, the wealthy brother, succeeded in locating his brothers, the result being a happy reunion.

TWO HARBORS BREAKWATER.

Project Started Many Years Ago Just Completed.

Duluth, Minn., Nov. 3. — Powell & Mitchell, contractors, have just completed the breakwater at Two Harbors on which work has been under way more or less continuously since 1884. The government project at that point is now done. A still longer project for harbor work there to keep up with the demands of commerce will be brought up in congress this winter.

South Dakota Prize Crops.

Brookings, Minn., Nov. 3. — Frank Sherwin has contracted to deliver 2,000 bushels of wheat grown on his farm near this city this season to the Salzer Seed company. He has also bargained to sell all his spelt and timothy seed to the same firm. All the seed is of fine quality. Eastern South Dakota grains of all kinds are first-class, and much of the season's crop will be purchased by other states for seed. The corn crop is exceptionally fine, having fully matured before frost.

County Seat Is Changed.

Lake Benton, Minn., Nov. 3—Returns of the special election on the removal of the county seat of Lincoln county to Ivanhoe have been canvassed. The result is declared in favor of Ivanhoe by 39 votes more than the 55 per cent. The county commissioners in special session declared the county seat changed to the new town. The records have been removed to the new county seat.

Hypnotized by Peddlers.

Osceola, Wis., Nov. 3.—Louis Peterson, a farmer who resides in the town of Garfield, eight miles east of here, was the victim of a gang of lightning rod swindlers. He emphatically declared that he did not wish a rod, but one was sold to him just the same. He believes he was hypnotized by them. Peterson was in town yesterday seeking advice in the matter.

City Loses Its Hotel.

Fergus Falls, Minn., Nov. 3. — The city council has voted to lease the Grand hotel to Maj. Curry for a period of five years, with the privilege of sale in two. The mayor and three of the aldermen were anxious to dispose of the building at once, and the proposition to lease was carried by a vote of 5 to 3. Mr. Curry pays $125 a month for the hotel.

Largest in the World.

Walter Baker & Co., Ltd., Dorchester, Mass, are the largest manufacturers of cocoa and chocolate in the world. They received a gold medal from the Paris exposition of last year. This year they have received three gold medals from the Pan-American Exposition at Buffalo. Their goods are the standard for purity and excellence.

Gipsy Hold-Up Women Released.

La Crosse, Wis., Nov. 3.—The gipsy women arrested for holding up two farmers near this city have been released. Their story is that they stopped the men and told their fortunes, for which the farmers parted with their coin. However, the men began to repent, and came to town and swore out warrants for robbery.

Pioneers Dropping Off.

Hill City, S. D., Nov. 3. — Another Black Hills pioneer is gone. Martin Dodge died this week of heart disease. He was an employe of the Harney Peak Tin company for many years and at the time of his death was interested in several valuable mining properties, among them the Golden Slipper.

Failed to Post Licenses.

Fargo, N. D., Nov. 3.—In the United States court William Schwartz, Amos Herman and Frank McCue were each fined $25 for failing to post their government licenses. The men were engaged in the sale of liquor in Benson and Wells counties and were arrested by United States authorities.

IOWA BANK RAIDED

ARMED WITH WINCHESTERS, ROBBERS GUARD WHILE PALS GET THE MONEY.

DO IT IN REAL JESSE JAMES STYLE

SAFE AND BUILDING AT MATTOCK BADLY WRECKED WITH DYNAMITE.

THE ROBBERS ARE UNMOLESTED

THEY SECURE TWO THOUSAND DOLLARS AND MAKE THEIR ESCAPE.

Matlock, Iowa, Nov. 2. — Between 1 and 2 o'clock yesterday morning the Bank of Matlock was burglarized and about $2,000 secured, $300 of which was in silver. Six men were in the gang, heavily armed, some with Winchester rifles. They stationed themselves around so as to guard all points while two were inside.

They made free use of dynamite, three heavy shots being fired, giving a loud report and waking up a good many people. It looks as though the crowd came prepared to hold the town at bay.

The safe is a fine large fireproof one, having a burglarproof vault inside the safe. The vault is a total wreck.

The building is badly wrecked and the heating stove was demolished. All the glass in the windows is broken out and some pieces of the safe a foot square were blown through the sides of the building and out into the street, a distance of thirty yards.

An old man sleeping in an adjoining building was covered by two robbers who broke out the window glass and covered the old man with a Winchester rifle and a large revolver and compelled him to keep still. The robbers were not masked.

There is absolutely no clue. No effort was made to follow the robbers on account of their being so heavily armed.

The total loss in money and damage to the safe and building is over $4,000. About $100 worth of jewelry was taken.

BANK ROBBED.

Total Loss Is Estimated at $1,500—Thieves Escape.

Des Moines, Iowa, Nov. 2.—The Bank of Arispe was entered early yesterday morning by two robbers who blew open the safe with aid of nitro-glycerine, shattering the door to bits and knocking out a portion of the front of the one-story brick building in which the bank is located. Every dollar in the safe was secured by the robbers, only a few pennies scattered on the floor remaining of the $450 in the safe. The robbers left their tools in the bank and were seen to leave the town by walking down the Chicago Great Western tracks. While the robbers were at work a heavy rainstorm was in progress. The total loss is estimated at $1,500, not including notes and mortgages which are missing. The sheriff is following the robbers with a posse.

YOUNG GIRL ELOPES.

Miss Murphy Leaves Her Home With a Patent Medicine Vendor.

La Crosse, Wis., Nov. 2.—J. Murphy, a business man of Westby, Wis., was in the city last night searching for his young daughter, whom he says was lured away from her home by a patent medicine man whose true name he does not know. His story is that she became infatuated with the man, who was in their little town two weeks, but that he knew nothing of it until a few days ago when he asked her not to have anything to do with him. Yesterday morning she arose early, as was the custom of the family, and went down town. Nothing was thought of it, as she was supposed to be visiting a girl friend, until noon, when she did not appear for her meal. Investigation showed both the girl and her medicine man lover had left town, and the father tracked them as far as St. Joseph's ridge and then to this city.

BOER COLONY IN WYOMING.

Capitalists of Holland Back the Scheme.

Cheyenne, Wyo., Nov. 2.—A number of bankers and other wealthy men of Holland are making arrangements for establishing a colony of Boers and Hollanders in Wyoming. A tract of 300,000 acres has been secured in the valley of the Green river in Sweetwater county, Southern Wyoming. Surveys have been made for a gigantic canal and irrigation system and construction is to be commenced at once. The prospective settlers are now being brought over to do the work. Tests have been made which show that the soil is especially well adapted for beet sugar culture and a large beet sugar factory will be established in the colony.

Northern Pacific Brakeman Arrested

Fergus Falls, Minn., Nov. 2.—Deputy Marshal Morrison brought from Detroit Charles Founce, who has been braking on the Northern Pacific and who is accused of having broken the seal of a bonded car, allowing four men to enter and take a ride on their paying him $1 apiece. The breaking of the seal is a serious offense, and the man will have to answer for it to the United States court in this city next spring. His bond was placed at $500.

Sweeping Order to Vaccinate.

Fortune in Clam Bed.

Stewartville, Minn., Nov. 2. — E. S. Baker of this place has located a clam bed on the river that yielded $50 worth of pearls in one day's picking. Baker thinks he has a fortune in sight.

No Longer Wild and Woolly

We are cultured to the limit in the famous Western land,
Christianity upon us has a cinch,
And refinement in our actions always plays a winning hand—
We are getting there, dead certain, inch by inch.
As an ornament the pistol is completely out of date,
Very rarely do we have a shutenfest,
We are up with the procession and we mean to hold our gait—
It no longer is the wild and woolly West.

We are short of desperadoes, scarcely ever see a tough
With a yearning craze for shooting up the town,
And the tenderfoot from Jersey when he tries to run a bluff
Undergoes a rather hasty calling down.
We are drinking better liquor than we did in days of yore,
And we go about more fashionably dressed;
The advance wave of progress quenched our burning thirst for gore—
It no longer is the wild and woolly West.

Not a Christian man among us wears his breeches in his boots,
And the old wool shirt is but a memory now,
And we look with disapproval on the tenderfoot galoots
Who are sporting big sombreros on the brow.
We are seen at church on Sunday ere the trout begin to bite
With a holy flame alight in every breast,
And we're always in our couches at the stroke of 12 at night—
It no longer is the wild and woolly West.

And our ladies, heaven bless 'em, are so modest, nice and sweet,
You would think them truant angels from the skies;
Never see them dash astraddle on their bronchos through the street,
Making hosiery displays for staring eyes.
Not a slangy word or sentence ever ripples from their lips,
For a high old time they never go in quest;
Not a gun is ever peeping from the pocket on their hips—
It no longer is the wild and woolly West.

Oh, you bet your filthy lucre, we're refined to beat the band,
We have culture to distribute to the birds,
And the brand of fresh morality we always keep on hand
Couldn't be described in common rhymy words.
We in every moral attribute are strictly recherche,
And that same's no pipey visionary jest,
And we love the rugged country into which we've come to stay—
It no longer is the wild and woolly West.

Two Worlds and Their Children.

BY ETHEL M. COLSON.

(Copyright, 1901, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

The trolley car which had been dashing along toward Chicago stopped suddenly, held upon a suburban street corner by the inevitable coal wagon with a tendency to break down. Franklin Atherton gazed idly at the earnest group of Salvation Army workers on the other side of the street. Suddenly in a momentary cessation of the ponderous drum-beats a clear, sweet, feminine voice faltered out softly:

"Ah! I have sighed to rest me
Deep in the quiet grave."

The rest of the words were surprising Salvation Army adaptations of the most characteristic type. But Franklin Atherton never heard them. With a bound he had reached the side of the singer—the girl whom he would have asked to become his wife long ago but that he feared to face poverty with her. He had not seen her for nearly two years.

"Margaret! How came you with these people?"

The girl looked at him gravely.

"When your world—the world which was mine also until my father died and left me penniless—found no time or space or attention for me I turned to the world in which men and women work instead of play. Not knowing how to work I went hungry. When I was homeless and seeking death because no other course seemed open the Salvation Army workers found me. They saved my life—and soul. Now I am trying to save others."

The gong of the trolley clanged out at the moment. It seemed like a summons to another world.

"Margaret!" The words seemed drawn from him. "Leave this life, for God's sake! Come with me."

"How came you with these people?"

"As your wife, Franklin?"

The flicker of doubt and uncertainty in his eyes was so short-lived that few would have seen it. But the girl turned away as though she had suffered a blow.

"No—dear," she answered. "Not now. You are not strong enough to take me just yet. But," she called after him as he sprang aboard the trolley, "we may meet again, some time. When we do, perhaps——"

But he was gone.

Three years later Franklin Atherton had also disappeared from the world which had once known him. Excessive haste to be rich, the gambling fever, an unlucky speculation, these were the successive steps by which he had reached starvation and despair. For a man of his temperament all things seemed ended. He was heading for the river when there smote upon his jaded ear the sound of a flagellated drum, the clear note of a silver trumpet. Then, as he listened instinctively:

"What is the matter, my brother?"

"Ah! I have sighed to rest me
Deep in the quiet grave."

It was no dream. It was not the result of a fevered imagination. The voice was unmistakable, the intonation quite beyond question. His manhood left him suddenly, and he sank down upon the curbstone, sobbing. The clear, sweet voice came nearer. A gentle hand was laid upon his arm.

"What is the matter, my brother? What can we do to help you?"

Soft, hurrying footsteps followed him into the shadowy, darkened sidestreet to which he hastened. Again the gentle hand was laid upon his arm.

"It's no use, Margaret. Do you suppose I'll be cad enough to let you help me, after the treatment you have received at my hand? God bless you—good-by."

The girl made no immediate answer—in words.

Turning, she beckoned to the bluecoated co-worker who had followed her from the lighter street.

"This is a very dear friend of mine, "Lieutenant Caldwell," she told him, with a voice which shook a little from varied emotions, but with eyes which shone and sparkled, "and he is in trouble, in need of assistance. I know I can trust you to do all that you can for him, for my sake as well as for the sake of—the man who is going to be my husband some day."

"Margaret!"

The man was humbled as neither poverty, slights, hunger, cold, nor raggedness had been potent to humble him. But there was no bitterness in the humility with which he kissed her fingers, there in the darkened street.

"Margaret, you are an angel, and I will be worthy of you yet. I swear it. I will be your husband some day—if the good Lord and yourself will allow it—but I'll be a man first, by God!"

And the quiet stars, looking down impressively on the flagellated drum and the throbbing hearts of the men and women around it, saw and knew, somehow, that a new soul had been born.

EGYPT AS A WINTER RESORT.

Africa More Interesting to British Tourists Than Southern Europe.

Every indication is forthcoming that the approaching season in Cairo and on the Nile will be a prosperous one, and visitors will probably exceed the record of last year, when so many English people deserted the Riviera for Egypt. All the hotels promise to be full, and the newer health resorts will not lack for patronage. There now include Helouan, within half an hour's railway ride of Cairo, which has sulphur baths, recommended for rheumatism, and several first-class hotels and pensions, while furnished villas may be hired. Assouan, which is described as the driest accessible health resort in the world, has two large hotels and an English church, and is growing in popularity year by year, rivaling Luxor, so well known to invalids and others who dare not face an English winter. At Luxor, also, hotel extensions have taken place, and no modern improvements are wanting. Assouan is the starting point for the further voyage to Wady-Holfa. Sportsmen in search of big game are making up parties for shooting buffalo, giraffe, rhinoceros, hippotamus and elephant in the district lying between Khartoum and Fashoda. The regulations are now somewhat more stringent, owing to the increase in the number of guns. Dahabeahs, steam and sailing, and modernized—for the type of craft goes back to the days of the Pharoahs—provide the most luxurious and necessarily costly means of conveyance, and the fleet available is always in keen demand for families making application a long time in advance.—London Telegraph.

Queen Alexander.

Love for children is a prominent trait of the character of the queen consort. She was passionately devoted to her own children, and she has never wholly recovered from the death of her eldest born, the Duke of Clarence. Several months after her bereavement she was walking in the lanes near her home, when she met an old woman staggering under the weight of burdens too heavy for her. The princess stopped her to speak a few words of sympathy, and learned that she performed the duties of a carrier, executing commissions between two villages. "The bundles are too heavy for me!" she lamented, bursting into tears. "I never carried them when Jack was here." "Who is Jack and where is he now?" kindly inquired the princess. "Jack's my boy, and he's dead—dead!" wildly exclaimed the old woman. With another sympathetic word Alexandra turned away, hurriedly lowering her veil to hide her emotion. She could understand the sorrow of a mother who had lost her boy. The next day there was sent to the woman a cart drawn by a stout donkey. In this cart the old carrier made her journeys in comfort for the rest of her life.

Willing to Oblige.

An Englishman at a dinner once told a tale of a tiger he had shot which measured twenty-four feet from snout to tail-tip. Everyone was astonished, but no one ventured to insinuate a doubt of the truth of the story. Presently a Scotsman told his tale. He had once caught a fish which he said he was unable to pull in alone, managing only to land it at last with the aid of six friends. "It was a skate, and it covered two acres." Silence followed this recital, during which the offended Englishman left the table. The host followed. After returning he said to the Scotsman: "Sir, you have insulted my friend. You must apologize." "I dinna insult him," said the Scot. "Yes you did, with your two-acre fish story. You must apologize." "Well, said the offender, slowly, with the air of one making a great concession, "tell him if he will take ten feet off that tiger I will see what I can do with the fish."—London Tit-Bits.

A Lesson on Lobsters.

The methods of public school instruction, as applied in New York city, do not always meet the approbation of the parents of the pupils, as was evidenced the other day when a German woman of commanding figure strode into the school, and, approaching the principal, demanded: "What it is, a lobster?" The principal politely explained that a lobster was a species of shellfish. "Vell, how many legs has it—dis lobster?" The number of legs was stated. "Vell, I work me for a hurry, and if your teacher cannot find better dings than to ask my boy Jakey how many legs has it, a lobster, and make him come home to bodder his fadder mit questions, 'What it is, a lobster?' it is pad peesness."—Youth's Companion.

History of the Skunk.

The skunk first appears in history in the year 1636, when he was described in Theodat's History of Canada. He had been a long time on earth before species of fossil skunks. The skunks of the genius Chinca range over the greater part of North America and as far south as Mexico. Other skunks are found in Central and South America.—New York Sun.

"Fishiness" in Butter.

The New Zealand Dairyman reports that at a lecture delivered on the 15th of May at the eighth annual conference of the Australian Butter and Cheese Factory Managers' Association, held at Melbourne, Mr. Thomas Cherry, M. D., M. S., lecturer in bactoriology, Melbourne University, said: "I may say a word or two about one special defect in butter which has attracted a great deal of attention during the past two or three years, namely, "fishiness" This peculiar flavor is due to a chemical substance called "trimethylamine," which was first isolated from herring brine, and which gives the brine its peculiar flavor. During the last ten or twelve years trimethylamine has been extracted in small quantities from many kinds of putrifying substances, and it is now known to be a product of the growth of at least a score of different micro-organisms. It can be produced by sowing a pure culture of these, just in the same way as a pure culture of the lactic acid bacteria produces the agreeable aroma of good butter. The primary cause of fishiness is therefore the accidental invasion of the butter by an organism capable of setting up this change. Among such organisms there are several bacteria which are found in dirty water, and others whose natural home seems to be sea water. But these bacteria are not able to manufacture trimethylamine from pure butter-fat and milk sugar. The material from which they produce it is the butter-milk or curd; that is to say, it is a product of the putrefaction of proteid substances. Further, some of these organisms grow very slowly, and at comparatively low temperatures; and finally, the addition of an extra amount of salt seems to favor their development.

The experiments which are being conducted at the University Laboratory are not yet complete enough for a full report to be given, but I think sufficient information has been obtained to justify the above conclusions. If so, it is evident that fishiness is not a simple matter to be cured by any single remedy. On the contrary, it may originate at any stage in the process of manufacture. The organism may find its way into the milk on the farm and be carried over into the cream, and thence to the butter, or it may come from the water used to wash the butter, or even possibly from the salt.

American Butter and Cheese Abroad.

A. R. Eastman of Waterville, New York, says that his experience with dairy products in England shows that very little American butter is to be found there. The amount of American cheese there is also small. He stated at a meeting in New York that he had inquired the reason for this and had been told that the dealers had not sufficient confidence in American goods. This is due to the vast amount of fraud that has been practiced, and contrasts strongly with the methods followed by the Canadians, who make goods that will stand the test. He charges that the Americans work for the greatest possible immediate profit. That his charges are partly true we must admit, but there is a point that modifies the situation considerably. He says that he finds little butter or cheese on the English market. This is partly explained by the fact that dealers in all kinds of goods resort to the trick of false branding. Though the sale in England of American cheese has fallen off considerably from what it was a few years ago, we still sell a good deal of that product to the English people. If it does not appear as American cheese on the English markets it does appear under some other brand. Just now the Canadians have quite a reputation for their cheese and a good deal of the best quality of American cheese is doubtless sold as Canadian, while the poorest Canadian cheese is branded American. We know the trick is worked with American meats and see no reason why it should not be used in the sale of dairy products. Americans should work for a better reputation abroad, and that reputation can be gained only by sending to foreign countries goods fully up to the requirements.

Lime Supply for Poultry.

A bulletin of the California Experiment Station says:

One of the best materials that a poultryman can use for supplying the requisite lime is oyster shell, or any other variety of shells. An experiment in this direction was made at the New York Experiment Station, and the result was such that the use of oyster shells during the laying season, where they can be cheaply obtained, was strongly recommended. It was found there that one pound of oyster shells contained sufficient lime for the shells of about seven dozen eggs.

Shells are not the only source for the lime necessary for egg shells. Bones also contain a large percentage of lime, as is seen from the following analysis of clean dry bones of oxen and sheep:

	Per cent.
Carbonate of lime	6 to 7
Phosphate of lime	58 to 63
Phosphate of magnesia	1 to 2
Fluoride of calcium	2
Organic matter	25 to 30

Fresh green bones also contain, besides the lime compounds, some protein or flesh-formers, which add to its value as a poultry food. The best way to render the bones available is to have them broken by means of the bone cutter. One pound of the green bones is generally considered sufficient for sixteen hens. Besides the cut bones of oyster shells, the hens must have a generous supply of some kind of grit, very coarse sand or broken crockery. The grit serves as teeth for the hens, and when they are unable to obtain it indigestion and other ailments are sure to follow.

Poultry Briefs.

Some farmers that are interested in breeding up poultry make the mistake of trying to do so with common fowls. By using fowls of known breeding and fixed type they could progress much faster, as they would have behind them the generations of work of other men. If they continue to work with the common fowls they will be merely duplicating the work already done by others. The prices for pure bred birds and for mongrels are not far apart, which difference, if it were large, would be the only excuse for choosing the common fowls for a basis on which to work. As the best of the pure bred birds may be purchased for a few dollars, it is waste time working along other than established lines. There is an abundance of room for improvement even with the fixed breeds, for there are as yet in all the breeds birds of very indifferent merit.

This has been a very dry fall in much of the West, and has, therefore, been favorable to the work of repairing the poultry houses, which we doubt not has been quite largely done. If, for any reason, any houses have been neglected they should be looked after at once. A few repairs now will save frosted combs this winter. Drafts should be prevented by stopping up all the cracks. In the cold, damp nights that are frequent in the fall and spring birds catch colds that open a way for the development of roup germs, and thus losses from this disease occur.

The International Live Stock Exposition.

The latter part of November and the early part of December will bring large numbers of people to Chicago to attend the International Live Stock Exposition. It scored such a success last year that the managers feel justified in making preparations on a magnificent scale for the coming exposition. Railroad managers have granted special rates, which in themselves will be special inducements to visit Chicago at that time. Those who plan to attend the exposition should make their applications to their railroad agents, so that if not properly informed the information can be secured direct from the International Live Stock Exposition Company, whose address is Union Stock Yards, Chicago.

During the exposition week (November 30 to December 7) this year the National Live Stock Association will hold its annual convention in the city of Chicago at Studebaker Hall, and some of the brightest live-stock minds of the two continents will be present and address the delegates and visitors; thus the first week of December affords a feast for the student of live-stock husbandry. The International Live Stock Exposition is entirely co-operative; it is not gotten up as a money maker in any sense, but rather as a tribute to the live-stock men, and to aid them in their efforts to improve the general character of our live stock.

The Dirt in the Can.

Dirty methods in the dairy cannot be hidden. The cloudy milk in the bottom of the can tells the story. It is a sufficient clew to the habits of the dairyman on whose farm it was produced. Such an advertisement does not increase the revenue of any milk producer. He may escape punishment if he is fortunate enough to sell his milk to a cheese factory or to a creamery, where the manager is weak in resolution. If his trade is with private families he will be constantly losing custom without fully comprehending the cause. Dirt in the can is almost a perennial charge against some milk producers. An investigation of their premises will sometimes show that they are as clean as most stables. Then whence comes the dirt? In a good many instances it comes from the dust on the udders of the cows, on the clothes of the milker and even from his unwashed hands. If the milker will wash his hands, the udder of the cow and the flanks of the cow and wear clean clothes when he milks, the dirt in the can will largely disappear.

A Nocturnal Maneater.

For more than a month the inhabitants of the district of Etchmaldzin, in the Caucasus, have been terrified by the nightly visitations of some unknown animal, which attacks and devours the children of the peasantry whilst they sleep. Every day news comes to hand of some fresh victim. The ferocious monster, which is believed to be a hyena, attacks grown-up people even, and only recently a man was torn to pieces in the village of Zulva.

The King's English.

"They say that King Edward VII. is careful of his speech and often corrects an error in language made by others." "Well, he is the natural guardian of the king's English, you know."—Detroit Free Press.

Everything comes to those who wait. The rich man has ice in summer, but the poor man has just as much in winter.

Things to Remember.

The aim should be to produce from 150 to 200 pound pigs at six to seven months old for the greatest profit, says the Jersey Hustler. Keep on friendly terms with your herd, cultivate quiet dispositions. Have the hogs so that you can handle them with ease. Quietness and patience will aid in doing this. As soon as your hogs are ready, sell them, you have no further profitable use for them on the farm. The man who keeps his hogs after they are ready to go expecting to get more per pound will be very apt to lose money; while the one who sells when the hogs are ready, generally hits it.

Every farmer has to accommodate himself to his environments, so far as food is concerned. It is his endeavor to use that which he can produce best. It, therefore, requires every farmer to rely in a measure upon himself. He must think over his business, and decide after careful thought which are his best methods to pursue. Give the hogs a large range of pasture. When we say pasture we do not mean a large lot that hogs have run in for years containing not a spear of grass, but a nice grassy pasture. Think of yourself sitting down to a table without anything on it to eat and you being expected to make a square meal. And again, the hogs need exercise, sun*shine and corn mixed with the grass*, just the same as we enjoy and require a variety of food.

The man with the good stuff and who is not overstocked, reaps the greatest reward, while the one who is overstocked, of course, underfeeds and fails to get out of his business what he should. A breeder who will accomplish anything by permitting his animals to lose in growth, has the expense and no work done. The fault with the young breeder is in keeping more stock than he can properly care for. There should be no difficulty in seeing which is the right road to pursue.

Exercising Horses.

An English army officer, writing on the care of horses, says:

Regularity of exercise is an important element in the development of the highest powers of the horse. The horse in regular work will suffer less in his legs than another, for he becomes gradually and thoroughly accustomed to what is required of him. The whole living machine accommodates itself to the regular demands on it, the body becomes active and well-conditioned without superfluous fat, and the muscles and tendons gradually develop. Horses in regular work are also nearly exempt from the many accidents which arise from over-freshness. As a proof of the value of regular exercise we need only refer to the stage-coach horses of former days. Many of these animals, though by no means of the best physical frame, would trot with a heavy load behind them for eight hours at the rate of ten miles an hour without turning a hair, and this work they would continue to do for years without ever being sick or sorry. Few gentlemen can say as much for their carriage horses. No horses, in fact, were in harder condition. On the other hand, if exercise be neglected, even for a few days in a horse in high condition, he will put on fat. He has been making daily the large amount of material needed to sustain the consumption caused by his work. If that work cease suddenly, Nature will, notwithstanding, continue to supply the new material; and fat, followed by plethora and frequently by disease, will be the speedy consequence.

Wastes of the Hen.

The mineral matter of the food eaten is not entirely assimilated by the body. And the composition of hen manure, given below, proves that this is likewise true of the nutrients.

COMPOSITION OF HEN MANURE.

Water	56.00
Organic matter	25.50
Nitrogen	1.60
Phosphoric acid	1.75
Potash	.85
Lime	2.25
Magnesia	.75
Insoluble residue, etc.	11.30
Total	100.00

The unassimilated fat and carbo-hydrates are included in the "organic matter," and the undigested portion the "nitrogen."

Utilizing Cow Peas.

A poultryman reports that an acre of cow peas was left uncut near his poultry yard, and during the winter his hens attended to the harvesting of the peas. He was surprised to receive almost double the usual amount of eggs during that season, and asked if the peas had anything to do with it. Cow peas are rich in protein, therefore should assist in forming eggs. The exercise in securing the peas is another factor which recommends this practice to the poultryman in search of winter eggs. It would be a good plan to give cow peas a trial.—Golden Egg.

Fowl Cholera Germ.

Dr. N. W. Sanborn says: The cause of fowl cholera is a minute germ which, under the microscope, presents either a circular or oval outline. It is one of the bacteria, and has been called by some a micrococcus, and by others a bacillus. It is about one-fifty thousandth of an inch broad, and two or three times as long. It grows best at from 85 degrees to 125 degrees F. It has no power of movement, does not form spores, and is easily destroyed by drying, by the ordinary disinfectants, and by a temperature of 132 degrees F. for 15 minutes.

SQUADRON EN ROUTE FOR TURKISH WATERS—OTHER WAR SHIPS READY.

Paris, Nov. 5. — Yesterday morning M. Delcasse, minister of foreign affairs, telegraphed M. Bapst, counsellor of the French embassy at Constantinople, directing him, so the correspondent of the Associated Press is authoritatively informed, to present to Tewfik Pasha, Ottoman minister of foreign affairs, a note asking how the Turkish government proposes to pay the Lorando claim, and demanding the execution of the sultan's irade dealing with that matter.

The note will also request satisfaction regarding the rights of France which are defined in the various capitulations and treaties and which in some cases have not been respected, and in others have been encroached upon by Turkey.

Admiral Caillard is expected to reach his destination to-day. The foreign office has received no news from him since his division left the other divisions of the Mediterranean squadron en route four days ago. It is pointed out that the absence of news is not surprising, as the instructions to Admiral Caillard were to steer due south and to avoid passing in sight of Bonifacio, Corsicana or traversing the Straits of Messina in order to prevent his movements being signalled. The vessels of the division carried only a normal supply of coal, but this would be much more than sufficient to enable them to steam 1,500 miles, the estimated distance they must cover before reaching their destination.

It is expected that Admiral Caillard will be joined en route by the torpedo cruiser Condor, which is stationed in Cretan waters, and may be met by the torpedo boat destroyer Vantour, which is stationed at Constantinople. It is also probable that the armored cruiser Admiral Charner, which arrived at Port Said Oct. 31 from the Far East, is being held in order to join Admiral Caillard if needed. It is further reported that several other warships are held in readiness at Toulon to reinforce him should their presence be necessary.

TRAGEDY AT POLITICAL MEETING.

Colored Man Shoots Into the Crowd, Killing a White Man.

Roanoke, Va., Nov. 5. — Meager details were received here yesterday from the little town of Ferrum, Va., about thirty miles distant, of a tragedy at that place Saturday night. A negro named William Hale took exception to some remarks made by a white man at a political meeting, and, leaving the hall, went to his home, where he armed himself with a double-barreled shotgun, returned to the place where the speaking was being held and fired both barrels of the gun into the crowd. A white man named Robinett, who was the village blacksmith, was killed instantly, and John Thomas, colored, received wounds from which he died shortly afterward. Two other men, both white, but names unknown, were seriously wounded. Hale made his escape and thus far has not been captured, though the country is being scoured for miles around. Bloodhounds have been sent to the scene.

"I AM INNOCENT."

Negro on Scaffold Denies the Crime for Which He Was Convicted.

Raleigh, N. C., Nov. 5.—At Fayetteville, N. C., at 10:15 yesterday morning, Louis Council, a negro convicted of committing a rape on a white woman, Mrs. James West, in Cumberland county, was hanged. On the scaffold Council was asked if he was guilty. He replied: "Before God and man I am innocent," and the priest, taking the cross from Council's hand, declared him innocent. When the trap was sprung the rope broke and the negro's body fell to the floor. Another rope was secured and the prisoner coolly walked on the scaffold. In a few minutes he was dead.

La Crosse, Wis., Nov. 5. — The first Heavy Snow at La Crosse.

real snowstorm of the season struck here yesterday. There is five inches of snow on the ground.

STUDENT IN POSTAL FRAUD.

Dwight Carpenter and Grant Frazier Arrested in St. Paul With Shady Money Orders.

St. Paul, Nov. 5.—Dwight Carpenter, a student at the state university, was arrested Saturday, together with Grant Frazier, a friend, for attempting to obtain money on two $100 money orders, apparently by the postmaster at Oxford, Wis. Carpenter confessed to having cashed two orders, and that he had eight more that he intended to present at various Minnesota, Wisconsin and Iowa towns. Postmaster Wright of Oxford says the orders were stolen from a trunk where he kept them, but as they all bear his official stamp, the authorities are not satisfied.

STUBBORN FIRE AT MANITOWOC.

Seventy-Three Car Loads of Flour Destroyed.

Manitowoc, Wis., Nov. 5. — Seventy-three car loads of flour on track and two car loads in the warehouse of the Wisconsin Central Railway company were destroyed by fire last night, together with the warehouse and dock property of the road. The loss will reach $100,000; covered by insurance. The origin of the fire is not known. It was the fiercest in the history of the city while it lasted, and only the combined efforts of the entire fire department prevented the further spread of the flames.

GOES OVER AN EMBANKMENT.

Eighteen Occupants of a Bus Are Well Shaken Up.

Pewaukee, Wis., Nov. 5.—Late Saturday night a bus containing eighteen people who were returning to their homes after attending a social at Supt. McCollom's place, one mile west of this village, by the breaking of an evener, was thrown off the road and down an eight-foot embankment. The vehicle was overturned and the upper portion was crushed to pieces. All the occupants were pretty well shaken and bruised.

WOULD-BE-LYNCHERS FINED.

Members of a South Dakota Mob Given a Lesson.

Miller, S. D., Nov. 5. — The officers have placed Isaac Alley in the Highmore jail. Friends of nine-year-old Anna Fenton, whom he is alleged to have attempted to assault, dragged him from the sheriff with the intention of either hanging or tar and feathering him, but the crowd was dispersed. Ten or twelve of these were arrested and fined for interference.

Bloody Record.

Helena, Mont., Nov. 5. — William Daugherty, sentenced at Butte by the United States court, Judge Knowles, to five years in the penitentiary, is believed by the United States secret service officers to be a member of a gang who are counterfeiting gold coin who have been operating all along the coast and Northwest country. Ezra R. Coon, one of the gang, was recently captured in Eastern Oregon. Daugherty has a long criminal record, having killed five men. He served ten years in Idaho for murder. One other member of the gang escaped eastward.

No Cars for Murphies.

Princeton, Minn., Nov. 5.—There never has been such a shortage in cars during the potato season. For a month not over a third of the cars needed could be obtained. All the extensive warehouses and root cellars are full and farmers actually haul their tubers back home, not finding places to unload. The loss will be enormous, as orders taken all over the Southwestern states cannot be filled, and consequently are countermanded.

Sidewalk Test Case.

Faribault, Minn., Nov. 5.—Mrs. Olive Weld has entered a suit for $100 against the street commissioner of this city as damages for tearing up a wooden sidewalk in front of her residence and replacing it with cement. It will be a test case to prove whether the ordinance passed by the city last spring requiring all sidewalks to be built of cement, brick or stone is valid.

Reform School for Jimmy.

Helena, Mont., Nov. 5.—James Southwick, the twelve-year-old Great Falls boy who confessed to kidnapping the six-year-old Ryan boy, was given a preliminary hearing on three charges—kidnapping, extortion and incorrigibility. He will doubtless be sent to the reform school.

Bad Runaway Accident.

Albert Lea, Minn., Nov. 5. — John Knutson was hurt in a runaway here. His face is broken in and both eyes are so badly injured that he cannot see. He was brought here for treatment and there is some show for him to recover.

Fire in a Stillwater Church.

Stillwater, Minn., Nov. 5.—The First M. E. church was damaged by fire last evening. The flames originated in the basement and were prevented from spreading by the promptness of the department. The damage will amount to about $250.

Bullet in Her Head.

Duluth, Minn., Nov. 5.—Miss Elizabeth Green, who was shot by her husband Sept. 6, a 32-caliber bullet entering her brain, has left the hospital and gone home. She retains her faculties, but complains that her vision is affected.

Wisconsin Man Shot.

New Richmond, Wis., Nov. 5.—Intelligence has been received here of the fatal shooting at Elmsburg, Wash., of John Heffron, son of Patrick Heffron of this city. He was a railroad man about twenty-four years old.

Helena Physician Involved.

Helena, Mont., Nov. 5. — William C. Tranter has confessed to the theft of $6,000 from King & Lowry's Butte poolroom, where he was employed. Tranter, in his confession, implicates Dr. A. C. Dogge, a former Helena physician.

Fifty-Three Dead.

Sioux City, Iowa, Nov. 5.—Dr. McEwen of Emerson, Neb., reports smallpox spreading at an alarming rate on the Winnebago reservation. Fifty-three deaths occurred in October.

OFFICERS IN JAIL

CONVICTED OF ILLICIT TRADING AND BRIBERY IN THE PHILIPPINES.

GIVEN LONG TERMS IN PRISON

CAPT. SPELLMAN AND LIEUT. JONES OF THE FORTY-THIRD ARE THE MEN.

FOR PUNISHMENT OF TREASON

PUBLIC DISCUSSION OF A BILL BEFORE THE PHILIPPINE COMMISSION.

Manila, Nov. 5.—Capt. Spellman and Lieut. Jones of the Forty-third regiment, who were convicted of illicit trading and bribery, have been sentenced to five and three years' imprisonment, respectively. They have been brought to Manila en route to Fort Leavenworth, Kan., where they will be imprisoned.

Under the new law Chinese are pouring into Manila and quickly settling in the provinces. During the past two weeks 3,000 Chinamen have come here.

The disturbances in Central Luzon have materially subsided under the activity of the army and constabulary. Fourteen warships are maintaining a very strict blockade of the Island of Samar with the result that the insurgents there are not able to obtain supplies of any kind from outside the island.

There was a public discussion yesterday before the Philippine commission of the draft of Treason and Sedition.

Many public men were heard. Vice Gov. Wright explained the object of the bill, saying that the Spanish code was unsatisfactory.

"There are a number of people living in the Philippines," remarked Mr. Wright, "who, so long as there is no punishment for treason, will take advantage of the fact to clog the wheels of the insular government. It must not be overlooked that turbulent spirits exist in the pacified provinces. The masses of the people are susceptible to inflammatory utterances and are liable to be influenced by demagogues. It would be inexcusable weakness on the part of the commission to allow the people to be aroused to deeds of violence who are now gradually drifting to the pursuits of peace. The recent attempts at insurrection in the Island of Samar and the Province of Batangas (Luzon) and a few other points, due to noisy

Philippine Agitators,

have caused a feeling of unrest in the minds of both Filipinos and Americans, and the effect of their continuance will be to make impossible the very things these agitators most desire. Such efforts serve to recruit the ranks of insurgents and to postpone the era of good feeling and fellowship which must come. No excuse exists for secret political organizations. Their intent must be evil. No matter what may have been the opinions of the Filipinos regarding the sovereignty of the American government the fact remains that the Americans are here, and, moreover, here they intend to stay."

The bill was then read in Spanish. It was attacked by a number of Filipino leaders.

Supplies Reach Insurgents.

Advices from Catbalogan, Samar, say it is well known that in spite of the fact that all ports of Samar are closed, supplies still reach the insurgents. Most of this work is done during dark nights by small boats from the Island of Leyte. Every available gunboat is now endeavoring to prevent this. The capture of Lukban's commissary has proved a great blow to the insurrection, as it renders future supplies very precarious. Conditions in the Island of Leyte are very annoying to Gen. Smith. A large number of junks are used with the express object of aiding the insurgents in Samar, covering the movements of fugitives and landing provisions and clothing.

ATTACKED EMPRESS DOWAGER.

Assassin Attempts to Take Life of China's Ruler.

Pekin, Nov. 5.—While the dowager empress was embarking to cross the river Saturday before entering Ho Nan an assassin attempted to murder her, and killed an attendant with a spear before he was cut down. The court has left Ho Nan, en route for Pekin.

Li Hung Chang Obeys Orders.

Pekin, Nov. 5.—The condition of Li Hung Chang, who has been seriously ill, shows improvement. His physician diagnoses the malady as ulceration of the stomach, and the hemorrhages have been severe. As a rule he is an intractable patient, but having been told that his life depends upon a liquid diet, he is complying with the medical orders.

DIMINUTIVE PRINCE.

Son Born to Prince Albert and Princess Elizabeth.

Brussels, Nov. 5. — Princess Elizabeth, who was married Oct. 2, 1900, to Prince Albert, heir presumptive to the throne of Belgium, has given birth to a son, who will be christened Leopold. In the course of the afternoon the king visited Prince Albert to congratulate him upon the event, expressed his joy and promised to act as godfather.

FIRST OF THE SEASON.

Snowstorm in the Northwest Reminds Us That Winter Is Here.

St. Paul, Nov. 5.—A snowstorm, the first of the winter, prevailed generally throughout the Northwest yesterday. Reports from a number of points state that the rain which prevailed Saturday turned into snow during the night. The temperature is rapidly falling, and subzero weather is reported from the Northwest Territory. In St. Paul snow fell during the greater part of the day with a cold northwest wind.

BUILDING A MODERN NAVY.

Recommendations of Board of Naval Construction.

Washington, Nov. 3.—Over and above the four warships which congress directed him last session to prepare plans as a basis for appropriation at the next session, Secretary Long has before him the recommendations of the board of naval construction looking to the authorization by congress of the building of forty more naval vessels of all classes, from battleships down to tugboats. The plans for the two armored cruisers and two battleships projected by congress last session already have been prepared and look to the construction of about 16,000-ton battleships and 14,000-ton cruisers. The battleships and cruisers additional to those which the construction board proposes probably will be of about the same size and general type. The board's complete plan comprises the following:

Three sea-going battleships of about 16,000 tons displacement.

Two armored cruisers of about 14,500 tons displacement.

Six gunboats of about 600 tons.

Six gunboats of about 200 tons.

Two colliers of about 15,000 tons.

One repair ship of about 7,500 tons.

Six training ships of about 2,000 tons.

Four picket boats of about 650 tons.

Four tug boats.

MAKES VERY GOOD SHOWING.

School, Militia and Voting Population of the Country.

Washington, Nov. 3.—The census report on school, militia and voting ages for all states and territories shows the following summary for the country as a whole: Persons of school age, five to twenty years, 26,110,788, of whom 24,897,130 are native born, 22,490,211 are white and 13,036,160 are males; males of militia age, 16,360,363, of whom 13,132,280 are native born and 14,495,396 are white; males of voting age, 21,329,819, of whom 16,227,285 are native born and 19,036,143 are white. Of the total number of males twenty-one years of age and over, 2,326,255 are illiterate. Of the 16,227,285 native born males, twenty-one years of age and over, 1,706,293 are illiterate, and of the 5,102,534 foreign born 620,002 are illiterate. A little over 28 per cent of the entire illiterate population of the country is illiterate. This is notably so in Louisiana, where they constitute nearly one-half of the population.

MISS STONE'S CASE SERIOUS.

Brigands Are Still Holding Out for the Ransom.

Constantinople, Nov. 3. — The case of Miss Stone has again become serious. The brigands, it appears, are still holding out for the £25,000 ransom, and it is feared that should they persist in their demand Miss Stone will have to be sacrificed. Nevertheless, the negotiations are still proceeding.

Fears are entertained that even if the ransom is paid Miss Stone and the other captives will be murdered by the bandits.

Anxiety prevails at the United States legation this afternoon, whence there has been an active exchange of telegrams between Spencer Eddy and various points. Mr. Eddy yesterday had a long conference with Sir Nicholas O'Connor, the British ambassador, who is actively assisting in the efforts to bring about Miss Stone's release.

So far from there being any confirmation of the rumors of her death circulating in the Bulgarian border districts, it is said here that another letter, written two days ago, has been received from Miss Stone.

FOR PREVIOUSNESS.

Portuguese Minister to Washington Is Recalled.

Lisbon, Nov. 3.—Senor Horta Machado has been appointed Portuguese minister at Washington to succeed Visconde Santo-Thyrso, who has been recalled and placed "en disponibilite," in consequence of his premature announcement of President McKinley's death, whereby he caused the government great annoyance.

-o-

Washington, Nov. 3.—The state department expressed incredulity and surprise when told of the appointment of a new minister from Portugal, especially at the allegation that the change was made on account of a premature announcement of President McKinley's death by Santo-Thyrso. This was the first intimation that had reached them that such an error had been made.

SOLDIERS EATEN.

Fate of Native Troops Sent to Quell an Uprising in Africa.

London, Nov. 3. — A special from Antwerp says a detachment of black troops recently sent by the Congo authorities to quell a revolt at Balingis, in Kasai, was captured, and that the soldiers were murdered, roasted and eaten.

SLAUGHTERED BY YAQUIS.

Thirty Mexican Ranchers Killed—Indians Escape.

El Paso, Tex., Nov. 3.—Reports from the State of Corona, Mex., reached here yesterday afternoon that Yaqui Indians attacked Mexican ranchers near Onaias, killed thirty persons and escaped to the mountains. Troops are in pursuit.

Killed the City Marshal.

Prescott, Ariz., Nov. 3. — H. C. Cox, city marshal of Prescott, was shot and killed by Charles Levy, colored, yesterday afternoon. Cox attempted to arrest Levy on a trivial charge. Levy escaped. Citizens generally closed their stores, armed themselves and started in pursuit of the negro. Hundreds are scouring the woods in search of the fugitive.

Ordered to Hang.

Wheeling, W. Va., Nov. 3.—The supreme court has issued a writ of mandamus to compel Warden C. E. Haddox, of the state prison, to execute George Carter convicted of the murder of a companion in a gambling house.

Aimed at Trusts.

Washington, Nov. 3. — It is said on very good authority that President Roosevelt, in his message, will recommend legislation compelling trusts to publish quarterly statements of earnings, collections, etc., of property.

YOUTHFUL CROWE

TWELVE-YEAR-OLD MONTANA BOY BECOMES A KIDNAPPER.

CAREFULLY COPIES CUDAHY CASE

STEALS A SIX-YEAR-OLD CHILD AND THEN DEMANDS A RANSOM.

CHILD IS BOUND AND GAGGED

YOUTHFUL ABDUCTOR BECOMES FRIGHTENED AND RETURNS HIS CAPTIVE.

Great Falls, Mont., Nov. 3.—Thursday a letter was found under George W. Ryan's door, put there by James Southwick. Southwick, who is but twelve years old, went to the South side schoolhouse and got Theodore Ryan, six-year-old son of one of Great Falls' prominent merchants, took him to a vacant house near the brick yards in the north part of the city, gagged him, and then wrote the following letter:

"To Mr. George W. Ryan: We have stolen your child, and we want $1,500 ransom, or we shall ram fine pieces of glass in his eyes and cut off his hands. Put the money in a stout leather bag and you come in a single seated buggy with a red lantern in the front; lay the money on the left side of the Missouri river bridge at the west end at 9:15 o'clock in the evening. This money must be in gold. If we see any one in the buggy with you we shall kill your son immediately."

Youthful Desperado Weakens.

After writing this letter he removed the gag from young Ryan's mouth, took him out of the vacant house and started toward town with him. When he got half-way he tied young Ryan to a telegraph pole and delivered the letter. Going back to the telegraph post he released Ryan and started for the Montana Central depot, where he hung around for some time. Finally, becoming frightened, he took Ryan to within a few rods of his home, where he left him. Young Ryan told his father where he had been and who the boy was that took him away. The police went to Southwick's home, and not finding him there, hid in waiting for him and captured him last evening. Southwick confessed that he did the deed of his own volition and that he had no accomplices. He expressed no repentance, and said:

"I would have hit the old man for $3,000 if I had thought he would have stood for it."

PLOT TO WRECK A TRAIN.

Northern Pacific Secret Service Men Are Investigating.

St. Paul, Nov. 3. — Northern Pacific secret service men are working upon what they believe was a plot to wreck and rob the North Coast Limited two weeks ago near Deer Lodge, Mont. Reports to headquarters indicate that a plan to rob the mails and the express safe was being organized. The limited was late reaching Butte, west-bound, and it was running fast to regain its schedule. Near Deer Lodge the engine struck a pile of bridge timbers upon the track. Every coach in the train except the observation car was derailed. Evidence has been obtained that the timbers were intentionally placed on the track, and the detectives have succeeded in connecting two men with the plot. No arrests have been made.

GAME WARDEN SCORES.

Given Right to Search Express Cars at Any Time.

La Crosse, Wis., Nov. 3.—William R. Renken, auditor of the Adams Express company, who was arrested on the complaint of Deputy State Game Warden Henry C. Schultz for forcibly ejecting Schultz from an express car in which the latter believed game was being illegally shipped, was released in Judge Brindley's court. His release and non-punishment was due to the fact that Renken satisfied the court that hence forth Schultz or other game wardens will be allowed to examine any and all cars of the Adams Express company in their search for lawbreakers.

FIRST M'KINLEY MONUMENT.

Tower, Minn., People Proud of Their Claim.

Duluth, Minn., Nov. 3.—Capt. John Pengilly of Ely is in the city on business connected with the memorial monument which is to be erected for the late President McKinley at Tower. The shaft is being built in this city and the dedicatory exercises are set for Sunday, Nov. 10. The Tower and Soudan people are very proud in the claim that it will be the first memorial to be erected in memory of the martyred president in the United States. Capt. Pengilly says that he expects Gov. Van Sant will attend the exercises.

ALLEGED SAFE-BLOWER.

Waseca Sheriff Finds a Prisoner at Brookings.

Brookings, S. D., Nov. 3.—Last week a detective from Minneapolis caused the arrest of a stranger at Aurora, who gave his name as Frank Meeks. The prisoner was brought to this city and jailed. Yesterday morning Frank Collins, sheriff of Waseca, Minn., arrived and identified Meeks as the supposed blower of a safe at Waseca twelve months ago, returning with his man to that place.

Hay Burned.

New Paynesville, Minn., Nov. 3.—A fire on the large meadows about five miles west of this place last night destroyed fully 100 tons of hay owned by the farmers whose lands lie adjacent. A locomotive set the fire probably.

FEAR GRASSHOPPERS.

Inability to Do Fall Plowing Causes Uneasiness in North Dakota.

Fargo, N. D., Nov. 2.—Anxiety is felt in some sections of the state over the small amount of fall plowing that has been done. Last summer there were evidences of grasshoppers in many sections of the state, especially in the valley, and it is feared that the pests have deposited eggs which will hatch out next summer and cause untold damage unless the soil is plowed this fall and the eggs thrown up to the surface to be frozen this winter. Outside of the valley two or three counties were badly infested by grasshoppers, and the pests were so distributed as to cause lots of trouble if the eggs are permitted to develop.

DAMAGED BY HAIL.

Severe Storm Visits a Section of Wisconsin.

Medford, Wis., Nov. 2. — A severe wind and hail storm visited this section yesterday, doing considerable damage to property. The storm reached its greatest height in the farming section five miles east of here. Buildings were unroofed and windows broken by the hail. The barn of Albert Zimmerli was blown down and three horses killed. In some sections the storm reached the velocity of a hurricane and was also the severest electrical storm of the year.

SISTERS OF THE HOLY GHOST.

Mother House of the Order Dedicated at Dubuque.

Dubuque, Iowa, Nov. 2. — With considerable pomp and ceremony, and in the presence of a large audience, the new $50,000 mother house of the Sisters of the Holy Ghost was dedicated in this city yesterday forenoon. This order was founded by the late Archbishop Hennessey, and the erection of this magnificent edifice marks the beginning of a great work. Archbishop Keam, and over twenty of the city priests participated in the elaborate dedicatory ceremonies.

MURDER BY MORPHINE.

Montana Woman Charged With Poisoning Her Husband.

Bozeman, Mont., Nov. 2.—Mrs. Lucy Black, charged with having poisoned her husband, has been bound over without bail on the charge of murder. Physicians testified that the man's death was caused by morphine. Black was a wealthy stockman of Bozeman who was found dead in his home some two weeks ago.

Harvest Hands Robbed.

Fargo, N. D., Nov. 2. — The annual harvest of the crooks who make a business of coming to North Dakota every fall to hold up harvest hands, is now in full blast. Three men who had been at work in the harvest fields at Sanborn thought they would economize by stealing a ride to Fargo. En route three men got into the box car with them and pretended to be workingmen. A little farther on they held up the harvest hands for amounts ranging from $45 to $70.

Dam Washed Out.

Winona, Minn., Nov. 2. — Reports reached here yesterday morning that Wednesday night's storm was very severe in the vicinity of Fountain City, almost amounting to a cloudburst. Waumandee creek rose so high that the Eagle mill dam was washed out. Many roads and fields were badly washed. A large haystack was struck by lightning and burned.

Francis Rose Heard From.

Faribault, Minn., Nov. 2.—Dr. F. M. Rose is in receipt of a telegram, purporting to come from his son, Francis Rose, who disappeared so mysteriously from Amherst, Mass., college early last month. The telegram is dated at Charlotte, N. C., and asks for money to come home. The doctor has taken steps to trace the telegram, as he is afraid it is fraudulent.

Iowa Dairy Association.

Dubuque, Iowa, Nov. 2. — Extensive preparations are being made for the coming annual convention of the Iowa Dairy association to be held here Nov. 12-14. Among the distinguished men who have already engaged rooms at the hotels are Congressman Tawney of Minnesota, Congressman Davidson of Wisconsin and ex-Gov. Hoard of the latter state.

Wisconsin Pioneer Dead.

Racine, Wis., Nov. 2.—A. P. Dutton, one of the pioneers of Southern Wisconsin, died here yesterday. Mr. Dutton built the first piers and elevators in Racine, and was in early years prominently identified with the grain handling and shipping interests. He was born in New York State in 1822 and came to Wisconsin in 1841.

Business Failure.

Grand Forks, N. D., Nov. 2.—The Arneson Mercantile company of East Grand Forks has closed its doors, the place having been taken in charge by a representative of wholesale creditors. The firm has been in business several years and was supposed to be in good standing.

Manitoba Man Found Dead.

Gretna, Man., Nov. 2.—H. R. Wilson, in the employ of Cameron & Phillips, lawyers here, was found dead in his office yesterday afternoon. He had been drinking heavily lately, and the coroner decided that no inquest was necessary.

Helena, Mont., Nov. 2. — During a fight at Plains, Missoula county, Baptiste Robeau, a half-breed, shot and killed Antoine Michelle, a Flathead Indian. The Indian agent and state authorities are investigating.

Wisconsin's Employment Agency.

Madison, Wis., Nov. 2. — During the sixteen months the free state employment offices at Superior and Milwaukee have been established 2,623 persons have found employment through their agency.

PORTO RICO STATE

ISLAND IS ANXIOUS TO BECOME ONE OF THE GREAT SISTERHOOD.

BUSINESS MEN PAVE THE WAY

PRINCIPAL OBJECT OF VISIT OF THE PORTO RICAN DELEGATION.

ORGANIZED TERRITORY FIRST

ADMISSION AS A STATE THE HEIGHT OF THEIR AMBITION.

Chicago, Nov. 1. — The visit to the United States of the Porto Rican delegation of business men who spent yesterday in Chicago has a far greater significance than has appeared hitherto. Instead of coming to inspect the commercial methods of this country, and incidentally to go on a little junketing trip to the Pan-American exposition, the Porto Ricans have come primarily to pave the way for the admission of their island, first as an organized territory, then as a state.

The authority for this statement is Frederico Degetau, the present commissioner from that island to the United states.

The delegation arrived in Chicago in the morning, visited the board of trade and the stock yards, was entertained at a banquet last evening and left on a later train for St. Louis. Later a visit will be paid to Washington, where an interview with President Roosevelt will be had.

The party includes three of the five native members of Porto Rico's council and one member of the chamber of deputies, in addition to Commissioner Degetau.

AUTOMOBILE IN A WRECK.

Struck by a Locomotive and the Occupants Severly Bruised.

New York, Nov. 1.—As Henri Fournier, the French chauffeur, was crossing the tracks of the Long Island railroad near Westbury in an automobile in which five other men were seated, the machine came into collision with a locomotive and disastrous results followed. All six men were hurt and the machine demolished. The names of those in the party and the extent of their injuries are: N. B. Fullerton, special agent of the passenger department of the Long Island railroad; badly cut about the head and face and compound fracture of one leg. A. G. Batchelder of the New York Journal, and who is chairman of the National Cyclists' association board of control; broken leg and other injuries. J. H. Gerrie, New York Herald; broken shoulder and leg. Arthur Lewis of this city; cut on face and hand and ankle sprained. Henry J. Everall of this city; bruises and cuts and leg sprained. Henri Fournier, foot sprained.

SHERIFF FATALLY SHOT.

Drunken Negro Goes on a Rampage With a Gun.

Raleigh, N. C., Nov. 1.—Late yesterday afternoon near the show grounds at Rutherfordton, N. C., Deputy Sheriff Butler was probably fatally shot in the head by Bud Logan, a drunken negro who, with a negro companion, had been abusing white men and had knocked down four of them. The negroes had out pistols and the deputy attempted to take them when Logan fired. The whites opened fire and both negroes ran under a shower of bullets. They were soon captured and are in jail. Should Deputy Butler die a lynching is likely unless the negroes are shipped from the jail here.

HELEN GOULD ACCEPTS.

Will Act as President of the McKinley Memorial Association.

New York, Nov. 1. — Miss Helen M. Gould last night announced that she had accepted the position of president of McKinley Memorial association. "I shall," said Miss Gould, "gladly serve on the committee and accept the office and do all I can to help build the monument to the memory of the late President McKinley. It is a worthy undertaking and I am heartily in favor of it." Miss Gould also said that she had accepted the invitation to be a member of the board of women managers of the Louisiana Purchase exposition in 1903.

NAMED HIS BOY LEON CZOLGOSZ.

And Indignant Citizens Drove Him From the Country.

Topeka, Kan., Nov. 1.—At Centropolis, a small town in Franklin county, M. Bernheimer, a German farmer, named his infant son Leon Czolgosz, and was driven from the county yesterday by indignant citizens. Bernheimer sought a priest yesterday and asked him to christen his son. When the point in the ceremonies for the name to be given was reached the priest indignantly refused to christen an infant with such a name and administered a rebuke to the parents.

Mrs. Gen. Grant Improving.

Washington, Nov. 1. — Mrs. Gen. Grant has almost recovered from her recent indisposition. She suffers from a bronchial affection which, however, does not confine her to her room. Mrs. Sartoris, Mrs. Grant's daughter, returned to Washington yesterday and will remain with her mother during the winter.

Root Knocks Out Ryan.

Louisville, Ky., Nov. 1. — Australian Jimmy Ryan was last night knocked out in the second round of a twenty-round contest by Jack Root of Chicago. The fight was for the middle-weight championship of the West.

Gamblers Made to Pull Stakes.

Grand Marais, Mich., Nov. 1.—As a result of numerous complaints the many gambling dens here, which have catered to the lumberjacks, have been cleaned out. Sheriff Gibson of Alger county conducted the raid.

CRAZY MAN AND GUN.

He Clears the Streets and Is Boss of the Town.

Racine, Wis., Nov. 1. — A madman with a shotgun ruled the town of North Cape, this county, for hours Tuesday. The citizens fled in terror when he began shooting in all directions and they sought safety in cellars. The man, Johann Johnson, is still at large, and the sheriff and two deputies are seeking him. Johnson, who is a prosperous farmer, became violently insane, and, taking his shotgun, he left the house, telling his wife he had discovered a plot to poison him, and that he would settle with his enemies. He told a boy he met the names of two men he intended to kill. The boy gave the alarm and the men hid before Johnson reached town. Angered by his failure to find his intended victims, the maniac began firing promiscuously, and soon he had the streets to himself.

MAN WITH HISTORY.

Educated for the Ministry He Becomes a Freak in Side Show.

Sioux City, Iowa, Nov. 1. — A body, supposed to be that of a man with two or three histories, was found in a cornfield here yesterday. There was a bullethole in the back of his head and gashes across the throat. Doctors conjecture that the body has been in the field for six weeks. It is believed to be that of Samuel Crofton, who once was a minister in Humboldt, Tenn. Crofton never got a call to a pulpit that paid much money, and as he could not support himself on his restricted income he forsook the ministry. He gave his talents to the impersonation of a snake man in a side show that played in this neighborhood in August. When he dropped the snake-man business is not known. Neither is it known that he had enemies who would kill him.

SOUTH DAKOTAN KILLED.

Is Shot by a Farmer Near Norfolk, Nebraska.

Sioux City, Iowa, Nov. 1. — George Fetterly, whose parents live at Alpena, S. D., was shot and killed yesterday morning near Norfolk, Neb., on the farm of Christ Duerr. The farmer says he was awakened by a noise, and came out with a gun. Seeing a man leaving the stable with a bridle in his hands, he fired twice, killing the man instantly. Duerr gave himself up. Edmund George, who was with Fetterly, says they stopped for a drink, Fetterly going to the house. George heard three shots and left.

Victory for the Amalgamated.

Butte, Mont., Nov. 1.—Judge Knowles of the United States court has overruled the motion of the attorneys for August Heinze to remand to the state courts the case of John McGinnis and others against the Boston and Montana, an action aiming to prevent the acquisition of the Boston and Montana by the Amalgamated Copper company and to prevent the Boston and Montana from paying dividends or paying out any money pending the appointment of a receiver. The refusal of the judge to remand the case is considered a signal victory for the Amalgamated.

Davis Held to the Grand Jury.

St. Peter, Minn., Nov. 1. — Fred R. Davis, charged with the murder of William Youngren, was given his preliminary examination yesterday before Justice Miller. Upon the opening of court County Attorney Davis moved to dismiss the charge of murder in the first degree. A. A. Stone of this city appeared for Davis. The facts brought out at the examination were substantially the same as appeared at the time in the daily papers. At the conclusion Davis was bound over to the grand jury.

One Year for Robbery.

Aberdeen, S. D., Nov. 1.—John E. Dillon, charged with robbing Otto Tunby, entered a plea of guilty before Judge Campbell and received a sentence of one year in the penitentiary. Dillon's father, who is a highly respected citizen of Woonsocket, came here, and after learning the facts in the case, advised his son to plead guilty and get as light a sentence as possible. The old gentleman is almost heartbroken over the downfall of his son. The money was nearly all recovered.

Trout Fry for Winona Brooks.

Winona, Minn., Nov. 1. — A consignment of several thousand trout fry were received on Tuesday from the state fish hatchery for Winona county streams. The fry were taken from the train at Minnesota City by H. G. Smith, a member of the commission, and Judge D. E. Vance and Dan Baker, all three enthusiastic fishermen. The fry were placed in the waters of Rollingstone creek. They were unusually large, some of them being almost large enough to eat.

Bad Fire at Hastings.

Hastings, Minn., Nov. 1. — The old Milwaukee company warehouse east of the freight depot—containing tools, supplies, etc., of several of the company's employes—and the residence of Mrs. J. Z. Horak, occupied by J. T. Olson, were burned yesterday afternoon. The cause is supposed to have been a passing locomotive. The estimated loss to the company is upward of $2,000, covered by insurance. It is reported that Mrs. Horak had no insurance.

Fatal Charge of Dynamite.

Cumberland, Wis., Nov. 1. — While blowing out stumps on his farm south of here A. Boss, a wealthy farmer, was instantly killed by the premature explosion of dynamite.

Killed by Falling Down Stairs.

Ellsworth, Wis., Nov. 1.—Jacob Rose, aged sixty-five, fell down stairs at the Commercial house, receiving injuries from which he died two hours later.

Killed by Lightning.

Perham, Minn., Nov. 1. — Lightning struck the house of Mike Persech, instantly killing his young son, a young man about twenty-two years old. The barn of John Wise was struck and nine head of cattle consumed.

IN WILD BALLOON

NINE PEOPLE TAKE AN INVOLUNTARY TRIP TOWARD THE CLOUDS.

ALMOST DROPPED IN THE OCEAN

WENT OUT TO SEA BUT WAS BLOWN BACK OVER THE LAND.

WAS A TERRIBLE EXPERIENCE

BALLOON WAS IN THE AIR TWO HOURS BUT FINALLY LANDED SAFELY.

San Francisco, Nov. 5.—The nine occupants of the car of the balloon which escaped from this city Saturday afternoon returned safely to San Francisco yesterday. The balloon was landed near Pescadero, fifty miles from this city and but a few miles from the ocean. The balloon was in the air nearly two hours, and at one time was out at sea but was blown back over the land.

When the balloon broke its bonds it sailed away in a southerly direction. Near Redwood City it struck an air current which took it toward the ocean over the summit of the coast range. Nineteen miles from La Honda, and about six miles from Pescadero, lies Beatty Thomson's place. Thomson was up and out when the balloon came along by Wurr's mill and the grappling hook slipped through the trees and raked the ground. By this time much of the gas had been let out of the balloon and the power was weak. The rope that held snapped and the captive became a runaway and was sweeping along the ground. When it came within Thomson's reach he grasped it and bore down with all his weight.

This Stopped the Flight.

Soon the balloon was brought to the ground and eight overjoyed passengers and the aeronaut alighted and took supper with Thomson.

A. L. Dodge, one of the passengers, in describing the trip, said that the balloon first started toward Oakland, and after circling about for a time drifted southward and became stationary for a short period. Then, in response to a breeze from the east, it sailed over the San Mateo hills and stood far out over the ocean. The hearts of all the occupants of the wicker cage were filled with fear as the prospect of being dumped into the ocean stared them in the face. Twice, according to Dodge's story, the balloon dipped close to the surface of the water, but rose again, each time to a considerable altitude. Finally a breeze from the sea caught the balloon and carried it back over the land, and after dragging the car through the tops of a grove of trees, landed on the hillside near Pescadero. It was a terrible experience, and I would not undergo the same adventure again for anything. Everybody was more or less shaky, while the women and two or three of the men were so sick that they sat in the bottom of the basket throughout the trip."

RELEASE OF MISS STONE.

Is Again Reported as Being Imminent.

Vienna, Nov. 5. — The Politische Correspondenz says that the release of Miss Stone, the abducted American missionary, is again represented as being imminent. It adds that a well known Macedonian brigand has been sent to obtain proof that Miss Stone is still alive, which information Consul Dickinson wants for use in his negotiations with the brigands. Two other men who are acquainted with the country where Miss Stone is held captive have also been commissioned by Mr. Dickinson to try to get in touch with the kidnappers. The prefect of police at Sofia has sent out two other men on a similar errand.

RESULT OF A STRIKE.

Two Workmen at Columbia, S. C., Are Shot, One Fatally.

Columbia, S. C., Nov. 5.—Two machinists working in the Southern shops here, Walter Binder and William Seaver, were shot in their house some time after midnight last night by a party of men. Seaver was killed instantly and Binder desperately wounded. According to the statement of Binder the attacking men were former strikers. Harry Jones and Arthur McCraney have been arrested. More arrests will follow. The strike has long since been ended, but the feeling is yet strong.

PRATT CONVICTED.

Attempted Bribery of the Speaker of the Michigan Legislature.

Lansing, Mich., Nov. 5.—After twelve hours' deliberation the jury which tried Charles H. Pratt on the charge of attempted bribery of Former Speaker Adams of the state legislature, returned a verdict of guilty. A stay of proceedings was granted and the case will be carried to the supreme court.

FISHERMEN LOST IN STORM.

Scores of Boats Wrecked on Russian Lake and 170 Men Are Drowned.

London, Nov. 5.—It is announced in a dispatch to a news agency from St. Petersburg that scores of fishing boats were wrecked and that 170 men were drowned during a recent storm on Lake Baikal.

TEACHER BURNED TO DEATH.

Prof. J. D. Orr Starts Fire With Kerosene With Fatal Effect.

Kansas City, Nov. 5. — Prof. J. D. Orr, a Kansas City, Kan., school teacher, yesterday started a fire in the kitchen stove with kerosene. An explosion followed and burning oil was scattered over his clothing. When aid arrived his clothing had been entirely burned from his body and he was unconscious and died shortly after. Mrs. Orr, in attempting to aid her husband, was painfully burned about the hands.

EDWARD S. STOKES DEAD.

Man Who Killed Jim Fisk Thirty Years Ago.

New York, Nov. 5.—Edward Stokes, who has for some time been seriously ill at New York, died Saturday. For several days he had been growing weaker. Stokes was the man who shot and killed Jim Fisk, a partner of Jay Gould, thirty years ago. His life has been one of the most remarkable and strenuous of any passed in New York. In his sixty years he has lived more than a century. Stokes was best known to the present generation as the proprietor of the Hoffman house, his interest in which he sold to Grahams Polly of Brooklyn for $200,000.

ENTIRE PLANT BURNED.

Packing Establishment in Buffalo Entirely Destroyed.

Buffalo, Nov. 5.—Jacob Dold & Co.'s packing establishment was destroyed by fire. The flames were discovered in one of the smaller buildings of the plant where the barrels are prepared for packing. The structure was of wood and burned like tinder. Sparks from the barrel house set fire to adjoining structures and the flames got a foothold in several places at the same time. The firemen's work had but little effect, and in two hours the otire plant was destroyed. Loss, $200,000.

BREED TESTS AT BUFFALO.

Guernseys Make Best Showing as Butter Producers.

Buffalo, N. Y., Nov. 5. — Frank A. Converse, superintendent of live stock of the Pan-American exposition, has announced the following results in the breed tests in the model dairy:

Net profits in butter fat, won by the Guernseys by a net profit of $4.66; net profit in churned butter, won by the Guernseys by a net profit of $5.86. Total solids, won by the Holstein-Freisians by a net profit of $26.14. Total solids and gain in live weight, won by the Holstein-Freisians by a net profit of $31.63.

No More Plague Cases.

Liverpool, Nov. 5.—No further cases of bubonic plague in Liverpool were officially reported yesterday. Mr. Boyle, United States consul, assures outgoing passengers that they need not fear at present being detained at American ports. Speaking last evening at a banquet Mr. Boyle said: "As an authority for such a statement, I assert the city of Liverpool does more business with the United States than the rest of the world together. I can say that I am not a bit nervous over this outbreak of the plague in Liverpool. If I thought the situation serious enough to warrant the quarantining of vessels from Liverpool at United States ports I would recommend it at once, but at present I have seen no necessity."

Busy Burglars.

Sioux City, Iowa, Nov. 5.—Two burglaries with peculiar circumstances occurred in this vicinity Saturday night. At Salix, Iowa, some intruders came to town on bicycles and gained an entrance to the bank of J. C. Currier & Son. They drilled a hole in the safe door and blew it open with dynamite, but the noise led to their discovery and they escaped on their wheels. At Elk Point, S. D., burglars entered the residence of C. J. Fox. They got $2.75 in silver, a diamond ring and a pocketbook containing $120 in bank notes. The latter they dropped in the house and went away without it.

Big Fire at Milwaukee.

Milwaukee, Nov. 5.—Fire early yesterday destroyed the warehouse and contents of the Metropolitan Storage company and damaged the property of the American Laundry company's plant and the Westlake, Delahunt & Smith printing office adjoining. The total loss will probably reach $100,000, most of which will fall on the contents of the storage warehouse.

Northwest Pupil Statistics.

Washington, Nov. 5.—Statistics given out by the census bureau show that Minnesota has 612,950 persons of school age, 5 to 20 years; 399,734, males of militia age; voting age, 506,794. North Dakota persons of school age, 112,789; militia age, 80,091; voting age, 95,217. South Dakota, school age, 147,165; militia age, 87,505; voting age, 112,681.

Fierce Forest Fires Raging.

Poplar Bluff, Mo., Nov. 5. — The fiercest forest fires since 1835 are raging a few miles south of here. The woods have been in flames for three days and thousands of cattle and horses are in danger. Farmers and stockmen have turned out en masse to fight the flames, but their efforts so far have availed little.

Ovation for Sousa.

London, Nov. 5. — Sousa's band received a memorable ovation at the close of its engagement at the Glasgow exhibition. The crowd wanted to carry the conductor on their shoulders. Mr. Sousa will begin a tour of the provinces to-day at Middlesborough.

Many Business Houses Burned.

Lisbon, N. H., Nov. 5. — Starting in the peg mill of James G. Moore early yesterday morning fire destroyed a large part of the business section of this town. The total loss will amount to fully $100,000 with insurance of between $50,000 and $60,000.

Soldiers Will Be Tried.

Miles City, Mont., Nov. 5.—The prosecution of Robert Atchison at Miles City on a charge of purchasing government oats at Fort Keogh from soldiers has been dismissed. The soldiers who sold the oats to Atchison will be tried by court-martial.

Shoe Store Scorched.

Faribault, Minn., Nov. 5. — R. E. Orne's shoe store was partially destroyed by fire early yesterday morning. The greater part of a $6,000 stock is ruined. He carried an insurance of $5,000. The fire is supposed to have caught from a defective chimney.

Accidentally Kills His Brother.

Des Moines, Nov. 5.—Clarence Yarn, aged thirteen, was shot in the head by his brother, Herbert, while playing with an old revolver not known to be loaded. He cannot recover.

EXPOSITION GROUNDS AT BUFFALO THE SCENE OF A DISGRACEFUL RIOT.

MANY PEOPLE WITH BROKEN HEADS

BUILDINGS WRECKED AND PROPERTY DESTROYED BY THE RIOTERS.

SOME OF THE EXHIBITS LOOTED

POLICE ARE UTTERLY POWERLESS TO MAINTAIN ORDER.

Buffalo, N. Y., Nov. 4. — Twenty-five broken heads were treated at the exposition hospital as a result of the Midway gaiety on farewell night. It was a rough and destructive crowd, and its conduct so alarmed quiet people that they left the grounds as early as they could make their way to the gates. The exposition police had been supplemented by a detail of the municipal force, but altogether they could not maintain order.

First of all the mob tore up trees, stripped them of their branches and used these as weapons of defense. The first riot occurred at Pabst's. The people became so disorderly that the manager ordered the place cleared as early as 10 o'clock. The people would not move and attacked the waiters and exposition guards with chairs and beer glasses. The fire hose was brought out and a three-inch stream played on the rioters, who, driven outside, knocked out all the windows with chairs and Literally Wrecked the Big Cafe.

The cafe in the streets of Cairo was the scene of a "rough house" a few moments later, and the walls were torn down. Bodies of young men marched along the midway and snatched the women performers from the ballyhoo. The doors of Cleopatra's temple were broken down. The horticultural building was raided and the exhibits were looted. All the other exhibit buildings had been closed at 5 o'clock in the afternoon at the request of the exhibitors, who feared the loss of their property.

J. N. Adam, the millionaire merchant, who is running for alderman of the Twenty-fourth ward, last night bought the big organ in the Temple of Music and will present it to the city. It will be placed in convention hall. This organ had just ceased playing when President McKinley was shot.

PRO-BOERS ARE MOBBED.

Participants in a Peace Gathering Are Roughly Handled.

London, Nov. 5. — The temper of the British public regarding the war was plainly shown to-day in Peckham, a suburb of London. A small gathering of the local branch of the Democratic league undertook to hold a meeting to protest against the war. The manifestants started in procession for the place of meeting, but before they arrived they were hooted, buffeted and dispersed.

A crowd estimated at 20,000 gathered to oppose them. There were many ugly rushes, and the police were barely able to protect the struggling pro-Boers from the fury of the populace. After considerable fighting, during which a man was stabbed, the pro-Boers were removed under police protection. The victorious crowd then held a jingo meeting and sang "Rule Britannia."

Big Order for Horses.

Dispatches from Warsaw say the newspapers there assert that a contract has been entered into for the supply of 20,000 horses for the British cavalry in South Africa.

The Col. Benson who was killed in the recent battle near Bethel by the Boers under command of Gen. Botha was Col. George Elliott Benson of the Royal artillery. He is described in the latest army list as a staff officer of the Rustenburg commando. He was born in Canada and was a volunteer during the Fenian raid of 1866. He then joined the Twenty-first Hussars and subsequently served in other regiments. He had a fine record in India, Egypt and South Africa.

SERIOUS TROUBLE BREAKS OUT.

Tranquility of the Island of Samos Is Menaced.

Paris, Nov. 4.—"Serious trouble has arisen in Samos (an island off the west coast of Asia Minor) owing to the enmity felt by a majority of the insular assembly toward the government," says the Constatinople correspondent of the Temps. "The governor, with the assistance of four deputies, is in absolute power and the assembly has appealed to Constantinople to end a state of things menacing to the tranquility of the island."

BOONEVILLE BURNED.

Business Portion of a Mississippi Town Is in Ashes.

Booneville, Miss., Nov. 4. — Half of the business portion of this town was destroyed by fire Saturday night. The postoffice, Methodist church and a dozen other buildings were consumed. The loss is heavy.

Strike May Be Averted.

Scranton, Pa., Nov. 4—It is quite possible that the threatened strike of 4,000 men employed in the eight collieries of the Temple Coal company may be averted. Supt. Thorne told the men's committee that if he can be shown that the fifty dismissed men were known by the foreman to be Maltby strikers when they were hired, the company would probably recall the dismissals.

Hastings Happenings.

Hastings, Minn., Nov. 4. — Rev. Archibald Durrie of Bismarck, has entered upon his duties as pastor of the Presbyterian church.

The government fleet has been placed in winter quarters at Fountain City.

P. S. Kennedy of South St. Paul, has been appointed deputy sheriff at that place.

D. T. Quealy, county treasurer, has received $7,903.65 from the state treasurer, the share of Dakota county in the semi-annual apportionment of school funds. It is $3,712.44 less than last year.

Pitcairn Islanders Heard From.

FOR THE FIRST TIME IN THREE YEARS NEWS OF THE QUEEREST COMMUNITY ON EARTH REACHES CIVILIZATION.

It was nearly three years since anything definite had been heard of the queerest community in the world—the inhabitants of the little dot of land in the Southern Pacific known to fame as "Pitcairn Island," but now the captain of H. M. S. Icarus has paid them a call, and he says that apparently things are going well with the descendants of the good ship Bounty's mutineers.

They live 1,200 miles from the nearest point of land and have intermarried and reintermarried until every one is every one else's cousin, to say the least, and yet they object strenuously to any new settlers in their island. They have no medicine and yet they are healthy—possibly because they have no liquor of any sort and no tobacco.

Conflicting reports had come recently from Tahiti, Pitcairn's nearest neighbor, one of which said that these exclusive islanders were rapidly degenerating, while according to the other the Pitcairn folk were so far from degenerating that they had grown tired of being merely picturesque and wanted to be a commercial community. Captain Knowling, the latest visitor, says the latter report is true. There are only twenty-nine workingmen on the island, but they have just finished building a new model school, and now are alternately occupied with putting up a church, laying the timbers of a new whaling vessel and making a road to their little harbor. Their great ambition, however, is to establish regular trade relations with the points nearest them.

Yankee enterprise has stepped in to help the island folk out. The British consul at Tahiti has just reported that a service is to be established during the next few months "by vessels sailing under the American flag."

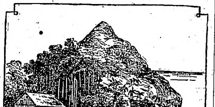
Fortunately for Pitcairn, the able Mr. McCoy, who is now president of the community of 142 souls, seems to be made of good stuff, and until he dies affairs in the island probably will go well. Some time ago President McCoy was obliged to be away from the island for nearly a year, and during that time things went rather badly—a murder occurred; the first one since the island's settlement—but when the president returned it took him only a short time to set matters right. To illustrate the pluck of the man, the Pitcairn folk tell how he went on board a burning ship and himself piloted her to Mangareva, in the Gambier island, a thousand miles away, and beached her there, rather than to allow her captain to run her ashore on Pitcairn island, as he had intended to do.

With such a man for their president it is not surprising that there is remarkably good discipline in the island, especially as McCoy is well backed up by the other members of the funny little "parliament" of seven, elected by the people. All the male adults have to give half their day's work to public enterprises. They get up at 5 in the morning, have breakfast, and work until 2 in the afternoon, which is dinner time. After dinner every man's time is his own, and he spends it in gardening, repairing his boats or shooting wild goats for food. The women, besides doing the housework, smooth and paint cocoanuts in an odd way, or make different plaited things to sell to the crews of ships, which anchor off the island to take fresh water. These average about thirty-five a year, but the Pitcairn folk are rather strict about letting their crews land for fear of disease, as a wrecked ship's company cast up on the island in 1894 brought typhoid fever and started an epidemic that came within an ace of wiping out the little community.

The oldest man in the island bears the euphonious name of Thursday October Christian, possibly in celebration of the day of his birth. He is a grandson of the master's mate of the Bounty, one of the mutineers, and is now 83. Two others of the men are more than 75, while the eldest of the women is 72.

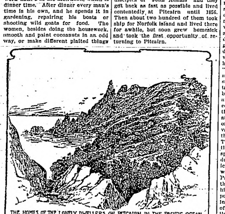
None of these old people has any ailments beyond the feebleness of old age; in fact, the only flaw in the otherwise perfect health enjoyed by the members of this isolated community is a queer affection which attacks the teeth of the upper jaw, generally causing their total loss early in life. It probably is this feature which has given rise to the stories of physical degeneration among the Pitcairnites. Its cause is supposed to be the excessive intermarriage among the island families. How great this has been is shown by the fact that of the population of the island 51 are Christians, 47 Youngs, 20 Warrens, 11 Coffins, 6 McCoys, 2 Butters, 1 Buffet and 4 Smiths. Still the members of some families in which intermarriage has been constant have perfect teeth, while other families in which this practice has not obtained suffered from the affection.

The Pitcairnites are all Seventh Day Adventists, and, although they are not as intensely devout as their ancestors became under the influence of the converted sailor, John Adams, there is little or no immorality among them. The captain of the Icarus, after studying the people carefully, found only three features of their condition that he thought did not promise well for the future. There is no one of the men of early middle age on the island who seems quite capable of taking up the president's work and carrying it on as intelligently. Also, as is almost always the case in small and secluded communities, the surplus of girls over boys among the children is great. But it is hoped that, as some of the girls grow older, they can be induced to leave the island. The third difficulty is less serious, being simply the adoption among the islanders of what is practically a new language—a sort of dialect or pigeon English, the result of slurring or clipping Anglo-Saxon words. This has now gone so far that some of the people are really slow about understanding when ordinary English is spoken to them.



THE FIRST COMBINED CHURCH AND SCHOOL-HOUSE BUILT BY THE FOLK ON ISOLATED PITCAIRN ISLAND

Twice the folk on the little isolated dot of land have become dissatisfied, feeling that they needed more elbow room, and have transplanted themselves, but both times they elected to return. The first exodus took place in 1831, when the Pitcairn people wanted to go to Tahiti. They were sent there, but the uncouth ways of their mothers' countrymen and their carelessness about clothing and morals shocked the disciples of "John Adams" and they got back as fast as possible and lived contentedly at Pitcairn until 1856. Then about two hundred of them took ship for Norfolk Island and lived there for awhile, but soon grew homesick and took the first opportunity of returning to Pitcairn.



THE HOMES OF THE LONELY DWELLERS ON PITCAIRN, IN THE PACIFIC OCEAN, 1200 MILES FROM THE NEAREST LAND

The people of Pitcairn are generally of good stature and good looks. Their hair is a deep black, their skins have a brownish tint and their faces are usually open and intelligent. Some of the women are really beautiful, and all, men and women alike, have a distinctly English cast of countenance.

Their island is thickly wooded and so mountainous that it can be sighted from a ship when it is still forty miles away. It is about four and a half miles in circumference. The climate is, of course, mild, and the chief natural products of the island are such natural vegetables as sweet potatoes, yams, bread fruit, maize and beans, and such fruits as bananas, pineapples, oranges, melons and cocoanuts.

CURTIS BROWN.

MIDDLE-CLASS CULTURE.

Presentiments Had Importance Among People Fifty Years ago.

Fifty years ago people studied Daniel and the Apocalypse to ascertain the approach of the millennium, by which was meant, at least to the evangelical circles in which I was brought up, not the steady dimunition of human ills, but the thousand years' reign of the saints and the second advent. The usual, if not the only, objection then urged to the imminence of the consummation of all things was that the lost ten tribes must first be discovered, and that the Jews must be restored to the Holy Land. It was also a debated question whether the pope was antichrist. Dr. Cumming was then at the hight of his fame, and his books had a large circulation, but his prophetical pretensions were shared by almanacs, Old Moore's and Zadkiel's, which were to be found in almost every household. Their political forecasts commanded considerable credence, although their daily weather predictions, so constantly belied by events, were rapidly losing caste. The changes of the moon were believed, however, to determine the weather. Another way of reading the future was to open the Bible at random on New Year's morning, and the text on which your thumb rested portended your destiny in the coming year. Dreams were not much heeded, but presentiments had importance, and very few people ventured to sit down thirteen to dinner, for fear of dying within the year, albeit reasoners were beginning to explain that one in thirteen was something like the ordinary rate of mortality. Nor would many have set out on a journey or transacted business of consequence on a Friday. —Westminster Review.

WHY LINCOLN QUIT.

War President Admitted Justice of Secretary Seward's Reproof.

"Lincoln day" this year brought out several characteristic stories of the martyred President, some of which may be new, all of which are good, observes the Youth's Companion. One relates to that extreme, correctively critical attitude which Secretary Seward always maintained toward the President. Mr. Lincoln and the secretary had managed to escape from a man who had been boring them, and as they reached the house the President threw himself into an arm-chair and exclaimed: "By jings! governor, we are here!" Mr. Seward replied by asking in a reproving tone: "Mr. President, where did you learn that inelegant expression?" Mr. Lincoln immediately turned to several young men who had entered the room in time to hear the exclamation, and said: "Young gentlemen, excuse me for swearing before you. 'By jings' is swearing, for my good old mother taught me that anything that a 'by' before it is swearing. I won't do so any more." Another characteristic anecdote of Lincoln dates back to the time when there were so many fires at the national capital that suspicion of incendiaries was entertained, and various northern cities began to offer the services of special fire brigades. The authorities of Philadelphia in particular were most urgent and sent a special committee to wait on the President and urge him to accept the services of such a brigade. The committee was tedious and long-winded, and the President was anxious to get back to the public business which demanded his attention. Finally, seeing no prospect of a termination of the interview in the usual way, he interrupted one of the orators in the midst of a grandiloquent flight by saying: "Ah, yes, gentlemen, but it is a mistake to suppose that I am the head of the fire department in Washington. I am merely the President of the United States."

The Report Courteous.

A story oft told is that of Lord ——, who, when a young man, was opposing Mr. Sugden, subsequently Lord Chancellor of England, in a parliamentary contest. "He's the son of a country barber," said the noble lord. Replying afterwards, Mr. Sugden said: "His lordship has told you that I am nothing but the son of a country barber; but he has not told you all, for I have been a barber myself, and worked in my father's shop—and all I wish to say about that is that had his lordship been born the son of a country barber he would have been a barber still. That to my mind is quite clear."—Household Words.

HOUSES BUILT IN MANILA.

Stone Does Not Figure in the Construction of Upper Stories.

The sky-scraping tower of stone and iron which is becoming so common an eyesore in American cities has not invaded that land of the earthquake and the typhoon, the Philippine Islands, and is not likely to do so soon. These perilous visitants govern the character and the size of the houses, which are very rarely more than two stories in height, even in the best quarters of Manila. Of these the ground floor is used as a coach house or to lodge the native servants. It is apt to be too damp for the family, who live on the upper floor, which is divided into a spacious hall, dining and reception rooms, and bed and other apartments. The kitchen is often a separate building, with a roofed passage leading to the house. Besides it is the bathroom, an apartment much in demand among the Filipinos, with whom cleanliness is one of the chief virtues and bathing a daily duty.

These houses were formerly of stone, but since the great earthquake of 1880 only wood has been permitted in the second stories. These are fitted with sliding windows all around, to permit the freest entrance of air. At the same time, to keep out the hot glow of the sunlight, glass is replaced in the windows by translucent seashells, through which only a modicum of light can filter. Corrugated iron roofs are common, but they are very hot. To obviate this, many roofs are covered with a thin layer of nipa-palm thatching, which is cooler, though dangerous in case of fire.

PRESIDENT M'KINLEY'S CIGARS.

Special Brand Turned Out for Him—His Only Vice.

One of President McKinley's first desires when he was thought to be convalescent was for a cigar. The President always was a great smoker. It was his only vice—that is, of course, if smoking is a vice. In Washington Mr. McKinley always bought his cigars at the same place—the cigar stand under the Ebbitt house. When he first went to Washington Mr. McKinley put up at the Ebbitt house and he continued to make that hotel his Washington residence during all of his official life up to the time of his inauguration as president. There he found a brand of cigars that suited him, and he smoked it ever afterward. Of late years the manufacturers have been turning out a special cigar for Mr. McKinley. He sent for half a dozen boxes at a time. His allowance was said to be from eight to ten cigars a day. When he was in congress, says the New York Times, Mr. McKinley was even a harder smoker than of late. In the evenings after dinner he would sit around the Ebbitt house lobby, or, when the weather was fine, in a chair on the 14th street sidewalk, and would consume five or six cigars before going to bed. During the Spanish war, when the President was forced frequently to keep late vigil at the White House, he soothed his nerves with cigars. He never drank except when feeling the need of a stimulant for medical purposes.

NOTABLE MEN AND WOMEN.

Dr. James M. Gray, who has been engaged in teaching in the Moody Bible Institute in Chicago during the summer, will spend the winter in New England conducting his classes in the synthetic study of the Bible in Boston and elsewhere as usual, beginning in the fall.

Dr. Thomas McClelland, the new president of Knox College, was president of Tabor College several years ago. At that time he wanted a railroad to connect Tabor with the rest of the world. Failing to interest other roads in the enterprise, he built it himself and afterwards sold it on favorable terms to the Burlington.

Major D. W. Whittle, who is said to be dying in East Northfield, Mass., is one of the best-known evangelists in the country. "There Shall be Showers of Blessing" and "I Know Whom I Have Believed" are two of his most familiar hymns. For two years Major Whittle has been confined to his bed by rheumatic fever.

Count Tolstoi, the famous Russian novelist, neither drinks, smokes nor eats meat. It is his boast that he does not possess a single article he could possibly dispense with; and he has even refused to receive a bicycle as a present, on the ground that it is a luxury. His recreations are chess and lawn tennis, at both of which he is adept.

George Muller still lives in good deeds though he has been dead some years. The income for the orphanages he founded in Bristol, England, is not diminishing. Last year it was nearly $190,000. Much of it comes in peculiar form, and shows the influence of Mr. Muller's ideas on devout minds. A large amount, for example, is money that would otherwise have been paid for life and fire insurance, but is contributed as an expression of faith in God for protection instead of trust in insurance companies.

Their Argument.

"Do you think the world is growing better, George?" "Do I understand that you want me to decide whether I am a better man than my father or not?" "How funny." "Oh, I don't know. Are you a better woman than your mother?" "Why, of course not. How absurd!" "Then how do you expect the world to grow better when you fail to help it along?" "George, you are very rude."—Chicago Journal.

A Wonderful Apple

Remarkable Accomplishment of a Maine Farmer.

To have the memory of John Grant, who brought to Maine a remarkable distinction a half century ago, the farmers of Waldo and Kennebec counties of the Pine Tree state are to hold celebrations in the several towns of the countryside. Grant was looked upon as a harmless crank when he was alive, fame coming years after he was dead. The story goes that he was the son of an Irish soldier who deserted from the British army during the Revolutionary war and married a half-breed Indian squaw, from which union many of the Grants in the east are said to have descended. The elder Grant was part lumberman, part farmer and more than half hunter, getting a precarious living from many callings and dying a week after he received notice that a pension had been granted him for his services in the war of 1812. John Grant, the son, inherited more than 1,000 acres of land and a lot of bad habits from his father.

Invented a New Apple.

John Grant's only claim to fame lies in the fact that he invented a new breed of apples in the days when he was given over to sin. Most new and desirable varieties of apples are produced by planting the seeds of the natural fruit, and selecting the best result of many plantings as the tree from which scions should be cut. Grant's method of begetting a new fruit was wholly different from anything that was then known, because he may be said to have whittled out his apple tree with a pocket knife, thereby performing a feat that even Nature at her best had never attempted. About 200 acres of Grant's farm were in orchards, which yielded him great quantities of cider, for which there was a good market. He could grow and harvest all the sour fruit he cared to use but when he tried to raise sweet apples, of which he was very fond, the sailors who went past the foot of his orchard on coasting schooners, walked in by night and stole every sweet apple as fast as it was fit to eat, often breaking down the trees in their haste to secure as many as possible.

Grant tried shot guns, steel traps, bull dogs and many kinds of profanity without effect. Then, after enduring many disappointments for five or six years, he swore a big oath that he would build an apple that should fool the sailors and enable him to have some sweet fruit in his cellar for the winter.

Shunned as the Evil One.

The Indian blood in his veins had made Grant quick of observation and enabled him to learn things about nature that are concealed from most men. He was led to believe that if he could split the scion from a sweet tree and another scion from a sour tree in halves, and place the half of a sweet scion against the half of a sour scion and make them fit so exactly that both sides would live if they were inserted in a healthy stock, he would produce a fruit that was sour on one side and sweet on the other. On trying the experiment he found that such a result was not possible from the terminal bud of the twin scion, but all shoots further down the graft would yield sweet fruit on one side and sour fruit on the other. Though the terminal bud is hard to make live, Grant was successful in about one trial out of ten, and when his sour and sweet apples were found growing in the orchard, the builder of the fruit was pronounced as one possessed of Satan, and shunned by the truly good as if he had been an emissary from the pit.

When it was done and his orchard was grafted to sweet and sour apples the sailors went to other orchards for their fruit, giving Grant time to attend prayer meeting, where he became acquainted with a clergyman who wrought his reform. Indeed, Grant always declared that his conversion was directly due to his ability to produce an apple that was proof against the sailors, because not only did the absence of the thieves enable him to go to the prayer meetings, but it was a fact that a man who could not swear had no business with an orchard infested with nocturnal thieves.

Italy Leads in Crematories.

Although the Pope pronounced against cremation in 1886, Italy now has more crematories than any other country, according to the Flamme, the German periodical devoted to this subject.

FAVORED BY A KING.

Church in Bardstown, Ky., Has Gifts of Louis Philippe of France.

Within the precincts of quaint old Bardstown is situated one of the oldest Catholic church buildings in Kentucky. It was the first cathedral west of the Allegheny mountains and is a magnificent structure and is the only house of worship in America that boasts a bell presented by royalty. The interior in the magnificence of its appointments is not excelled by any church in the south. It contains rare paintings by the old masters, one alone—the altar piece—being valued at $100,000. This magnificent work of art is the production of Antwerp artist, Van Bre. It depicts the crucifixion and is pronounced by connoisseurs to be the most splendid work of its class in the world. It is 21 feet in height and 12 feet in width, and was presented to Father Flaget, the first bishop of Kentucky, by Louis Philippe, King of France. Another rare painting—now worth its weight in gold—is "The Martyrdom of St. Batholomew," by Van Dyke. This picture is catalogued in the list of the great artist's production and its present location is also noted. The numerous smaller paintings which the church contains were donations from the King of Italy.

But the most interesting feature of the old church is its bell. This, too, was a gift from Louis Philippe. When that unfortunate monarch was driven from his throne in France he fled to Bardstown and sought the hospitality of Bishop Flaget, whom he had known in Europe. He was received with the utmost kindness, and shortly after his arrival, through the influence of the bishop, he was enabled to form a class in French, which he taught in a little building which is yet standing on St. Joseph's College grounds. Philippe was a grateful king and never forgot the many kindnesses rendered him by the good bishop. When he was restored to his throne he presented to the church the painting above described, together with the bell.

This bell was broken in 1887 and was recast by Louisville bell founders. The recasting was a complete success, and in order to retain for it its historic surroundings the same metal was used.

The old bell is one of the most musical in America and when the atmosphere is clear its tones can be distinctly heard for 10 miles.

Vine Culture in Chile.

Vine culture and the production of wines has in recent years become an important industry in the republic of Chile. Lying as it does between the Andes mountains and the Pacific ocean, and extending north and south for a distance of 2,400 miles, Chile possesses conditions of soil and climate that are admirably adapted to horticulture, and especially to the cultivation of a variety of wine-producing grapes.

BEAUTIFUL STOCKHOLM

The Swedish Capital has Most Admirable Architecture.

The good people of Stockholm are proud in the belief that the architecture of that city is superior to that of any other of its size in Europe, says a traveling correspondent. There is an old town and a new town. The former is very old and antiquated in appearance and the latter is very new. The municipal regulations are severe and arbitrary. No material but stone and brick can be used; every stairway must be of iron; the cellar must be arched; the walls must be very thick, according to the size and height of the house; the beams and girders must be of iron or steel and the attic floor of tiles or terra cotta laid in concrete or cement, and form a fireproof wall between the roof and the rest of the house. There must be iron doors at certain places; if there is an elevator shaft it must be of solid masonry, and the roof can be only of tiles, slate, or metal. Party walls must be at least eight inches thick, and thicker according as the height of the house increases, but the height cannot be greater than the width of the street upon which the house stands, which is usually between 68 and 80 feet. The houses vary from four to six stories.

Only two thirds of the area of the lot can be covered, except on street corners, where three-fourths is allowed. The remainder of the lot must be reserved for courts, for light and ventilation. All chimney flues must be 12 by 15 inches, and must be swept once a month from October to April by official chimney sweepers.

These regulations have made Stockholm a beautiful city, with imperishable buildings of a high class of architecture. Fires are few. In 1899, the last year for which I can obtain the statistics, there were 199 fires in Stockholm, and the total loss was only 243,232 kroner, about $70,000 in American money.

and the constantly increasing demand for and steady growth in popularity of St. Jacob's Oil among all classes of people in every part of the civilized world, show conclusively what remedy the people use for their Rheumatism and bodily aches and pains. Facts speak louder than words, and the fact remains undisputed that the sale of St. Jacob's Oil is greater than all other remedies for outward application combined. It acts like magic, cures where everything else fails, conquers pain.

TALKING BY WHISTLING.

Complete Language Has Been Developed by the Aborigines of the Canary Islands and Is Used.

There is a perfect whistling language used by the aborigines of the Canary islands, and the people can communicate with each other over long distances. A stranger wandering over the islands is frequently surprised to hear from a hilltop the sound of loud whistling, which is quickly repeated on the next hill, and so it is carried from summit to summit, until it dies away in the distance.

But perhaps the most curious means of communication in the world is the drum language of an African tribe, named, as nearly as the word can be represented in our letters, Thang-Tu. These queer people can talk to each other with large drums made of bamboo hoops, over which the skin of some animal is stretched. The drum is used only on important occasions—such as the meeting of war or the trial of some members of the tribe who have broken some of the complex religious rules. Then the head man of the village, who is hidden behind a rough grass screen, asks questions of the witnesses by tapping on the drum, and finally delivers judgment by giving either of the three sharp bangs, which means death to the prisoner, or the one light tap, that means freedom.—Philadelphia Times.

THE CHAMPION WING SHOT.

Capt. Bogardus Has a Dangerous Experience, But Comes Out Unhurt.

Ferris Wheel Park, Chicago, Nov. 4th.—Capt. A. H. Bogardus, the champion wing shot of the world, has spent the summer here. His shooting school has been one of the features of the Park during the season. He has given many exhibitions, and his skill with the rifle is superb.

The Captain tells of a very close call he once had when living at Elkhart, Ill. He had been a sufferer from Kidney Disease for several years, and it rapidly developed into Bright's disease. All his friends told him that this was incurable and that he would never get better.

To say that he was alarmed is to put it mildly. This plucky man had faced many dangers, and it made him sick at heart to think that at last he was to be conquered by such a cruel foe.

At last he heard of a medicine that had cured many such cases—Dodd's Kidney Pills. He used them, and was completely restored to good health.

He says:—"I attribute my present good health to Dodd's Kidney Pills and to nothing else."

Gibson Girls in Far-Away Hawaii.

The popularity of the book does not seem to be on the wane. On the contrary, it is spreading to distant parts of the world. This is evidenced by the fact that "The Gibson Play," which appeared some months ago in the Ladies' Home Journal, and which might be called a book play even though it was made possible by the series of pictures drawn by Mr. Gibson, entitled "A Widow and Her Friends," was presented by the students of Oahu College, Honolulu, in the Hawaiian Islands, a few weeks ago. The various parts were assumed by native Hawaiians, who, it is said, acted them in a truly American manner.

Of Course She Didn't Know.

A certain Unitarian minister of Greater New York has determined that his young daughter shall not know the dark side of orthodox religion. The miss accompanied her mother to the country during the past summer, and there found a playmate in the young daughter of a village teacher. One day the following conversation was overheard:

"You've told a story," said the village girl, accusingly. "Don't you know where folks go who tell stories?"

"No," replied the New York miss. "Where do they go?"

"They go to hell."

"Where's hell?"

"Why, Mamie Blank! You, a minister's daughter, and don't know where hell is!"

"Well, I don't care," answered the accused. "I never was in a geography class in my life."—New York Times.

Belles of Early Days

Peculiar Practices to Insure Beauty.

The all-absorbing mission of the beauty of seventy-five years ago was the culture of attractiveness and the devices and tricks resorted to in the frantic struggle to be irresistibly attractive makes the belle of the early 20's and 30's appear to the girl of today a most remarkable creature. Our great grandmothers were selfish, egotistical and silly little coquettes, who studied themselves in the mirror and brewed love potions and scented paste for the complexion, aping to the best of human bent the idle caprices of Empress Josephine and other fashionable French women of the time. The complexion was a religious study. Experiment after experiment emanated from Parisian boudoirs to find their way to American shores and to enthrall the belles of Washington and Philadelphia.

Exercise Never Indulged In.

Our great-grandmothers never exercised. It was considered deplorable and ruinous to beauty. They were constantly advised to avoid all excitements and violent emotions, to suppress laughter, joy, anger, and to cultivate a sober, genteel life for the sake of the features. When it was found necessary to smile, generally by way of coquetry, it was considered bad form to part the lips to any greater extent than to show four teeth. In smiling the under-lip was slightly raised. A hearty laugh was considered the hight of vulgarity.

Tricks for improving the complexion were simply numberless. The juice of strawberries was a favorite remedy for a shining, oily skin. An internal remedy was sometimes taken, consisting of a teaspoonful of charcoal mixed with honey. The worst face was softened by wearing a mask of quilted cotton, wet with cold water at night. This mask was often lined with a poultice of bread and asses' milk. A compress of this kind was worn nightly for weeks in order to effect the desired change. It is said to have acted like a mild, imperceptible blister.

The shining pallor of the poet was affected by many women, and most heroic treatment was undergone to acquire it. A wash of vitriol was even used. It consisted of muriatic acid, 60 per cent. strong diluted in 12 parts of water. When applied it will gradually clear away the coarse outer skin, to give place to a beautiful velvety new one underneath.

Dieting was an important factor in the struggle. Still hearty meals were the rule, in spite of the tradition for delicate appetite among our foremothers. Coarse bread, made of graham and rye flour, was the imperative rule. No white bread was eaten. It was especially avoided as most fatal to a fine skin. Potatoes, celery, artichoke and salads were eaten freely. The wild tomato or love apple, as it was called, was considered a wonderful beautifier, and whole platterfuls were eaten at one sitting. Brown bread and molasses was a remedy guaranteed to produce a pink and lovely skin.

The fight against freckles and wrinkles was an absorbing combat. Most women sat all day long in seclusion with their faces covered with court plaster patches over the wrinkled spots in their patient efforts to smooth out the skin. Most heroic treatment was generally necessary, and the face was actually coated with liquid tar and olive oil to iron it out. Freckles and brown spots of all kinds were rubbed out with turpentine.

Painted Like a Wax Figure.

Strange as it may seem, in spite of continual efforts to beautify the skin, paint and powder were freely and daringly used. Miladi was as artistically painted for a public appearance as if she were a wax figure. Rouge was heavily applied, and the carmine used in artificial flowers often acted as a substitute. Washington women set the fashions in the use of cosmetics, and they even appeared at breakfast with their faces covered with chalk and rouge, their eyebrows stained with walnut juice, and with tresses touched up with bleaching liquids unless powdered white. Powdered wigs were gradually going out of fashion, and a few to whom the white coiffure was becoming covered the head with powdered starch, sifted through muslin and scented with oil of roses.

PERILOUS ORCHID HUNTING

Gathering the Costly Flowers is a . . . Dangerous Sport.

Probably very few people have any idea that orchid hunting, like lion or tiger hunting, is a dangerous sport. The strange beauty of the flowers and the high prices which they bring are the subject of common comment, but the fact that the beauty is sometimes fatal and that the price is the reward of labor that is both strenuous and perilous is little known outside the trade.

On a calculation of chances, however, it would appear that shooting big game is a safe venture compared with the search for these lovely parasites of tropical vegetation. An article in Harmsworth's Magazine gives a striking story in point. It relates that of eight orchid hunters who left Tamatave, Madagascar, to look for specimens seven perished within a year, while the eighth barely managed to escape from the island's swamps with his health ruined.

It is in such places that the search must be pursued, and men have lost their lives in the work not only in Madagascar, but in Mexico, Brazil, Ecuador, Venezuela and Sierra Leone. Nor are the risks those of climate alone. It may be necessary to deal with wild animals while on a quest for the wild flowers, and there are generally hostile natives to be placated. All that the adventurers of old underwent when they penetrated the new world to seek the fountain of life and fabulous mines of gold may fall to the lot of these adventurers of a later day.

The romance is reduced, however, to a plain business proposition. Many of the men are sent out by regular dealers who pay them for their services. For the person who puts the capital into the enterprise there are chances for large profits, but it is said that a fortune is more likely to be lost than won in these orchid speculations. The value of the flowers consists largely in their rarity, and on a rapidly stocked market prices may fall from many pounds to a few shillings within a short period.

OLDEST POSTMISTRESS

Appointed by Lincoln and Still Holds Office at the Age of 90.

The oldest postmistress in the country is Mrs. Mary Paschall of Trenton, Ind., who was appointed by President Lincoln and who is now 90 years old. To her women who hold postoffice positions today owe much. Her bitter struggle to defend the mails in the early days of her appointment to the office and her ultimate success forever opened the field to women. She tells the story of her adventures in a spirited manner.

"When I first received my commission," said the postmistress, "I found immediately that my path would be very difficult. Not only was there the imperfect mail system to stumble over, but the will of the men of the country was against me because of the high feeling opposed to women holding public offices. Not infrequently I was compelled to remain awake all night watching the mail bags, and occasionally I had difficulty in securing the mail at all. For when the bag was thrown from the train upon the platform at the depot the men of the town would seize it before I could get within reach and assort the mail to suit themselves. Of course, the men had no right to disturb the mail, but they took the law in their own hands, believing a woman powerless.

"I tolerated this behavior for a short time, and then purchased a gun. One day just before the mail train had arrived I went upon the platform, levelled my gun and declared I would shoot the first ruffian who touched the United States mail. I was a pretty good shot, having often gone hunting with my brothers at the old farm in the wilds of West Virginia, and when a fellow seized the bag I put a bullet in his leg.

"That episode marked the last of the troubles at the station, but hostilities did not cease at my home. At night attempts were made to rob the place, and this necessitated my sleeping under the counter, which I did for three months. But I could not prevent broken windows. These cowardly acts were not done by reputable citizens, who, nevertheless, tried more effective means of forcing me from my position. Several petitions against me were sent to Washington, but President Lincoln remained my stanch friend.

"After a few months the chief annoyances ceased, and the only trouble I had was with the imperfect mail system, for which some people blamed me."

Although 90 years old, the aged postmistress still retains her position.

Before the end of this year, telephonic communication will have been established between the cities of Italy and Switzerland.

The Czar Had His Bath.

Apropos of the czar's recent visit to France, it is related that only the presence of mind of Mme. Loubet, wife of the president of France, prevented a sad contretemps. The imperial party was staying at a country villa, and when the hour for the czar's morning bath arrived the servants started to prepare the tub. But the hot water would not come. The servants twisted the faucets this way and that, and pounded on the pipes, but all to no purpose. Finally, Mme. Loubet heard of the difficulty. She called several men servants, and hot water was sent from the kitchen to the imperial tub in buckets.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

THE NEWS,

By John W. Eastman.

New York and Thief River Falls can exchange congratulations. Seth Low defeated Tammany Hall and the voters here did likewise.

Judge Watts, of Crookston, was certainly very indiscreet in allowing his name to be used in the heated city election just passed and it certainly has not added any to his popularity here. While the letters which he wrote for publication were of an innocent character, simply saying that an attorney should be elected to fill the office of municipal judge, they were interpreted by the followers of F. Hibner to mean that Judge Watts favored his (Hibner's) election, he being the only attorney who was a candidate.

The people of this city are not all fools, and they know perfectly well that a knowledge of law was a desirable qualification for a judge—but not the only one. We who live here are perfectly capable of passing judgment upon our officials, and do not desire to have any outside interference. In conclusion we might add that Judge Watts' pet candidate—Attorney Francis Hibner—received only 35 votes, the total cast being 376, and therefore the judge cannot consider himself indorsed.

A point is made by a Washington correspondent which is worthy of more than passing note. This is that Roosevelt is the only president who has had an opportunity of studying the Indian question from personal contact with the Indians themselves. Roosevelt spent several years on the plains and among the mountains of the west and has become familiar with the Indians and their characteristics as few eastern men have been. As the head of the government he will have much to do with directing the policy which is to be adopted in managing the red men, and his experience will be of great service to him in enabling him to arrive at correct conclusions. The system under which the Indians are now governed is full of abues. It it enervating to the Indians themselves to be kept as government charges, and to be fed and clothed at the expense of the nation. If the white men were to be treated in this way there are few of them who would not degenerate, and in time become as helpless as the Indians are. In addition to this the present system is bad for the whites. There is a constant temptation to dishonesty in the dealings of officials with their charges, and the reservation from the people of immense tracts of lands, which ought to be productive, but which will never be so under the reservation system is injurious to the home building people of the nation. There is evident a disposition among those who have charge of Indian matters to make a change in the manner of conducting their affairs. It is likely that there will be some steps taken to put an end to the tribal system and the reservation, and to put the red man on an equal standing with the white man. When this is done and not till then will the Indian became a useful member of society.

TRIED TO KILL.

Attempted Assassination of a Brother of August Brown.

August Brown, of the East Side, the first of the week received a copy of the Stevens Point Journal which contained an account of the attempt to assassinate his brother, Fred Brown, a farmer who lives near Stevens Point.

The affair happened Saturday Nov. 2. At about 8 o'clock in the evening Brown was seated in his home reading a paper when some unknown person fired a shot through the window, the ball taking effect in the left side of his face directly in front of the opening in the ear. It was some time before a doctor could be summoned, and loss of blood has made him very weak. His recovery is thought to be doubtful.

Just who committed the deed the authorities are unable to say. So far as known Brown had no enemy who would attempt to take his life.

A Good Clover Story.

In the office of the Ed L. Healy Land company at Red Lake Falls is a sample of red clover taken from the farm of John Stein, who lives on section 32, town of Emardville, that is over four feet long. Mr. Stein has about three acres of this clover which was sowed in 1900, and yielded this year between four and five tons per acre. The land was cleared of timber six years ago and sowed to red-top, and has furnished good crops of that grass ever since. Last year it was sowed to clover with the result stated.

The Mississippi Valley Lumberman calls attention to the increasing value of pine stumpage in the Northwest, as shown by the recent auction sale of state auditor of Minnesota. The lands has been listed a long enough time before so that the lumbermen who were at the sale were familiar with the value of every piece on which they bid, and as the timber was sold in small lots, not more than a single section being offered at one time it may be taken for granted that the purchasers did not offer more for any one piece than they knew it to be worth. The average price paid at the sale was $6 per thousand as against an average of $5.57 at last year's sale.

Money in Pigs.

T. H. Weatherhead of Alexandria has an object lesson for farmers. He was the owner of one sow pig. He bred it and six months ago got an increase of nine pigs. One of these he butchered and he has just sold the other eight butchered for $81. The only feed he gave them was corn nubbins unfit for market and $4 worth of ground feed that he bought. He got a clear profit of fully $85 from one sow.

Crookston Times: The First National Bank this mornin received a barrel of pennies from St. Paul via the Great Northern express. The keg was a fair sized one and contained $500 in pennies and nickles. The services of two husky draymen were needed to hoist the keg up the steps of the bank, and it is not probable that any "lone highwayman" will attempt to hold up the bank for the keg and its contents.

WAS IT BROWN?

T. M. Newall Thought He Saw Him in St. Cloud.

While in St. Cloud about two weeks ago T. M. Newall saw a man whom he thought was E. E. Brown the man who has been missing from Thief River Falls for about two months. Mr. Newall was well acquainted with Brown but at that time did not know that he was missing from this city. He did not speak to the man whom he supposed was Brown, and of course might have been mistaken.

Will Be Good Now.

George Washington, the Indian who killed a brother Chippewa near this city a few years ago, arrived here the first of the week from Stillwater where he has just finished serving a term in the state's prison for the offense. THE NEW CHIEF.

Mayor-elect Kratka Has not Decided Whom to Appoint.

Mayor-elect Kratka is receiving much advice just now as to whom he should appoint on the police force, but as yet has made no decision in the matter. He states, however, that inasmuch as he will be personally responsible for the actions of the chief of police, he does not believe that he should be guided by others in his selection, but follow his own inclinations.

"I propose to keep good order in town," says Mr. Kratka, "and the man whom I appoint will have to keep walking the streets when on duty. I do not want any one to think the job will be an easy one, and I believe the chief should receive fair pay."

NOBODY VOTED.

Indifference Shown by Voters at Tuesday's Election in South Dakota.

Sioux Falls, S. D., Nov. 10.—There is a voting precinct in this county which is entitled to the premium, as it did not cast a vote in the recent judiciary election. Last fall Lyon township cast 52 votes, and this year the county commissioners selected the judges and sent the ballots and ballot boxes out. They were both brought back in the same shape as sent out. One of the judges of election failed to report for duty, and the other two with the clerks sat around all day and no one came to vote. The two judges present did not know whether they had the right to open the ballots with one judge absent, and they were brought back unopened.

LOW IS ELECTED

FUSION CANDIDATE FOR MAYOR OF GREATER NEW YORK A WINNER.

LARGEST VOTE EVER POLLED

FUSION CANDIDATE FOR DISTRICT ATTORNEY HAS FAIR PLURALITY.

DICK CROKER'S LAST CAMPAIGN

TAMMANY LEADER WILL NOT PERSONALLY CONDUCT ANOTHER.

New York, Nov. 7.—Seth Low, former president of Columbia university, and four years ago the citizens' union candidate for the first mayor of Greater New York, was elected yesterday the second mayor of Greater New York by a plurality ranging anywhere from 30,000 to 40,000, defeating Edward M. Shepard of Brooklyn, the Democratic nominee. The campaign was an exciting one, and the vote, though somewhat less than at the presidential election a year ago, was the largest ever polled in a municipal contest in this country.

In addition to the canvass for mayor public interest largely centered in the nomination by the fusionists of William Travers Jerome for district attorney, and Mayor Robert A. Van Wyck, by the Democrats, for justice of the supreme court. They were voted for only in the territory contained in New York county. The latest returns indicate that Jerome has been elected by a comfortable plurality and that Mayor Van Wyck has been defeated, the latter running behind his ticket from 15,000 to 20,000. These returns also show that the triumph of the fusion ticket is practically complete. Reports received from the various sections of New York State show that the Republicans of the lower house of the state legislature, the number of Republican and Democratic assemblymen not differing materially from the figures of preceding years. In the various municipal contests reported from up the state the most interesting elections noted were those of Albany, Troy, Rochester, Syracuse and Buffalo. The city of Albany was carried by the Republicans. The election in Troy was a lively one, a number of arrests for illegal voting being made. Former United States Senator Murphy headed the fight for the candidate of the Democrats, while Former Gov. Black managed the campaign for the progressive Democratic-Republican ticket. Seymour Van Santwoord, the candidate for mayor, supported by ex-Gov. Black, was easily elected. In Buffalo the entire Republican city and county tickets were elected, Erastus C. Knight, the state controller, being chosen mayor. The result in Rochester was close, but Mayor Warner's friends claim the election of the Republican candidate.

Will Retain Control

Croker Is Through.

Richard Croker, commenting on Mr. Shepard's defeat, said he could not ascribe it to any one issue. "The people wanted a change," said he, "and the organization bows to the will of the people. Tammany Hall has been in power practically seventeen years, and if any one party were to remain in control for too long a period the tendency would be toward a perpetuation of purpose until the result would resemble a monarchy. Tammany Hall has profited by defeat, and I hope we do so at this time."

Mr. Croker retired at midnight. Before going to his apartments he told some of his intimate friends this campaign was the last he would personally conduct.

IN PENNSYLVANIA.

Republicans Elect Candidates for State Offices.

Philadelphia, Nov. 7. — Estimates from the sixty-seven counties of the state give Frank G. Harris, Rep., for state treasurer, an apparent plurality of 51,018; William P. Porter, Rep., for supreme court judge, 44,507 plurality. In Philadelphia, Rothermel, the fusion candidate for district attorney, was beaten by 42,478 plurality. Harris' plurality in this city was 34,916 and Potter's was 31,912. G. Harry Davis, fusion, was elected judge of common pleas court No. 5, running nearly 1,000 votes ahead of Henry Budd, his associate on the ticket.

Maryland Goes Democratic.

Baltimore, Nov. 7. — A conservative estimate, based on about half the voting precincts in the city and unofficial returns from the state, made at 3 a. m., indicate that the Democrats will control the legislature and will have probably 67 votes on joint ballot, which is 6 more than a majority. In order to attain this result it will be necessary that they carry the Second legislative district in Baltimore, which seems probable. Not more than half the returns from the city are in and these show an unusually close contest.

Vote in Connecticut.

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 7.—Connecticut yesterday chose delegates to the first constitutional convention to be held in the state since 1818. Of the 168 towns in the state 165 have been heard from, showing that Republican delegates were elected in 105; Democrats in 44 and Citizen or non-partizan candidates in 16.

Kentucky Is Democratic.

Louisville, Ky., Nov. 7.—The general assembly that was elected in Kentucky yesterday, with the exception of half the senate, which holds over, will be Democratic on joint ballot by an increased majority according to the latest returns. This general assembly will elect a successor to United States Senator William J. Deboe, Rep., for the term beginning March 4, 1903.

In Rhode Island.

Providence, R. I., Nov. 7. — In the election of Gov. Gregory and the entire ticket by a plurality of at least [illegible],000, the Republicans of Rhode Island, with a majority in both branches of the general assembly, have again retained the guidance of the state policies. The campaign lacked feature and the result was a decreased vote at the polls.

CAPT. PARKER ARGUES.

Schley's Counsel Defends His Client's Conduct.

Washington, Nov. 7.—The time of the Schley court of inquiry was entirely devoted yesterday to hearing arguments in the case of Admiral Schley. Mr. Hanna finished his argument in behalf of the department which had been begun the day before and Capt. James Parker began but did not conclude his presentation of the case for Admiral Schley. Mr. Hanna yesterday considered the retrograde movement, the bombardment of the Colon, and the charge made against Admiral Schley of disobedience of orders. Capt. Parker had only reached the coaling question when the court adjourned. He defended the conduct of his client at all stages of the campaign so far as he went. It is expected that Capt. Parker will conclude his speech to-day, when Mr. Rayner will begin.

RIOT AT CHRIST'S TOMB.

Greeks and Franciscans Fight Over the Sweeping of the Church.

Jerusalem, Nov. 7. — The Church of the Holy Sepulcher, surmounting Christ's tomb, was the scene of a sanguinary affray Monday last between Franciscans and Greeks, during which there were a number of casualties on both sides. The dispute arose on the question as to which community had the right to sweep the church. Troops had been posted in the vicinity for several days previous to the outbreak in order to prevent the anticipated collision, but they were suddenly outnumbered and overpowered by the contending parties.

KILLED A WOMAN.

Man Opens Fire When Refused Admission to Her Home.

Nebraska City, Neb., Nov. 7.—John McCormick, a plasterer, shot and killed Mrs. Maggie Dinsley at an early hour yesterday and then turned the weapon on himself, inflicting a serious wound in the head. McCormick called at Mrs. Dinsley's house and demanded admittance. Being refused, he fired a shot through the screen, killing the woman instantly. The bullet fired at his own brain glanced off and the wound will not prove fatal. McCormick was said to have been infatuated with the woman, who would not encourage his attentions.

Electric Light Plant Wrecked.

Racine, Wis., Nov. 7.—The breaking of a pulley wheel on a Westinghouse engine at the local power plant of the Milwaukee Electric Railway company caused the ruin of the engine, dynamo and electric switchboards, valued at $45,000. The noise made by the break frightened the men and the flying pieces of iron drove them to places of safety. One of the engineers ran and shut off the steam, and by so doing saved the other engines and dynamos, which are valued at $175,000. The engine and dynamo which were wrecked were used in lighting the city.

Mother Wants Her Boy.

Deadwood, S. D., Nov. 7—An attempt will be made to get a son of Mrs. Flora Crofoot of this city home from New York. When the husband died he left $250 for each of the three children. The boy was slightly demented and was sent to an asylum. Later an alleged friend took him to New York and set him to work at good wages. This man has been collecting and appropriating the wages.

Sues Lumber Company for Damages.

Grand Forks, N. D., Nov. 7.—Suit has been begun by William Epworth against the Grand Forks Lumber company for $5,000 damages for personal injury. Epworth was an employe of the company, and while at work in the mill on June 7, he was caught in the machinery and his leg was so badly torn that it is said he will be lame during the remainder of his life.

Opposed by Socialists.

Sioux City, Iowa, Nov. 7. — A communication to Mayor Burton from the Sioux City Socialist club opposed the granting of the proposed franchise to the Northwestern Telephone company. The socialists declare the telephone should be under municipal control. The new company is the one of which A. B. Beall, manager of the Minneapolis Baseball club, is president.

Touring South Dakota.

Huron, S. D., Nov. 7. — The Misses Garvin of Abingdon, Ill., representing the National Y. W. C. T. U., were here and lectured in the Methodist church, and also speaking to large audiences in the Congregational church. This manner of presenting the temperance question is both unique and interesting, and their tour of South Dakota will revive interest in the subject.

Merely Given a Lecture.

Excelsior, Minn., Nov. 7.—Ray Long, Ernest and Bunt Sigafoos, Carl Bickford and Orville McCormick, the five boys who were arrested and taken to Minneapolis Monday on the charge of criminal carelessness in connection with the shooting of John Hendricks several weeks ago, were severely lectured by the county attorney and given their freedom.

Will Have New Water Works.

Sioux Falls, S. D., Nov. 7. — At the special election held here yesterday for the purpose of voting upon the question of issuing bonds to the amount of $210,000 for the construction of a municipal waterworks system the proposition carried. There were only 312 negative votes out of a total of 1,500.

Unearthed a Tree.

Manistique, Mich., Nov. 7. — Men engaged in digging a trench for a sewer made a peculiar discovery. The trunk of a mammoth black oak tree was found at a depth of several feet, where it evidently had been buried for many years. Dynamite was required to rem

A BLOODY MUTINY

CONVICTS AT THE FEDERAL PRISON TURN ON THEIR GUARDS.

DESPERATE CRIMINALS AT LARGE

ONE MAN KILLED AND THREE OTHERS DANGEROUSLY WOUNDED.

MANY FARMERS ARE HELD UP

ESCAPING PRISONERS SECURE CLOTHING AND HORSES EN ROUTE.

Leavenworth, Kan., Nov. 9—One man was killed, three others dangerously wounded and twenty-six desperate convicts are at large as a result of a mutiny late yesterday afternoon at the site of the new United States prison, two miles southeast of here, where 400 prisoners from the federal prison, in charge of thirty armed guards, were at work.

When the trouble began the rebellious prisoners had only two revolvers. These had been secreted in one of the walls of the building by some unknown person. There are two walls partly completed and the remainder of the site of the building is surrounded by a high wooden stockade. Gus Parker of Ardmore, Ind. T., one of the ringleaders of the mutiny, under pretense of a necessity, walked to the corner of the stockade, where the revolvers were concealed, and under cover of some weeds secured them without detection. He returned to the gang and passed one of the revolvers to Frank Thompson, a negro from South McAlester, who secreted it about his person. When T. E. Hinds, superintendent of construction, and three unarmed guards prepared to round up the men at the end of the day's work the two armed convicts covered them with the revolvers and, encouraged by the other forced the men to walk before them to the northwestern corner of the stockade, where they expected to make a rush through an opening. On the outside of the stockade was an armed guard and the convicts were met at the opening by C. A. Burrows, a guard, who fought them back, but received two shots in the neck. The convicts then rushed over to the south wall to another opening and were met by Arthur Treelford, an armed guard, who is in charge of all the convicts. Treelford resisted the convicts and was shot twice but not dangerously wounded. Defeated in their attempt to escape at this point the men rushed to the guardhouse, a temporary frame structure where the arms are kept. The guards from the outside rushed in at this point and drove the convicts away from the guardhouse. J. P. Wildrupe, a guard, shot and killed Ford Quinn, from Ryan, Ind. T. The prisoners then made a grand rush for the main entrance and twenty-six of them succeeded in escaping.

Most of the escaped men are from Indian Territory. Closely followed by the guards the men ran to a near-by forest and succeeded in evading their pursuers. The men went in the direction of Easton, and it is reported here that they have held up many farmers, taking horses and clothing en route.

MURDER MYSTERY CLEARED.

Chicago Police Make an Important Capture.

Chicago, Nov. 9.—With the discovery yesterday of a blood-bespattered basement room at 192 North Union avenue and the arrest of its late occupant, Felipo Rini, an Italian fruit peddler, the mystery surrounding the death of Antonio Natali, whose body was found hidden in a barrel out on the prairie near Western avenue and Rice street, is believed to have been cleared up. That Natali was lured into the basement and murdered for his money by several men seems practically certain. In the pocket of Rini was found $300, mostly in bills, supposed to be a part of the proceeds of the robbery, some of the bills being covered with what appears to be blood stains. Two bloody hatchets were found in the house and a trail of blood stains leads to the street where Natali's body is supposed to have been loaded into a wagon and hauled away. A necktie, identified as one belonging to Natali, was found in the basement. In the yard were several fruit barrels similar to that in which the murdered Italian's body was found. A wagon in which the body is believed to have been hauled away was discovered in Rini's yard. There are stains in the bottom of the wagon believed to be blood spots. The police have four other men under arrest. They are Michael Leoni, Dominica Duchi, Dominica Vermoni and Giovanni Scafari. One other alleged participant in the crime is being hunted.

DUEL OF GAMBLERS.

They Fight With Revolvers, and Both Are Fatally Wounded.

Marion, Ill., Nov. 9.—Mann Holman and Junor Meredith fought with revolvers in the principal streets of the city. Holman is dying with a bullet over his heart and Meredith is not expected to live. Both men were gamblers and fought over a game of cards. Ten shots were fired, four of them taking effect.

KEPT HER 108TH BIRTHDAY.

Aged Woman Walked Three Miles and Then Took a Smoke.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Nov. 9.—"Grammy" Coleman of Hudson, otherwise Mrs. Ella Coleman, has celebrated, with the aid of the townspeople, her 108th birthday. She walked to Sacred Heart church, a mile and a half each way, was given a reception on the way home, and when she at last got into her comfortable chair and stopped puffing at a small black pipe, she remarked that she was only a bit tired.

With the Indians in Alaska

When we grow discontented, as we sometimes do, with our environment; annoyed because the old shades are faded, and we cannot afford new ones; the carpets shabby and the purse too flat to replace them with finer and more modish fabrics; when we compare ourselves with our neighbors and are vexed that their splendor surpasses our own, we may find a tonic in making a pilgrimage to an Alaskan home, says a writer in the Christian Herald. The red man in Alaska, living with primitive simplicity, is satisfied with a fire on the hearth, even if it burn in a smoky chimney and the roof is blackened with the soot. He asks for no luxurious easy chairs. A bench running around the walls of the living room fills his ideal of comfort. Thick clothing is a must-be, and he and his family is fortunate if they are swathed in thick woolens, or furnished with skins. The spoils of his hunting and trapping must bring what money he requires, and at all times pelts may be seen drying from poles and bars propped up against the ceiling. Outdoors, the Indian condescends to hunt and fish, but within his home he is an autocrat, living in lazy inertia, and waited upon, hand and foot, by his womankind. To the children he is not unkind, and they group about him, as bears' cubs in the den. It is hard to be sick in such a home as the one our artist has photographed, and as there is very little of tender ministry or patient care-taking, those who are too ill to rally under Nature's handling, usually die, and are little mourned. Gentleness and sympathy are qualities which come from civilization.

Much missionary work is being done in Alaska, and schools are being established for the little ones. A generation hence, an Alaskan house, even among the Indians, will be far more comfortable than those we see now. And then, who knows, [illegible] as we do about her carpets and her curtains!

ROOSEVELT AND THE FOWL.

How He Caught the Gamecock at "Old Bill" Sewall's.

Up in Island Falls, Aroostook county, live a rugged farmer and backwoodsman familiarly known as "Old Bill" Sewall. To his house one day in autumn about twenty-five years ago, came a rather delicate youth, armed with a gun and fishing rod, and looking for a place to board for a few months while he "roughed it" for the benefit of his health. The youth was Theodore Roosevelt of New York, and he was made welcome. For many weeks, accompanied by "Bill" Sewall and Wilbur Dow, a young man living in the neighborhood, the newcomer went hunting and fishing and gradually color came to his face and strength to his muscles. If he was slight and rather sickly he had plenty of grit, and soon he won the friendship and admiration of all the woodsmen in the Island Falls section. They said that, although at first sight the young tourist "didn't look as if he'd pull through," he was game to the backbone, and if sticking to it was any help they thought he might turn out all right, after all. Many stories are told by those who remember Roosevelt's visit of his courage and persistency. One day when, with Sewall and the rest, he went on a long tramp through the woods after deer, he was much exhausted on the way home, and someone offered to carry his rifle for him. Roosevelt almost indignantly declined the proffered assistance, and, although almost ready to drop in his tracks from weariness, he clung to his rifle and struggled through to the end of the journey. On another occasion he had a long chase after a game rooster that had escaped from his coop, and pursued the bird through the village streets, over fences and through yards, until finally it flew into an open window in the second story of a house. Nothing daunted, Roosevelt got a ladder and climbed into the house, presently emerging with the fowl squaling and struggling in his arms. He had actually crawled under an old woman's bed to get that rooster.

When Roosevelt went west to become a ranchman he took "Bill" Sewall and Wilbur Dow along with him and kept them in his employ for some years. Dow died in the west, but Sewall came back to Maine and is still living at Island Falls, where he delights to tell of the days he spent with Theodore Roosevelt. He says that at the time of the chase and capture of the game cock an aged settler of Island Falls, admiring the persistency and determination of young Roosevelt, said: "That young feller'll be president some day, if he lives."—New York Tribune.

POWER OF ONE WORD.

Breaks Up Supper Party, at Which One Chair Was Vacant.

On the morning of March 13, 1889, news of special import from the Philippines went coursing through the nation. In a certain half hour's fighting thirty-seven volunteers had been shot—killed and wounded. Scattered through six different states that morning nine men read the name of a college classmate in the list, and, for the first time in all their lives grew serious. The bearer of the name was sent on sick leave to his home in Pittsburg, a medal for special bravery on his coat, and a bullet in his head. One morning I walked into the sick soldier's room and found him—sleeping. For an hour he lay thus, then turned "Why-w-w-why! 'Shorty,' is that you? D-d-did we score? Did that scheme work?—I-I'm hurt. T-take out time. There were seven hundred Scrubs—I mean Phill-Philispanios in the rush line. When the game began they meant to murder us. The half was nearly up— They were inside our five-yard line—we lost the ball—out of ammunition—Score was [illegible]—it was our last down—I knew a chance [illegible]—I called [illegible] 'Where were you?' [illegible] give the signals. We worked a flying wedge with a long double pass, then I got out and ran for it. I had all their ammunition and had dodged their fullback coming in. The men were cheering—Oh! but it was glorious—I must have gone out of bounds, for oh! My head!—I think we—Did we score?—I think—I know I got there just in—t-time," and with his teeth set in the old way, and that old smile of triumph on his face, he fell back on the pillows—dead. At the funeral the pall-bearers were his nine classmates. That night we tried to have a little supper at the Seventh Avenue hotel. We sat down, but by some mismanagement ten plates were laid instead of nine. We tried to talk; we tried to eat; but somehow we couldn't. The waiters brought the second course. We tried again; it was no use. Just then a man passed down the corridor outside toward the elevator. The second hush had fallen on us when there came the single exclamation—"Down!" With one accord we looked into each other's filling eyes. Then our visions focused on—Jim Townsend's vacant chair. We rose in silence and left the room. There are no joys so keen as those which we ten men had known through four years; there is no sorrow so keen as that which we nine knew that night.—Ladies' Home Journal.

HIS NERVE WAS GOOD.

Cool Drummer Allows Cowboy to Shoot Away His Pipe.

"I was sitting on the veranda of a far western hotel one afternoon," said the Boston drummer, according to the Galveston News, "and was lazily smoking one of the nicest meerschaum pipes you ever saw, when out of the tail of my eye I saw that a native down at the other end of the veranda had his gun sighted at me. They were a wild lot around there, and I couldn't tell whether he meant to shoot me or the pipe. The chances were in favor of the pipe, however, and it seemed a good chance to test my nerve. I made up my mind to let him shoot, and pretend a careless air, but I'm telling you that in the ten or fifteen seconds of waiting the sweat came out at every pore and my heart pounded my ribs sore. I felt a sort of tick at the bowl of the pipe, heard the crack of the gun, and knew that the bullet had passed through the pipe. I got a brace with my hands and feet and waited for the second bullet, and it went through the bowl after the first. I sat there until the fourth bullet hit the pipe and knocked the bowl off the stem, and then the shooter sauntered up to me and laughingly said:

"'Excuse me, stranger, but I thought it was imitation.'

"'Same as you are,' I replied.

"My gibe hurt him, but he was man enough to tell everybody about my nerve, and the boys chipped in sufficient nuggets to buy me this $50 smoker.

"Nerve! Say, do you know what happened to me when I made an excuse to go upstairs after my old corncob? I had no sooner got into my room than my knees gave out, chills galloped up my spine and I'll be hanged if I didn't faint away and lie there for ten minutes.

"It had suddenly occurred to me that the bowl of that pipe was only six inches from my nose while the fellow was doing his shooting, and I have not yet got over touching my nasal organ now and then to see if it is safe."

Why He Didn't Mind It.

A gentleman took a country friend to the opera one night to hear the "Meistersinger" performed. He was very anxious to see the effect of Wagner's glorious music on the countryman, and watched him keenly during the rendering of the overture, which, grand as it is, is a little noisy, more especially when the bang of the drums and the crash of the cymbals occur at intervals. But the countryman's face remained absolutely unmoved. At last the Londoner could bear his friend's indifference no longer. "Doesn't this glorious volume of sound affect you?" he said. "Oh, no, not in the least," was the calm reply; "you forget that I am a boiler maker."—Tit-Bits.

Moonshine Distillery in Brooklyn.

The biggest moonshine distillery was discovered in Brooklyn the other day in a suburban cottage inhabited by Russian Jews. Its capacity was 150 gallons of proof spirits a day, and its profits were $500 a week. A wagon load of its products was captured and the officers found the place by allowing the horse to choose its own route homeward.

Holland's Queen a Sportswoman.

While Queen Wilhelmina has been staying at Schwerin she has taken several motor trips with her brother-in-law, the grand duke of Mecklenburg. The queen, who is already an inimitable skater, a fine horsewoman and can drive a coach and four, is said to be enchanted with the new sport, and has ordered an automobile to be made for her.

Populations in Cities.

In Rhode Island 81.2 per cent of the population in 1900 lived in cities or towns of 8,000 inhabitants or more, while this element also constitutes 76 per cent of the population in Massachusetts, 68.5 per cent in New York, 61.2 per cent in New Jersey and 53.2 in Connecticut.

FARM AND GARDEN.

MATTERS OF INTEREST TO AGRICULTURISTS.

Some Up-to-Date Hints About Cultivation of the Soil and Yields Thereof—Horticulture, Viticulture and Floriculture.

The Lentil.

The plant herewith illustrated is the Lentil, known scientifically as lens esculenta. It is a small branching plant with delicate pea-like leaves. The small white flowers growing in pairs are followed by flat pods, each containing two very flat round seeds, convex on both sides. Unlike the pea and bean, the lentil is eaten only when fully ripe. The brown or reddish lentil is smaller than the yellow, but of more delicate flavor. The lentil is one of the most ancient of food plants, probably one of the first to be brought under cultivation by man. It has been grown from early times in Asia and in the Mediterranean countries. The reddish Egyptian lentil probably furnished the "red pottage" of Esau. In Europe this legume is far less grown than the pea and bean, partly because its yield of seed and straw is less; therefore the market is partially supplied from Egypt. The lentil, according to analysis, is one of the most nutritious of all the legumes, but its flavor is pronounced and to some persons not as agreeable as that of the pea and bean. It has sometimes been claimed that indigestion and other bad effects followed the eating of lentils, but this impression is known in some cases to be traceable to the use of certain poisonous vetches, whose seed much resembles the lentil. There is every reason to consider the lentil a wholesome food. Until recent years the lentil was little known in the United States, but with the growth of the foreign population its use has steadily increased. The lentils found in our markets are all imported, but the culture of this legume with European seeds is being tried in our southwestern territories and elsewhere. There is already grown in New Mexico and Arizona, as well as in Mexico, a small variety of lentil, the seed of which was doubtless brought from Spain centuries ago by the ancestors of the present mixed race living there. The sandy soil of moderate fertility seems adapted to it; it has become acclimated, is hardy and prolific.

Nets on Apple Trees.

At a recent convention reported by the Farmers' Review, Prof. Webster of the Ohio Experiment Station reported the results of some experiments carried out by him in netting apple trees to keep off the coddling moths. A number of trees were covered with nets to keep out the moths, and beside them were a number of check trees left uncovered. When the apples were harvested it was found that 10 per cent were wormy on the covered trees and over 70 per cent wormy on the uncovered trees. It will be noticed that even the apples on the covered trees were affected to almost one-fifth of all. Just how valuable the experiment is we cannot say, especially as we do not know how near the covered trees were to the uncovered. It seems to the writer that one very important part has not been reported. We wish to ask: Did not the moths that tried to get onto a covered tree turn away from that and go onto an uncovered tree, thus making the number of wormy apples there very much larger than it would have been under ordinary circumstances? If such were the case the relative value of the covering would be lessened for actual use. Also, did the covered tree bear as much fruit as the uncovered one? We ask this, as the netting that kept out the moths might also keep out the insects that assist the cross-fertilization of the blossoms; it having been quite fairly demonstrated that even our apple trees benefit by this cross-fertilization. It may yet pay well to protect some of our fruit trees with nets.

Good and Bad Work of Bees.

Professor Waite of the Department of Agriculture has been investigating the work of the bee relative to its carrying of disease germs from flower to flower, and expresses the opinion that the bee is largely responsible for the distribution of the peach rot fungus. The bee himself does not puncture the peach, but gets to work on the peach after the wasp and the soldier bug have punctured it. Bees also carry pear blight. Pear trees do not usually show much blight till they bloom and begin to bear fruit. The pear blight virus is gummy and can't be blown by the wind; it must be carried by insects. If the virus dries it dies in a few days. A twig that has died of blight is no longer a menace, because the virus that killed the twig is dead also. It is therefore evident that the germs are spread by insects, especially bees.

On the other hand the bee is a great increaser of our crops through his work of cross-pollenization. Many of our plums and apples are sterile to their own pollen, but such is not true of the peach and quince. The pear is not of the type that produces pollen that is borne by the wind. From the biological standpoint the bees are doing their natural work in visiting blossoms, and in spite of what harm they do they are necessary to the best results in our orchards.

Campbell Method of Soil Culture.

Some years ago the Campbell method of soil culture made a considerable stir in agricultural circles. Recently little has been heard of it. The only reference made to it this year is in an experiment station bulletin, which says: "The Campbell method has yielded small crops of wheat, and has given no appreciable saving of soil moisture." As some of our readers will remember Mr. Campbell, the inventor of the tools used in this process, claimed that the stirring up of the ground was not an advantage to crops, and that where the soil was plowed it should be again compacted as firmly as it had been at first, if that were possible. He said that the ordinary roller only compacted the first two inches of earth, but that below that crust the soil was light and loose. The roller he invented was arranged to penetrate the soil and compact the earth down to the depth of the plowing, while at the same time a dust mulch was left on the surface. At one time some of the experiment station men looked quite favorably on the scheme. Results, however, have shown it of no value.

Spraying Fruit Trees in Bloom.

There is at present much controversy whether or not fruit trees should be sprayed when in bloom. In the state of New York a law has been passed making it a misdemeanor to spray fruit trees when in bloom, on account of the danger to bees. It is without doubt true that some bees are killed by the poison in the spray. In one case reported a whole hive of bees were killed, and an examination showed arsenic in the digestive apparatus of the bees.

It has also been discovered that the poison is equally destructive to the life of the pollen, even when the amount of poison is only 9 to 100 parts in 10,000. Even two parts in 10,000 has been frequently found fatal to the pollen. The danger to the pollen is, however, greatly lessened by the fact that the blossoms do not all open at once, but the process extends over several days. In a clump of five apple blossoms the central one opens first, and spraying at that time kills the pollen in only those open blossoms.

Fertilization of Flowers.

Insects are necessary to the fertilization of most flowers; and were it not for insects, especially honey bees, many of the crops we now have would be wanting. There are a good many flowers that produce pollen that has no means of getting from flower to flower except by the medium of insects. On the other hand some plants throw off great quantities of pollen without the help of the insects. Prof. James Fletcher relates that when in British Columbia some people came to him and asked him to explain a shower of sulphur that had apparently fallen during the preceding night. He assured them that there had been no shower of sulphur, but that what looked like sulphur was in reality the pollen of pine trees.

Manures and Potato Scab.

It is the common experience that lime and ashes are apt to favor the potato scab. The Rhode Island experiments showed that this is attributable to their content of carbonate of lime which renders the soil favorably alkaline. Similar increase of scab followed the use of soda ash (carbonate of soda), potash (carbonate of potassium) and magnesia. Stable manure of all kinds favors the scab development, probably for similar reason. Fertilizing materials which do not tend to increase the scab and which may even check it are enumerated as follows: Common salt, land plaster, most commercial fertilizers (including superphosphates), sulphate of ammonia, nitrate of soda, kainit, muriate of potash, sulphate of potash.

Wind Affects Sprays.

An ideal condition for spraying is when the wind is still. As there are few days when the wind does not blow, it is extremely difficult to obtain ideal conditions for the work. When the air is still the spray may be evenly put on the tree and little of the mixture will be wasted. When the wind is blowing it becomes necessary to spray the tree from several sides to get a uniform application. Some of our best sprayers find it advisable to spray from not less than six different positions. If the air is still a tree may be sprayed all over at one time. But when the air is in motion one-half of the tree will have to be left till the wind changes.

Water in Cereal Production.

—A wheat-raiser says that subsoiling will increase the yield of wheat in his vicinity, but that the amount of water used in the production of the crop is greater. That is most certainly so and it is no argument against sub-soiling. Every increase in the crop of anything means a very large increase in the amount of water used. No other condition is possible. It takes a certain amount of water to convey the food to the grain of the plant, and the amount of water used is hundreds of times the bulk of the food carried. This water is not used over and over again, so far as we know, but after acting as a conveyer is thrown off from the foliage of plants in the form of vapor. Experiments have shown that for every pound of dry wheat created there is used 453 pounds of water. It will thus be seen that to increase the yield of wheat by one bushel means the added use of 27,180 pounds of water. This is over 13 tons. Anent this subject it may be interesting to quote the conclusions arrived at by Professor King of Wisconsin as to the amount of water used in the production of the leading grains. To elaborate one pound of dry matter the requirements are as follows: Barley, 461 pounds; oats, 503 pounds; corn, 270 pounds; clover, 576 pounds; peas, 477 pounds; potatoes, 385 pounds. These figures present an interesting study. The low demands of corn show that it is a crop adapted to a limited water supply and point to its origin and development in a country semi-arid in nature. It will explain why the corn crop comes through drouths that destroy other crops. As to subsoiling for the increase of water supply it must be remembered that that is the prime reason for the process, as it increases the water reservoir of the soil.

Water in the Soil.

There are many things about the physics of soils that remain to be explained. One of them is the movement of soil moisture, both as relates to the water table and to the moisture present by capillary attraction. Thus we notice that in some experiments made in North Dakota it was determined that "the water table falls during the winter season, but there is little or no loss of soil moisture and there is an actual gain of moisture in the surface soil, which is not due to rain or snow." A possible explanation is that the cold earth, even in its frozen state, may act as a condenser of the moisture in the air, on days when the temperature of the air is above the freezing point. Another explanation may be that the air in the soil actually circulates toward the colder surface soil, and deposits its moisture there by condensation, just as is the case with the air above the soil. However, further investigation of the subject may show the main causes of such concentration of the water supply and its advantage to agriculture.

Our Neighbor's Orchard.

—Scientists that have had large experience in the matter of orchard treatment declare that it is better to treat large areas for insects and fungi instead of here and there individual orchards. The reason is apparent. In the case of treating a few acres of trees at a time the region around those acres serves as a base of operations for the pest desired to be exterminated. The untreated orchard of our neighbor is the one that does the mischief. How to get that orchard sprayed is a problem. In some states laws have been passed making the treatment of the orchard compulsory on complaint of certain property holders in the vicinity. But such laws are inoperative, for the reason that men are not very numerous that will take the initiative in such a matter. The only effective move we can see as advisable is for the most interested man to call a neighborhood meeting to consider the question of spraying all the orchards. Then, if possible, have all the orchards treated at the same time.

Cross Breeding of Swine.

During recent years a great deal has been written and said about the crossing of different breeds of swine in order to secure larger litters, better grazers, more bone, early maturing, better bacon type, etc. In some instances the cross of the breeds may prove advantageous, but it must be done wisely, else disappointment will oftentimes follow such a practice. I believe that with good care and proper selection the above-mentioned desirable characteristics can be secured from any of our generally recognized breeds without the introduction of any foreign blood. Cross breeding may sometimes prove useful, but it is not a wise policy to make it a general practice.—Professor W. J. Kennedy.

Ducks and geese stand being exhibited at shows better than the land fowls. Among the latter the loss is great. Some of the breeders that follow the fairs and show their birds during an entire season lose as high as half of their birds. Some of these die while at the fairs, and others succumb to disease after they are brought home, but as a direct result of the showing. Not infrequently roup exists among show birds. The cage with the sick fowls may be some distance away from the others, and when the breeder takes his birds home he imagines they have escaped the roup. But a few days after reaching home the dread disease breaks out among the birds he has had on exhibition. Nevertheless, it pays enterprising breeders to take their best birds to the fairs and poultry shows. The reward comes to the breeder not only in an increase of knowledge, but also in increased sales.

LI'S ANGER FATAL

HAD A VIOLENT DISPUTE WITH THE MINISTER FROM RUSSIA.

JAPAN DEMANDED INFORMATION REGARDING THE MANCHURIAN TREATY.

STARTED ROW WITH EARL LI

RUSSIAN MINISTER OBJECTED TO REVEALING TEXT OF THE TREATY.

Pekin, Nov. 10. — A violent dispute with M. Paul Lessar, Russian minister to China, over the Manchurian treaty, appears to have been the immediate cause of the death of Li Hung Chang.

The diplomatic events preceding this tragic climax have enabled Japan for a moment to frustrate the designs of Russia. A fortnight ago the Japanese legation secured a reliable outline of the terms of the treaty and thereupon demanded that the Chinese plenipotentiaries officially lay before them the text, basing this demand upon the allegation that Japanese interests were involved in any change of the status of Manchuria.

The Chinese plenipotentiaries refused to comply with the demand. Thereupon the Japanese government from Tokio communicated with the Southern viceroys and induced them to use their influence with the empress dowager against the treaty. In the meantime the empress dowager to communicate the treaty after certain modifications to the ministers of the powers, and, if they did not object, to summon the same.

Li Hung Chang visited M. Lessar and explained to him the instructions. The Russian minister strongly objected to revealing the text of the treaty to the ministers of the other powers and another stormy interview ensued. Li Hung Chang went home in a violent passion and had a hemorrhage, which the doctors attribute to the over exertion of a weakened system.

While these things were happening in Pekin the Southern viceroys sent to the empress dowager a memorial against the treaty. On receiving it she telegraphed to Li Hung Chang countermanding the order to sign. When M. Lessar endeavored to have Li Hung Chang's seal affixed to the treaty Chou Fu, provincial treasurer, had arrived from Pao Ting Fu, had taken charge of the seals as the temporary successor of Earl Li.

NEW PRINCE OF WALES.

Title Conferred Upon the Duke of Cornwall and York.

London, Nov. 10—The duke of Cornwall and York has been created prince of Wales and earl of Chester. Among the honors bestowed on the occasion of King Edward's birthday, which occurs to-day, are a baronetcy upon the retiring lord mayor of London, Frank Green, and knighthood for Chief Justices Little of Newfoundland and Gray of Bermuda, G. A. Critchett, oculist to the king, and George Hussey, mayor of Southampton. Sir Francis Plunkett is made a knight of the Grand Cross of the Bath and Clinton Dawkins, formerly financial member of the council of the governor general of India and now a member of the firm of J. S. Morgan & Co., is made a Companion of the Bath.

GEN. WHEELER'S NEW GUN.

Will Establish a Plant in Philadelphia for Its Manufacture.

Philadelphia, Nov. 10.—A company, of which Gen. Joseph Wheeler is a director, is contemplating the establishment of a plant in this city for the manufacture of a new firearm. The general is here and purposes making Philadelphia his home. The chief merits claimed for the new weapon are freedom from recoil and in the automatic action in loading and firing. The United States board of ordnance and fortifications, it is said, has had tests made and given appropriations in order to conduct the tests and to apply the device to artillery.

AN UNUSUAL ACCIDENT.

Woman Makes a Fatal Slip in a Bath Room.

New York, Nov 10. — Mrs. Archibald S. White, wife of the president of the National Salt company, was found dead in the bath room of her residence yesterday. Mrs. White lost her life as the result of a most unusual accident. A slip on the floor caused her to fall backward, her head striking the edge of a marble basin, fracturing her skull. Mrs. White's maid went to her room some time after the accident. Not finding her mistress, the maid went to the bath room, where Mrs. White lay on the floor dead. Mrs. White was about forty years old.

Methodist Extension Secretaries.

Columbus, Ohio, Nov. 10. — At a meeting of the general committee of the church extension board of the Methodist church yesterday Rev. T. G. Iliff of Delaware, Ohio, and Dr. W. D. Parr of Indianapolis were elected as the corresponding secretaries at salaries of $2,500 per annum and traveling expenses.

Mother Bickerdyke Dead.

Bunker Hill, Kan., Nov. 10.—Mother Bickerdyke, famous for her work among Union soldiers during the Civil war, died here yesterday, aged eighty-four years. Funeral services will be held Sunday and on Monday the body will be taken to Galesburg, Ill., for burial.

Child Burned to Death.

Graettinger, Iowa, Nov. 10.—A two-year-old daughter of Hiram Jones was burned to death. Her clothing caught fire from the stove.

M'KINLEY COLUMN

FIRST MONUMENT FOR THE MARTYRED PRESIDENT IS UNVEILED.

MINNESOTA TOWN'S CELERITY

GOV. VAN SANT AND MEMBERS OF HIS STAFF ASSIST IN EXERCISES.

THOUSANDS OF PEOPLE TAKE PART

MONUMENT IS A SINGLE SHAFT EIGHTEEN FEET HIGH, COSTING $12,000.

Tower, Minn., Nov. 11.—In the presence of several thousand people assembled from the mining towns of Northern Minnesota was unveiled and dedicated yesterday the first M'Kinley monument in the United States. Many prominent Minnesotans were here, including Gov. Van Sant and members of his staff, a number of state officials and other citizens from various parts of the state.

Gov. Van Sant was among the speakers. He paid a high compliment to the patriotism, reverence and sympathy of the sturdy mining people who subscribed their money and performed their labor of love with such celerity and zeal. Other speakers were Monsignor Buh, Dr. Robert Forbes, Hon. John Owens and T. J. McKeeon, the latter a prominent Democratic politician. Men of all parties and creeds joined in the exercises. The singing of "Nearer My God, to Thee,"

by the assembled multitude was one of the most impressive features of the day. Before the exercises began at 2 p. m. there was a great parade, in which five bands and the Austrian and Finnish societies of the range towns took part. The parade was reviewed by Gov. Van Sant from the balcony of the Vermilion hotel.

The monument is a single shaft eighteen feet high, standing on a pedestal of concrete and iron ore, and cost $12,000. Special trains brought people from the neighboring towns and 4,000 visitors were in the city. Mayor J. D. Murphy of Tower was master of ceremonies. Gov. Van Sant has wired Mrs. McKinley at Canton of the unveiling of the monument in honor of her husband.

A Hustling Town.

Tower is the pioneer mining town of Minnesota. It was named after Charlemange Tower, the present ambassador to Russia, at one time president of the Duluth & Iron Range road, and a resident of Duluth. Ore shipping began from here in August, 1884, and since then a total of about 9,000,000 tons has been mined and forwarded. Soudan is the mining district of Tower, and it is there that a large number of the miners and their families reside. The mines provide employment to about 600 men. Capt. John Pengilly is in charge of the Minnesota mines at Soudan, as well as the Chandler at Ely. Tower has another extensive industry aside from mining, that of the manufacture of lumber. The Tower Lumber company employs 500 men. It is the nearest city to the Canadian gold fields, and claims in the Vermilion, the finest hotel north of Duluth. That Tower is an ambitious city and filled with enterprising men is proved by the prompt and successful action in the matter of getting together $12,000 to build the memorial to the martyred president. Tower is situated on Lake Vermilion, one of the most beautiful of the large inland lakes in the state, containing hundreds of islands. The site of Tower was once occupied by a prehistoric people. Hundreds of copper weapons and utensils are found in the earth there. The copper is tempered and the forgotten people were of that mysterious race that knew this art of tempering the soft, yellow metal, and the secret passed away with them and has never been rediscovered.

FOOTBALL ANIMOSITIES.

Mitchell and Vermillion May Not Get Together.

Sioux Falls, S. D., Nov. 11. — Contrary to expectations, a game of football may not be played on the local grounds between the Mitchell and Vermillion university teams. The latter has positively declined to meet the Mitchell team, due to trouble which arose between the teams on the occasion of their last game, which was played a couple of years ago. It is said that one of the grounds of grievance on the part of the Vermillion boys is that members of the Mitchell team are wearing medals won by Vermillion, and that they will not play Mitchell until the medals are restored and apologies are made. Notwithstanding the definite answer of Vermillion, efforts will be continued to bring the two teams together. The football enthusiasts of the state are very anxious for a meeting between these teams, and any unreasonable obstacles thrown in the way by either side will be looked upon simply as a pretext to evade a meeting.

SHOT WHILE SHACKLED.

Negro Prisoner in Mississippi Is Killed by a Planter.

Vicksburg, Miss., Nov. 11. — B. F. Brooks, a Bolivar county planter, shot and fatally wounded Jack Moore, a negro who had been convicted of killing Brook's son and given a three-year penitentiary sentence. The shooting occurred on a Mississippi Valley passenger train. Moore was shackled to three other prisoners and in charge of a deputy sheriff en route to the state farm.

DISASTROUS FIRE AT BUTTE.

Not a Hotel or Restaurant Remains in the Town.

Butte, Neb., Nov. 11. — Fire destroyed nearly the entire business portion of the town. Not a hotel or restaurant remains; and ten business places in all were burned. The loss is about $30,000. The fire is supposed to have been started by an incendiary.

Won by the Farmers.

Brookings, S. D., Nov. 11. — The game of football at Athletic Park yesterday by Flandreau Indians vs. Brookings Agricultural college resulted in a victory for the S. D. A. C., the score being 42 to 0. The Indians were completely outclassed, and the local team did about as they pleased with the pigskin. The second eleven at the college played a game with the city high school, and again the college won with a score of 26 to 0. The next game to engage the attention of the S. D. A. C. will be next Thursday, when Mitchell will be here. This will no doubt be an interesting game.

Death at Hastings.

Hastings, Minn., Nov. 11. — John Heigh died this afternoon, after a protracted illness, aged about forty-eight years. He leaves a wife. William Ennis, a prominent farmer of Rosemount, died last night, aged about sixty years. He leaves a wife and family. Mrs. C. C. Blackwood of this city is a daughter of the deceased.

SMALLPOX IN WISCONSIN.

Fifty Cases Are Reported in Little Chute.

Milwaukee, Nov. 9.—Smallpox is epidemic in several towns and villages in Northeastern Wisconsin, although the officers of the state board of health say it is not of the most virulent type. On Wednesday a "lumberjack" who was suffering from the disease was sidetracked in a passenger coach on the Northwestern road. Yesterday the postmaster at Little Chute — Joseph Peter—was found to be suffering from the disease and there was a panic at the postoffice for a while. Finally a quarantine was established, the mail fumigated and a substitute sworn in, the patient being removed to his home. Fifty cases of the disease have been reported at Little Chute. The schools and churches have been closed, and everything done to prevent a spread of the disease.

IOWA BANK ROBBED.

Burglars Take Large Sum—The Safe Is Wrecked.

Sioux City, Iowa, Nov. 9.—At Hinton, a small town on the Illinois Central twelve miles from here, the Bank of Hinton was looted of $1,500 in cash. Undoubtedly two or more men were engaged in the robbery. The wrecking of the safe showed expertness, although the careless passing over of $200 laying unprotected on a shelf indicated that the robbers were not looking for easy money. Nitro-glycerine was pumped into the safe and exploded and shattered it completely. The bank collateral was found uninjured in the debris piled up by the explosion. The men left a lamp burning in a small office near by, and a necktie found, is the only clue to the robbers. One stranger seen in town the day before is missing and is suspected.

NORTHERN PACIFIC WRECK.

One Man Fatally and Another Seriously Injured.

Helena, Mont., Nov. 9. — L. A. Edwards, a Northern Pacific brakeman, received probably fatal injuries yesterday in a wreck one mile west of this city. A. D. Henry, who was traveling in a box car, was badly injured, but will recover. As an east-bound freight train was slowing up for the Great Northern crossing a broken wheel caused a bad wreck. Eighteen cars loaded with lumber were ditched and the track was torn up for several hundred feet. All passenger trains were sent around by Butte. Edwards was twenty-eight years old. He was married and lived in Missoula.

BOX FACTORY BURNED.

Loss of $25,000 by an Early Blaze at Duluth Yesterday.

Duluth, Minn., Nov. 9.—The Duluth Box Company's factory was destroyed by fire about 2:30 o'clock yesterday morning, and also the dry kiln of the Merrill & Ring Lumber company. The latter company owned the building in which the box factory was located, and, with the buildings and some lumber burned, sustains a loss of about $12,000, with insurance of $6,000. The box company's loss was about $5,000 on machinery and plant, with $1,500 insurance and about $1,500 on lumber with $4,000 insurance. It is owned by Pennsylvania people, and was only started in June.

SMASH ON RAILROAD.

Freight and Passenger Trains in Collision Near New Lisbon, Wis.

La Crosse, Wis., Nov. 9. — A wreck occurred on the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul road near New Lisbon, Wis., at an early hour yesterday morning. A passenger train on the Wisconsin Valley division collided with a freight train on the main line. Fireman Frank Lyons of the Valley train, residing at Tomah, was killed.

Penalty for Issuing Worthless Check

Fargo, N. D., Nov. 9.—J. F. Costello, who conducted an employment agency here during the summer, and was arrested on a charge of issuing a check against a bank in which he had no funds, pleaded guilty to the charge and was sentenced to pay a fine and costs amounting to over $100. He has been in jail for some time, and clemency was shown on that account.

Settling Up Old Winnebago Reserve.

Huron, S. D., Nov. 9.—The proposed opening to settlement of a portion of the Rosebud Indian reservation appears to have no effect upon homeseekers who desire government land. There is a lively rush now going on for lands in what was formerly the Winnebago reservation. There are 140,000 acres of these lands, mostly in the south part of Hyde county.

Dashed to Death.

Minneapolis, Nov. 9.—Anton Oonk, a "straw boss" at the Milwaukee Short Line bridge, yesterday afternoon met a frightful death by falling a distance of 120 feet from the bridge to the ground. Oonk had always been a structural iron worker. He was a union man and his home was in Milwaukee, to which city his body will be taken.

South Dakota Pioneer Taken.

Sioux Falls, S. D., Nov. 9. — At the family residence in this city occurred the death of Nicholas Hoffman, aged sixty-four, a pioneer of Sioux Falls. He located in this city in the spring of 1884. He leaves a widow and seven children, all but one being at his bedside when he breathed his last.

Child Played With Matches.

Ellsworth, Wis., Nov. 9.—The four-year-old son of Bob Lang of Elmwood was burned to death yesterday while along in the house. He played with kerosene and matches.

New Rural Route Approved.

Cedar Falls, Iowa, Nov. 9.—The postoffice department has approved the application of Postmaster Howe of Janesville for a rural route, and one has been established twenty-four miles long, and serving 655 persons.

Smallpox Wards Burned.

Des Moines, Iowa, Nov. 9. — Tracy home, a hospital in which fifteen smallpox patients were quarantined, was badly damaged by fire this morning. The inmates were rescued, the firemen and police risking exposure.

SEIZED SHERIFFS

TWO ESCAPED CONVICTS TURN THE TABLES ON THEIR PURSUERS.

ESCAPE IN SIGHT OF POLICE

USE SHERIFF AND WOMAN AS SHIELDS TO PROTECT THEM FROM POLICE.

SHERIFF PROMISES IMMUNITY

POLICE COMPELLED TO STAND HELPLESSLY BY WHILE THEY ESCAPE.

Topeka, Kan., Nov. 12.—Sheriff Cook of this county and Deputy Sheriff Williams were captured by two escaped convicts from the Fort Leavenworth military prison yesterday at Pauline, five miles south of Topeka, and held prisoners in the farmhouse of a man named Wooster for several hours. The convicts finally escaped between a line of police sent from Topeka to reinforce the sheriff and are now at large. Both were slightly wounded. Wooster was badly wounded by one of the convicts when he tried to fire on them. Mrs. Wooster and Sheriff Cook were held before the convicts as a shield by the prisoners in making their escape. The posse is now in pursuit.

At 2:30 yesterday afternoon some farmer boys near Pauline learned that the convicts were in the neighborhood. Hastily forming a posse, armed with target rifles, pistols and clubs, they gave chase. Neither of the convicts were armed and they were unable to make a stand. Later Sheriff Cook and Deputy Williams arrived. Coming upon the convicts both officers fired, wounding the men but not disabling them. The convicts then fled through a small opening in the timber and ran into the house of Farmer Wooster. Sheriff Cook telephoned to Topeka for assistance and then Took Up the Chase.

Thinking the convicts had run around the house, Cook darted through the open door, intending to surprise them at the rear door. But instead of this the convicts had gone into the house and the officer almost fell into their arms. Sheriff Cook was ordered to give up his gun, which he did. Deputy Williams by this time had reached the house and entered without knowing what had happened, and he, too, was made captive by the convict. In the meantime Chief Stahl of Topeka, with eight officers, were on the way. They arrived at the Wooster house about an hour after the officers had been imprisoned. Chief Stahl immediately began negotiations with the convicts to give up their prisoners, but the convicts only laughed. The convicts placed the woman and Sheriff Cook in front of them as shields and made for the door. Then after exacting a promise from the sheriff that he would not permit any of the officers outside to fire on them, they Started for the Open.

As they left the house, the frightened farmer's wife and sheriff before them, the convicts passed between a cordon of police who could have easily captured them, and started for the railroad track. The sheriff had in the meantime exacted a promise from the police that they would not molest the convicts and they did not. After covering a considerable distance down the track the convicts suddenly disappeared through a hedge fence, bidding the officers a mocking farewell. One of the police sargeants later said he could have easily touched the leading convict with his hand as he passed.

The convicts had secured a good start before the officers had recovered from their surprise. Then some of the policemen wanted to pursue, but Sheriff Cook would not permit it as he had promised the convicts immunity from arrest. Chief Stahl left some of his men on the scene and with the others started back to Topeka to take up the chase later on. From Topeka a posse was started out and Chief Stahl expressed the opinion that he would land the men in a few hours.

Convicts Rob a Man.

Kansas City, Nov. 12.—None of the fourteen escaped convicts from the Fort Leavenworth prison at liberty Saturday evening was taken yesterday, although armed guards and citizens kept up a steady hunt all day Sunday. Saturday evening three of the escaped prisoners held up and robbed a man near Manhattan, Kan., but escaped and all trace of them was lost. One of the men is believed to be Frank Thompson, the notorious negro leader of the mutiny.

SCHOONER WRECKED.

Crew Spends a Perilous Night on the Wreck Before Being Rescued.

Menominee, Mich., Nov. 12. — The schooner Emily Taylor was wrecked at Zeiser bay, twenty miles north of here, and the crew, consisting of Capt. James Stone, his wife, two children and two sailors, spent a perilous night on the wreck before they were rescued by fishermen. The schooner is owned by Capt. Stone and hails from Gladstone. She had loaded wood at Arthur Bay for Green Bay, and was caught in the blow.

Gen. Maso for President.

Havana, Nov. 12. — The Democratic party has adopted Gen. Bartolome Maso as its candidate for the presidency of Cuba.

New Plant Destroyed.

Newcastle, Pa., Nov. 12.—The plant of the Lawrence Ice and Storage company was completely gutted by fire last evening. The damage amounts to fully $150,000. The plant was only completed and operations begun this fall.

Strikers Return to Work.

Oelwein, Iowa, Nov. 12.—The Chicago Great Western strike was settled by the men returning to work though the objectionable foreman was not removed. Three hundred strikers were out for three weeks.

CARRY LI'S SPIRIT TO HEAVEN.

Paper Effigies, Chairs and Horses Burned at Yamun.

Pekin, Nov. 9.—The flames of the procession of paper effigies, chairs and horses burned in the court yard of the yamun to carry Li Hung Chang's spirit to heaven told the crowd of officials who were gathered in the narrow street outside the yamun that the end had come.

Soon afterward a procession appeared bearing a costly coffin of teakwood, beautifully lacquered. This coffin Li Hung Chang took on his trip around the world, and he brought it from Canton when he came to Pekin to settle the Boxer troubles. Since that time it had been kept in a temple here.

The body will be placed in the coffin this morning with the customary rites. On Sunday there will be a ceremonial corresponding to a lying in state, and all the Chinese officials will pay their respects. A separate day will be designated for the ministers of the powers. The interment will be at the birthplace of the deceased statesman, a little village in the Province of Anhui. The time has not yet been decided upon.

DEATHS DUE TO DENSE FOG.

Bodies of Eleven Unfortunates Found in London.

London, Nov. 9.—The fog which has prevailed for several days continues and is disarranging street and railway traffic. At one hospital alone over 200 accident cases have been treated. The bodies of eleven persons whose death is directly attributed to the fog are in the mortuaries. Fifteen persons are missing from the London docks and are supposed to have been drowned. Four bodies have been recovered. Five deaths were reported from the docks Tuesday night. The railway and omnibus companies are suffering enormous losses, estimated at £200,000 a day. The coasts continue fog-bound. At Liverpool a tugboat was sunk. The Geroiston life boat attempted to succor distressed steamships, but was unable to find them. The White Star line steamship Teutonic, which left Queenstown, west-bound, at 12:25 yesterday, is detained by the fog. The American line steamship St. Paul, which left New York Oct. 30, and which has been detained by the fog, arrived here yesterday afternoon. She was signalled off the Lizard at midnight on Tuesday.

HER NERVE SHAKEN.

Dis de Bar Is Denounced by One of of the Witnesses.

London, Nov. 9.—The hearing of the charges against Theodore and Laura Jackson (Ann Odelia dis de Bar) was resumed at the Marylebone police court yesterday before a crowded court room. There were no women in the audience. Laura Faulkner continued her testimony, which was largely a reiteration of that previously given. The most dramatic incident was when Laura Jackson began her customary badgering cross-examination of the witness, who pointed her finger at the female prisoner and vehemently denounced her as the author of her ruin. In spite of its melodramatic tinge, the incident aroused loud applause, whereupon the presiding judge threatened to clear the court. The occurrence seemed to shake the nerve of the female prisoner, and her subsequent conduct of the case was not marked by the ability which she has heretofore displayed.

WHOLESALE SLAUGHTER.

Congo Free State Negroes Killed in Hundreds by Belgians.

London, Nov. 9.—Edgar Canisius, and American who recently retired from the employ of the Congo Free State, confirms the terrible stories told about the conditions of the natives, especially in the portions styled state domain, where strangers are seldom admitted. Canisius, who accompanied Maj. Lothaire, commander of the Belgian troops in the Congo, on his earlier expedition after rubber, says 900 natives were killed during six weeks of that expedition, while a smaller number commanded by a Belgian lieutenant killed 300 natives in three weeks. The district is practically under martial law, on the strength of which such endless barbarities are committed that the natives are thoroughly terror-stricken.

DESPERADO KILLS HIMSELF.

Cut His Throat to Avoid Capture by a Sheriff's Posse.

Poplar Bluff, Mo., Nov. 9. — Frank Reed, a notorious character along the Missouri-Arkansas boundary line, killed himself yesterday to avoid capture after he had forced a sheriff's posse to retreat and after he had been shot twice, once in the head and once through the body. In his battle with the officers Reed had the assistance of a woman named Renster. She was captured by the officers when they came upon Reed's dead body. He had cut his throat. Reed was accused of arson.

INSANITY AMONG INDIANS.

It Is Increasing, Especially Among the Half-Breeds.

Sioux City, Iowa, Nov. 9.—Judge O. S. Gifford of Canton, S. D., has just returned home from Washington. When seen here yesterday he said he expected to have the national asylum for insane Indians at Canton open in two months. The judge is the superintendent and special disbursing agent of the institution, the only one of the kind in the United States. "I now have seventy-five insane Indians in sight," he said, "located at various places all over the United States. I believe insanity is increasing among the reds, especially in cases of half-breeds."

Killed by Boiler Explosion.

Natchez, Miss., Nov. 9. — Alexander Ford, white, and two colored men, names unknown, were killed by a boiler explosion at Clayton's cotton gin, Clayton, La., twenty-five miles from here. Three others were injured.

In a Fit of Jealous Rage.

Springfield, Ill., Nov. 9.—While in a fit of jealous rage Fred Beck, a colored porter in a barber shop here, shot and instantly killed his wife. He afterward went to the county jail and gave himself up.

LIVELY MAN HUNT

ARMED AND MOUNTED GUARDS SENT OUT AFTER ESCAPED CONVICTS.

RUNNING DUEL WITH POSSE

TWO ARE KILLED, TWO WOUNDED AND FIVE CAPTURED UNHURT.

COUNTRY IS BEING SCOURED

WARDEN M'CLAUGHRY SAYS HE WILL CAPTURE EVERY ONE OF THE MEN.

Leavenworth, Kan., Nov. 10.—All the police, deputy sheriffs and farmers in the country adjacent to Leavenworth were on the lookout yesterday for the twenty-six federal convicts who escaped from the stockade Thursday. As a result two convicts have been killed, two wounded and five captured unhurt. The casualties took place in a fight near Nortonville, Kan., and resulted in the death or capture of five men.

The five were discovered in the barn of Fay Welshaar, a quarter of a mile from Nortonville yesterday afternoon. Welshaar went into the barn and was ordered out at the point of guns. He rushed to Nortonville and gathered a wagon load of men who, with revolvers, shotguns and a few Winchesters, hastened to the scene. The convicts saw the men coming and rushed from the barn. They had two shotguns and revolvers. The posse pursued them and a running duel resulted. The convicts were at a disadvantage and their shots had no effect, while at every volley from the posse one of the convicts fell. After two of the others gave themselves up, one being wounded, the other unhurt. The fifth was fully two hundred yards away when a man with a Winchester drew a bead on him and fired. He was evidently hit hard but tried to go on. A volley was then fired and he fell dead. None of the citizens were hurt.

Two of Them Fell

Reports came from various points yesterday of the arrest of men supposed to be fugitive convicts. Two unarmed convicts were found hiding in a ravine on a farm near Jarbalo, Kan., and they surrendered without resistance. The sheriff of Douglass county has captured two convicts at Lawrence, Kan.

Warden McClaughry says he will capture every one of the men. In the districts around the city every road and river crossing that the fugitives might be expected to use is guarded by armed men, the farmers having turned out to earn the $60 reward that will be paid for the return of each convict. Those of the men who are armed are likely to be shot on sight.

BANDIT KILLED.

Attempt to Hold Up a Gambling House in Arizona.

Phoenix, Ariz., Nov. 10.—One bandit was killed and one injured as the result of an attempt by three masked robbers to hold up the gambling house of Deel & Co. last night at Maco, an Arizona border town. The dead bandit has been identified as Will Cravens of Dog Springs, N. Mex. A group of gamesters and loungers obeyed when the desperadoes entered the saloon at a late hour and demanded "hands up." Cravens approached the roulette table and proceeded to fill a bag with the bank roll, amounting to several thousand dollars. E. Ellis whipped out a revolver before the movement was detected by the robbers and Cravens fell dead when he shot. The other bandits were demoralized and fired in disorder. One of them was wounded by another bullet from Ellis' revolver. They reached their horses, which were hitched in the brush, and rode for the mountains, closely followed by a posse which had been hastily organized.

CALLAHAN IS ACQUITTED.

Last Echo in the Cudahy Kidnapping Case.

Omaha, Nov. 10. — The jury in the case of James Callahan, after being out thirty-six hours, brought in a verdict last night finding the defendant not guilty and the prisoner was discharged. This is the last echo in the Cudahy kidnapping, and is practically the second time Callahan has been acquitted of the kidnapping charge. It was remarked that there was now little to prevent Pat Crowe from coming to Omaha. The evidence on which Callahan has been tried would probably prevail in case of Crowe being tried on the same charges, and County Attorney Shields gave it as his opinion that Crowe would now return.

STREET BLOWN UP.

Indianapolis Fire Cisterns Explode—Two Men Fatally Injured.

Indianapolis, Nov. 10. — Two of the city's fire cisterns connected with a hundred-foot tunnel in Arsenal avenue were wrecked by a gas explosion yesterday, and two members of the city's repair gang, William Walker and Emanuel Hall, colored, were fatally injured. The middle of the street for a distance of 100 feet was torn up, and dust, earth, bricks, rubbish and pieces of street were thrown into the air about 100 feet. The explosion was heard half a mile away, and the force was felt in a radius of several blocks.

TAKES A WIFE AT 81.

Octogenarian of Sioux Falls Marries a Second Time.

Sioux Falls, S. D., Nov. 10. — That some people are never too old to get married was again illustrated when Clerk of Courts Kelley issued a marriage license to Henry Herbst, aged eighty-one, and Marie Stangohr, aged fifty-two, both of Sioux Falls. The bridegroom's first wife died years ago. He is in feeble health, and for some time has been boarding at the home of the bride. He is a man of some means.

SURETY COMPANY WILL PAY.

Finance Keeper's Defalcation Larger Than Reported.

Port Huron, Mich., Nov. 10.—It now transpires that the Fidelity and Deposit Company of Maryland, which carried the bond of Charles D. Thompson, the self-confessed defaulting supreme financekeeper of the supreme tent of the Knights of the Maccabees, before being released last July, is still liable for any loss which the order may have sustained by the defalcation. Representatives of the company, it is said, have informed Maccabee officials that the loss will be paid. Therefore, it is now probable that Thompson will be arrested to-day. This was indicated last night from a talk with officials of the order and the arrest will come as a result of the conference of the K. O. T. M. trustees and representatives of the bonding company. The heaviest loss is said to fall upon the Maryland Fidelity company, as Thompson's defalcations since August, when the National Surety company assumed the risk, were comparatively small. It was announced yesterday that Thompson's shortage was $60,000 instead of 57,000. All data concerning the embezzlement is in the hands of the bond companies and orders are being awaited from headquarters.

BOLD ROBBER FOILED.

Attempted Holdup in a Saloon in Montana.

Great Falls, Mont., Nov. 10.—At 9:45 last night a masked robber entered the saloon of Alfred Malmberg in Little Chicago and with the command "hands up!" fired a shot into the ceiling and proceeded behind the bar to rifle the till. The nerve of Edward Erickson, the bartender, which came very nearly costing his life, saved the money, but the robber, badly beaten, and leaving behind his hat, mask and gun, made his escape through the door into the street. The bartender was at first taken back by the boldness of the robber, but he soon recovered his nerve and grabbing a bung-starter, he sailed in. He disarmed the robber and gave him a good beating.

BANK WAS CLEANED OUT.

Mounted Robbers Make a Successful Raid at Scotland, S. D.

Yankton, S. D., Nov. 10—The Bank of Scotland, twenty-eight miles west of Yankton, was robbed yesterday morning of $5,000. The safe was blown open and the entire contents carried away. Two strangers were seen in the vicinity of the bank during the evening. About 2 o'clock yesterday morning an explosion aroused the citizens, who arrived at the bank building in time to see the robbers making their escape on horses. They were pursued but have not been captured. The outer door of the vault was entered after drilling through the lock. Explosives were used on the inner vault door and on two safe doors.

FARMER ARRESTED.

Is Charged With Having Other People's Catle in His Possession.

Redwood Falls, Minn., Nov. 10. — Thomas F. Smith, a well-to-do farmer of Renville county, was arrested by the sheriff of Grant county, S. D., yesterday. Smith is wanted by the South Dakota authorities on the charge of taking more cattle than he was entitled to in a round-up in that county this fall. The round-up was made by employes. The sheriff was armed with a requisition from Gov. Van Sant, but after he brought his prisoner to this city the latter employed an attorney, who has applied to Judge Weber, now holding court here, for the release of the prisoner under habeas corpus. Judge Weber will give his decision today.

Fire Is Extinguished.

Bessemer, Mich., Nov. 10. — The fire in the Mikado mine was extinguished yesterday after a damage of $10,000. Two hundred men are thrown out of employment. The body of Erick Johnson, one of the entombed men, was found clinging to a ladder 150 feet from the surface. William's body has not yet been recovered.

New Agent at Moorhead.

Moorhead, Minn., Nov. 10. — L. S. Stodder, formerly agent for the Northern Pacific at St. Cloud, will succeed E. O. Dilling as local agent for the company. Mr. Dilling has accepted the position of manager of the Fargo office of Edwards, Wood & Co., the St. Paul grain commission firm.

Fatal Jump From Train.

Caledonia, Minn., Nov. 10.—William Osnus, a cook employed at W. S. Moore's railroad camp five miles west, was instantly killed by jumping from a freight train and falling back on the track. His parents live at West Salem, Wis., where he will be taken for burial.

Prominent Wisconsin Man Dead.

Kenosha, Wis., Nov. 10. — Frederick S. Newell, one of the best known manufacturers in the Northwest, died yesterday after an illness of many months. He was fifty-six years of age and during his life fathered many industrial enterprizes.

Young Hunter Shoots Himself

New Richmond, Wis., Nov. 10. — James Gamble, aged thirteen years, shot and killed himself accidentally while hunting prairie chickens near Chinook, Mont. He was an only son of a well known St. Croix county family.

Convict Escapes From Prison.

Bismarck, N. D., Nov. 10.—Edward Lee, a convict at the state penitentiary, escaped from that institution while engaged at building cattle sheds. He is still among the missing. A reward of $50 has been offered for his capture.

Fell One Hundred Feet.

Webster City, Iowa, Nov. 10.—John Enburg, shaft superintendent in one of the Lehigh coal mines southwest of this city, was instantly killed. He fell from the top of the shaft to the platform, 100 feet below.

Charged With Theft.

Billings, Mont., Nov. 10.—Harry Wolstein, agent for the Singer Sewing Machine company, is under arrest charged with the theft of ten sewing machines. He has been held to the district court in default of bonds.

SHOT BY A MANIAC

SISTER SUPERIOR MURDEROUSLY ATTACKED BY DISCHARGED WORKMAN.

MAN FIRED FOR DRUNKENNESS

SEEKS A TERRIBLE REVENGE AFTER ASKING FOR FORGIVENESS.

ARRESTED WITHOUT RESISTANCE

VICTIM OF THE ASSAULT IS MUCH SHAKEN, BUT WILL RECOVER.

Lakewood, N. J., Nov. 10.—A murderous assault startled all Lakewood yesterday morning. Sister Superior Agnes of the Academy of St. Mary of the Lake was shot by John Lawler, a discharged workman. The bullet entered the left breast two inches above the heart.

Lawler had been employed by the sisters at Phillipsburgh, and came here in their employ. He returned on Wednesday from a protracted spree, and the superior met him with full pay service and his discharge. He used threatening and abusive language, but took his dues and left. He sailed to see Sister Agnes and ask her forgiveness, he said, before leaving the place. Accordingly she came down with two of her associates and met him in the reception hall, where he asked her pardon for all offenses. She spoke to him pleasantly and wished him well, and turned to pass through an adjoining room upstairs. He followed her a few steps and the Sisters followed him. He asked for a moment's private interview, and as Sister Agnes turned on the stairs he drew a revolver and fired. The woman fled upstairs, while the two sisters flung themselves on the man who followed her. One of them attempted to secure the revolver, but was thrown off with a badly injured hand. Meanwhile Sister Agnes had come down the back stairway and escaped to a hotel next door. Lawler raged through the rooms in search of her, and a paperhanger who attempted to get the revolver was warned to keep his distance, as there were four more cartridges in readiness. After a time he left the house and went to his room in a cottage near-by, unmindful of the crowd which had gathered, and Officer Crane soon arrived and arrested him without resistance. The victim of the assault will recover.

MARRIED IN QUARANTINE.

Iowa Couple Married in Window at Long Distance by Mayor of Perry.

Des Moines, Nov. 10—Ward McCullough, a brakeman on the Milwaukee railroad, is making the best of a bad case of quarantine for smallpox in a hotel in Perry. He was paying court to his sweetheart, Miss Pearl Hutchins, who was an employe of the hotel, at the time the health officers closed the hotel, because of the discovery of a case of smallpox. He promptly sent for a marriage license and the mayor of the city; and as the mayor stood out in the street at a safe distance from the quarantined house the young couple stood at an open window and were wedded at long range. The mayor said he would dispense with the custom of kissing the bride, the window was closed and the newly wedded pair are spending their honeymoon very quietly. There are fourteen others in quarantine in the hotel.

BEEFSTEAK CROP ALL RIGHT.

Reports to Packers Do Not Indicate a Failure of the Beef Supply.

Chicago, Nov. 10. — A dispatch from Denver, published yesterday, which announced that the Western supply of beef was falling off to an alarming extent, was not viewed seriously by Chicago packers. "Recent reports from our Kansas City house indicate that the supply of beef will be normal for some time to come," said Edwin Swift, vice president of Swift & Co. "Of course it would be impossible to predict what the supply will be next year. The beef supply is like the grain crop —it may fail one year and be plentiful the next year. Our reports, however, do not in any way point to a failure."

FOUND DYING IN HIS CAR.

Express Messenger With Two Bullets in His Heart.

Grand Island, Neb., Nov. 10. — Z. T. Fishnor, a Wells-Fargo express messenger, was found in a dying condition in his car on a St. Joseph & Grand Island train when it arrived at Elwood, Neb. There were two bullet holes just below the heart. The man was unable to tell anything of the cause of the shooting, and it is not known whether he was shot accidentally or in an attempt to rob the car. Everything in the safe was found intact. He will die.

THAT NEW TREATY.

It May Be Completed Some Time Next Week.

Washington, Nov. 10.—Lord Pauncefote, the British ambassador, yesterday had a half hour's talk with Secretary Hay in regard to the preparation of the new Hay-Pauncefote treaty. It is expected that in view of the progress that has been made the convention may be concluded so far as the executive branch of the government is concerned, the latter part of next week.

Morgan Buying Steamers.

London, Nov. 10. —The Berlin correspondent of the Daily Mail gives currency to a report that Herr Albert Ballin of the Hamburg-American line is in London negotiating for the sale of eighteen steamers to J. P. Morgan.

Knocked Out by Maher.

Baltimore, Nov. 10.—Peter Maher put a sudden stop to the championship aspirations of Jim Jeffords of California last night in the second round of what was to have been a ten-round contest. Both stripped as fit as a fiddle.

TOOTH COSTS HIM HIS LIFE.

Broken Jaw, Blood Poisoning and Death Follow Extraction.

Loyal, Wis., Nov. 12. — Kimball J. Berry of this village is dead as a result of a determination to rid himself of an aching tooth, a molar far back in his head, that for nights had well nigh distracted him with pain. He visited a dentist who pulled it. It was extracted with great difficulty, so firmly fastened was it to the jaw, and in the operation the jawbone was fractured. While the accident was discovered immediately after the operation and every possible medical aid given at once, the patient died after several days and in great agony. Blood poisoning resulted from the extraction, and so quickly was the system inoculated that Berry's recovery was beyond human agency.

COLLEGE ATHLETE IS KILLED.

Homer Holland Shot at Mount Ayr, Iowa, by a Gambler.

Des Moines, Iowa, Nov. 12.—Homer Holland, two years ago champion all-round athlete of Drake university, was shot and instantly killed by M. Hunter at Mount Ayr, Iowa.

Hunter is a gambler and Holland had associated with him for some months. They were walking home together and quarreled. Hunter drew his revolver and Holland fell dead at the first shot. Holland held the Iowa State intercollegiate record for the running, hop, step and jump. In the state field meet in 1899 Holland won 23 of Drake's 49 points, winning the meet for Drake.

SMALL SUCCESS AND A FAILURE.

Two Iowa Banks Raided, One With Slight Returns.

Cedar Rapids, Iowa, Nov. 12.—Burglars made an attempt to rob the State Bank of Coggan, twenty-five miles from this city. The outer vault was blown out, but the men evidently were frightened away before the inner vault was forced.

-o-

Sioux City, Iowa, Nov. 12.—The bank at Turin, Iowa, thirty miles south, was raided. The robbers failed to reach the cash chest and only succeeded in securing $50. The building was wrecked.

CHEESE POISONS MANY PEOPLE.

Dozen Brassville Residents Prostrated by Ptomaine Poisoning.

Kenosha, Wis., Nov. 12.—The greatest excitement prevails in Brassville, a suburb of Kenosha. More than a dozen people have been seized with Ptomaine poison as a result of eating cheese which had been purchased from a small store in the neighborhood.

The first cases of the poisoning appeared several days ago, and the doctors of the city have been kept busy in the suburb since. As yet no deaths have been reported, but several of the victims are in a precarious condition.

DEPOT AND GOODS BURNED.

West Superior N. P. Freight Depot Totally Destroyed by Fire.

West Superior, Wis., Nov. 12.—The freight depot of the Northern Pacific railroad at this point was totally destroyed by fire yesterday morning. The loss on building and goods in transit will amount to about $12,000, all fully covered by insurance. How the fire originated is not known, but when it was discovered almost the entire side of the building was ablaze. Temporary quarters are now being arranged and the building will be rebuilt at once.

Billiardists Gathering.

Fargo, N. D., Nov. 12. — The Northwestern billiard tournament will be inaugurated here to-morrow night. Spear of Minneapolis, Clow of St. Paul and Hatley of Duluth arrived here this afternoon. They represent those cities in the league and will all play Peterson of Fargo. Thursday the fun will be transferred to Duluth, where Hatley will play all and then the game will go to the Twin Cities for the wind up. Peterson is being strongly backed here. He won the Florida and Wisconsin state championships, and is regarded as a crack. Hatley money is easy here and combination bets are made of Peterson and Hatley against the Twin City men.

Murder in the First Degree.

Wausau, Wis., Nov. 12. — The Schwantes murder case, which has been on trial for the past two weeks, came to a close Saturday night. At 11 o'clock yesterday morning the jury brought in a verdict of guilty in the first degree. The convicted man is a young farmer living near Spencer, who was charged with burning the home of an aged couple named Klokow last November while the old people were asleep. Argument for a new trial will be made.

Vaccinating Dakota Cattle.

Sturgis, S. D., Nov. 12. — Blackleg among cattle has appeared in a number of places on the Black Hills ranges and a number of deaths have occurred. It is supposed that the disease came from Nebraska. The disease has been here before, and it has been found that vaccination stamps it out. In Nebraska the animal is vaccinated at the root of the tail, while in the Hills the virus is inserted in one of the shoulders.

Soldiers for Philippines.

Helena, Mont., Nov. 12—Seventy men of Companies A and D, Eighth infantry, stationed at Fort Harrison, have volunteered for service in the Philippines. The men will take the place of members of the Eighth ordered home for disability or other cause.

Sudden Summons.

Faribault, Minn., Nov. 12. — Samuel Estes, an old Minnesota pioneer, died suddenly of heart disease yesterday, while sitting in a chair at the Farmers' Home hotel. He was seventy-four years old and leaves three grown children.

Ready for Worship.

Faribault, Minn., Nov. 12.—The new German Lutheran church, a handsome pressed brick edifice which cost $17,000, was dedicated yesterday. The pastor, Rev. H. Schultz, was assisted by Rev. Herman Meyer of St. Paul.

Nothing in It.

Helena, Mont., Nov. 12.—Assays of the material taken from the lead discovered on the federal building site in this city show that there is neither gold, silver nor any other valuable metal in the supposed rich strike.

DAY-TIME HOLDUP

NERVY ROAD AGENTS RANSACK PASSENGERS ON A BUSS IN NORTH DAKOTA.

BOLD JOB YIELDS THEM $400

ROBBERY TOOK PLACE ON THE OUTSKIRTS OF NORTH VALLEY CITY.

NO CLUE TO THEIR IDENTITY

HIGHWAYMEN MAKE A QUICK JOB OF IT AND THEN TAKE TO THEIR HEELS.

Valley City, N. D., Nov. 12.—Within the city limits, and while it was yet day, McReady's bus was boldly held up at 7 o'clock by masked men, who secured about $400 from the seventeen passengers.

The bus had started for North Valley City to meet the west-bound Soo passenger train, and when the outskirts of the town was reached the driver was forced to come to a sudden stop. An attorney named Coombs saw the need for speedy action, and, quietly rolling from his seat beside the driver, he made his way unobserved to the nearest house, where he summoned the police by telephone.

The officers arrived too late, however, for the highwaymen made a quick job of it, and after collecting all the valuables carried by the unlucky passengers, slunk away into the falling darkness and were gone. There is not the slightest clue to the identity of the nervy road agents.

PAYMASTER ROBBED.

Officer of the United States Army Loses $5,000.

Pensacola, Fla., Nov. 12.—Paymaster Stevens of the United States army arrived from Atlanta Saturday and before leaving the city placed in a hand satchel 200 silver dollars and $4,800 in paper money for the purpose of paying the several hundred artillerymen at Fort Barancas and McReel their salaries for the past month. When he reached the fort here he opened his grip and found that all the paper money had been abstracted, and that only the 200 silver dollars remained. Amazement and surprise followed the discovery. The police were instructed to look out for the treasure. Paymaster Stevens thinks some professional pickpocket followed him and relieved him during the trip. He cannot recall a single incident of the trip that would lead to anything on the robbery, and has an idea the money was taken before he left Atlanta.

HELD IN ST. LOUIS.

Longbaugh Will Be Prosecuted on the Charge of Forgery.

St. Louis, Nov. 12.—At a conference held between Chiefs Kiely and Desmond, United States Prosecuting Attorney Rasler, Secret Service Agent Murphy and Pinkerton Agent Chumake it was decided to keep the man supposed to be Longbaugh in St. Louis and prosecute him on the charge of forging the signatures of bank officials to the notes of the National Bank of Helena. His case, and that of the woman, Laura Bullion, will be presented to the federal grand jury on Tuesday for whatever action they may take.

ACCIDENT ON BATTLESHIP.

An Officer and Six Artillerymen Are Killed.

Athens, Nov. 12.—A terrible gun accident occurred Saturday on board the British battleship Royal Sovereign outside of the Astoko harbor. An artilleryman forgot to close the breech before the gun was fired. One officer and six artillerymen were killed outright, the bodies being terribly mutilated, and the captain and thirteen sailors were seriously wounded.

Charged With Forgery.

New York, Nov. 12.—Everett Bodine Latham, who says he is an alumnus of Harvard university and a member of the law firm of Latham & Latham of Detroit, Mich., was arrested yesterday and had to await arraignment on the charge of forgery. The specific allegation made against Latham by Leo A. Agnew, local business manager for the Chicago Record-Herald and president of the Agnew Auto-Mailing Machine company, limited, is that he forged the certification to a check for $5,000 on the Knickerbocker Trust company.

Killed by the Marshal.

Noblesville, Ind., Nov. 12. — Newton Innes was shot and killed by William Mohler, the city marshal of Atlanta, a town twelve miles south of here. Innes had been drinking and when the marshal attempted to send him to jail Innes drew a knife and slashed the officer across the arm. Mohler drew his revolver and fired, the ball piercing Innis' heart. The marshal was taken in custody by the sheriff. He claims self-defense.

Killed in a Church.

Hopkinsville, Ky., Nov. 12. — At a colored church near here yesterday during services Henry Davie quarreled with Abe Allen, with whom he was occupying the same pew. Davie shot at Allen with a pistol. The bullet missed Allen but pierced the heart of Jerrie Wilson on the opposite side of the church and killed him instantly. Davie was arrested.

Fatal Fall of a Farmer.

Black River Falls, Wis., Nov. 12. — Iver Gilbertson of Irving is dead from the effects of falling from a clover huller. He was a resident of this county for thirty-six years and leaves a widow and seven children.

Safecrackers at Lindstrom.

Lindstrom, Minn., Nov. 12. — The Bank of Lindstrom was robbed of a small amount of silver. The robbers could not get into the inner part of the steel safe. The outer door was blown to pieces.

ARMED AT ALL TIMES.

Precautions Against Further Surprises in Samar.

Manila, Nov. 12. — A dispatch from Catabogan, Island of Samar, says that Lukban, the insurgent leader, has sent a message to Gen. Smith declaring that he will not listen to negotiations for surrender until the Americans have withdrawn from the Gandara valley. Gen. Smith has ordered every American soldier in the Island of Samar and the department of Leyte never to be without arms at all times. He is determined there shall be no more surprises, and commanding officers are held responsible. Gen. Smith also directs that scouting must continue indefinitely and that all rice and hemp captured must be destroyed. He considers the capture of Lukban only a question of a short time.

KILLED OUT OF REVENGE.

Non-Union Teamster Is Assaulted and Killed.

San Francisco, Nov. 12.—Otto M. Ekberg, non-union teamster, was killed Saturday night by an unknown man, who struck him on the head with a gas pipe fully two feet long. The only witness to the assault was Mrs. Alma Miller. She does not think she would be able to identify the murderer. During the recent strike in this city Ekberg and another non-union teamster were attacked by twenty or more union teamsters. In defending themselves Ekberg and his friend shot into the crowd, wounding one of the union men slightly. It is thought this occurrence supplied the motive for the killing.

GREAT FIRE LOSS.

Coal Company's Dock and an Immense Trestle Are Consumed.

Pittsburg, Nov. 12. — A fire which originated in a stable of the Monongahela River Consolidated Coal company at Six-mile Ferry, just below Homestead, promises to do much damage. At midnight the immense trestle of the coal company, its dock, covering 200 yards along the river front, are in flames and will be a total loss. Several small shanty boats and tugs moored to the docks have been destroyed, as well as the office of the company with all its contents. The loss cannot be stated at this hour, but before the flames can be extinguished the aggregate will probably reach $100,000.

INVADERS MUST GET OUT.

Kitchener Has a Scheme to Rid Cape Colony of Boers.

London, Nov. 12—In a letter dated Oct. 23 the Cape Town correspondent of the Daily Mail says:

"Lord Kitchener and Sir John Gordon Sprigg (the Cape Town premier) have arranged a scheme for the expulsion of the invaders from Cape Colony. A joint commission of imperial and colonial military chiefs has been sitting here for several days past to draft a scheme. It is understood that this provides for the colony taking a large share in the future of the campaign and contributing largely toward its cost. Apparently a levy of loyalists en masse is the idea involved.

TO HIS NEW POST.

Great Demonstration in Havana for Mgr. Sharretti.

Havana, Nov. 12.—The departure of Mgr. Sbarretti, the retiring bishop of Havana, who left on the steamer Mexico en route for his new post, that of apostolic delegate extraordinary to the Philippines, was the occasion of a great demonstration. Thousands attended at the cathedral to receive a farewell blessing. Numerous religious societies went in procession to the wharf, and the civil military and ecclesiastical authorities accompanied Mgr. Sbarretti on board the steamer.

FILIPINOS WHIPPED.

Their Position Carried by Americans After a Hard Fight.

Manila, Nov. 12.—Advices from Catbalogan, capital of Samar island, reports that Maj. Waller attacked a force of insurgents occupying a strong position at Sojtjon, two three-inch guns being used to shell the rebel stronghold. Throughout the first day the rebels held the place, but yesterday Maj. Waller renewed the attack and, after a desperate engagement, carried the position. Two marines of the attacking force and twenty-six insurgents were killed.

FOUND TO BE FRAUDS.

Operators of a Fake Marriage Bureau Are Convicted.

Kansas City, Nov. 12.—The jury in the case of Charles Miller and Mrs. N. C. Collins, alias Grace Arnold, in the federal court, found them guilty on the two counts in the indictments charging them with operating a fake marriage bureau and employment agency through the United States mails. The couple are said to have operated marriage bureaus in Cleveland and St. Louis.

REVERSES DECISION.

Texas Case in Which $20,000,000 Is Involved.

Fort Worth, Tex., Nov. 12.—An opinion was rendered in the court of civil appeals to the receivership case of the Capital Syndicate company, reversing the lower court in appointing J. V. Goode and W. H. Fuqua receivers. The grounds on which the reversal was had were not stated by Judge Hunter, who handed down the opinion. The amount involved is about $20,000,000.

HERRINGS MAY REMAIN.

Official Decree for His Expulsion From Germany Is Annulled.

Berlin, Nov. 12.—The official decree for the expulsion from Germany of Joseph Herrings, an American war correspondent in the Spanish and Chinese wars, has been annulled. Mr. Herrings will remain in Berlin.

Masked Men Rob a Hotel.

Chicago, Nov. 12.—Two masked men entered a lodging house at 388 South Clark street at 9 o'clock last evening and, with revolvers intimidated the hotel clerk and fifteen guests seated about the office. They got $10.

Two Steamfitters Killed.

Kansas City, Nov. 12.—Two steamfitters were killed and two others seriously injured by the blowing out of a valve in the water pumping apparatus at Schwarzchild & Sulzberger packing plant in Armourdale.

Shun Delays

Shun delays, they breed remorse;
Take thy time, while time is lent thee;
Creeping snails have weakest force—
Fly their faults, lest thou repent thee.
Good is best when soonest wrought,
Ling'ring labors come to naught.

Hoist thy sail while gale doth last
Tide and wind stay no man's pleasure
Seek not time, when time is past;
Sober speed is wisdom's leisure.
After-wits are dearly bought,
Let the fore-wit guide thy thought.

Time wears all his locks before,
Take then hold upon his forehead;
When he flies he turns no more,
And behind his scalp is naked.
Works adjourned have many stays,
Long demurs bring new delays.

Seek thy salve while young the wound,
Older sores ask deeper lancing;
After cures are seldom found,
Often sought, scarce ever chancing.
In the rising, stifle ill,
Lest it grow against thy will.

Drops do pierce the stubborn flint,
Not by force, but often falling;
Custom kills with feeble dint,
More by use than strength prevailing.
Single sands have little weight,
Many make a drowning freight.
—Robert Southwell.

His Little Wretch.

BY IRENE D. CRAIGEN.

(Copyright, 1901, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

The sun shone fiercely down in the factory yard and upon Mr. William Cole, foreman, seated upon a pile of lumber and muttering imprecations as he dug his heel savagely in the hot sand.

"If I ever get back to civilization, confound it, I'll stay there!" he was declaring under his breath. "It's just as the poet fellow says, 'Better fifty years of What's-his-name than a cycle of Carthage.'"

"Who's you talkin' to, Mister?" piped a small voice.

Mr. Billy started and looked up, to find himself confronted by an atom. It was a feminine atom, dressed in a torn pink frock, with a shock of mud-colored hair and the bluest eyes that ever looked out of a dirty face. The atom dragged after it a wagon made of pasteboard, mounted on empty spools, in which reclined with what grace it might a doll formed from a stick of kindling wood wrapped in a bit of calico.

"Hulloa! you little wretch—where'd you spring from?" asked Mr. Billy.

"Over there," responded the atom, nodding vaguely in the direction of a line of hovels, half a mile away. "I play here 'cos we ain't got no yard and it's hot in the road. That's my house you's setting on now."

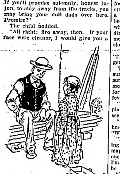
"Oh! it is, is it?" responded Mr. Billy, gravely. "Well, now, see here. I'm not going to have you coming here, where cars are backing in all the time. You'll be killed if you do. Not that you wouldn't be better off in Heaven; but I don't care to have your death on my soul and mind. Now, here's a small fraction of United States currency. Take it and trot along home, and remember that if you spend it judiciously you may some day be as rich as Rockefeller. Don't lose sight of the fact that I'm vested in the panoply of power here. So git!"

The child held out her hand for the penny, and eyed Mr. Billy wistfully. "I don't wanter go home," she said; "she whips me."

"Does, hey?" said the big man, with amiable sternness. "Well, perhaps you need it. Tell you what I'll do, though. If you'll promise solemnly, honest Injun, to stay away from the tracks, you may bring your doll duds over here. Promise?"

The child nodded.

"All right; fire away, then. If your face were cleaner, I would give you a chaste kiss on the cheek just for luck; but, under the circumstances, I think I will forbear."



"Who's you talkin' to, mister?"

Then Mr. Billy went whistling away to his work, and the atom made a palace of the lumber pile and seated Rosabella in state in the drawing-room, while she prepared an imaginary dinner in an imaginary kitchen under some projecting boards. The next day when the youngster appeared Mr. Billy greeted her cheerfully with:

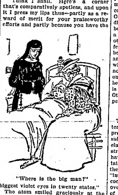
"Well, you little wretch, how are you?"

"I'se well," responded the infant. And, as he drew nearer, the foreman discovered, from the smeary condition of her countenance, that some effort had been made to render it clean.

"Been washing your face, I see," he commented.

"Is yer goin' to kiss me now?" the child demanded.

"Think I shall. Here's a corner that's comparatively spotless, and upon it I press my lips thus—partly as a reward of merit for your praiseworthy efforts and partly because you have the biggest violet eyes in twenty states."



"Where is the big man?"

The atom smiled graciously at the compliment, and as often as she saw Mr. Billy in the days that followed she'd wave a stately hand at him, and he would respond with a "How's my little wretch?" in a big voice that rang through the yards.

One day Mr. Billy was at home with an attack of what he called, for want of a better name, "the durndest fever a fellow ever had," when his small protege came to harm. She had a skipping rope in her hand and was wandering near the forbidden tracks when a freight car of lumber backed into the yard. The end of the rope was caught by the wheels, and as the little one tugged to repossess herself of it her foot slipped under the car and was cruelly mangled. She whimpered for a moment, but the little wretch had been brought up in a stern school, where sympathy was unknown, and directly she lay quiet until one of the men passed near where she was. Then she lifted her voice in a piteous cry.

"Here's the little wretch," she said. "I'se awfully hurted. Please come and get me."

They carried her to the hospital and summoned her mother, and after the surgeons had removed the crushed member and made the patient as comfortable as possible she began to get feverish.

"Where is the big man?" she asked, plaintively. "Why doesn't he come to see his little wretch?"

"I'm here, Martha," said her mother, her surly face for once softening. "Won't I do?"

"No," said the atom, her head tossing on the pillow. "I want my big man! He loves me. He kissed me once, and he gave me this yesterday. I'm his little wretch. Oh! why doesn't he come to me?"

"This" was a penny, the last of a series of such gifts, which had been tightly clasped in the small hand every minute, except when the surgeons were operating.

"Who is this man?" asked the sweet-faced nurse. "If we could find him, her last moments would be easier. Nothing can save her life, but she would be happy if he were by when she passes out."

"I don't know no man!" said the woman, roughly. "She's out of her mind."

"Johnny knows my man," went on the little voice; "he'll go for him. Tell him his little wretch is hurted, and he'll come."

But before Johnny could be found the shadows had lengthened in the ward, and the murmur had grown so weak that the "Oh! why doesn't the big man come to see his little wretch?" could hardly be distinguished. Then, as the sun went down, all was quiet again in the dormitory, and the nurse drew the sheet up over the still, white, beautiful face of the atom.

. . . .

When Mr. Billy heard about it the next day his face paled, and his language was something fearful. "I'd have given my life and all the money I possess to have been with the kid!" he said, brokenly. And then he went over to the hovel and laid a rosebud in the hand that still held the penny.

LIME AND MALARIA.

Investigators Say That Former Partially Averts Latter.

A French scientist, Dr. Roche, thinks that he has discovered an interesting fact in regard to malaria. He declares that the addition of lime to the soil for purely agricultural purposes will reduce the amount of malaria in that vicinity. Another medical man, Dr. Greilet, echoes that opinion, and asserts that the diminution in malaria is proportional to the quality of lime used. Neither of these writers offers any explanation of the alleged discovery or shows why the lime should antagonize the malaria. The old notion that so-called malarial fevers resulted (as the name implies) from bad air, a miasm arising from the soil, and especially from wet places, is still entertained by a number of people. This is a theory which could be reconciled easily with the belief which Drs. Roche and Greilet now cherish. If both of these suppositions are correct no doubt the lime checks the development of the miasmatic vapor in wet soil. But it has recently been suspected that malaria is caused by a micro-organism which gets into the victim's blood, and not by a gas which is inhaled. It is also suspected that this microbe gets into the blood through the bite of an infected mosquito. Now, if this understanding of the case should prove to be right, then it would not be easy to see what lime has to do with suppressing malaria. Perhaps it kills mosquitoes and improves the sanitary conditions of a district in that manner. Or it is remotely possible that the disappearance of malaria which has been noticed in France is confined to a limited region, and is due to some other cause than the use of lime as a fertilizer. The two facts may have been simultaneous, but unrelated. At any rate, it will be desirable to know whether anything of the kind has been noticed in other places where malaria once prevailed and where lime has been employed by farmers. If so, there is doubtless something in the idea. Otherwise, the French cases would appear to be accidental and exceptional.

Cultivation of Coco.

The cultivation of coco, says a writer in the Scientific American, is at present an inviting agricultural pursuit in Trinidad and parts of Venezuela. The coco tree cannot withstand strong sunshine, and the young plants have to be shaded by banana or plaintain trees, and later, when they attain their growth, by tall trees known as "immortels," or the "mother of the coco." These make a kind of canopy over the entire plantation. The fruit of the coco tree is a pod, resembling a cucumber and growing on the trunk, or large branches, where it "looks as though it were artificially attached." The seeds are like large, thick Lima beans embedded in pulp. These form the coco beans of commerce. The processes of curing and drying require much attention.

A Community of Rents.

Some people live in New York, others exist. It is written that a majority of our citizens never owned a home. They live in rented flats or houses all their lives, and do not know the meaning of possession. Many millionaires dwell in hired residences. Their homes are in other states, but they must be in Fifth avenue during the social season, and they must keep house. Philadelphia has been spoken of as a "community of homes." New York is a community of rents. More than half of our people don't know what it is to pay taxes. Their obligations of citizenship are settled by the landlord, who takes everything out in the rent. We are becoming a characterless mob.—New York Press.

She Had Osculated.

"Did you ever kiss a man?" asked the Chicago girl. The Boston girl blushed. "Really, that is so vulgar, you know," she said. "Maybe it is, but did you?" persisted the Chicago girl. "I should hate to think it was a kiss," replied the Boston girl, "but since I have become engaged I have tried osculation."—Chicago Post.

ODD THANKSGIVINGS

Day Set Apart in Early Times for Recreation.

Thanksgiving, though commonly regarded as being from its earliest beginning a distinctively New England festival and Puritan holiday, was originally neither. The first New England Thanksgiving was observed by the Popham colonists at Monhegan, in the Thanksgiving service of the Church of England, "Giving God thanks for safe arrival and many other liberal blessings, says Mrs. Earle in her "Customs of Old New England." Days set apart for thanksgiving were known in Europe before the Reformation, and were in frequent use by Protestants afterward. But the first New England Thanksgiving was not a day of religious observance, but a day of recreation. Edward Winslow writing December 11, 1621, to a friend in England, says: "Our harvest being gotten in, our governor sent four men out fowling so that we might, after a special manner, rejoice together after we had gathered the fruits of our labors. The four killed as much fowl, as with a little help beside, served the company about a week. At which times among our recreations we exercised our arms, many of the Indians coming amongst us, and among the rest their greatest king, Massasoyt, with some ninety men, whom for three days we entertained and feasted, and they went out and killed five deer which they brought and bestowed on our governor, and upon the captains and others." As Governor Bradford recorded that during that autumn "beside water fowle ther was great store of wild turkies," the Pilgrims fared better at their Thanksgiving than their English cousins, for turkeys were not plentiful in England at that date. The Indian visitors joined in the games. These recreations were doubtless competitions in running, leaping, jumping and perhaps stool-box. Probably the women of the colony had little time to join in the recreations as the four women, with the help of one servant, and a few young maids, had to prepare and cook food for 120 hungry men. There is no record of any special religious service during this week of feasting. On February 22, in 1630, the first public thanksgiving was held in Boston by the Bay State colony in gratitude for the safe arrival of ships bearing food and friends. On November 4, 1631, Thanksgiving day was kept again in Boston. From that time till 1684 there were at least 22 public thanksgiving days appointed in Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticut. People do not seem to have celebrated Thanksgiving in the early days. In Connecticut the festival was not regularly observed until 1716. Thanksgiving was not always appointed in early days for the same token of God's beneficence, nor was it always set upon Thursday or for any special season, but the frequent appointment in gratitude for bountiful harvests finally made the autumn the customary time. When the festival of Thanks became annual it assumed many features of the old English Christmas. In the year 1677 the first regular Thanksgiving proclamation was printed. Neither chinaware nor earthenware was plentiful in early days, although earthenware is mentioned in early inventories. The table furnishings consisted largely of wooden trenchers. The time when America was settled was the era when pewter-ware and a set of "garnish" of pewter was a source of great pride to every colonial housekeeper. A universal table furnishing was the porringer, which was usually of pewter. When not in use these were hung by their handles on the edge of the dresser shelf.

Electrical Effects of Thunder Storms.

F. Larroque, in Comtes Rendus, states that, being attracted by the peculiar effect thunder storms at a distance of many miles often have upon persons afflicted with certain nervous diseases long before any instrument now in use indicates any atmospheric disturbance, it occurred to him that Hertzian waves emitted by thunder storms might possibly be transmitted over enormous distances through the middle and higher atmospher by some means analogous to relays. In order to test his idea he constructed a receiver made of a horizontal plate of zinc 40 cm. in diameter, earthed by a thin copper wire containing a spark gap located in a dark cellar. With this device, in June, 1901, he made several series of nocturnal observations. In one of them the manifestations coincided with the blizzard in the Grampians, and in another with the thunder storm which on the night of June 18 was visible over Corsica, the sky being serene in both cases where the observations were made. M. Larroque points out the importance of this character of meteorological observation, but ventures no explanation of the cause of the transmission of Hertzian waves over such enormous distances.—Philadelphia Times.

Cats Are Her Hobby

Rearing the Felines One of the Fads of Lady Marcus Beresford.

Among the "fads" to which English ladies of wealth, leisure and high social distinction are addicted there are few yielding the fair devotees more genuine pleasure and satisfaction than the business of breeding and rearing cats, the specialty of Lady Marcus Beresford. At her home at Bishamsgate, near Egham, Lady Beresford has established what she calls her "cateries," a word which fits the case, perhaps, as well as any other. The establishment is absolutely unique in every feature. Here the happy and fortunate pussies live, move, and have their being amid surroundings fit for queens and princes. One feature of the "catery" is a vine-covered cottage with the rooms decorated and supplied with everything supposed to be needful for the comfort of the most fastidious of felines. There is a small kitchen for cooking food, racks to hold the white enameled bowls and plates used at feeding time, and a large book wherein is inscribed the family history of members of the establishment. By many men cats are regarded as a nuisance, if nothing worse, but by a specially fortunate circumstance Lord Beresford is deeply interested in felines himself, and is in thorough sympathy with his wife's hobby. He is one of the presidents of the London Cat Club, whose annual exhibitions are a popular feature of each recurring season, and some of the prize-winning cats at these shows every year come from Lady Beresford's cat farm.

Reverence for School Teachers.

"Lift your hat reverently when you pass the teacher of a primary school," says old "Pap" Eckert. "She takes the little bantling free from the home nest, and full of his pouts and passions, an ungovernable little wretch, whose own mother admits that she sends him to school to get rid of him. This young woman, who knows her business, takes a whole carload of these youngsters, half of whom, single-handed and alone, are more than a match for their parents and puts them in the way of being useful and upright citizens. And at what expense of toil and weariness. Here is the most responsible position in the whole school, and if her salary were double she would receive less than she earns."—A Kansas Note from Kansas City Star.

Seats of Monarchs

King Edward and Czar Nicholas Have Several Royal Chairs.

Great Britain has no distinctive and exclusive throne. Instead, there are four—the wooden chair, with the slab of Scotch stone, in Westminster Abbey, which has served as the coronation seat of the monarchs of this realm for seven centuries; the sumptuous chair of state in the House of Lords; the chair on which the late queen sat when holding a drawing room in Buckingham palace, and the gilt arm chair at Windsor, in which the sovereign sits to receive letters of credence or recall from foreign envoys, or accord audience to dusky potentates.

The Czar of Russia is even more diversely throned. Each of a dozen chairs of state are at various times styled the Russian throne. The two most remarkable are the chairs of Ivan the Terrible and the one in St. George's Hall of the Winter Palace at St. Petersburg. The former is of turquoises. In the back alone there are 10,000 of these gems. The other chair is of costly woods, with ivory and gold, richly jeweled, and embossed with the imperial eagle. The seat is of ermine, and the arms are ivory tusks.

Further east, in Teheran, the Shah displays himself on a white marble throne, looted from Delhi in 1739. It is of ivory, overlaid with gold, and ablaze with gems, its value being estimated at over £1,000,000.

The First Ironclad.

According to records recently discovered the first ironclad was built in the sixteenth century, but as it proved unmanageable was soon abandoned. In the present century people are trying this medicine and that one in the hope of finding relief from ailments of the stomach, liver and bowels. There is only one medicine that will cure indigestion, dyspepsia, flatulency, biliousness and malaria, fever and ague and that is Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. Try it and you will be convinced.

ARGENTINE NEWSPAPERS.

There Has Been Much Progress of Printing There Since the Jesuits Introduced It in 1705.

One feature of the progress of the South American States is the increase of the number of magazines and newspapers. A recent issue of the Demographic Bulletin of the Argentine Republic gives some details of the development of printing and journalism in that country. The article calls attention to the fact that the first printing office in the region of the River Plate was established in 1705 by some Jesuit fathers at their missions in Paraguay. They at first engraved blocks of wood and later separated wooden types. In 1775 they established the first printing office in the Argentine Republic proper. That was at Cordova. When the Jesuit Fathers were driven out, two years after that, the printing office at Cordova was abandoned, but it was transferred soon after to Buenos Ayres. There it was called the Printing Office of the Foundlings, as its earnings were applied to the support of the foundlings. It was continued until 1824.

The first newspaper in Buenos Ayres was the Mercantile telegraph, which came out in 1801. At that time there was no freedom for the press, but the revolution of 1801 gave an impulse to the publication of newspapers, and from that time on the number kept growing larger.

There are now 739 periodicals published in the country. Of these, 94 are dailies and 256 weeklies; 682 of them are Spanish, 11 are English, 24 Italian and 7 French.

AN HONEST NAME.

An Illinois Statesman Tells a Good Story—Knew His Father's Son Would Not Lie.

The Honorable Alva Merrill of Chillicothe, member for the Twenty-fourth District State of Illinois House of Representatives, tells an interesting story.

Some two years ago Mr. Merrill gave a testimonial stating that Dodd's Kidney Pills cured his rheumatism. This, with Mr. Merrill's portrait, were published in thousands of papers all over the United States.

On the train returning home from Springfield one day last winter were the Honorable Mr. Merrill and several other members. After a time one of them said:

"Merrill, what time do you get to Chillicothe?"

This attracted the attention of an old man who had been apparently awaiting some identification of Mr. Merrill, and as soon as he heard the name he rushed up to his seat and extended his hand, saying:

"You are Alva Merrill, and you saved my life. I was most dead with Lumbago, and in an advertisement I saw your picture and your recommendation of Dodd's Kidney Pills. I knew your father, and I knew his son would not lie, and, therefore, I decided to try the Pills.

"I am satisfied that Dodd's Kidney Pills, and nothing else, have saved my life, and I have been waiting this opportunity to thank you personally, for had I not seen your recommendation I might never have been led to use this remedy; but, thanks to God, through your honest name and the honest medicine which you so heartily recommended, I am still alive.

"I have been watching you since you got on the train at Springfield, and thought I recognized you face as the one I had seen in the advertisement, and as soon as this gentleman called you by name I knew you were the man I had to thank."

Length of a Wink.

The feat of the German scientist in measuring the duration of a wink, calls to mind the story of Lionel Barrymore, who has inherited something of his father's wit as well as his ability as an actor. When Lionel first went on the stage, he got a very small part in a play. He was greatly disappointed, of course, but was glad to be there at all. Speaking of his appearance to a friend the next day, the friend said:

"Why, I saw the play, but I didn't see you."

"You must have winked," replied Lionel.—New York Times.

Great Naval Stronghold.

It is not generally known that within eighty miles of Victoria, and forty-six miles inside Puget Sound, there is a nucleus of a navy yard which is destined to be one of the most important—if not the most important—in the Union. Ten years ago a wilderness, it now teems with life. Its situation is ideal. It is absolutely land-locked, its shortest approach being a narrow, winding channel six miles long, heavily fortified and mined. Its longest approach is fourteen miles, with an entrance so narrow an enemy's ship would stand no chance of getting through.—Harper's Weekly.

$100 Reward $100.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of Testimonials.

"One of the most remarkable men in this country," declared a Philadelphia man, the other day, "is the Rev. Dr. Russell H. Conwell, pastor of the Baptist Temple, Philadelphia. He told me not long ago that he had either lectured or preached every evening, with possibly a dozen exceptions, during all of the past sixteen years. He has delivered the lecture he calls 'Acres of Diamonds,' more than 2,500 times. In addition to his duties as pastor of the largest Baptist church in Philadelphia, he is president of a college attached to the church, in which more than a hundred young men are educated by means of money raised entirely through Dr. Conwell's efforts."—New York Times.

HUNTING WILD HOGS.

EXCITING TIMES AT "PIG-KILLIN'S" IN MOUNTAINS.

These Wild Porkers of Tennessee Have Degenerated from Domesticated Sires of European Origin—Animals Long and Lank Like the Hunters.

Sportsmen are not accustomed to think of wild hogs as game that may be hunted in the United States, but the fact remains that there are thousands upon thousands of the animals wandering through certain sections of the South. They are as wild as deer and well nigh as formidable as the bear. For some reason the hunting of pigs has not yet come to be generally classed as sport by Southern hunters, probably for the reason that for a good share of the year the flesh of the wild hog is not good for food. But such is the case likewise with the deer, the squirrel, and in fact every sort of game, and little by little hunters are coming to wait for the pig to grow fat on the mast of the forest and then to hunt him for both sport and food. The home of the American wild hogs begins in the southern Appalachian Mountains and extends westward to what is known as the "Delta," the name locally applied to the low bottom lands of the Mississippi from Memphis to the Gulf. One finds them in the forests and mountains of North and South Carolina, Kentucky, Tennessee, Georgia and in the lowland forests of Arkansas, Mississippi and Louisiana. Like the wild horse of the West the hog is a native of the American Continent, but has degenerated from domesticated sires of European origin. It is hard for us to remember this about the horse, yet it is true that all the herds which roamed the plains of the West, set the American youth wild to handle the lasso, and demoralized trainers when captured, were the offspring of ancestors introduced from Europe after the discovery of America. So with the hog. Its ancestor was, no doubt, fat and contented as any well-organized pig should be. It voyaged across the ocean with the early colonists and then raised a family whose offspring has degenerated until the sire would never guess them to be his kin. It was in the mountain region that the hog first became wild. Settlers moved into the Southern mountains from nearly all of the Atlantic settlements. There were two essentials in the domestic economy of the mountaineer. These were pigs and corn. The former were killed and salted, to be eaten in the hot months. They made meat and fat and butter. With pork and corn meal a family could live out its natural life. So pig raising prospered in the mountains. Sometimes the animals were penned up, but more often they were allowed to run wild and gather the mast which in autumn covered the ground about mountain forests. Gradually they began to grow fearful of the pen and of man, and little by little the broods which were born in the forests and ran wild during the summer months became harder to round up when killing time came. Now and then one especially wild would escape and never be caught. Pigs of this sort would naturally be the wildest, and their fear of man would be contributed with double force to their offspring. So the wildness of the breed increased with each generation. They multiplied rapidly. Of course, some of the wild ones would be killed each year, but the numbers were not appreciably diminished in that way. And what a change came over the pig as it dropped away from the ways of its cultured ancestors and became once more a savage! Its short hair became long and coarse. Mountain climbing is a great reducer of obesity and affected the pig as the stout man hopes to be affected by "anti-fat." His ribs became visible and he was long, lean and lank, like a mountaineer or a clay-eating "cracker." Running develops long legs, and the pig, whose ancestor had possessed legs which barely served to carry it around the limits of the pen, stood as high as a hound and ran like a frightened deer. All this, of course, has fitted the pig to exist in his new capacity as a wild animal.—Philadelphia Times.

How to Weaken Tea.

All careful housekeepers should remember that when it is necessary to dilute strong tea it should be done with water at the boiling point. The poor flavor of tea, made strong at first and then reduced, such as is too often served at receptions and "at homes," is usually caused by the addition of hot, not boiling water, to the first infusion. A lesson in this matter may be had from the Russians, who serve the most delicious tea in the world, and who prepare it first very strong, making it almost an essence of tea. This is diluted to the strength wished, with water kept boiling in the samovar. This water is not allowed to boil and reboil, but is renewed as needed. Freshly boiled water is insisted upon by all connoisseurs in tea-making.

Japan's Early Relations to Europe.

Dr. Murakami of Tokio university, was commissioned by the Japanese government two years ago to search in Europe for evidence of the relations between Japan and the European powers before the former country was closed to foreigners. Dr. Murakami has accordingly searched the archives of the Vatican, the Italian and Dutch governments, and those of every city at all likely to contain documents relating to Japan. He has been for several months past working in London, and has been especially pleased to find at the India office two Japanese manuscript documents of the time of James I.

SURGERY BY STEAM.

Pulling a Man's Arm Into Position in the Maine Woods.

A surgical operation performed under necessity by an amateur in the Maine woods was quite as remarkable as the operations of city specialists, who are provided with almost perfect implements and elaborate conveniences. The accident was a dislocated shoulder, and the extempore surgeon's outfit was of a find hitherto unused in professional practice. It is described by a writer in the Lewiston Journal. Old Sabattus was not an Indian, as the nickname implies, but a Yankee guide. One autumn he was left on a steamboat at one of the upper landings on Moosehead lake while the engineer went ashore with some guests. A man named Meservey came aboard, and in fooling around the boat managed to fall into the fire-pit and put his shoulder out of joint. Here was a dilemma. The other members of the party would not be back for half an hour, and the injured man was in great pain. The guide was a man of expedients. He got a rope and tied his patient securely to a post. Then he tied another rope around the man's wrist and fastened the loose end of it to a pulley of the engine. He managed somehow to turn on steam and the pulley began to wind up the rope. It drew the arm out tight in beautiful shape, and presently the joint snapped back into its socket. Then Sabattus jumped around to shut off steam, while the pulley kept on winding. "How does it go? I don't know where it is!", gasped the guide, excitedly. "I can't stop the blamed thing!" And the pulley meanwhile was slowly but surely pulling the patient to pieces. His eyes were sticking out of their sockets, and he screamed and gasped for breath. Sabattus danced around like a wild man, not knowing what to do, when he happened to spy a hatchet lying near, and jumping for that, he cut the rope. Some years afterward a lot of summer company arrived at Greenville. Sabattus was there, too, and presently a distinguished looking man, one of the newcomers, went up to him and said with a meaning smile. Aren't you the man who practices surgery by steam?" Sabbatus admitted that he was "that same feller."

CAVOUR AS A PAGE.

Emphatic Way in Which the Boy Resented an Indignity.

In the recently published reminiscences of the Count of Reiset, long French ambassador to Italy, is found the following anecdote of the young Cavour at the time when he was for a brief period at the court of Victor Emmanuel: "The pages, as is known, served the king, the queen, the princes and princesses of the blood at royal fetes. Beyond this they were forbidden to render any service. All these lads belonged to the noblest families of the land. One evening little Camillo Cavour entered the throng room, bearing a tray covered with ices, which he offered to the king, the queen and princes of the blood. But, as he was going back with some ices still on the tray, a man of high rank stepped up to the young Camillo and snatched an ice from the tray, which the page was holding with both hands. Cavour drew himself up, glared at this nobleman who had so signally failed in etiquette, and raising the porcelain tray as high as he could, let it smash in a thousand pieces on the floor. To the chamberlain's rebuke for clumsiness, he replied that he had done it on purpose, as the only possible retort to the indignity which he had suffered." The affair was the immediate cause of Cavour's leaving the court for the military school. Thus early, concludes the Count de Reiset, did the man "whom Victor Emmanuel feared terribly" assert himself.

New Style of Necktie Holder.

Numerous devices for securing a made-up tie in its proper position in relation to the collar are already in use, but there is always an opening for a novelty for a good thing in this line. The latest idea for this purpose is nothing less than a pair of spring jaws which grip the head of the collar button and hang on until made to let go. The foundation in the case of a bow tie is formed of two thin plates of steel and from the inner ends of the plates two sections are cut and bent backward toward each other. The plates being hinged together and provided with a stiff spring, which throws the ends backward, the tendency of the jaws is to tightly grip the shank of the button when they have once been spread apart and forced over the head. The same idea may be applied to the four-in-hand and other ties. A Pennsylvania man is the inventor.

Victim of Scotch Logic.

A Highland hotel keeper was one day having a squabble with an Englishman in the lobby of the hotel about his bill. The stranger said it was a gross imposition—he could live cheaper in the best hotel in London. The Highland landlord replied: "Oh, nae doot, sir, nae doot; but dae ye no' ken the reason?" "Not a bit of it," replied the stranger hastily. "Weel, then," replied the host, "as ye seem to be a sensible bit callant, I'll tell ye. There's 365 days in the Lunnin hotel keeper's calendar, but we have only three months here. Dae ye understand me noo, fren'? We maun mak' hay in the Hielan's when the sun shines, for it's unco seldom she dis't."

It has been observed that alternating inclosed arc lamps have the peculiar property of causing mahogany furniture to appear to be covered with a bluish-white dust.

SYRUP OF FIGS IS AN EXCELLENT FAMILY LAXATIVE—IT IS REFRESHING TO THE TASTE AND ACTS PLEASANTLY AND GENTLY. IT ASSISTS ONE TO OVERCOME HABITUAL CONSTIPATION PERMANENTLY.

With many millions of families Syrup of Figs has become the ideal home laxative. The combination is a simple and wholesome one, and the method of manufacture by the California Fig Syrup Company ensures that perfect purity and uniformity of product, which have commended it to the favorable consideration of the most eminent physicians and to the intelligent appreciation of all who are well informed in reference to medicinal agents.

Syrup of Figs has truly a laxative effect and acts gently without in any way disturbing the natural functions and with perfect freedom from any unpleasant after effects.

In the process of manufacturing, figs are used, as they are pleasant to the taste, but the medicinally laxative principles of the combination are obtained from plants known to act most beneficially on the system.

THE NEWS,

By John W. Eastman.

The Crookston Times is authority for the statement that Senator Grindeland will withdraw from the congressional race in favor of Halvor Steenerson, of Crookston. In our opinion Mr. Grindeland is one of the strongest men the Republicans could nominate and we hope the Times' story is not true.

Roseau is at last to have a railroad. According to an announcement of McKenzie & Mann an extention will be made from Warroad west to a point near the North Dakota line in Kittson county. The promoters of the new railroad are also considering extensions south into Marshall county.

The Crookston Journal quotes an Iowa farmer as saying corn can be raised in the Red River Valley. Of course it can, and if there are any who doubt it let them come up to Thief River Falls. There are a number of fields of corn around here, which will compare favorably with any field in Iowa.

Indian Commissioner Jones takes a practical view of the situation in Minnesota and North Dakota, and will recommend in annual report that all Indian reservations be wiped out of existence. Concerning this portion of the Red Lake reservation, he says: "On the Red Lake reservation alone there are 200,000 to 300,000 acres of excellent farm land lying useless. White settlers cultivate their land right up to the reservation line, while just beyond all is inactivity and neglect. I believe it would be much better to open up those lands and surround the Indians with white men. If the Indians do not have enough to run their own farms, they could work on the white men's farms near."

VOL. XVIII. THIEF RIVER FALLS, MINN., THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 21, 1901. NUMBER 46.

TO THE RED LAKE

G. N. to Build on Extension from Solway.

An announcement was made by the Great Northern last week that will be of great interest to the state at large, and particularly so to the northern portion as it will aid materially in hastening the development of the Red Lake region.

It is to the effect that a contract has been let for an extension of the Great Northern road to be built from Solway on the Duluth line between Crookston and Bemidji to a point on Red Lake connecting with the Red Lake Transportation company's road now being operated from the lake to Nebish.

The contract has been let to A. Guthrie & Co., and it is well known that President Hill is behind the firm, Mr. Guthrie having for years been connected with the management of the Great Northern system.

The contract calls for work to commence within ten days, and this work together with that being done on the iron range extension, and the new Canadian Northern line to be built through Roseau county, will add 280 miles to the Minnesota rail lines.

Sutton Indited.

Judge Watts adjourned court at Warren Saturday. The calender for Marshall county was cleared with the exception of the J. J. Sutton assault case. Mr. Sutton was indited by the grand jury and when araigned he asked for more time in which to get ready for trial, as Judge Watts will have no leisure time after this week before the latter part of January, to try the case, it will be called for Jan. 29. Mr. Sutton was continued under the same bail that he gave in the justice court.

Can't Kick.

As long as the shortage in eggs is due to the fact that the farmers are eating more of them, no one has any right to complain. It shows that the farmers are at the top notch of prosperity. In the good old days the farmers's family ate sparingly of the products that brought big prices in the market. —Minneapolis Tribune.

RIDE ON A MOOSE.

Minneapolis Railroad Man Takes a Flying Trip.

H. Parkhurst, an employe of the Great Northern railway, residing at Minneapolis, is the first hunter of the season to enjoy a ride on a moose's back, according to a dispatch from Cass Lake to the Minneapolis Times.

Mr. Parkhurst, in company with D. F. Buckingham, who is employed by the Milwaukee road at St. Paul, was hunting about ten miles north of Cass Lake last Monday when they met a large moose. Both the nimrods have the greatest respect for the game laws. Not because of any sensation of fear, but because they knew it was not the open season for moose, the men dropped their rifles and climbed convenient trees.

The moose charged the tree in which Parkhurst had taken refuge and was butting it furiously when the hunter dropped upon his back. Parkhurst then enjoyed rapid ride through the woods, losing his hat and having his clothes torn, and his person severely bruised by brushing against branches of trees.

When the moose came in sight of the lake, Parkhurst would have been glad to dismount, but was unable to do so. The moose plunged into the lake, and the hunter gracefully dropped from the back of his steed and swam ashore.

At last accounts, Mr. Parkhurst had suffered no ill effects from his ride and bath.

Says They're All Right.

The citizens of Thief River Falls are to be congratulated upon the electing of capable men to office. That city now probably has one of the most competent sets of officials that ever received official honors at the hands of progressive and enterprising citizens.—Eastern Marshall County News.

The Fertile Journal publishes George Knonschnabel's predictions on the weather for the coming winter and the grounds for his conclusions. He says we will have but little, if any, snow, for the reason that the rabbits still retain their gray coats instead of becoming white as they do in case of coming snow. It is sure to be cold for the muskrats are building larger and thicker houses than they have for some years in the past.

BAD FREIGHT WRECK.

Great Northern Train Crashes Into Cars on a Sidetrack.

Barnesville, Minn., Nov. 17. — The Great Northern freight train, No. 4, collided last evening with another freight, No. 61, at Baker station, nine miles west of here. No. 61 was sidetracked, with the rear end extending over the main tracks, when No. 4, west-bound, was seen approaching. The train was flagged, but Engineer Engles was unable to come to a stop in time to avert a crash. Three cars were smashed, only one of them containing merchandise, and the others empty. Damage estimated at $1,000, including damage to engine. No one was injured.

OVER HIS BODY.

Robbers Shoot Saloonkeeper and Loot the Place.

Rhinelander, Wis., Nov. 17. — George Smith was shot and robbed in his saloon at Tomahawk Lake, seventeen miles north of here. The robbers, two in number, both wearing masks, told Smith to throw up his hands. Instead of obeying Smith struck one of the men with his fists, knocking him down. The other then shot the saloonkeeper, the bullet striking his right wrist, going through into his stomach. Smith fell, and the men then looted the place, securing $400. Smith is still alive.

LIFE SAVERS LOST

BOAT CAPSIZED BY TREMENDOUS SEAS WHILE BEING LAUNCHED.

NINE MEMBERS OF CREW DROWNED

MANY CASUALTIES REPORTED ON THE COAST OF UNITED KINGDOM.

LIST OF DEAD REACHES 150

MOST DISASTROUS STORM THAT HAS OCCURRED IN MANY YEARS.

London, Nov. 16.—While the Caister life-boat was being launched at Yarmouth yesterday she was struck by the tremendous seas and overturned. Boatmen on shore dragged out three of the crew as the boat was lifted with successive waves. The other nine members of the crew were drowned. The life boat was manned to go to the assistance of a smack in distress. The heavy seas made it extremely difficult to launch the boat. At last when she had been got afloat her crew failed to put her about quick enough and she was dashed violently ashore, capsizing in shallow water, where the crew were held prisoners under their own boat.

Lloyd's agent at Kingstown, Ireland, telegraphs that the revenue cutter Flora has been Totally Wrecked. The crew was saved. A dispatch from Saltburn, Yorkshire, says a barque has been wrecked off that place. Eight of the crew were drowned.

Innumerable minor casualties continue to be reported on all the coasts of the United Kingdom, marking the storm as the most disastrous that has occurred in many years. Snow is falling in many parts of the country.

An incomplete list of the persons who have lost their lives by drowning during the storm already aggregate 150.

Much wreckage of unidentified vessels are still being thrown up. Altogether it is known that some vessels have been wrecked along the British coasts, thirty-four of these have been absolute wrecks, involving, it is believed, a loss of more than one hundred and eighty drowned. The Yarmouth life boat disaster alone leaves forty-four fatherless children.

DISASTER AT SEA.

Vessel Blown to Atoms a Thousand Miles From Atlantic Coast.

Philadelphia, Nov. 16. — A terrible ocean disaster occurred in the eastward track of transatlantic steam craft on the night of Nov. 7, about 1,000 miles off the coast of the United States. A large unknown steamship caught fire and was blown to pieces by an explosion soon afterward. The flames were seen to shoot hundreds of feet above the blazing craft, which sank, however, before assistance could be rendered. The first news of the disaster was brought to this port by Capt. Ferlin of the Australian steamship Etelka, whose vessel was docked at Marcus Hook while he came up to Philadelphia to report the disaster to his agent, Alfred Turner.

DARING RESCUE OF SAILORS.

Nine Men, Almost Frozen to Death, Taken Off Waterlogged Steamer.

Port Hope, Mich., Nov. 16. — In the furious northwest gale yesterday the steamer Emerald became disabled by the breaking of her machinery when off this port. Deprived of her motive power, the boat fell into the trough of the sea and soon water-logged. Signals of distress were hoisted and the life saving crew from the Point au Barques station put out to the rescue. The heavy sea running made the task of taking off the crew of nine men a desperate one, but all were safely gotten aboard the life-boat. All were thoroughly benumbed by the freezing spray which dashed over the wreck, and would have been unable to hold out much longer.

CRUEL HUSBAND.

Mrs. Lincoln, Former Dressmaker for Mrs. McKinley, Applies for a Divorce.

Columbus, Ohio, Nov. 16.—Mrs. Isabelle C. Lincoln, dressmaker for Mrs. McKinley while the late president was governor of Ohio, has applied for divorce from George P. Lincoln on the ground of cruelty. Mrs. Lincoln says she found the gate chained one night when she came back from seeing Mrs. McKinley about work and alleges that Lincoln threatened to kill Gov. McKinley if he ever came to the house. Mrs. Lincoln was prostrated over this incident, and says her husband nearly strangled her by pouring raw whisky down her throat in an effort to restore her to consciousness.

BLOODY DEED ON A BOAT.

Man and Woman Are Murdered for Their Money.

Nashville, Tenn., Nov. 16.—A special from Tiptonville says that Nat Davis and a woman living with him on a shanty boat have mysteriously disappeared, and it is believed they have been murdered for the money Davis is known to have had on the boat. The boat was found a short distance below town on the Mississippi river, and appearances indicate there had been a desperate struggle. The bow of the boat was thickly sprinkled with blood.

MAKING UP TO RUSSIA.

Sultan of Turkey Sending Special Mission to the Czar.

New York, Nov. 16.—The Odessa correspondent of the London and New York Times says an extraordinary mission from the porte to St. Petersburg will leave Constantinople this week. It will be headed by a dignitary who is a close intimate of Sultan Abdul Hamid, and who will be accompanied by the sultan's secretary and one member of the Russian embassy at Constantinople.

HIS LIFE THREATENED.

Great Falls Man Must Pay $500 if He Wants to Live.

Helena, Mont., Nov. 16. -- Edward Reichle, president of the American Malting and Brewing Company of Great Falls, last night received a second anonymous letter within a week demanding a deposit of $500 at a certain point on the railroad track or his life will be taken by a rifle ball. Reichle regarded the first letter as a joke, but is now thoroughly alarmed, and has demanded police protection. The first letter came by mail, but the second was placed under his door. Both were written in a woman's hand. This is the second case of a like character in Great Falls within a month.

CUSTER'S WAGONS.

Ammunition and Freight Wagon Taken From the Bed of a Creek.

Dickinson, N. D., Nov. 16.—A portion of an ammunition wagon and a freight wagon which were left by the memorable Custer expedition, which passed nine miles south of here in 1876, have been taken from Davis creek by R. Finger of this place. The point where the relics were discovered has been known for many years as the Custer crossing. Just the tops of the wheels led to the discovery, and it took some time and much engineering to extricate them, so thoroughly were they imbedded in the creek's bottom. The names of the soldiers who composed this fated company are cut in the rocks near the creek.

ANOTHER IOWA BANK ROBBERY.

Robbers Blow Open the Safe With Nitro-Glycerine.

Le Roy, Iowa, Nov. 16. — The First National Bank of Le Roy was broken into Wednesday night and $2,000 taken. The robbers effected an entrance through the door and exploded the safe with nitro-glycerine. The bank building was wrecked and the entire contents of the safe scattered about. No one was awakened in time to see any of the robbers. This makes the eighth bank robbery in Iowa within a month.

BRUTAL BRAKEMAN.

He Kicks a Youth Who Was Stealing a Ride.

Fergus Falls, Minn., Nov. 16.—Frank and Earnest Henderson, two young men who have been working in Dakota, came to this city yesterday and Earnest fainted in a store and was taken in charge by the authorities. Frank states that they were stealing a ride on a Great Northern train. A brakeman put them off and kicked Earnest in the stomach. The city physician says that the injury is very serious.

SHOT ON HIS WAGON.

Ashland (Wis.) Farmer Killed by a Deer Hunter in the Woods.

Ashland, Wis., Nov. 16.—Alex Olson, a well known homesteader, started for Ashland from his home at White River yesterday afternoon with the carcasses of four deer in his wagon. He was found dead shortly after lying by the roadside with a wound back of the ear, which penetrated the skull and resembles a bullet wound. It is thought that Olson was accidentally shot from his wagon by a deer hunter.

TWENTY-SEVEN HORSES BURNED.

Farmer Severely Scorched in Burning Livery at Watertown, S. D.

Watertown, S. D., Nov. 16.— Oscar Vaux's livery barn burned to the ground last evening. There were twenty-seven horses in the barn, none being saved. Some of the horses were farmers' horses, placed there during the day. L. Rose, a farmer, was taken from the burning building severely burned, but he will recover. The origin of the fire is unknown. The loss is heavy with some insurance.

POLICE QUELL COLLEGE RIOT.

Fargo Students Fight Over Possession of Banner.

Fargo, N. D., Nov. 16. — After the football game Wednesday afternoon between the Fargo college and the Fargo high school teams, it is alleged some college boys forcibly captured the high school banner. The high school boys went to the college and secured its return. Several scrimmages are reported and some damage was done to the college building. The police were called.

NOT A WIFE-MURDER.

Attending Physician's Testimony Upsets Prosecution's Theory.

Sioux City, Iowa, Nov. 16. — In the case of alleged wife murder against Ben McKnight, which has been on trial here all week, a surprise was sprung by the defense when Dr. R. B. Raleigh, who attended the woman before her death, testified that her death was due to blood poisoning from an ulceration on the foot and not from the beating and stamping said to have been administered by the husband.

Filled Lamp With Gasoline.

Grand Forks, N. D., Nov. 16. -- Fire occurred in the residence of Mrs. Snow. She had gone to an entertainment, leaving her six-year-old girl in charge of a neighbor's daughter. During the evening the lamp burned low and the girl and a young man friend undertook to fill it. They mistook the gasoline can for the kerosene can, and there was an explosion and a blaze. The fire department was called out and saved the upper story of the building, but the lower story was ruined and most of the furniture destroyed.

Cleaned Out by Fire.

Milwaukee, Nov. 16.—A special from Sturgeon Bay says fire cleaned out the Pankratz Lumber company's yard last night. The loss is estimated at $40,000; covered by insurance.

Big Buck Weighs 210 Pounds.

Butternut, Wis., Nov. 16. -- Several big bucks have been brought in for the first week of the hunting season, the largest specimen being captured by Peter Decker on the Chippewa. It weighs 210 pounds.

Saloonkeeper Slashed.

Aberdeen, S. D., Nov. 16.—Dan Hudler, a saloonkeeper, was assaulted yesterday afternoon by Ed Shelley, who inflicted several severe wounds on Hudley with a large knife. Shelly was arrested.

MISS STONE ALIVE

BRIGANDS' LAIR, WHERE SHE IS HELD CAPTIVE, IS LOCATED.

HER PROSPECTS ARE BRIGHT

CAPTORS DO NOT INSIST UPON ENTIRE RANSOM BEING PAID.

RUFFIANS WILL NOT HARM HER

DO NOT DARE TO INVITE RELENTLESS PURSUIT WHICH WOULD FOLLOW.

Washington, Nov. 16.—Miss Ellen M. Stone, the American missionary, is not only alive and well, but the brigands' lair, where she is held captive, has been located. This good news came to the state department yesterday from C. M. Dickinson, the United States diplomatic agent at Sofia, Bulgaria, who is negotiating with the brigands for the release of Miss Stone and her companion, Mme. Tsilka. Mr. Dickinson also sent information about the chances of securing the freedom of the two women, which is of such an encouraging character that the prospects that they will soon be retored to their friends appear to be very good indeed. The news that Miss Stone is alive was all the more gratifying on account of the report that came from Europe yesterday that she had been murdered by her captors. While all Danger to Her Life cannot be regarded as having disappeared until she has left the custody of her captors, Mr. Dickinson's advices that the place of her captivity has been located lead to the conclusion that the brigands would not dare to kill her and thus invite relentless pursuit, with death as the certain result of capture. The fear that the brigands would resent active pursuit by doing away with Miss Stone and Mme. Tsilka has prevented this government from insisting that the abductors be run to earth. The brigands probably know this and are taking advantage of it in their negotiations.

Mr. Dickinson says in his dispatch that the place where Miss Stone has been located is In Bulgarian Territory. It is probably not far from Sofia, as there has been little delay in the exchange of communications between the brigands and their agent, who is negotiating with Mr. Dickinson. He is not trying to drive a bargain with the brigands as to the amount to be paid for Miss Stone's release. The state department is willing to hand over the full amount of the ransom fund collected in this country, which now aggregates $60,000, believing that humanity demands the prompt release of the American missionary and the Bulgarian woman who is with her. It is understood, however, that the brigands have not demanded the entire ransom fund, and that the difficulties in securing the release of Miss Stone has arisen from other causes. At this time the prospects of her liberation are brighter than ever before.

WHEN GRAVEYARDS YAWN.

Wealthy Farmer of Indiana Is Hanged at Midnight.

Michigan City, Ind., Nov. 16.—Joseph D. Keith, a wealthy farmer, was hanged in the state prison here at midnight for the murder of Nora Kifer. He was taken from his cell at 12:10 a. m., and led to the scaffold. At 12:12 the drop fell, and in seven and one-half minutes the physicians pronounced him dead, when his body was cut down.

Keith confessed that he committed the crime. He had the prison chaplain with him from 8 o'clock yesterday evening to the time he was removed from the cell. He ascended the scaffold singing "I'm going home to die no more," and finished the song just before the drop fell.

The confession covers many closely written pages of typewritten matter, and is addressed to Keith's wife. He said that Nora Kifer annoyed him much, and, fearing her much, he put the girl out of the way for the sake of his wife.

Keith was a wealthy farmer in Warrick county. On April 3 he sent Miss Kifer a note asking her to be at an old bridge that night. This is the last time she was seen alive. Her body was found some time afterward in a creek near Evansville, Ind. Later evidence was discovered that she was murdered near Keith's home and that the body was placed in a well, from which it was taken by Keith when he became alarmed at threats of search, and was thrown into a creek many miles from the well. The case went to the supreme court, which, on Nov. 1, affirmed a death sentence.

Kept Marriage Secret Nearly a Year.

Winona, Minn., Nov. 16. -- The announcement has been made of the marriage of Miss Pearl Boynton and Harry C. Jeffery, which took place on Jan. 28 last at Fountain City. The groom was at that time employed in the Northwestern shops in this city, but has now accepted a position in Minneapolis, and he and his wife have just gone there to reside.

Bent on Suicide.

St. James, Minn., Nov. 16. -- A man was found in the stock yards with a gash in his throat. He was not dead and medical aid was summoned. When he was revived he gave his name as William Gillen. He swallowed laudanum first and then slashed his throat with a butcher knife. He is a farm hand and came here from Adrian a few weeks ago.

Mine Development During Winter.

Iron Mountain, Mich., Nov. 16.--The Quinnesec mine, owned by Corrigan, McKinney & Co. of Cleveland, stopped shipping yesterday for the season and laid off fifty surface men. More underground development will be done this winter to prepare for the output next season, and it is said that the men discharged will be taken on again in a few weeks.

Fatal Disease Among Cattle.

Springfield, Ill., Nov. 16.—During the past few days many reports have been received by the board of live stock commissioners regarding a new and fatal disease among cattle. The board declares it "corn stalk disease."

Prison Instead of Lynching.

Clay Center, Neb., Nov. 16.—Peyton Denton, the negro who attempted to criminally assault Mrs. Dr. Hale last summer, and who narrowly escaped lynching, has been sentenced to fifteen years in the penitentiary.

Thanksgiving Fairy

The night before Thanksgiving I found mamma sitting alone by the window in the dark, and when I put my cheek against hers it was all wet, and I said out quick:

"Oh, pretty mamma, what is the matter?" and cried, too.

"I was thinking about your uncle Jefferson," she answered, then she dried her eyes and mine. "He will be the only one who will not be here at our Thanksgiving dinner."

"But why don't he ever come?" I said.

"Three years ago he had a misunderstanding with your father," said mamma.

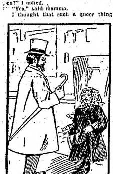
"That means a quarrel," I said. "What did he quarrel about?"

"The pronunciation of a word," said mamma.

"The way a word ought to be spoken?" I asked.

"Yes," said mamma.

I thought that such a queer thing to quarrel about, but I did not say anything, for, of course, big folks know best.



"MY POOR CHILD, WHAT DO YOU WANT?"

"It was on Thanksgiving Day three years ago," said mamma, "and he has never been in the house since."

"He must be very cross and bad," I said.

"No, indeed, Hilda," said mamma. "He is a splendid doctor, and very kind to the poor. He is ready to go and see them any time, day or night. I have often known him to take the ragged little children who were sent for him in his gig."

Then she said again: "They will all be here but he."

"Shall I go and ask him to come?" I said after a while. "I know where he lives."

"No, Hilda, he would not listen to you," said mamma.

"If I was a ragged little girl would he come?" I asked.

"He might," said mamma. Then she sat very quiet and looked out of the window for a long time, and I knew she was thinking about Uncle Jefferson.

Next day every one came—grandma, grandfather and all my aunts, uncles and cousins, big and little.

The table in the dining room was bright and glittering with pretty glass, silver and flowers. Every one seemed happy, but I knew just by her face that mamma was still thinking, "They are all here but Uncle Jefferson."

So I went up to her and said:

"Maybe Uncle Jefferson will come after all, mamma," but she shook her head and the tears came into her eyes.

"Would he come if I was a ragged little girl and asked him?" I said.

"He might," said mamma. "He is always so very good to poor children."

"Then I will go and bring him," I said to myself, and ran away. Dinner would not be ready for an hour, so I had plenty of time. I left all my cousins playing and talking together.

I was afraid some one would call me back, but I got away without being seen and went into mamma's room and into a closet, where I knew an old coat of papa's hung. I knew no one would mind, so I got the big scissors and cut off some of the sleeves, then I put it on; but it was so long that I could not walk, so I cut off the to make it ragged.

I climbed up on a chair after I was dressed and peeped into the glass. I looked just like a poor, poor little beggar girl. It almost made me cry.

"I hope I am ragged enough to suit Uncle Jefferson," I said, and I ran down stairs, and out of the door. No one heard me.

When I reached Uncle Jefferson's office his gig was standing at the door, so I waited close by until he came out of the house. I was afraid that after all he would not listen, but the moment he saw me he stopped and looked at me all over through his glasses.

"Dear, dear, he said, "my poor child, what do you want"

"I want you to come and see mamma," I said.

He answered right away. "Certainly; jump in and tell the boy where to drive."

When the black boy lifted me into the gig he laughed and said:

"Well, little rag-bag; where shall I take you?"

Just that moment I forgot our number, so I pointed.

Uncle Jefferson sat down on the other side of me, and away we went. Well, before I knew it, the boy drove down the wrong street, but there was a gate into our back garden in this street, and I told him to stop there.

It was very dark in the garden, but I went straight up to the dining-room door, Uncle Jefferson following close behind. As I ran up the steps I threw away the old coat and handkerchief, for I knew mamma wanted me to look nice.

When I pushed open the door and called out, "Here is Uncle Jefferson," every one stopped talking and turned around.

Well, I don't know what happened after that, but anyhow in a few moments they were all shaking hands, and mamma was crying, but this time she looked so happy.

When at last they all sat down, I next to mamma on one side and Uncle Jefferson on the other, she said: "You dear little fairy, how did you manage to make him come?"

Then I told her about the old coat, and she told everybody else, and they laughed, Uncle Jefferson louder than all the others.

Mamma said it was the very happiest Thanksgiving Day she had ever known, and all my cousins said it was the very best Thanksgiving dinner ever eaten.

Well, after that day Uncle Jefferson and I were the best of friends, and he always called me his Thanksgiving fairy.

The Old Man's Thanksgiving

I move my arm-chair to the door that fronts the autumn wold,
And gaze upon the stately trees, proud in their garb of gold;
The quail her brood is calling where the brooklet runs away
To find the sea, and Nature smiles this glad Thanksgiving day.

The years have touched my hair with gray, but still above me flies
The fairest flag that flaunts its folds against the azure skies,
I watch it in its beauty as it floats 'twixt sea and sea,
From every lofty mountain top o'er people truly free.

No war within our borders, we can all rejoice to-day;
At peace with all the nations far beyond the dashing spray!
Our navies ride in every sea, our honor is as true
As when was first baptized in blood the old Red, White and Blue.

I thank the loving Father, He who watches over all,
For blessings on our land bestowed from mountain wall to wall;
For harvests that were bountiful from far Dakota's plain
To where the old Penobscot rushes 'neath the pines of Maine.

I seem to catch the echoes of an anthem in the South,
Where sings the golden oriole in some grim canon's mouth;
And the laurel and the cedar and the branching chestnut tree
Grow side by side, where once were pitched the tents of Grant and Lee.

I hear no more the battle drums that beat in manhood's day,
For side by side, fore'er at peace, are standing Blue and Gray;
Together they are marching to the destiny of fame,
And each one crowns with deathless wreath our country's noble name.

I dream of coming ages which our nation loved will crown
With mighty triumphs which to her shall give a new renown;
Until in conscious wonder every country 'neath the sun
Shall ring with lofty plaudits for the land of Washington.

We're marching on to greater things, as vessels sweep the sea;
And each Thanksgiving fills our hearts with blessings yet to be.
America is destined, if to God we're only true,
To be the favored nation 'neath the canopy of blue.

Then let the bells all ring today throughout our cherished clime;
Let old and young with pride rejoice this glad Thanksgiving time;
Let paeans rise from morn till eve and nothing come to mar
The hope that rules our happy land beneath the stripe and star.

The winds blow through the autumn boughs; methinks I hear a tread,
A merry laugh and a little hand is laid upon my head;
And soft lips touch my wrinkled cheek, and this is what they say:
"I've come to kiss you, grandpa, dear, a thankful kiss to-day!"

My eyes grow misty as my arms about the wee one twine;
I cannot see the meadow and the woodland's golden line;
My old, old heart beats faster, as it bubbles o'er with bliss,
And silently I'm thankful for the sweet Thanksgiving kiss.

Forestry Devotees

Field in This Country for Forest Engineers.

The new opening is in forestry, or forest engineering, as it is coming to be called, and in a country with such vast forest tracts as ours, tracts fitted for nothing but forest growth and admirably adapted to that, with vast capital and labor depending on the timber supply for employment, it is evident that there is a field for the forest engineer, the man who knows how to keep up the annual supply forever. Forestry as a profession is not new to the world, for it has been practiced with profit by generations of the more thrifty European races. It is new to this country because the time is only just ripe for its employment. It has become essential to the continued prosperity of our lumber industry in its producing and manufacturing branches. With an increasing population and general prosperity, local consumption of timber has multiplied rapidly. The demand from abroad is also continuous and growing. To meet it we have a very certain and fixed stock of growing timber, and much of the best timber land is abandoned to absolute desert waste, after being clean cut, as the phrase is. Forestry, the applied science of growing trees for profit, would never sanction such shiftless, short-sighted, yea, suicidal methods. It would keep in growing timber, and that of the kinds best suited to the particular soil and market, every acre of land which was not more valuable for agriculture, building or some other form of business enterprise. In brief, it may be said that the wealth produced from our American forests each year exceeds in value the total product of all the gold, silver, copper, iron, lead and coal mines, and the value of this crop surpasses that of the wheat and cotton fields combined. The statistics of our national trade bear out these statements. In similarly abbreviated form it can be said that this country is now and has been for several years past using fully 50 per cent more wood per annum for all purposes than the forests can produce under natural conditions. What these forests can do when skillfully assisted by future generations of forest engineers is for these men to prove. Surely there will not be the wanton waste which goes on today (and that leakage stopped can properly be charged up to the credit of increased production), and the trees will grow faster for being given the proper conditions without the necessity of their fighting for them single-handed. Forestry cannot be studied today in any and every college in the land. There are at present three prominent schools devoted exclusively to the subject, and special courses in certain phases of the science have lately been opened by a few other institutions. The three leading schools are here mentioned in the order of their foundation, as follows: The school at George Vanderbilt's forests at Biltmore, N. C.; the New York State College of Forestry, Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y.; the Yale Forest School, Yale University, New Haven, Conn. Berea College, Berea, Ky., has started a course adapted to the needs of the mountain farmers, for whom that college chiefly exists. The New Hampshire College of Agriculture and the Mechanic Arts, Durham, N. H., has within the year opened a course in the subject, which should be of great help to farmers in northern New England. These are the three chief schools and two of the minor ones. That courses are not opened by more colleges is largely due, no doubt, to the difficulty, even the impossibility of securing competent instructors, and to their lack of suitable demonstration forests where the men can be put to work. This suggests still another field for the young American student who has not yet hit upon his life work, especially if he has an inclination to teach for a living. These schools, and others yet to be, must have professors and instructors in the various branches. Why not study forestry with a view to teaching the science?—Boston Transcript.

Trouble on Track.

An elephant catcher seems to be needed in India on the railroad between Bengal and Assam. As the superintendent of the line was making an inspection trip over it on the night of July 17 last, while passing through the great Nambar forest the train came to a stop with a jolt that threw the travelers out of their berths. It had run into a herd of wild elephants which were trotting down the track, the hindmost of which had both hind legs broken and was thrown into the ditch, while the engineman counted seven others which got away. This was not the first time that wild elephants had got on the track, and ordinary fences and cattle guards are no protection.

Modern Military Surgery

Some Interesting Experiences of the South African War.

The war in South Africa has furnished a vast amount of interesting surgical experience, showing the effect of modern arms of precision and of antiseptic methods in the hospitals. While it is too early to draw deductions from the statistics of the war, it is worthy of note that, where the records were kept of 12,637 officers and men who had been wounded, only 782 died of wounds received in action. This small mortality is attributed to the prompt application of a first-aid dressing. The action of the Mauser bullet upon human tissues depends upon the range at which it is fired. Within 200 yards it has an explosive character. The nickel case seems to expand and become detached, causing a severe, lacerated and contused wound, which heals very slowly. If it strikes a bone it crushes and destroys it. If fired at a longer range it makes a clean-drilled hole through a bone, while if it strikes soft parts of the body only a small wound is made, there being but little difference between the place of entrance of the bullet and its exit, which bleeds but little unless an important vessel is injured.

It is remarkable how few amputations have been performed during the Boer war. Dr. Kendal Franks has reported that in his experience not more than 20 amputations have occurred in 3,000 cases, which he attributed to the conservative spirit of present-day surgery. Dr. Sterling Ryerson relates that he saw at Kimberly 147 wounded Boers in a roller rink which had been converted into a temporary hospital. They were of all ages, from 15 to 65. They had been wounded at Paardeburg, and in many cases the wounds had been undressed for from 15 to 17 days. He tells of one man who had been shot through the elbow joint and whose only treatment had been the universal Boer remedy, tobacco juice. The arm was enormously swollen and almost erysipelatous in appearance. A civil surgeon, however, took the case in hand with modern methods, with the result that the man made an excellent recovery, retaining even the power to move his arm at the joint.

Your faith must be one, your actions one, and one the banner under which you combat.—Mazzini.

It has been decided by the Kansas Supreme Court that opening a window screen constitutes a "burglarious breaking" within the meaning of the law.

THE NORTH POLAR SEA

In a recent lecture on his explorations in the Arctic ocean and the results obtained with regard to the ocean currents on the Norwegian coast, in the northern part of the Atlantic ocean, and in the Arctic ocean during his voyage in the Fram and in the Michael Sars in 1900, Fridtjof Nansen declared his belief that the Northern Arctic ocean is not to be regarded as forming part of the ocean system of the world, but as being an independent inland sea, which contains several subordinate currents which are affected by the influence exerted by the two chief currents of the Gulf Stream and the Arctic ocean. For obtaining reliable data concerning the rate of speed at which the sea currents flow, their temperature and saltness, a most elaborate system of apparatus was made use of, which enabled the ocean currents to be investigated at any depth without sudden changes in the temperature of the water being able to affect the results obtained. In fact, so accurate are these results that Nansen's theory is attracting widespread attention in scientific circles.

Looked Her Part.

She was richly but inconspicuously dressed, and would have attracted no particular attention as she stood on the corner of Tremont and Winter streets had not her face, under a white veil, been writhing in a series of remarkable contortions. Several persons paused to watch her "make faces" and then came a feminine acquaintance. "Why!" exclaimed the newcomer, "what upon earth is the matter?" The facial contortions ceased and were replaced by a smile. "With me? Nothing." "But you looked as if you were suffering terribly." "Never felt better." "But your face—you were twisting it into all sorts of shapes." The lady standing at the corner laughed and held out her hands, in each of which was a parcel. "I was only trying," she said, "to work the edge of my veil down under my chin."—Boston Globe.

Passing of the Cable Car.

A few years ago the cable system was considered the best, but since the invention of the trolley, the cable is being rapidly displaced. Experts now claim that compressed air will eventually be the car power of the future. In all lines of industry improvements are constantly being made, but in medicine Hostetter's Stomach Bitters still holds the lead, because it is impossible to make a better medicine for indigestion, dyspepsia, belching or biliousness. Be sure to try it.

The Trials of Genius.

"John, dear," she said, in her sweet, affectionate voice, which she only used on rare occasions, "are you well up with your Christmas work?"

"Pretty well," he sighed, as he put a period to a poem which had almost given him nervous prostration. "Why do you ask?"

"Because, my dear, I am afraid you are undermining your health, and I want you to take a recess and write me a short story to pay for my new dress, a couple of poems for my hat and gloves, a good, stirring campaign song that will bring in enough for a ton of coal, and one or two of those darling love poems for some lard and a sugar-cured ham; and ham, dear, is only 12 cents a pound."—Atlanta Constitution.

Child Training in Germany.

In the German cities it is refreshing to find, scattered through each park, many good-sized beds of clean sand. These beds are confined by a wooden border, to prevent the sand being scattered or washed away by rains. No matter how small the park, or in what quarter of the city it is situated, one is sure to find at least four or five of these small spots of delight for the children, and from early morn until sometimes far into the twilight you will never find one of these little enclosures entirely deserted.—Harper's Bazar.

FIENDISH FATHER

COMPELS CHILDREN TO WATCH DEATH AGONIES OF THEIR MOTHER.

FORCED TO SUICIDE BY ABUSE

WOMAN SWALLOWS CARBOLIC ACID AFTER A VIOLENT QUARREL.

HUSBAND LAUGHS WHILE SHE DIES

FORBIDS CHILDREN TO SUMMON HELP FOR THEIR DYING MOTHER.

New York, Nov. 19.—Mrs. Annie Strobel, aged thirty-nine, the wife of Charles Strobel, a stove smith of 308 Ellery street, Williamsburg, yesterday committed suicide by swallowing carbolic acid.

It is charged that she was left to die in the presence of her three children, whose father refused to permit them to leave the room to summon help. Strobel is well-to-do. On account of his hasty temper, it is said, he and his wife often quarreled.

They had just finished dinner, shortly after noon yesterday, when Strobel, it is said, started a quarrel. Mrs. Strobel began to cry, and threatened that if she was not treated better she would end her life. The oldest daughter, Hannah, aged twelve, was in the room. When Mrs. Strobel repeated the threat to kill herself Strobel is said to have replied: "You ought to be dead. You haven't the nerve to kill yourself. Why don't you do it?"

Mrs. Strobel went to her bedroom and

Swallowed Carbolic Acid,

after which she staggered back to the kitchen and sank to the floor. All the children began to scream when they saw their mother in her death agonies. Strobel silenced them and, Hannah declares, forbade her to leave the room to summon help. He compelled her and the other children, she says, to remain quiet while their mother was dying. It was declared by the girl that her father laughed while the mother was dying.

Strobel was under the impression that his wife was dead, and Hannah declares that he said to her: "Now she is dead. You can go after an undertaker."

The girl ran into the hall and appealed to the neighbors to send a doctor. Mrs. Strobel was still alive when the ambulance arrived, but she died half an hour later without regaining consciousness. The police of the Vernon avenue station heard of the case and Hannah was brought to the station. After hearing her story Strobel was arrested. He declares that he had no recollection of acting in the manner described by his daughter. He was locked up.

FOUND CHARRED BODIES.

Two Deputies Go After a Criminal and Meet an Awful Death.

Oxford, Miss., Nov. 19.—John A. Montgomery, deputy United States marshal pro tem. of this city, and Deputy United States Marshal Hugh Montgomery of Pontotoc, left here Saturday night for the purpose of arresting Will Mathis, an alleged counterfeiter and moonshiner who lived twelve miles east of this place. Early yesterday Hugh Montgomery's horses were found standing at the gate of Curdy Hall, a neighbor of Mathis, and Mathis' house had been burned to the ground. Upon further investigation two partially burned bodies were found in the ashes of the burned building, which have been identified as the remains of the deputy marshals. John A. Montgomery's horse has not been found, and it is supposed that Mathis made his escape on that horse after the men had been killed and the house set on fire.

BRIBERY ALLEGED.

Chief Justice of Arizona Goes to Washington to Answer Charges.

Phoenix, Ariz., Nov. 19.—Webster Street, chief justice of the territorial court, has gone to Washington to appear before the department of justice to answer charges of bribery brought against him last summer in connection with a decision affecting the King of Arizona Mining company. It is alleged in the complaint that Street accepted a bribe of from $5,000 to $7,000. Street was in Washington some time ago and requested an investigation, which Attorney General Knox promised him. Street has just received notice that the charges will be considered Nov. 21.

MUST GO TO JAIL.

Judge Hanecy Passes Sentence on Two of Chicago American Staff.

Chicago, Nov. 19.—Judge Hanecy has passed sentence on Andrew M. Lawrence, managing editor, and S. Canfield, reporter of W. R. Hearst's Chicago American, for contempt of court and committed them to forty and thirty days' imprisonment, respectively, in the county jail.

A CRIME TO HAVE MONEY.

Rich Moroccans Tortured in Horrible Dungeons.

New York, Nov. 19.—A dispatch from the City of Morocco says the jail is full of heavily chained men whose only crime is the possession of small fortunes, which the officials are extracting by every form of cruelty.

Three More Bodies Recovered.

Bluefield, W. Va., Nov. 19.—The reports from the Baby mine are that the fire has practically been extinguished. Three more bodies were taken out. The bodies recovered number twelve, and two or three of the injured will yet die.

Killed by an Explosion.

Columbus, Ohio, Nov. 19.—Two men were killed and four injured as the result of the premature explosion of a blast at the Casparis stone quarry northeast of here.

HIS LIFE THREATENED.

Great Falls Man Must Pay $500 if He Wants to Live.

Helena, Mont., Nov. 16.—Edward Reichle, president of the American Malting and Brewing Company of Great Falls, last night received a second anonymous letter within a week demanding a deposit of $500 at a certain point on the railroad track or his life will be taken by a rifle ball. Reichle regarded the first letter as a joke, but is now thoroughly alarmed, and has demanded police protection. The first letter came by mail, but the second was placed under his door. Both were written in a woman's hand. This is the second case of a like character in Great Falls within a month.

CUSTER'S WAGONS.

Ammunition and Freight Wagon Taken From the Bed of a Creek.

Dickinson, N. D., Nov. 16.—A portion of an ammunition wagon and a freight wagon which were left by the memorable Custer expedition, which passed nine miles south of here in 1876, have been taken from Davis creek by R. Finger of this place. The point where the relics were discovered has been known for many years as the Custer crossing. Just the tops of the wheels led to the discovery, and it took some time and much engineering to extricate them, so thoroughly were they imbedded in the creek's bottom. The names of the soldiers who composed this fated company are cut in the rocks near the creek.

ANOTHER IOWA BANK ROBBERY.

Robbers Blow Open the Safe With Nitro-Glycerine.

Le Roy, Iowa, Nov. 16.—The First National Bank of Le Roy was broken into Wednesday night and $2,000 taken. The robbers effected an entrance through the door and exploded the safe with nitro-glycerine. The bank building was wrecked and the entire contents of the safe scattered about. No one was awakened in time to see any of the robbers. This makes the eighth bank robbery in Iowa within a month.

BRUTAL BRAKEMAN.

He Kicks a Youth Who Was Stealing a Ride.

Fergus Falls, Minn., Nov. 16.—Frank and Earnest Henderson, two young men who have been working in Dakota, came to this city yesterday and Earnest fainted in a store and was taken in charge by the authorities. Frank states that they were stealing a ride on a Great Northern train. A brakeman put them off and kicked Earnest in the stomach. The city physician says that the injury is very serious.

SHOT ON HIS WAGON.

Ashland (Wis.) Farmer Killed by a Deer Hunter in the Woods.

Ashland, Wis., Nov. 16.—Alex Olson, a well known homesteader, started for Ashland from his home at White River yesterday afternoon with the carcasses of four deer in his wagon. He was found dead shortly after lying by the roadside with a wound back of the ear, which penetrated the skull and resembles a bullet wound. It is thought that Olson was accidentally shot from his wagon by a deer hunter.

TWENTY-SEVEN HORSES BURNED.

Farmer Severely Scorched in Burning Livery at Watertown, S. D.

Watertown, S. D., Nov. 16.—Oscar Vaux's livery barn burned to the ground last evening. There were twenty-seven horses in the barn, none being saved. Some of the horses were farmers' horses, placed there during the day. L. Rose, a farmer, was taken from the burning building severely burned, but he will recover. The origin of the fire is unknown. The loss is heavy with some insurance.

POLICE QUELL COLLEGE RIOT.

Fargo Students Fight Over Possession of Banner.

Fargo, N. D., Nov. 16.—After the football game Wednesday afternoon between the Fargo college and the Fargo high school teams, it is alleged some college boys forcibly captured the high school banner. The high school boys went to the college and secured its return. Several scrimmages are reported and some damage was done to the college building. The police were called.

NOT A WIFE-MURDER.

Attending Physician's Testimony Upsets Prosecution's Theory.

Sioux City, Iowa, Nov. 16.—In the case of alleged wife murder against Ben McKnight, which has been on trial here all week, a surprise was sprung by the defense when Dr. R. B. Raleigh, who attended the woman before her death, testified that her death was due to blood poisoning from an ulceration on the foot and not from the beating and stamping said to have been administered by the husband.

Filled Lamp With Gasoline.

Grand Forks, N. D., Nov. 16.—Fire occurred in the residence of Mrs. Snow. She had gone to an entertainment, leaving her six-year-old girl in charge of a neighbor's daughter. During the evening the lamp burned low and the girl and a young man friend undertook to fill it. They mistook the gasoline can for the kerosene can, and there was an explosion and a blaze. The fire department was called out and saved the upper story of the building, but the lower story was ruined and most of the furniture destroyed.

Cleaned Out by Fire.

Milwaukee, Nov. 16.—A special from Sturgeon Bay says fire cleaned out the Pankratz Lumber company's yard last night. The loss is estimated at $10,000; covered by insurance.

Big Buck Weighs 210 Pounds.

Butternut, Wis., Nov. 16.—Several big bucks have been brought in for the first week of the hunting season, the largest specimen being captured by Peter Decker on the Chippewa. It weighs 210 pounds.

Saloonkeeper Slashed.

Aberdeen, S. D., Nov. 16.—Dan Hudler, a saloonkeeper, was assaulted yesterday afternoon by Ed Shelley, who inflicted several severe wounds on Hudley with a large knife. Shelly was arrested.

RUHLIN A QUITTER

TO THE AMAZEMENT OF THE AUDIENCE HE WILTS IN FIFTH ROUND.

JEFFRIES STILL HOLDS THE TITLE

NO ONE MORE SURPRISED AT THE OUTCOME THAN THE CHAMPION.

RUHLIN MAKES LAME EXCUSES

INTIMATES THAT HE WAS UNFAIRLY HANDLED AND INJURED.

San Francisco, Nov. 17.—In one of the most unsatisfactory prize fights ever witnessed in this country, James J. Jeffries proved the victor last night over Gus Ruhlin, the Akron giant. In the fifth round of what was to have been a twenty-round struggle Ruhlin wilted and then surrendered to his peer to the utter amazement and disgust of the assembled thousands. No one was more surprised at the outcome than Jeffries himself, who asserted that while he had delivered one telling blow in the second round, he did not expect to win the victory so easily. Ruhlin's sole explanation of the outcome of the fight is that he received a chance blow which utterly disabled him and that Jeffries persisted in fighting him low.

While Ruhlin will make no absolute charge that Jeffries committed a foul, he intimates that he was and injured as a result. In this contention Ruhlin received the support of his seconds, who say that it was a hopeless case after the second round.

When seen in his dressingroom after the fight Champion Jeffries said:

"I was certainly surprised at my easy victory and Ruhlin's amazing defeat. While it was true that he did not punch me hard enough during the five rounds to cause any alarm, I believed him strong and cautious up to the moment of his collapse, and was surprised when he quit. I certainly had no trouble in whipping him, and had the fight gone on the result must have been the same. Ruhlin was inaccurate and in poor wind, and I cannot say that he even had the courage and force I expected to encounter in him. Ruhlin took a stiff punch in the stomach in the fourth round which I presume gave him trouble. Nevertheless I expected him than he did. Ruhlin can doubtless best explain his own position, and as for myself I am willing to meet Sharkey next month and thereafter to defend as best I can the title I hold."

To Lose Harder

When Ruhlin went to his dressing room he was followed by a very depressed retinue. The defeated man complained of no pain and moved about without assistance. He stated:

"I believed from the tap of the gong that I would win, but as the fight progressed I was beaten down until I received a blow on the stomach which I must say was very low. It may not have been a foul, and no man could have survived it. Jeffries departed from the written rules and from the common regulations of boxing when he threw himself upon me and wrestled rather than sparred. I do believe that had I not received the stomach punch which ended me in the fifth round I would have worn down Jeffries a few rounds later and beaten him as a matter of endurance. I am ready to fight him again and believe that in time I will have the opportunity of showing that I can defeat him. That is all I can say."

Suspicion of Fistic Swindle.

Lou Houseman and George Siler, both of whom were at the ringside together with George Harting, the official timekeeper for the club, declared after the fight that Ruhlin had been greatly overestimated, that his blows were weak and easily blocked, and that he was positively without endurance. While some expressions were heard in the throng after the fight placing the stigma of a fake affair on the management, it was the concensus of opinion that Ruhlin fought a losing battle in order to obtain the short end of an enormous prize. Boxing in San Francisco has not been helped by this event. City supervisors at the ringside expressed great dissatisfaction, and even went so far as to name a suspicion, in their minds of a fistic swindle. It is estimated that there was something over $40,000 realized at the box office, and of this 62 1-2 per cent, divided in purses of 75 and 25 per cent goes to the participants of the event.

KING'S DAYS ARE NUMBERED.

Only Two More Years Given Edward VII.

Chicago, Nov. 17.—The Chronicle publishes a London cablegram saying that King Edward's life is not worth more than two years at the very most. That is the opinion of the best physicians in the United Kingdom, and it may be set down as truth on authority which cannot be doubted, despite optimistic and inspired official bulletins to the contrary. At the same time it can be affirmed on equally unimpeachable grounds that his majesty's malady is not cancer of the throat, as has been so frequently insisted. It is in the upper part of the tongue, which is even more dangerous, and which, according to the unanimous belief of the doctors, must reach a fatal termination within the specified period.

Another Dynamo Needed.

Mayville, N. D., Nov. 17.—George Brambel, having resigned the place of city engineer and electrician, Peter Sievert has been elected to succeed him. The electric lighting service is becoming so popular that it is likely an additional dynamo will be installed.

Waubay Man Takes His Own Life.

Waubay, S. D., Nov. 17.—Martin Fritts, an old and respected citizen of this village, committed suicide by shooting. There is no known cause for the act.

SCHLEY A BANKRUPT.

Exhausts His Savings in an Attempt to Save His Good Name.

Washington, Nov. 17.—The savings from forty-five years of active service in the United States navy have been eaten up by the expenses of the inquiry by which Admiral Schley hopes to clear his record as a naval officer. Since the final adjournment of the public sessions of the court the admiral has been staying at the Arlington hotel, attempting to extricate himself from the financial tangle caused by the inquiry. He has ended with his accounts and he finds that every cent of the $20,000 which he had expected to leave to his family, in addition to all the prize money which he will get for his part in the Spanish-American war, has been spent on the inquiry. Financially the admiral is worse off than he was almost half a century ago when he entered the naval academy as a cadet.

GATHMANN GUN A FAILURE.

Fails to Do What Its Inventor Claimed for It.

New York, Nov. 17.—The test of the Gathmann gun and shell took place yesterday afternoon at the army proving ground on Sandy Hook and resulted in a failure. The shell did no material damage to the target. The failure of inventor Gathmann's theory is ascribed by him to an imperfect detonation of the fuse in the interior of the shell. The army officers, however, claim that they have found convincing proof to the contrary and say that everything in connection with the test was as perfect as it was possible to make it, in accordance with the inventor's ideas. The board has decided to give a second trial to which the inventor is entitled this morning.

EARTHQUAKE IN COLORADO.

Terror-Stricken Citizens Rush From Their Homes.

Buena Vista, Colo., Nov. 17.—At 3 o'clock yesterday morning this town and surrounding country experienced an earthquake shock which lasted for several seconds. Many people rushed from their residences in night attire, fearing their homes would be demolished. Plate glass windows were cracked. It is reported that the waters of Cottonwood lake rose considerably. Many huge boulders on Mount Princeton and Mount Harvard were dislodged and rolled down the sides of the mountain. The trembling seemed to travel from the southwest to the northeast and lasted about six seconds. This is the first earthquake ever felt in Buena Vista.

IN CRIDLER'S PLACE.

Herbert Pierce to Be Third Assistant Secretary of State.

Washington, Nov. 17.—The president signed yesterday the commission of Herbert Pierce of Massachusetts to be third assistant secretary of state. Mr. Pierce is expected to arrive in Washington to-day and assume his office. Mr. Cridler has terminated his connection with the state department as third secretary and gone to St. Louis to confer with the exposition officials respecting his European mission.

ICE IN LONDON.

Frost and Snow Succeeding the Disastrous British Gales.

London, Nov. 17.—The gale has been succeeded by frost and snow of unprecedented severity so early in the season. Ten and fifteen degrees of frost are common, while the snow on the northern hills is seriously impeding railroad traffic and is causing the rivers to overflow. Hundreds of sheep have been drowned in the neighboring meadows. The lakes in the London parks are covered with ice.

ROOF TRUSSES COLLAPSE.

Workmen Buried Under a Mass of Iron Joists and Bricks.

Chicago, Nov. 17.—Roof trusses on the new power plant building now in progress of construction at the University of Chicago collapsed yesterday, burying a group of workmen who were standing beneath under a mass of iron joists, lumber and bricks, killing one man and injuring four others.

No Parole for Dalton.

Topeka, Kan., Nov. 17.—The application to the governor for the parole of Emmett Dalton, the last of the Dalton gang of bank robbers, and who is serving a life term for murder committed during the raid on Coffeyville, Kan., in 1892, was withdrawn yesterday, the popular protest against the parole being so overwhelming that Dalton's friends considered it best not to wait for an adverse decision.

Weyler May Be Premier.

Madrid, Nov. 17.—It is expected that Gen. Weyler, the minister of war, will temporarily replace Senor Sagasta should the latter's illness continue. It is further said that the Duke of Veragua, the minister of marine, will resign if the chamber of deputies refuses a credit of 12,000,000 pesetas for the new warships now under construction.

Fire in the Zoo.

Toledo, Ohio, Nov. 17.—All the monkeys, birds and other animals owned by the city in the "zoo" at Walbridge Park were burned early yesterday morning. The collection comprised valuable and rare specimens and all were gifts to the city. The loss of the buildings, which were new, is heavy.

Freight Trains Collide.

Columbus, Ohio, Nov. 17.—A rear-end collision occurred yesterday afternoon between two freight trains on the Hocking Valley, south of this city. Half a dozen cars were hurled down an embankment and the wreckage took fire. Engineer Manley was probably fatally injured.

One More Gathered In.

Fargo, N. D., Nov. 17.—John Dillon, who was a member of the tough Casselton gang, was convicted of burglarizing the residence of Edward Kurtz. He was an associate of John O'Brien, who assaulted Chief of Police Ballard.

Winonan Dies in Kalispell.

Winona, Minn., Nov. 17.—James Milton, formerly a resident of Winona, died at Kalispell, Mont., on Wednesday from pleuro-pneumonia. He was twenty-two years of age. The remains are being brought here.

LED A DUAL LIFE

REMARKABLE CAREER OF A CLEVELAND WOMAN REVEALED BY DEATH.

FEMALE DR. JEKYLL AND MR. HYDE

QUEEN OF TENDERLOIN BY NIGHT AND LADY BOUNTIFUL BY DAY.

SIN, CHARITY AND DECEPTION

SAVED MANY A THOUGHTLESS GIRL FROM A LIFE OF SHAME.

Cleveland, Ohio, Nov. 16.—With the death of Alice E. Westbrook, at Cairo, Mich., Nov. 8, came to a close the career of a Cleveland woman whose existence was that of a female Jekyll and Hyde. By day she was the quiet, respectable, literary Mrs. Alice Vilas, of 410 Bolton avenue. By night she was Alice E. Westbrook, proprietor of a disreputable house at 21 Oak place, and the queen of the tenderloin. But, whether as a respectable woman, or a leader in the half world, those who knew her say she never went back on a friend in distress or refused aid to the needy. And while she lived and grew rich on the proceeds of vice, the police say that more than one young, thoughtless girl, in danger of being led into a life of shame, has been snatched from the brink by this same Alice Westbrook.

That she possessed a generous heart is proved by her will, filed for probate Thursday, which contained among other bequests one of $4,500 for the home for aged women on Kennard street.

Alice Westbrook was fifty-seven years old, and her death was caused by apoplexy while visiting relatives at Indian Fields, Mich. She has been known in Cleveland for years. Her maiden name was Alice Elizabeth Hobson, and as a girl she was beautiful. She was still handsome at the time of her death. She married Lewis Westbrook Vilas, an expert accountant, while very young, and the couple lived in Cleveland. Vilas died two years ago. Mrs. Vilas early began a career in the tenderloin, under the name of Alice Westbrook. She retained her home, however, and very few who were acquainted with Mrs. Vilas knew that she was other than a respectable, rather retiring woman.

Her two lives she kept absolutely distinct. During the day she wore black, lived quietly at her home, reading a great deal and doing not a little charity work. But with nightfall Mrs. Vilas disappeared, and in her stead came Miss Westbrook, gorgeously gowned, wearing thousands of dollars worth of jewelry, proprietress of one of the most exclusive disorderly houses in the city.

Her relatives all lived in Michigan, and once they all came to visit her. None of them knew of her dual life, and during their stay she remained away from her Oak place resort. Not only this, but she gave a reception at her Bolton avenue home, at which she secured the attendance of a number of society men. She remembered her relatives in her will, too. All her jewelry is divided among her nieces. Her housekeeper at the Bolton avenue home gets $500 and her two brothers and a number of nephews get various sums of money.

Her real property consists of a valuable farm in Michigan, her home at 410 Bolton avenue and the Oak place property, back of the Permanent building, which is very valuable. These are to be sold, and the cash bequests amounting to $23,200 are to be paid.

Alice Westbrook Vilas left one daughter, who was kept in ignorance of her mother's down-town venture. The daughter is happily married. She is left $4,000 in the will.

BOLD HIGHWAYMEN.

They Secure $400 and Escape on Horseback.

Chicago, Nov. 16.—Four masked highwaymen, who approached the scene of their bold robbery mounted on horses, held up the cashier's office at the Chicago American barns on Indiana street last night, defied six men who fought to frustrate the crime, and secured $200 in money. After securing the money the robbers fled toward the river district and four men were seen a few minutes later galloping on horseback across the Rush street bridge. The police were on the trail of the robbers within half an hour but no arrests have yet been made.

IN WARDEN'S CLOTHES.

The Novel Plan Adopted by "Trusty" to Escape From Sing Sing.

Ossining, N. Y., Nov. 16.—No clue has yet been found by the Sing Sing authorities which might lead to discovering the whereabouts of Henry Delaney, the "trusty" who escaped from the prison Wednesday night. Delaney's escape was novel. In that he walked away in a suit of the warden's clothes. In this manner he was able to avoid arousing suspicion on the part of the hundreds of persons he must have met.

HULL VERY ILL.

Iowa Congressman Suffers a Discouraging Relapse.

Des Moines, Iowa, Nov. 16.—Congressman Hull, who has been ill for several weeks, has during the last day or two suffered a partial relapse. Some of his friends regard it as doubtful whether he will be able to go to Washington by the time congress meets. He was reported better yesterday, but was able to sit up only a few hours.

His illness has been due largely to inflammation of the bowels, and he does not improve as rapidly as his physicians hoped. Except on election day, when he was taken to vote, he has not left his home for over a month.

MURDERER CONVICTED.

Matthew Hager Killed Man in a Montana Barroom.

Helena, Mont., Nov. 16.—Matthew Hager, who was charged with the murder of Charles Geis at Marysville April 18 last, was convicted of murder in the second degree by a jury in the district court yesterday. His punishment was fixed at eighteen years in the penitentiary. Hager and Geis had quarreled over a mining lease and while in a barroom Hager shot Geis.

For a New Charter.

Hastings, Minn., Nov. 16.—Judge F. M. Crosby and W. C. Williston have appointed a board of fifteen to prepare a new charter for the city. The board met to-night for organization.

GOPHERS FALL DOWN.

Husky Minnesotans Walloped by the Badgers.

Madison, Wis., Nov. 19.—Wisconsin Saturday earned the right to dispute and perhaps claim as her own the Western football championship. The vaunted team from Minnesota, confident and husky, was humbled by a score of 18 to 0—a safety, three touchdowns and one goal were scored against it.

The great grandstands on Randall field were literal mountains of moving humanity. Thirteen thousand people filled seats within the inclosure. Clouds of cardinal and maroon and gold made the scene most picturesque. All kinds of ear-splitting devices, including whistles from a locomotive situated on a sidetrack behind the Badger rooters, served to make life yet more miserable for the impartial on-lookers. But it was a crucial football contest and anything was excusable. Before the game began Mueller, the Gopher guard, was withdrawn by Minnesota. The Minnesota representatives were notified that Quarterback Doble would be protested before the conference if played, but Doble played and played miserably and his case is yet to be decided.

Minnesota's team slumped badly and did not play its game.

ELOPED WITH HIS STEPMOTHER.

South Dakota Farmer in Pursuit of His Wife and Son.

Sioux City, Iowa, Nov. 19.—Carl Seivert of Plankinton, S. D., an aged farmer, was in Sioux City yesterday in pursuit of his wife and son, whom he declares eloped together recently and located at Washta, Iowa. He threatened them with all sorts of vengeance. The son, Fred, is about thirty years old, while his stepmother, with whom he ran away, is sixty-one. A short time ago Carl Sievert was persuaded to deed his farm to his son Louie, who was to keep the aged couple. Instead of doing so, he compelled them to leave, and they went to reside with Fred, where the intimacy is said to have started which culminated in the elopement.

FOUR SKATERS DROWNED.

Thin Ice Causes a Chapter of Accidents in the Northwest.

Lowry, Minn., Nov. 19.—George Peacock and James Campbell were drowned here yesterday while skating. Peacock was the only son of Robert Peacock, a prosperous farmer living here. Campbell's family lives in Heathertown, Mich.

Rib Lake, Wis.—Miss Hattie Albaugh of Brownsville, Minn., who was employed in the photograph car of J. A. Ennor, yesterday was drowned in Rib lake while skating.

Redwood Falls, Minn.—Miss Alma Liebenguth, a popular sixteen-year-old girl of this place, was drowned yesterday afternoon while skating on Redwood river.

DEATH RECORD APPALLS HUNTERS

Many Returning From the Woods to Save Their Lives.

Duluth, Nov. 19.—The appalling record of shooting accidents in the woods of Northern Minnesota and Wisconsin during the first week of the deer season, is deterring many persons who had intended to go deer hunting, and they will remain at home. Almost every day some hunter or party of hunters arrives out of the woods in a hurry to get home and out of danger. In such cases narrow escapes from being shot are reported, and they do not care to take further chances.

CRUSHED INTO ETERNITY.

Aged Peddler Killed on St. Paul Road Near Winona.

Winona, Minn., Nov. 19.—L. D. Mead, an aged peddler of this city, met instant death at Minnesota City by being run down by the north-bound fast mail train on the Milwaukee & St. Paul road as he was crossing the track in a wagon. Mead was muffled up in a fur coat and did not hear the train approaching. He was struck by the boiler head and badly crushed.

She Has Friends.

Aberdeen, S. D., Nov. 19.—Aberdeen citizens are generally wrought up over the discharge of Miss Emma Bickelhaupt, one of the city teachers, by the board of education. Public sentiment is strongly in the lady's favor, and even the board was divided on the question. In order to show their appreciation of Miss Bickelhaupt a public reception was held Friday evening at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Perry, which was very largely attended.

Against the Breweries.

Yankton, S. D., Nov. 18.—Judge Smith has rendered a decision upholding the constitutionality of the liquor law, which prohibits the issuing of a license for a wholesale liquor house in towns that have voted against the issuing of retail liquor licenses. The case was that of the Hamm Brewing company against Turner county, mandamus to compel the county commissioners to issue a wholesale license to the brewing company.

Fell From a Train.

Washburn, Wis., Nov. 19.—A man who came here from the Pennsylvania coal mining districts a month ago, and who has been working in the woods, was accidentally killed by falling from a logging train on the Washburn & Northwestern railroad Saturday evening, twenty-seven cars passing over him. The remains were scattered along the track for half a mile.

Dies of Burns.

Watertown, S. D., Nov. 19.—Lafe Rose died here yesterday. He was severely burned in the fire Thursday evening which destroyed a livery barn.

Hard Luck Story.

Fargo, N. D., Nov. 19.—Jacob Thompsonson of Balfour came to Fargo with one crippled leg for treatment and now has two. He kept riding on cars that were being switched in the Northern Pacific yards and fell off, breaking his good leg.

Instantly Killed.

Lincoln, Neb., Nov. 19.—Walter Ryan was instantly killed and James Holck was badly wounded by the accidental discharge of a shotgun near Exeter, Neb.

CUT BRITISH TIES

HUGE CONSPIRACY TO FORM A REPUBLIC IN NORTHWEST TERRITORY.

DAWSON TO BE THE CAPITAL

PLAN TO SIEZE POLICE AND OVERTHROW LOCAL GOVERNMENT.

AWAIT THE SUMMONS TO ARMS

AMMUNITION AND SUPPLIES PLANTED READY FOR THE ATTACK.

Seattle, Wash., Nov. 19.—An unconfirmed story comes from Skagway, Alaska, under date of Nov. 6, telling of the discovery of what is alleged to be a huge conspiracy existing at Dawson, and ramifying to Skagway, Victoria and Vancouver and Seattle, for the overthrow of the local government of the Northwest Territory, and the establishing of a republic, with Dawson as its capital.

According to the details of the story, arms, ammunition and provisions have been taken in over the railroad and cached at strategic points. Prominent American residents of Skagway are said to be ringleaders in the conspiracy. Mihers to the number of 5,000 are said to await the summons to arms, ready to fight for the independence from dominion rule of the gold fields, camps and towns. The plan the mounted police, arrest the civil authorities and take the government into their own hands. The rigors of the Arctic winters would give the insurgents six months' immunity from attack by Canadian or British troops, and the adventurous arch-conspirators hope for intervention or outside assistance by the time the melting of ice and snow will permit the invasion of their isolated republic.

Is to Overpower

It is further related that a hurried conference, lasting until midnight, was held at Skagway Nov. 5, at which were present Capt. Corrigan of the Northwest mounted police, who had arrived from across the Canadian border late that evening. Judge Brown of the United States district court, United States Marshal Shoupe, United States Attorney Frederick and Maj. Hovey, commanding the United States troops at Skagway, attended the meeting. This was the last of several between the civil and military representatives of the two powers in relation to the mysterious transportation of supplies into the interior and rumors of a conspiracy to lead the miners in a revolt against the Canadian government in the Northwest Territory. Those present maintained subsequently the strictest silence concerning the new evidence laid before them, and their evident anxiety helped to confirm the rumors of conspiracy.

Capt. Corrigan took a train back across the border the next morning, while United States Marshal Shoupe embarked on the first steamer for Seattle, which port he reached several days ago. The object of his visit was presumably to confer by telegraph with the authorities at Washington. He sailed Saturday afternoon on the Dolphin on his way.

MANY LIVES LOST.

Terrible Gale Does Great Damage on the Newfoundland Coast.

Halifax, N. S., Nov. 19.—The terrible gale which has been raging on the Newfoundland coast during the past three days has carried death and destruction in its track. Shipping has suffered severely as a result of the storm and many lives have been lost. A private dispatch which reached Lewisburg, C. B., last night, states that the Norwegian steamer Ella, under charter of the Black Diamond Line company, had been lost on the Newfoundland coast in the vicinity of Belle Isle with all hands. The steamer left Montreal on Friday with a general cargo for St. John's, N. F. The Ella was 601 tons register and was built at Sunderland in 1898. This was her last trip of the season on the route. She carried a crew of about twenty men.

Texas Wants Longbaugh.

Austin, Tex., Nov. 19.—An effort will be made to secure the return of Ben Kilpatrick, alias Harry Longbaugh, now held in St. Louis on suspicion of being one of the Montana train robbers. He is wanted for murder.

BLOODY BATTLE IN KENTUCKY.

One Striker Killed and Several Men Wounded.

Henderson, Ky., Nov. 19.—The situation in the Western Kentucky coal field is decidedly grave. Since 4 o'clock yesterday morning the gangs of lawless intruders from other states and from other counties in Kentucky, who have been sent into Hopkins and Webster counties by the United Mineworkers' union, have made two fierce attacks upon guarded mines, in one of which one man was instantly killed, another shot through the body and will die, and some seven or eight others more or less seriously wounded. In addition to this, a deliberate attempt was made late in the afternoon to assassinate two men employed by the St. Bernard Coal company, who were driving peacefully along the highway on their way to their homes in the vicinity of Nortonville. This general outbreak of anarchy and outrage has at last aroused the authorities of the state to action. Yesterday the Hopkinsville company was ordered to Madisonville, and the Madisonville company was ordered to report under arms at their armory at 11 o'clock last night. It is probable that a battery or artillery from either Louisville or Lexington will be on the way to the seat of war within twenty-four hours.

CULLOM SUCCEEDS DAVIS.

Illinois Senator Will Be Chairman of Foreign Relations Committee.

Washington, Nov. 19.—Senator Cullom of Illinois will be chairman of the foreign relations committee of the senate to succeed the late Senator Davis. "Ever since Senator Frye announced that he would not take the chairmanship of that committee," said Senator Cullom yesterday, "I have expected to take it, being the senior member of the committee after Mr. Frye. That is still my intention. It is so understood by my friends and other senators. Saturday I talked with Senator Lodge, who is next on the committee, and he offered me his congratulations on my coming chairmanship, which I accepted. We conferred as to the future work of the committee. There is no rivalry between us, and, of course, there will be no contest for the place. I cannot understand why rumors to the effect that I was undecided whether or not to take this chairmanship should be put into circulation. I had no other intention since Mr. Frye declined the honor."

EULOGIZES LI HUNG CHANG.

Empress Dowager Orders a Memorial Arch Erected.

Pekin, Nov. 19.—The empress dowager has issued an edict eulogizing the late Li Hung Chang and ordering the erection of a memorial arch near his birthplace. The edict also directs that the rank of marquis, conferred upon the eldest son of the late Chinese statesman in his own right, shall descend through twenty-three generations. It confers high rank upon the other sons of Earl Li upon whom the posthumous rank of marquis has been bestowed, and bestows and confers dignities upon his grandsons, together with lucrative offices.

FEAR FOR CHILD.

All Kinds of Atrocities Threatened Unless Immunity Is Bought.

Cincinnati, Nov. 19.—Considerable feeling of apprehension has been caused in Avondale in this city by a supposed attempt at blackmail, by threatened kidnapping. Mr. Leonard Smith, president of a message company, received a letter full of threats of atrocities to be committed on his six-year-old son unless Mr. Smith would buy immunity with $5,000 cash. Mr. Smith and his wife are greatly agitated and their fear has been communicated to the neighbors, who keep close watch over their children.

DICKERING WITH BRIGANDS.

No Reply to the Latest Proposal of Mr. Dickinson.

Sofia, Bulgaria, Nov. 19.—The brigands who abducted Miss Ellen M. Stone, the American missionary, and Mme. Tsilka, her companion, have not yet replied to the latest proposals of Mr Dickinson, diplomatic agent of the United States at Sofia. This is believed to be due to the fact that the band has many leaders and that the latter, are unable to agree among themselves. There is a general impression here that time is being frittered away while waiting for the brigands to reduce their demands.

LOSE WARDROBES.

Fire in the Finest of the Dormitories at Yale.

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 19.—Fire practically ruined the finest of the Yale students' dormitories, the Hutchinson, which was erected a few years ago at a cost of $200,000. The furnishings of the buildings and the personal effects of 200 or more students were also destroyed. Eugene Hale Winslow, a student from Punxsutawney, Pa., was cut off from exit by the stairways, and was rescued with difficulty from a fifth story window. He was unconscious when brought to the ground, and his condition is serious.

ROBBERS DRIVEN AWAY.

Citizens of a Kansas Town Bring Out Their Shotguns.

Wellington, Kan., Nov. 19.—Safe blowers raided Milan, a small town sixteen miles west of here, and after entering every prominent store, among them the one in which the postoffice is located, wrecked the safe and fixtures of the Milan State bank with dynamite. Two doors were blown off the safe, but the third, on which was the time lock, resisted the force of the explosive, and citizens rushed into the streets with shotguns and drove the robbers away before they secured any plunder.

ROBBERS EMPTY BANK VAULT.

Total Value of Plunder Secured at Greenville, Iowa, Not Known.

Spencer, Iowa, Nov. 19.—The Greenville bank, nine miles south, was robbed Saturday night. The vault doors were blown off and the robbers took all the money and papers. The bank is owned by the First National bank of this city. The amount taken is not known, but the damage to the vault and building was $1,000. The time lock shows that it was broken at 2 o'clock. There is no clue.

FORCED TO FLEE

INSURGENTS ARE ROUTED BY A COMPANY OF THE NINTH INFANTRY.

ANOTHER FIGHT ON SAMAR

REBELS TRY TO RUSH AMERICANS, BUT FAILING, THEY SCATTER.

TWO AMERICANS ARE KILLED

SEVERAL RECENT ENGAGEMENTS WITH INSURGENTS IN BATANGAS.

Manila, Nov. 19.—Company E of the Ninth infantry, Capt. F. H. Schoeffel, was attacked by a force of bolomen and several insurgents armed with rifles at a point six miles from Taranguin, in the island of Samar. The insurgents tried to rush the Americans, but failing to accomplish their purpose they quickly broke and scattered. The men of the Ninth had a corporal and a scout killed and one private wounded. Sixteen of the bolomen were killed, while the riflemen escaped.

Ten Hotchkiss rapid-fire guns will be sent to the Southern islands for operation in the mountains. Capt. Herman Hall of the Twenty-first infantry has been scouting for several days in Batangas province. He had four separate engagements with the insurgents there. Judging from the firing on these occasions Capt. Hall estimates the force of each band of the rebels at from thirty to fifty. They made no attempt to charge Capt. Hall's party. Capt. Hall's scout resulted in the capture of one insurgent officer and 50,000 pounds of rice. Gen. Sumner, commander of the district of Southern Luzon, highly praises Capt. Hartman and his troop of the First cavalry who last Wednesday morning attacked 400 insurgents intrenched in rifle pits at Buan, Batangas province, and Routed Them.

Gen. Sumner says the blow then administered by Capt. Hartman is the most severe the insurgents have experienced since he (Gen. Sumner) assumed command of the district.

Owing to the accidents to the United States transports Sheridan, Warren and Hancock, all having met with accidents in the inland seas of Japan, the return of the visiting congressmen is now delayed until the latter part of the year.

The Filipino priest Deposoy has been sentenced by court martial to the penalty of death for the murder of certain of his countrymen who favored the Americans. Out of respect, however, to the condemned man's calling and the great religious body to which he belonged and most unworthily represented, Gen. Chaffee has commuted his sentence to twenty years' imprisonment. Gen. Chaffee desires it to be understood that the leniency exercised in the case cannot be known as a precedent, and that no person in the islands can be permitted to plead his office, however sacred and exalted it may be, as protection against crimes committed.

BRITISH CATCHES.

An Average of a Hundred Boer Prisoners Per Week.

Bloemfontein, Nov. 19.—Boer prisoners continue to arrive here from the various British mobile columns in the Orange River Colony at the rate of about 100 per week. The Official Gazette contains a list of the names of Boers who have died in the refugee concentration barracks in Orange River Colony since the publication of the last statement. The list contains 230 names, and of these 180 are those of children under the age of fourteen.

Two Babies Perish in Blazing House at Vernon, Ill., and Mother Dies of Injuries.

Vandalia, Ill., Nov. 19.—At Vernon, just south of here, Mrs. Charles Bass left her two small children in the house while she went on an errand. She discovered her house in flames, hurried home, and made a desperate effort to rescue her children, but both were burned to death, and the mother was so terribly burned that she died after a few hours of suffering.

USED BANK FUNDS

TWO EMPLOYES GAMBLED IN STOCKS WITH THE USUAL RESULT.

ONE IS DEAD, OTHER CONFESSES

DEFALCATIONS AMOUNTING TO $60,000 HAVE BEEN DISCOVERED.

THE BANK IS FULLY PROTECTED

SURVIVOR IS AIDING IN THE INVESTIGATION OF THE BOOKS.

New York, Nov. 17.—Defalcations amounting, it is claimed, to $60,000 have been discovered in the accounts of the Williamsburg Savings bank, an institution conducted at Williamsburg in the suburbs of Brooklyn. Gen. J. V. Meserole, the president of the bank, is authority for the statement that the parties implicated in the affair are Harry E. Corbett, a former paying teller of the bank, who died Nov. 2, and George Zolleinhofer, a receiving teller, who, it is alleged, gave the first information leading to the discovery.

The bank is fully protected, it is said, by the bonds of both Corbett and Zolleinhofer. Harry E. Corbett had been in the employ of the bank for eighteen years. He was looked upon as a man of exemplary habits and not the slightest suspicion attached to him up to the time of his death.

According to Gen. Meserole, on Friday of last week, George Zolleinhofer, one of the receiving tellers, went to Cashier William Burns and that he (Zolleinhofer) and Corbett had for the past two or three years taken funds from the institution for the purpose of stock gambling, and that as far as he could estimate the amount that had been lost was between $50,000 and $60,000. Cashier Burns had Zolleinhofer repeat his confession to President Meserole and a meeting of the trustees of the bank followed.

Confessed to Him

The examination was not concluded that day, nor is it yet concluded, but irregularities enough were found to show that Zolleinhofer had not exaggerated the extent of the defalcations.

Zolleinhofer, after making his confession, placed himself in the hands of the trust companies and is aiding them in their investigation of the books. He was, with one exception, the oldest employe of the bank, having been with the institution for thirty-three years. He is sixty years old. Corbett died in his apartments in Brooklyn of pneumonia on Nov. 2. He and his wife were highly respected.

LONGBAUGH IN FOR IT.

Identified as Kilpatrick, Who Is Wanted for Murder in Texas.

St. Louis, Nov. 17.—The police are convinced that the Montana train robbery suspect in custody here is Ben Kilpatrick of Paint Rock, Tex., against whom there is a charge of murder. A letter containing an authentic picture of Kilpatrick was received yesterday afternoon from Sheriff House. The likeness between the picture and the prisoner is unmistakable. When the photograph was shown to the prisoner he was visibly agitated. He compressed his lips but he did not say anything. Within ten minutes after the photograph was shown a telegram was received from R. B. Kirk, the sheriff of Ballinger county, Tex., saying that the picture of the supposed Longbaugh had been positively identified there as that of Ben. Kilpatrick.

ROYAL SCARLETINA.

Eldest Son of the Crown Prince of Denmark Ill.

New York, Nov. 17.—An unfavorable bulletin regarding the condition of Prince Christian, the eldest son of the crown prince of Denmark, was given out last night, says the Copenhagen correspondent of the Times. The prince is suffering from scarletina. His strength diminished during the day and he became delirious at night. His temperature is relatively low.

HANCOCK IS ASHORE.

Third Vessel in Succession to Meet With Mishap in Japanese Waters.

Nagasaki, Japan, Nov. 17.—The United States transport Hancock is ashore on the south side of the Straits of Shimonoseki. A German gunboat is assisting her. The transport grounded on a sandy bottom. The Hancock is the third United States transport to meet with a mishap in Japanese waters recently.

Fall Work in Good Shape.

Mayville, N. D., Nov. 17.—Since the freeze-up which stopped plowing farmers have been bringing their wheat in. Although the grades are not as high as they have been in former years, the prices are good. Business is consequently brisk. Threshing was nearly finished in this vicinity before the cold snap, and most of the laborers have left the country. The magnificent weather is enabling the farmers to finish what threshing there was and to get their fall work done in good shape.

Large Loss of Lumber.

Sturgeon Bay, Wis., Nov. 17.—Fire destroyed $75,000 worth of lumber and for a time threatened the entire city. Four firemen were seriously injured before the flames were under control.

Farmers' Telephone Line.

Tyndall, S. D., Nov. 17.—Twelve farmers near Bon Homme are establishing a local telephone system. They each take $50 of stock. The officers of the company are: J. P. Cooley, president; C. C. Torrence, treasurer, and William Harrison, secretary.

La Crosse, Wis., Nov. 17.—Walter Winter, law partner of Congressman Esch, was elected supervisor of assessments for this county, the first election under the new law.

J. J. HILL IS PRESIDENT.

Placed at the Head of the Four-Hundred-Million Corporation.

New York, Nov. 16.—The Times says: James J. Hill, president of the Great Northern railway, was yesterday elected president of the Northern Securities company, the new $400,000,000 corporation, through the medium of which the Northwestern railroad tangle will be disposed of. The board of directors of the new company also were elected. They are as follows: John S. Kennedy, D. Willis James, Samuel Thorne, James J. Hill, E. T. Nichols, Joseph Baker, Robert Bacon, George W. Perkins, Daniel S. Lamont, E. H. Harriman, Jacob H. Schiff, James Stillman, W. H. Clough, George C. Clark and N. Terhune. Of these men six may be considered as representatives of the Great Northern interests, three represent the interests of J. P. Morgan & Co. and three more stand for the Harriman interests. Two are distinctly representatives of the Northern Pacific railway, and the remaining director, Samuel Thorne, who was president of the Pennsylvania Coal company, which now belongs to the Pennsylvania railroad, is regarded as representing Eastern interests.

SHOWER OF LEONIDES.

It Is a Small One, but It Makes Chicago Professors Happy.

Chicago, Nov. 16.—Shortly after 2 o'clock yesterday morning the long-looked-for shower of leonids appeared in the northwestern sky. The shower was not heavy, though between 2:25 and 2:30 twenty-five shooting stars were counted by one observer. Few people were abroad to witness the display. A few weary professors at the University of Chicago and several other enthusiasts were gladdened by the sight however.

DOCTOR IN TROUBLE.

Young Lady From Kansas Dying in a Chicago Hospital.

Chicago, Nov. 16.—Miss Erma Brown of Garden City, Kan., is dying at Cook county hospital as the result, physicians there assert, of an operation. Dr. E. R. Gray, also of Garden City, who is charged with having performed the operation, has been arrested. The police are looking for a young woman from Garden City who acted as nurse for Miss Brown while she was at a hotel in Clark street. Police officials say they will ask for the arrest of the son of a minister at Garden City.

PLANNED TRAIN ROBBERY.

Large Quantity of Dynamite Found Near a Bridge.

Omaha, Nov. 16.—Twenty-four sticks of dynamite, a piece of fuse and an explosion cap were found by a farmer's boy near the bridge of the Burlington road at Havelock, Neb., Sunday. The matter was not reported to the railroad officials at once, however, and it is feared the would-be criminals have escaped, but a force of detectives is at work on the case. An attempt at train robbery is supposed to be the motive for placing the explosives at the bridge.

ADRIFT ON THE LAKE.

Crew of Steamer Emerald Rescued in a Freezing Condition.

Port Hope, Mich., Nov. 16.—The steamer Emerald, from Alpena to Detroit, loaded with lumber and cedar, sprang aleak and became water-logged in the heavy gale Wednesday night off Point aux Barques. The life saving crew rescued the crew of nine in a freezing condition. The men could not have held out much longer. No effort was made to save the steamer.

KENTUCKY LEGISLATURE.

Democrats Will Have a Majority of Sixty on Joint Ballot.

Frankfort, Ky., Nov. 16.—The official count of the vote at the last elections shows that the Democrats will have sixty majority on joint ballot in the general assembly, as follows: House of representatives, Democrats, 73; Republicans, 27. Senate, Democrats, 26; Republicans, 12. On joint ballot, Democrats, 99; Republicans, 39; majority, 60.

London, Nov. 16.—A supposed case of bubonic plague was admitted yesterday into Hammersmith hospital. The patient is a resident of Chiswick, and has been employed on a tug working between Brentford and Greenwich, on the River Lee, for three weeks before he was taken to the hospital.

Fire Causes $50,000 Loss.

Chicago, Nov. 16.—Fire last night cleaned out the five-story stone building at 254 East Madison street, causing a total loss of about $50,000.

Killed in a Collision.

Orange City, Kan., Nov. 16.—Roy Ream, an engine wiper, was killed and Fred Slusser, a Santa Fe foreman, was fatally injured last night in a collision. The wreck occurred at the junction of the Santa Fe and Missouri Pacific.

Overdose of Chloroform.

Ponca City, Ind. T., Nov. 16.—Dr. H. W. Shaffer, well known in Kansas and Oklahoma, died yesterday from an overdose of chloroform taken, it is believed, accidentally. Mrs. Shaffer is at Bluffton, Ind.

Rickerby's Folly

By TOM GALLON

CHAPTER I.

A Footstep on the Stairs.

London, on a wild and gusty night in early spring. A night on which shutters were blown down, and men and women buffeted at street corners and flung against each other and hurled boisterously into unexpected doorways. A wild night, with heavy clouds driving fiercely across the moon, and a bitter, stinging rain whipping and cutting into the faces of passers-by. A whirling, shrieking, mad night, to make peaceful folk shiver in their beds, and bless God that they had a roof over them.

On this night, with their backs set steadily to the driving wind, two men were blown along, side by side, in the direction of a certain house, buried away in the heart of St. John's Wood. One of them, at least, must have known the way to it; for the pair kept straight on, without turning to the right or left, and without making inquiry of any one of the few people they met. Only once or twice, the taller man of the two would stop at a street corner, as though in doubt, and look about him perplexedly; then, while his companion stood still, he would take a step or two in one direction—shake his head and come back again; try another, and, with a nod of satisfaction, lead the way afresh. And thus, feeling their way, as it were, and beating it out in steady, persistent fashion, like men tracking their path through some wild place to which they were unaccustomed, they came to the house.

A gloomy and weird sort of place it was—relic of some earlier period before the era of villas and semi-detached residences; a great house for that part of London, set in a neglected wilderness of a garden, with a high wall all around it. A curious house, in two parts—one of which had lights in it, while the other was dark and cold, like the face of a man with one blind eye and the other sparkling with life. So much, at least, they could see of it, as they stood back on the other side of the road and caught a glimpse of its upper windows, over the top of the wall.

"Oh! poor old house; poor, old, forlorn place I once called home!" exclaimed the taller man, as he stared at its dark roofs outlined against the stormy sky. "How many years since I turned my back upon you; how many years, during which I have seen you, as clearly as I see you now, in strange cities and in wild places of the earth, where no real house ever stood! And now—to come back to you like this!"

The other man was silent; he merely glanced curiously at the house, while he held his hat on and strove to stand steadily against the wind.

"Now you understand what you have to do, Holden?" went on the tall man, after a pause. "You have the card; you have the money. This is merely a whim of mine; I want to prepare the way, as it were—to play the mysterious man, who does a good thing and hides himself while it is being done. I've earned the right to have that satisfaction, at least, out of the business. Their visitor is expected at midnight; it must be close on that now, and you—"

"But I don't quite see, sir," broke in the other man, "how I'm to manage the business. You have written to say that Gilbert Rickerby will be here"—pointing to the house—"at midnight."

"At midnight—certainly."

"But Gilbert Rickerby—excuse me for taking such a liberty with the name, sir—won't be there at all, because I—"

"Because you'll go in his place. You can explain that Gilbert Rickerby is a queer sort of fellow—the queerer the better for this business, Holden!—and will come later. Don't you see that, apart from the satisfaction of standing mysteriously outside the business, I want to know what sort of reception my emissary meets with? Hark! there goes the hour at last—midnight—and a wild night for a wild business—at least, some would think it so. Now, then, off with you!"

Holden crossed the road and stopped before a wooden gate in the high wall and rang the bell; the next moment the sound of the bell itself clanked out, even above the noise of the wind. The tall man on the opposite side of the road drew himself back into the shelter of a doorway, and prepared to make himself as comfortable as possible until the other's return.

After what seemed quite a long time a black space opened up in the gray length of the wall; swallowed the other man up, and became gray like the rest.

Meanwhile, in the house itself, the visitor was expected—expected with some trepidation, too, to judge from appearances, and yet with the hurry of fevered preparation. It was a ghostly old house, altogether, at the best of times; yet, surely, never more ghostly than to-night. For there were mysterious creakings and creepings on the stairs; a whispering of voices behind closed doors; once a lantern, flinging out long shafts of light from three sides, was swung aloft in the hand of some person moving about the dreary old garden; passed to the gate and paused there, as though the person who held it stood listening; went jerkily back into the house again.

At last, whatever preparations were afoot seemed to be completed; and three men drifted together silently into one room, on the first floor of that lighted part of the house. They came without speaking; and as though, for some strange purpose, they came together for company, to wait out the time, until something had to be done. Spirits were on a table in this room; but only one man drank—and that man hurriedly and furtively, as though he were nerving himself, of set purpose, and not as though he greatly enjoyed the drinking.

This man who drank was comparatively young, of a strong and active figure, and with a remarkably swarthy complexion. Whatever his general demeanor may have been, on this night he was never still for an instant; crossing his legs and uncrossing them, getting up and striding about the room, going at times to the door, and standing near it, listening intently.

The other two men were of an entirely different stamp. One was a man about sixty years of age, with a face gnarled and knotted and seamed, like the bark of some crabbed old forest tree; with a figure almost as bent and twisted as such a tree might have been; and with long feet and hands which, to carry the resemblance farther, were not unlike what the roots and twisted branches might have been. The third man was of about the same age as the first, but was, apparently, a servant. At all events, he was so far dependent upon the others, and subservient to them, that he kept his eyes glancing, nervously, from one to the other, and occasionally moistened his lips hurriedly with his tongue. For whatever business the three men waited, there was this difference between them: that the first waited in craving anxiety, the old man in careless imperturbability, and the third man in deadly fear. Indeed, this fear became so apparent presently, that the first man turned impatiently about and faced the younger of the other two.

"What the dickens are you staring at me like that for?" he demanded. "Isn't it enough to be in this ghastly place, at such an hour, without having a man in the room shaking and trembling as though he saw ghosts? What on earth is the matter with you?"

Before the man had time to reply, the old creature of the gnarled countenance broke in with a sort of gruesome chuckle. "It's nerves 'e wants, Muster Nugent," he said. "Nerves ain't given to everyone, like you an' me; they comes nat'ral—or they don't come at all. Better 'ave left 'im out of it."

"Never mind what you said; I could not leave him out of it." He crossed the room swiftly, and dropped his hand on the shoulder of the younger man—dropped it so heavily, and with such a grip in the fingers, that the other winced and moved uneasily.

"Now, listen to me, Miles Probyn," said he of the swarthy skin, "and, as you value your life, pay heed to it. I have no fear of our friend, Cornelius, here; he's made of tougher stuff." He indicated the old man, who acknowledged the compliment with a grin. "But with you, one has to be careful; you're of the sort that put ropes around honest men's necks and dig graves for them. Only remember, my friends, that I love company; so we'll sink or swim in this business together.

"Look at me—see what I am—know me for what I am—guess what I might have been. No—by heavens!" and he brought his fist down heavily upon the table, "not what I might have been, but what I will be! Not the man keeping a place warm for someone else—holding dead men's shoes to the fire to warm for another—not Nugent Leathwood, guarding an old fool's money, for someone who has forfeited the right to it. No—a hundred times no! From to-night you shall see another Nugent right to it. Leathwood taking for himself that which he has guarded so long, holding the place which is his, by right of power and conquest."

"And fillin' it like a man—not like a milk-and-water babby," broke in the old man, in the same voice as before.

"Look round this room—look round this house," cried Nugent, getting up excitedly and waving his arms towards the ceiling. "You know it well; you have seen scenes here such as few men see at all. An old man, who saw in every living creature something only to be suspicious of; who lived his dark and sombre life day after day, merely because he could not die; who had built at great expense, a second house, within a few yards of the one in which he lived, and had shut up his own wife there, out of his sight. You know what they call the place in the neighborhood; what a by-word it has become."

"'Rickerby's Folly,'" broke in old Cornelius, with another of his ghastly chuckles.

"That's it—'Rickerby's Folly.' Before I came, as you know, and before Cornelius came, old Rickerby turned his only son out of doors, to fight his way through life as best he might. Then, after I had come here, in a sort of death-bed repentance, the old fool hungered for the boy, and wrote to him, craving his forgiveness, and telling him that all he had in the world was his. And I—I, Nugent Leathwood, poor relation—I was to keep the precious property in trust for him, and do my best to find him out. That letter was sent without my knowledge; it chased the wanderer half over the world; it found him, under most extraordinary circumstances, in California. Just as I was congratulating myself on the fact that the young fool had joined the old fool, in a land where property doesn't count, the young fellow wrote to say that he was alive and well, and was coming home."

"Two years since that there letter came like a thunder-clap," said Cornelius. "Two years without a word from 'im; and to-night——"

"To-night he comes here," said Nugent. "To-night, in his own infernally mysterious fashion, he comes at midnight—alone—back to Rickerby's Folly."

"Drops in, friendly-like to 'ave a look at the accounts and ask after 'is gel." Thus Cornelius, with a leer of the most horrible description.

"Yes, that's the worst part of it. He comes back—in his own good time—to claim money, wife, everything; to say he's much obliged to me—and to walk away again. To walk away again!"

If ever that most blessed thing, a smile, may be said to be evil, it was surely an evil smile which crossed the face of Mr. Nugent Leathwood as he repeated these words. Cornelius drew his hand slowly down his face and glanced at his master; the third man turned a little whiter than before and glanced behind him.

"Now, mark this. A man has but one chance of life, so far as I reckon it, on this earth: that chance is mine now. This girl is nothing else than a mere schoolgirl; this property is more than either of you suspect. Between that girl and that property and myself stands an unknown man. And that unknown man enters this room in five minutes."

The younger man of the two listeners, seeing his face at that moment, half cried out and started to his feet. Nugent Leathwood stepped forward and caught him by the shoulders and forced him down again.

"Sit down; what have you to be frightened of? This man is nothing to anyone; if the old man hadn't acted like fool the son would have been a wanderer now, and a penniless wanderer at that. I have never seen him, but I know his fondness for mystery and for hiding and skulking about the world. This visit of his to-night will be a mere flying one; he chooses his hour and he comes alone. No one knows he is in England. He tells me in this letter that he has no wish to see anyone but myself; that the associations of the old place are too painful; that he desires some private talk with me, and then to go away again."

It was curious that not one of the trio spoke definitely as to the business in hand; it was merely tacitly understood among them. There was a long and awkward pause; and then Nugent Leathwood said his final word.

"Understand—this business is mine; I've set my hand to it, and I don't turn back now. I am obliged to have you here, the pair of you; there must be no noise, and I may not be able to do what I want alone. There is nothing to fear—nothing to worry about. Bah! why do men make such a fuss about matters of this kind? The only mistake is in being found out. If Gilbert Rickerby had come back openly, and in the light of day, all would have been well; he chooses to sneak back at night like a thief; and he must take the consequences. Now, Cornelius, be ready for the gate—the hour has struck. Remember, Cornelius, you bring him up stairs and lead the way into the room. There's the bell."

Without a word Cornelius got up slowly from his chair, and shuffled across the floor, opened the door, and disappeared into the darkness of the staircase. They heard his slow feet going down even while the bell was shaking its last notes on the silence. Nugent Leathwood had slipped across to the window and was peering out into the darkness.

"There they come," he whispered. "I can see his lantern dodging about among the trees." His voice shook a little, despite his endeavor to keep it steady.

"But you—you say you don't—don't know the man, master?" whispered Probyn, where he stood, near the table, gripping it.

"What the dickens does that matter?" exclaimed the other, impatiently. "Do you imagine that two men would come to Rickerby's Folly at midnight, calling themselves Gilbert Rickerby? Now, then—here they come!"

The two men waiting above heard the lower door closed with a bang; heard the grumbling voice of old Cornelius cursing the wind. Then, as the men stood up, trembling, near the table, the other got over against the wall, and literally behind the door which gave on to the staircase. In the horrible, deathly silence that reigned in the room they could distinctly hear the shuffling feet of the old man coming up; but no other sound. Then, in a moment, the old man came into the room, holding between a finger and thumb a little white piece of pasteboard. Nugent Leathwood darted forward at him.

"Where is he? What have you done?"

"Comin' up," answered the old man. "I said I'd go up an' see if you was at 'ome. 'Ere's 'is card—all right an' square, you see."

Nugent Leathwood merely glanced at it, and set his teeth. "Good. Call him up."

Cornelius went to the door and thrust out his head into the darkness; called out, in the blandest, sheeriest fashion—"Come up, sir—come up. Mind the stairs, sir."

So the three waited while brisk steps were heard on the stairs, steps that kept time to the heart-beats of two of them, at least. Then the man crossed the threshold quietly, looking straight in front of him. The first face he saw was that of Miles Probyn—looking, not at him, but at something or some one over his shoulder; and the face was so ghastly and so terror-stricken, that the man swung round instinctively to look behind him. And then, in a moment, he was battling frantically for his life.

The shock of it had taken him absolutely by surprise. To be caught in a grip like that—a grip that was slowly but surely choking the life out of him; and to see as he swayed about, with everything distorted and red-streaked in his agonized vision, only two faces besides that of his murderer, looking calmly on, and making no attempt either to assist him or his assailant, broke down whatever of energy he might have had in sheer wonder. But, as the grip tightened the fierce instinct to battle for his life came more fully upon him; he strove to loosen the cruel hands from his throat—strove to speak or to cry out. Slowly and relentlessly, however, the horrible thing was done; the room ceased to echo to the tramping feet, and the man who had come in but a few moments before, bright-eyed, quick, alert and eager, lay dead and disfigured at the feet of the three men.

Nugent Leathwood shook himself, and put a hand to his collar and gasped a little; staggered to the table, poured out some spirits, and drank rapidly. He took out his handkerchief and slowly wiped his hands and his forehead; swayed against the table, and then stood upright and essayed to laugh.

"Ah! that was pretty rapid. Shut that door. Give me a minute—to get the deadly shaking out of my limbs—and I'll tell you—tell you what to do. You—you're sure he was alone?"

"Certain sure," whispered Cornelius. "I asked 'im—and there wasn't nobody else in sight. Hallo—what's the matter with you?"

This question was addressed to Probyn, who had slipped down upon his knees on the floor, and had covered his face with his hands. He made no reply, but merely shivered, and uttered a low, moaning sound.

"Let him alone," said Nugent, hurriedly. "I'll bring him to his senses presently. This matter won't wait presently. This matter won't wait."

"Now, Gilbert Rickerby—we'll say good bye to you, for the present, at least!"

Between them, the old man and Nugent raised the body and staggered with it out of the room and down the stairs, Nugent looking back at the door to say, in a hoarse whisper: "You stay here till I come back; I'll have a word with you then."

The wretched man on his knees heard the blundering steps going down stairs, heard the opening of doors and the whispering of the men. Then, when all was silent again, he staggered to his feet like a drunken man; went blindly, and with one hand stretched out to feel the way towards the stairs, and, still moaning horribly, crept down and out of the house. The other two, with their burden, heard the bang of the great hall door; and stopped and looked at each other.

"What was that?" whispered Nugent, bending his face close to that of the other man.

"Someone gone out—or come in!"

Without a word, they lowered their burden to the ground and set off running towards the door. Leathwood got to it first and tore it open; saw, in the fitful light of the room, the flying figure reach the gate and dash out into the road.

"Probyn!" he gasped, glancing at Cornelius. "I must have him back. Wait here!"

But, though he got swiftly to the gate, and looked in all directions, there was no figure in sight; he ran distractedly to the corner of the street, but there was no one about; the whole place had the aspect of a city of the dead. Trembling and fearful, he ran back again and regained the house, and set about completing his work.

CHAPTER II.

The House of Pain.

The man who waited on the outside of the house in the blustering wind and rain, while his messenger went on his errand, had but a little time to wait, after all. Expecting some delay, he had drawn himself up as snugly as possible in the shelter of the doorway on the opposite side of the street; had even made two unsuccessful attempts to light a cigar, but had given it up as hopeless.

"I wonder what they'll say to him," he muttered, glancing across at the lighted window of the house. "What message will this cousin have to send? Ugh! This is not the pleasantest spot in the world to wait in. I almost wish that I had gone myself. I suppose if I hadn't lived such a self-centered life, I should long ago have cast off these suspicions and distrusts. How the wind howls! I'm nearly wet through!"

Then, quite suddenly, into the dark and dreary night, was shot forth a man—from the same gateway that had swallowed up his messenger. But this man came out as though fearful of something behind him—dashed out blindly, with one hand half-covering his eyes, and the other stretched out, gropingly, before him, turned swiftly and darted off down the street; turned the first corner and was gone. Even as he disappeared, another figure rushed through the gate—looked in all directions, and ran swiftly in the opposite direction; halted a moment, and looked about; and then ran back again. Scarcely realizing what he did, the man who had waited in the doorway glided out and ran at top speed after the first fugitive.

The man had a good start; and, as the streets in that part were short and were bisected, moreover, by narrower streets, the fugitive had a good chance of getting clear away. Indeed, it was only by good luck that the man who followed could have hoped to come up with him. But luck happened to be on his side; coming to the end of a street and glancing to left and to right in search of his man, he saw him, a little way down the street to the right, sitting on the steps of a building that looked like a church, with his head in his hands. The pursuer crossed the road and made rapidly towards him.

He was within a couple of yards of him when the man started to his feet; beat off the other with both hands, and, with a cry of terror, dashed away again. The other set his teeth grimly, and settled down as grimly to the chase.

Street after street they traversed, racing madly through the driving rain—sometimes in the roadways, sometimes on the pavement—through pools of water, over heaps of stones, through and over everything that came in the way. And the first man maintained the lead, even though he darted on, in that mad fashion, crying to himself, and with one hand covering his eyes partially, and the other stretched out before him.

Then another sound grew out of the night—a sound above the whistling of the wind—above the noise of racing feet. A great roar and rattle of wheels and hoofs, the patter of many feet on the pavement, the shouts and cries of men who ran. The second of the two men, with but a yard dividing him from the man in front, glanced rapidly to the left as he came to the end of a street; saw a gleaming, fiery thing, with brass-helmeted men upon it, sweeping down towards them, and shouted frantically to the man who ran before.

In the roar and rush and hurry of the moment he saw and heard only two things: saw the man in front dart straight before the flying, swaying monster, beat it with his feeble hands, and go down under it; heard the shout that went up from many throats as one of the firemen dropped nimbly off behind, and the engine swung along on its way. The crowd divided, some roaring along in the wake of the engine, some gathering about the little group in the roadway.

They picked up the poor, broken, bruised, soiled thing and placed it tenderly in a cab after some little delay, the man who had been the indirect cause of the disaster had pressed forward and proffered his services; the firemen had left them, and set off, running in the direction the engine had taken, leaving a policeman to take the matter in charge.

"Did you see it, sir?" asked this official, turning to the man who stood beside him.

"Yes. I—I was close behind him. He—he ran—right into the thing. It was horrible!"

"Seems to have shaken you up a bit, sir?" said the constable, calmly, with a glance at him up and down. "You don't know the man, I suppose?"

"No, I don't know him—never saw him before. Here's the cab; I'll go with you to the hospital, if you like."

Now, in the sudden excitement of this matter, and in the sudden tragic ending it had, the man had quite forgotten where he should have been at that moment, and for whom he should have been waiting. He only knew that this man had dashed out of that mysterious house, in apparently deadly fear, and had gone plunging through the wind and the rain like a maniac; had met with what might have been his death in that blind hurry. He wanted to know more of him—to see what the end of this business was to be. The policeman only too gladly accepted his offer, and they put the unconscious man in the cab and rode away with him.

Into the great, quiet, orderly building the man was carried. Some sort of consciousness had come upon him, and he moaned fitfully and flung his head from side to side, and stared about him. While he was being examined the policeman glanced curiously once or twice at the other man—partly because it might be necessary, in the official sense, to swear to him, at some time or other; partly because the man was obviously so greatly perturbed by the accident.

He was a tall man, as has been said with well-cut features and a skin which, though naturally clear, had been tanned by long exposure to sun and wind; the face had about it something of a curious restraint, and something of melancholy. For the rest, he was a gentlemanly-looking fellow enough, well dressed and with a smooth and easy mode of speech.

The examination was over, the grave-faced, business-like surgeon had pronounced the injuries severe, and had given instructions to have the man placed in a certain ward at once. As they were moving him he suddenly flung up one crushed hand and shrieked out a name:

"Gilbert Rickerby"!

The tall man of the tanned skin started violently, and bent forward to look at the broken creature more closely; the policeman meditatively fingered the metal ventilator of the top of his helmet, and looked at the man they were carrying away, musingly. "Now, I wonder," he said, "whether that happens to be your name?"

TRICK OF THE HIGH CLIMBER.

Made $40 When the Indicator of the Waterworks Got Out of Order.

"Say," he went on, "I fool people great sometimes. High-climbing takes originality. There was a standpipe in the water works of a Pennsylvania town, and its indicator got out of order. They sent for me and asked what I would charge to get a rope up. 'Forty dollars,' I says, as soon as I understood the game, 'and I'll do it to-day.' All I want from you is to lower the water in your standpipe to ten feet from the bottom for a moment, when I give you the word.' 'What's that for?' the boss says. 'Never mind,' says I, 'just do it. You can let it go right back to the top again.' The boss had thought it was going to cost them over $100, and he was so tickled at the idea of getting it done for $40 that he never said another word.

"I went and got a life-preserver and a monkey wrench. I put the life preserver on, and gave the word to lower the water. Then, when no one was looking, I unscrewed the little door near the foot of the stand pipe, stepped inside, told my assistant to screw up the door again and tell them to raise the water. Say, I floated up to the top of that pipe as nice as you please. I had my rope with a hook on the end of it with me, and I fastened it at the top and came down hand-over-hand.

"'When are you goin' to start, young begun with the rigging yet.' feller?' said the boss, when I saw him, a few moments later. 'I see you haven't

"'The rope's up now,' I says. 'I'm through.'

"'Bless me, how did you do it?' says he. 'Do you want to know?' says I. Well, don't tell anyone, but in this little bag here I have a suction machine with leather straps. This machine goes around, the straps catch on the pipe and pull me up!'

Tommy's Joke.

Tommy is not more than five years old, but he can ask more questions than most boys of ten years. His curiosity is never satisfied, and sometimes, as is quite natural, his mother tires of it. Such was the case one day, when she said:

"Now, Tommy, if you would only keep still, and not bother people with your questions, you don't know how much you might learn."

Tommy never said a word, but treasured the advice. A few days later he was sent to the grocer's.

"Say, ma," said he, on his return, "you told me if I'd keep still and not ask questions, I'd learn a lot; but it isn't true. I went to the grocer's, and he was talkin' and talkin' but I didn't learn a thing."

"Why, that is strange," said his mother.

"No, it wasn't, either," grinned Tommy, who was enjoying the joke. "He was talkin' Dutch."

The Beginning.

Pat was a bashful lover and Biddy was coy—but not too coy.

"Biddy," Pat began, timidly, "did ye iver think av marryin'?"

"Sure, now, th' sugject has niver entered me thoughts," demurely replied Biddy.

"It's sorry Oi am," said Pat, turning away.

"Wan minute, Paddy!" called Biddy, softly. "Ye've set me a-thinkin'."—Tit Bits.

Encouraging Him.

"I have a very short memory," said Willie Wishington, self-accusingly.

"One would never think it, from the stories you tell," answered Miss Cayenne, sweetly.—Washington Star.

St. Jacobs Oil for Chest-Colds, Bronchitis, Croup and Pleurisy.

An outward application for bronchial difficulties is many times far more effective than syrups, cough mixtures, cod liver oil, etc., simply because it penetrates through to the direct cause, which is, as a rule, an accumulation of matter or growth tightly adhered to the bronchial tubes.

St. Jacobs Oil, possessing as it does those wonderful penetrating powers, enables it to loosen these adhesions and to induce free expectoration. Cases have been known where expectorations have been examined after St. Jacobs Oil had been applied, and the exact formation was clearly shown, where the adhesions had been removed or pulled off the bronchial tubes. All irritation of the delicate mucous membrane of the bronchae is quickly removed by the healing and soothing properties of St. Jacobs Oil. In cases of croup and whooping cough in children St. Jacobs Oil will be found superior to any other remedy.

St. Jacobs Oil is for sale throughout the world. It is clean to use—not at all greasy or oily, as its name might imply. For rheumatism, gout, sciatica, neuralgia, cramp, pleurisy, lumbago, sore throat, bronchitis, soreness, stiffness, bruises, toothache, headache, backache, footache, pains in the chest, pains in the back, pains in the shoulders, pains in the limbs, and all bodily aches and pains, it has no equal. It acts like magic. Safe, sure and never failing.

Doesn't Like Consulship.

Gerald Carlton, who served as consul at St. Pierre, Miquelon, under appointment from President McKinley, was pointing out how undesirable such positions are:

"It cost me $200 to get there," said he, "and when I arrived, being one of them 'literary fellers,' I hadn't any more money than I could conveniently carry around with me. There was no salary attached to the place, it being a fee office. I found that my predecessor had cleaned up everything in sight.

"To add to my troubles, the 'Queen of the Islands,' a wealthy widow, attempted to marry me, and the Pooh Bah, a sort of missing link, had a habit of being over-companionable. I at last asked President McKinley to stop considering me a consul. Then I packed my grip and started for the land of the free and the home of the brave. No more consulships in mine, thank you; I've had that and been cured"—New York Times.

Disconcerting.

"American ideas are making great progress in England."

"Yes, confound 'em!" said the man with his trousers rolled up. "They get one all confused. A lot of the papers over there have almost quit printing the point of a joke in italics."—Washington Star.

Wade, the celebrated criminal lawyer of this city, whose opinion on legal matters is unquestioned, has recently made public his unqualified opinion on the matter of medicine. Mr. Wade says that Rheumatism and Kidney Trouble affect the eyesight, and further that there is no case of the kind that can not be cured by Dodd's Kidney Pills.

He has no fear of being set right by any of his medical friends, for both statements have a living and indisputable proof in the person of the great lawyer himself, who, as a result of Rheumatism and Kidney Trouble from which he suffered for years, became totally blind.

Physicians, the best in the country, pronounced his case incurable and hopeless, but Dodd's Kidney Pills cured him, restored his sight, drove away the Kidney Trouble and with it the Rheumatism, and made an all-around well man of him.

A Resolute Widow.

"When does the next train that stops at Montrose leave here?" asked the resolute widow at the booking office window.

"You'll have to wait five hours."

"I don't think so."

"Well, perhaps you know better than I do."

"Yes, sir! And perhaps you know better than I do whether I'm expecting to travel by that train myself or whether I'm inquiring for a relative that's visiting at my house! And maybe you think it's your business to stand behind there and try to instruct people about things they know as well as you do; if not better! And perhaps you'll learn some day to give people civil answers when they ask you civil questions, young man; but my opinion is you won't!"

"Yes, ma'am!" gasped the booking clerk.—London Answers.

ODD LAWS OF TOWNS.

STRANGERS MUST SUBMIT TO SOME QUEER RULES.

One Village Compels the Aldermen to Clean Out the Drains Personally—Severe Cycling Code of Vienna—Penalty for Digging Holes.

With the increased prerogatives of late years to municipalities there have been some freakish developments in the theory of government. Almost every conceivable idea of urban control has been put on trial. Cranks of high and low degree have succeeded in foisting their notions upon the controlling assemblies, and as a consequence there have been some startling changes in the outward aspects of the cities. No detail has escaped, but the entire body politic, animate and inanimate, has been made to feel the effect of innovations. Although as a rule English and American cities have escaped the freaks, there are exceptional instances in which the hand of the crank is visible. Even London, staid and conservative as a general thing, can show one or two curious enactments. For instance, it is an offense in the city to unload casks of beer between certain hours. Perhaps the reader will say there is nothing very remarkable about this. The odd part of the by-law in question is that it says nothing about casks of any other beverage. Presumably, therefore, casks of ginger beer may block the pavements at any and all times. Another bit of legislation of which probably few people are aware is contained in a notice lately issued by the Holborn board of works, which cites certain pains and penalties for the offense of strewing paper about the streets. Glasgow recently enacted that no flower sellers should be allowed in the streets on Sunday, and the town of Dunoon will not permit travelers or holiday makers to land on its pier on the first day of the week. Colchester has very severe by-laws dealing with those who trespass on its oysterbeds, and woebetide the unlucky yachtsman who ignorantly allows his craft to ground upon the shingle banks on which the young spat grow. Recently an old sailor was fined a sovereign for picking up three oysters at low tide.

Llanfyllin is a small town in Montgomeryshire. Its town council was recently horrified at the suggestion that a dramatic license should be granted to a London agent for the use of the town hall to give there some musical plays. Only one councilor dared to support the suggestion; which was negatived by an overwhelming majority. Padsworth, a village near Pangbourne, has a council whose example is worthy of all praise. To keep down the local rates it has been decided by that body that wherever it is possible any municipal work should be carried out by the councilors themselves. Four members were recently observed clearing out a drain underneath a public footpath crossing the mill meadows, so it is evident this is no case of preaching without practice. Nothing, however, to be found in the United Kingdom compares in eccentricity with some of the regulations laid down by foreign city authorities. Ems, for instance, the German health resort, enacted as lately as May last that ladies living or staying in the town must not wear trains in the streets. The objection to this practice is that it makes the dust fly. Neither may men smoke in public during the hours when invalids are taking their walks. Another important German town, Carlsbad, has promulgated all sorts of pain and penalties against persons who dig holes of any kind without express permission from the city surveyor. There is more wisdom in this regulation than at first appears, for the whole town is built upon the lid of a gigantic underground cauldron, known as the Sprudee Kessel, from which issue the hot springs which have given the place its fame as a health resort. This lid once broken through, a boiling geyser and scalding flood would be the probable consequence. Vienna has the severest cycling code of any city in Europe. No one may ride a bicycle in the streets without a certificate of proficiency. This applies especially to lady cyclists. Ladies have to mount and dismount from both sides of their wheels, show that they can turn corners and ride in and out between a number of dummies. All cyclists are photographed by the police, and this photograph is fitted into a little book containing the rules and regulations for cycling in the city.—Chicago Chronicle.

Basalts Near Denver, Col.

Dr. Edward Goldsmith said that during the summer he had visited the volcanic region about fifteen miles north of Denver, and had been struck by some peculiarities of the formation. At one place the basalt appeared to him to form a solid crater. This, however, showed no depression on the summit. At another a basaltic dike extended for about two miles. The molten eruption had evidently been ejected through the cretaceous formation and then, after it had hardened, the surrounding material had been worn away by erosion, leaving the basaltic columns standing, towering to a height of some eighty feet.

It was in this locality, he continued, that gold washing first took place, and as there is nowhere else that the gold could have come from, he thought it highly probable that it originated in these lava outflows. Dr. Goldsmith also described some of the minerals found in the region and gave an interesting account of a gold mine he had visited.

ROOSEVELT'S WINTER HUNT.

The President Tells of a Jaunt in the Rocky Mountains.

In midwinter hunting on horseback in the Rockies is apt to be cold work, but we were too warmly clad to mind the weather, says Theodore Roosevelt in Scribner's. We wore heavy flannels, jackets lined with sheepskin, caps which drew down entirely over our ears and on our feet heavy ordinary socks, German socks and overshoes. Galloping through the brush and among the spikes of the dead cedars meant that now and then one got snagged. I found tough overalls better than trousers; and most of the time I did not need the jacket, wearing my old buckskin shirt, which is to my mind a particularly useful and comfortable garment.

It is a high, dry country, where the winters are usually very cold, but the snow not under ordinary circumstances very deep. It is wild and broken in character, the hills and low mountains rising in sheer slopes, broken by cliffs and riven by deeply cut and gloomy gorges and ravines. The sagebush grows everywhere upon the flats and hillsides. Large open groves of pinyon and cedar are scattered over the peaks, ridges and tablelands. Tall spruces cluster in the cold ravines. Cottonwoods grow along the stream courses, and there are occasional patches of scrub oak and quaking asp. The entire country is taken up with cattle ranges wherever it is possible to get a sufficient water supply, natural or artificial. Some thirty miles to the east and north, the mountains rise higher, the evergreen forest becomes continuous, the snow lies deep all through the winter, and such northern animals as the wolverine, lucivee and snowshoe rabbit are found. This high country is the summer home of the Colorado elk, which are now rapidly becoming extinct, and of the Colorado black-tail deer, which are still very plentiful, but which, unless better protected, will follow the elk in the next decade or so. In winter both elk and deer come down to the lower country, through a part of which I made my hunting trip."

HOW MONARCH'S SLEEP.

Some Are Troubled with Insomnia Others Enjoy Their Repose.

There is, after all, but little difference between him who wears a crown and ordinary human beings when it comes to the matter of sleeping and eating and drinking. Emperor William is a soldier even when he goes to bed, for he sleeps on a regulation camp bed, such as his officers use. The bed clothing is of the rough regimental pattern. He retires at 11 p. m. and is up and dressed soon after 6 a. m. Queen Victoria went to bed quite late, although she was a comparatively early riser. Year in and year out her average time of going to bed was 10:15. A lady in waiting was deputed to read her to sleep. The czar of Russia has the greatest difficulty in getting a good night's rest, and yet he is what old-fashioned people call "a lover of the bed." He dreads the night. His bedroom is always brilliantly lighted, like a reception-room. He often suffers from acute insomnia and makes a frequent use of chloral. Queen Wilhelmina goes to bed about 11 o'clock and gets up early. On rising she takes a stroll around the park and visits the stables. Her bedstead is of monumental size, being broad enough for six and proportionately deep. Leopold III, the king of the Belgians, goes late to bed. He spends half the night working and reading. In strong contrast to his neighboring sovereign, he uses an ordinary bedstead, without any other luxury than a quilt of swandown. He is a very chilly mortal. The king of Italy cannot sleep except upon a very hard bed. He dispenses with the use of pillows. He uses sheets of the very coarsest web and sleeps like a top.

Undertaker's Turn to Laugh.

"We don't often have funny experiences in our business," said a well-known undertaker yesterday, "but when I first went into it I was the victim of a practical joke that I succeeded in turning my way. I was approached one morning by an acquaintance. He was apparently greatly worried and asked me to go to his house, saying my services were needed. I went almost immediately and was surprised to find the man out. His wife met me, however, and escorted me to a rear room. Then she retreated, probably to laugh, while I made a close examination and found a small foxterrier lying dead on a chair. 'You want the dog buried?' I asked, and was told yes. That was all the conversation we had at the time, but it was sufficient to constitute an order. I left, only to return an hour later with a small casket, made from a soap box. I drove my largest wagon, made all the display possible, and created no little excitement among the neighbors. I got the dog's body, drove off, and had it buried on an annex garbage dump. Then my fun began. I sent a bill for $10 the next day. The man came down in a rage, tried to explain that it was only a joke, but it wouldn't go with me. 'This is only a little fun on my part,' I told him, and when he refused to pay I entered suit before a certain magistrate and recovered the bill and costs. Then I laughed and enjoyed it."—Baltimore Sun.

The talk of making sectionalism an issue in this congressional district is not good sense. What is wanted is a man that is big enough to represent the whole district.

Two weeks from now congress will be in session. An attempt will be made to open up all the Indian reservations in Minnesota at this session. This is the proper thing to do. The government is really doing the Indians an injury by keeping them in their present condition. The quickest way to civilize them is to let them be surrounded by white people.

The dairy and food commission of the state of Minnesota will endeavor to interest the farmers in the northern and western part of the state in building cheese factories and creameries. The cost of feeding cows in this section—owing to the cheapness of hay—is perhaps less than in any other part of the state, and the sooner the farmers build cheese factories and creameries the sooner will they prosper.

The Great Northern's winter campaign for Western colonization will be the most extensive and aggressive undertaking since the organization of the system. The entire East is to be flooded with pamphlets, folders, bulletins, circulars and advertising in newspapers, telling of the resources of the unoccupied lands of Minnesota North Dakota. Officials of the immigration department will follow, to form parties to go West in the spring.

Asked regarding the incorporation of the Northern Securities company, Gov. Van Sant gives out the following frank interview:

"The great railway deal in New York, having for its object the uniting of two great competing parallel lines, the Northern Pacific and the Great Northern, is a matter of great public interest.

"There is justly widespread opposition to it in our state. I do not know if it can be prevented, but it is my intention to ask Attorney General Douglas upon his return to bring suit in the name of the state to prevent if possible the consolidation of the Great Northern and the Northern Pacific Railway companies. It is clearly in open violation of the plain intent and purpose of the law. If under existing laws the said consolidation cannot be prevented, I feel that I would be justified in calling an extra session of the legislature to take necessary steps to successfully resist it if it could be accomplished by this means.

"Believing it to be my plain duty, I shall leave no stone unturned to prevent this consolidation. Owing to the great interest of our people and state at stake, it should and will be a fight to a finish. If the will of the people of Minnesota can be trampled upon in this manner, the sooner the fact is ascertained and understood the better."

THE THIEF RIVER FALLS NEWS.

VOL. XVIII. THIEF RIVER FALLS, MINN., THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 28, 1901. NUMBER 47.

UP ON SHOTLEY

An Interesting Letter from Bulman's Camp.

All the men in Bulman Bros.' camp are from Thief River Falls. They were not here to participate in the late election, but they held an election of their own, as will be seen by the following letter:

Bulman Bros.' Camp, Shotley Brook, Nov. 17, 1901.

Editor News: This is the day we rest, and while we are resting will let you know how things are going. This camp is located five miles from Shotley Brook on an island surrounded by a floating bog. It is reached by the longest corduroy road in Minnesota—three miles long. The tote road was commenced on Sept. 23, since then we have built a corduroy road three miles long and ten camps and barns, and have 500,000 feet of logs on skids. John Swanton is cook, assisted by Ed Rodgers and Ed Cook, and if you want a good square meal, just come up to Shotley Brook. Ed Rodgers has the Chippewa language down "pat." He don't talk anything else, and E. M. Stone isn't a rabbit jump behind him.

We had a hot election in this city—Shotley Brook. The election went as follows:

Mayor—Leo Kuklinski.
Alderman First Ward—J. R. Brunson.
Second Ward—Bob Lonson.
Third Ward—Joe Bulman.
Municipal Judge—Fay Draper.
Clerk Municipal Court—Chas. Alexander.
Alderman Very Large—John Swanton.
Chief of Police—Carl Nyberg.
Coroner—Lou Davis.
Health Officer—Dr. Stone.

Mayor Leo done the fair thing after he was elected, he tapped a keg of nails. No license carried by one vote.

There are about 60 men in camp now and Bulman Bros. will put in six million if Tamarac river will hold them.

Chas. Alexander will be scaler here this winter, but just wait until Wm. J. or 3-star Kelley gets here. Then we will be fixed.

Tim Craig's camp is four miles from here, and Tim has several hundred thousand already landed.

Leo Kuklinski, the mayor of Shotley Brook, is now wearing "Donegals."

If you are up this way this winter we will entertain you to the Queen's taste. George Leeple will sing you a few choice songs, and Ed Cook and Ed Rodgers will show you all the figures of a Chippewa dance.

Send us your paper and we will send you the news.

Yours truly,
Ole Overalls,
Mayor's Clerk.

The Iron Range Telephone company has destroyed a number of trees and otherwise marred the scenery along the lake shore, where the people of Bemidji a year ago kept the Minnesota & International railway from constructing their lines, something that meant thousands of dollars to the town. The Bemidji authorities will begin an action to recover $10,000 damages.

Walter Winchester of Warren tells the Register that while he was out deer hunting last week he climbed a tree to get his bearings, leaving his rifle propped against a log. While he was trying to make out where he was at, two moose came out of the brush and trotted by, passing almost directly beneath the limb on which he rested. They disappeared in the distance before he could descend and draw a bead on them. Mr. Winchester complains that people to whom he tells this story look at him a minute and then walk away without saying anything.

A Luverne man regrets the frequency with which hunters are mistaken for deer and killed and proposes a law be enacted that no license be issued to any one unless he signs a contract to wear a bright red coat and cap. Let this law provide that a fine of $100 shall attach to hunting deer without such an outfit. A Hunter would not be apt to get many deer while wearing such an outfit.

THANKFUL?

Sure, Why Shouldn't We Be?

We are thankful because our lot is cast among the energetic, intelligent citizens of Thief River Falls.

THANKFUL because our city is surrounded by as choice land as the sun shines on.

THANKFUL that the future prosperity of this city and vicinity is so full of promise.

THANLFUL that our efforts to conduct a clean, honest business, on business principles, is meeting with success and the increasing patronage of purchasers.

THANKFUL we have discounted every bill since beginning operations.

THANKFUL that we don't have to buy, neither offer to our customers, "something just as good." We buy close for cash and our friends receive the benefit.

THANKFUL that our store is not a collection of antiquated curiosities and last year's bird nests. Our dry goods, boots and shoes, and everything we offer is the latest in style and pattern and as good as money can buy.

THANKFUL that our famous Grocery Department with its Home Brand is also doing its share in making many house wives glad this week.

THANKFUL that good goods sell, and that we don't have to deceive to dispose of merchandise. Now, if you don't know how we do business, give us an opportunity of making you thankful. We can do it. Try us.

Thankfully yours,

Central Mercantile Co.

JUDGE WATTS

Will Be at Germantown December 5th and 6th.

Judge Watts, of Crookston, will be at Germantown on the afternoon of December 5th, and on the forenoon of December 6th, for the purpose of issuing citizenship papers to those who desire them. This is an opportunity which all the citizens of Eastern Marshall county should take advantage of.

I. G. Browning will also be at Germantown on the above date to transact land office business.

Hearing for Contempt of Court.

Spiro Bisazza, who is now serving an eight months sentence in the Fergus Falls jail, will be released early next month. But it is possible that Mr. Bisazza is not yet done with confinement, for a contempt of court case is hanging over his head. Bisazza was ordered to turn over to his trustees a sum of $5,000, which order he has as yet failed to comply with. The hearing in the case is set for November 29, at Fargo, Halvor Steenerson being his attorney.

Here is something which you may try, and after having tried it please explain at your leisure: Take the number of your living brothers, double this amount, add to it three, multiply the result by five, add to it the number of living sisters, multiply by ten, add number of deaths of brothers and sisters subtract 150 from the result. The right hand figure will be the number of deaths, the middle figure will be the number of living sisters and the left figure will be the number of living brothers.—Ex.

The Great Northern is offering the following prices for ties this winter, delivered on their right of way: White and burr oak, 50 to 35 cents; white pine, 38 to 28 cents; cedar, 30 to 23 cents; tamarack, 27 to 21 cents. They must be eight feet long, seven inches thick, with an eigh-inch face.

It is popularly supposed that the Scandinavian immigrant has claimed the Northwest for his own but recent statistics show that more Germans than Scandinavians have come to this section, and the two classes together do not equal the immigrants of all others nations.

Warren wants waterworks, electric lights, and sewerage, but the $10,000 bonds now outstanding against the city is the charter limit and the city must wait until the legislature can be appealed to.

EAST SIDE DITCH

Rocksbury Farmers Want It Extended South.

The proposed county ditch on the East Side which is to drain what is known as the Connelly slough will undoubtedly be extended about three miles further south in the town of Rocksbury than was originally intended. A number of farmers living in that vicinity will petition to have it built, and their request will undoubtedly be granted. This ditch, while not very long, sure to be one of the most important in this section and will effectively drain a large territory.

Cardinal Gibbons on the "New Woman"

Since the advent of the so-called "new woman" no one has been more constant in opposing her masculine tendencies than Cardinal Gibbons. As a man of wide experience, with opportunities for studying human nature as varied and numerous as they are unusual he has been able to investigate this phase of modern life under the most favorable circumstances. His views of the question, from a thoroughly secular standpoint, will be presented in an early number of The Ladies' Home Journal under the suggestive title of "The Restless Woman."

Mrs. Mary Mannering and her fourteen-year-old daughter Edith were burned to death at Xenia, Ill. The child's clothes caught fire from the stove, and the mother, in trying to save her, was fatally burned.

While responding to an alarm of fire in Chicago, Truck No. 8 was struck by a switch engine at Archer and Ashland avenues. The seven men on the fire apparatus were injured, but none fatally. The truck was completely demolished and the horses ran wildly down the street.

Report of an accident to Commodore E. C. Benedict, from which he suffered no injury, comes from Cape Charles, Va., where he is hunting with Former President Cleveland. It is reported that the commodore climbed a tree after a 'possum and fell, but saved himself by grabbing a lower branch in his fall, dropping to the ground in safety.

Foreign.

The Spanish senate has passed a bill prohibiting silver coinage.

Gen. Pallavicini, formerly aide-de-camp to the late King Humbert, died in Rome.

Cecil Rhodes has arrived at Port Said, and it is reported that he will make a journey up the Nile.

Said Pacha, former grand vizier of Turkey, has been appointed grand vizier in succession to the Hall Rafael Pacha.

At a meeting of the dominion cabinet it was decided to raise a corps of 600 mounted men for service in South Africa.

Fifteen Chinese soldiers surprised 150 bandits close to Pekin, killed twelve of them and captured sixteen. The prisoners were taken to Pekin for decapitation.

Lord Strathcona stated to a reporter that he had no doubt that before long a fast line of steamers between Great Britain and Canada would be established.

The London Daily Express publishes a rumor that J. Pierpont Forgan is negotiating for the purchase of one of the largest of the British ship yards, where he can build twenty-one-knot steamers.

Emperor Francis Joseph, who is apparently hopeless of breaking the dead lock caused by the Czech opposition, declares that if the crisis is not soon terminated the constitution will be altered.

According to well informed circles, much dissatisfaction reigns in the London war office. It is now certain that Lord Roberts will resign the post of commander-in-chief in April, if not before, and, therefore, will not take any prominent part in the coronation ceremonies.

The report for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1901, just issued, shows that Denmark's exports to the United States maintain the proportionate increase attained in the previous year. The exports for the last two years exceed in value the aggregate of any previous five years.

Criminal.

James Melvin and Thomas Koonse, miners, living at Johnson City, Ill., undertook to shoot each other. Felvin is dead and Koonse cannot live.

An effort will be made to secure the return to Texas of Ben Kilpatrick, alias Harry Longbaugh, now held in St. Louis on suspicion of being one of the Montana train robbers.

A. Kunz and his wife were found dead in their rooms in Union Hill, N. J., having been asphyxiated by illuminating gas. They were elderly people, and it is believed they committed suicide.

Sister Louise Carey, in charge of the Providence hospital of Washington for the past two years, and for twenty-three years assistant to Sister Beatrice, her predecessor in charge of that institution, died of typhoid fever. She was forty-seven years old. Her mother, Mrs. Mary Lawler, and two brothers live in New York city.

Otherwise.

The first test of the Gathmann gun proved a failure.

Asphalt of a good quality has been found in Northern Michigan.

The National Grange at Lewiston, Me., elected Aaron Jones of Indiana as national worthy master.

The window glass trust will absorb every plant in the country if small plants succeed in perfecting a combination.

The Pittsburg Gazette says that the deal for a combination of all the distilling interests of the country, with a capital of $200,000,000, has fallen through.

Plans are being discussed among some of the important New York makers of printing presses for the purpose of organizing a consolidated company.

Alice E. Westbrook, by day a respectable woman and by night the keeper of a disorderly resort, died in Michigan and bequeathed wealth to charity and friends.

Mrs. Lillian M. N. Stevens has been re-elected president of the W. C. T. U.

Gustave Whitehead, the flying machine inventor, is making machines for the market.

Hunters are returning from the northern woods, fearful of death by accidental shooting. The appalling record of deaths deters many who had intended to go deer hunting.

The Hardwick bill, providing for the disfranchisement of the negro, was killed in the Georgia house of representatives—113 to 17. The same measure was introduced and met a similar fate two years ago.

FOR A LINCOLN MEMORIAL.

Senator Cullom Will Arrange for a Competition Among Artists.

Washington, Nov. 22.—Senator Cullom proposes to introduce a bill in the senate providing for an appropriate memorial to Abraham Lincoln in Washington. Representative Lorimer introduced such a bill in the house two years ago and urged it upon congress through the session. Senator Cullom's bill will provide that the memorial of Lincoln be located in accordance with the plans of the park commission, and he hopes a fitting design may be obtained by means of a competition in which the greatest artists of the world can be induced to compete. He is anxious to secure suggestions from any one in regard to any measure that may contribute to the success of his project.

CHAOTIC IN ITALY.

Parliamentary Parties in a Condition of Disruption.

Rome, Nov. 22. — The imminent reopening of parliament finds the various parties dislocated. The socialists, owing to the theoretical disagreements, are split into groups and unable to support the ministry. The monarchists of the North and South are divided, and one of the parties will necessarily join the opposition. A partial ministerial crisis or a brief and barren session is expected.

WITH A SATANIC SMILE.

Wife Murderer Listens to Details of His Bloody Deed.

Menominee, Mich., Nov. 22.—Joseph Detlaff yesterday was found guilty of murder in the first degree and sentenced to life imprisonment. The crime for which Detlaff was tried was the brutal murder of his wife in this city in September. Being a dissolute person his wife refused him admission to the house when he came home after a prolonged absence, whereupon he broke through a window at midnight and the woman ran out, but was overtaken and stabbed to death by the infuriated husband. Throughout the trial the murderer sat unmoved, and was even noticed to smile as the details of the brutal affair were related by the witnesses. The case was given an additional horror by the testimony of a twelve-year-old son of Detlaff, who stated that the father told him after the arrest that it was his purpose to murder the whole family of eight children as well as his wife had he succeeded in gaining an entrance to the house before his victim fled.

CONSPIRACY IN ALASKA.

Recent Arrival From the North Says He Heard of It.

Victoria, B. C., Nov. 22.—C. D. Newton, member of the Atlin board of trade, who arrived recently from the North, speaking of the alleged conspiracy to overthrow the Yukon government, said he had heard of it before he left the North, but had paid little attention to it. Some of the "Soapy Smith" gang, he states, is still to be found in Skagway in considerable numbers, although they have few sympathizers. It was to them that Mr. Newton attributed any conspiracy now threatened. The same element was at the bottom of the flag incident. Should they ever attempt to rise in rebellion he believes that the good American residents would be among the first to suppress them.

DEER IN THE KITCHEN.

Then Investigates a Boat House, and Finally Plunges Into the Lake.

Michigamme, Mich., Nov. 22.—A deer came into town and entered the kitchen through the open door at Peter Malway's house and upset the table, smashed the dishes and nearly trampled on Mrs. Malway and another woman who was in the kitchen with her. After making a few plunges about the room the deer got out and started for the lake, a short distance away, entered the boathouse through the front door and leaped from there into the water. The deer was shot. It was a doe and weighed 125 pounds dressed.

Return Home Alive.

Spearfish, S. D., Nov. 22John White, E. Crosfield, J. T. Hawkyard and J. T. McConaughty, four of the best known men of this city, have arrived home from Nome, Alaska. They have had excellent business there and most of them will return in the spring. Diedyrick was at one time reported dead, but he got off with a dangerously sick spell.

To Inspect Meat in St. Paul.

Winona, Minn., Nov. 22. — M. E. Humphrey, who has been operating a restaurant in this city for the past two years, has been appointed to the position of inspector of meats in the department of agriculture, bureau of animal industry, with headquarters in St. Paul. He will begin his duties on next Monday morning.

Must Sustain an Operation.

Winona, Minn., Nov. 22. — After a consultation of physicians, it has been decided best to undertake an operation for appendicitis in the case of Rev. S. F. Kerfoot, pastor of the Central Methodist church in this city. The operation will be undertaken at the Winona hospital this week.

Sugar Jumps 60 Cents.

Sioux City, Iowa, Nov. 22.—Refined sugar, which was reduced $1 per hundred ten days ago in the Missouri district, has now gone up 60 cents. Jobbers are surprised and think perhaps the proposed fight on the beet sugar product has been postponed or declared off.

Killed by Northwestern Limited.

Baldwin, Wis., Nov. 22. — A man named Jenson, from Brookville, was killed at this place by the Northwestern limited.

Asphyxiated by Coal Gas.

Winona, Minn., Nov. 22.—Mrs. Haber, who lives at St. Charles, was found unconscious in her home, overcome with gas from a coal stove. She died later. Two schoolgirls were also affected, but they have recovered.

Ira Reynolds Murdered.

Cass Lake, Minn., Nov. 22.—The coroner's jury in the Ira Reynolds case returned a verdict that the deceased came to his death by two bullet wounds from a firearm in the hands of a party unknown.

DEATH IN TUNNEL

PROBABLY ONE HUNDRED LIVES LOST BY A DISASTER IN COLORADO.

TWENTY-TWO BODIES RECOVERED

FIRE, WHICH IS KNOWN TO HAVE BEEN ACCIDENTAL, THE CAUSE.

MACHINERY A MASS OF RUINS

TWO HUNDRED MEN WERE AT WORK WHEN THE FIRE BROKE OUT.

Telluride, Colo., Nov. 22.—By a fire in the Bullion tunnel belonging to the Smuggler-Union Mining company, probably 100 lives were lost yesterday. Twenty-two are known to have perished. The fire, which is known to have been accidental, started yesterday morning in the buildings at the mouth of the tunnel. At this point is located the upper terminal of the tramway to the company's new mill at Pandora, and it was in the bunkhouse attached that the fire first started. From this it spread to the terminal station, which, with its ore bins and machinery, is a mass of ruins. The day shift of 200 men had entered the mine and reached their stations when the fire broke out.

The tunnel acted as a flue and a great volume of smoke poured in and filled the slopes. About 100 of the men succeeded in reaching safety by another exit. The fire rapidly burned itself out but the mine was so filled with smoke that it was six hours before rescuing parties could penetrate the slopes where the less fortunate were. At 1 o'clock the first body was recovered, and at 6:30 seventeen dead had been removed from the mine.

The engineer, Hugh J. O'Neill, was found alive, but is not expected to recover.

MURDERER SURRENDERS.

Cool-Headed Citizens Avert a Lynching.

Oxford, Miss., Nov. 22.—Will Mathis, who is charged with the murder of two deputy marshals, Montgomery by name, last night walked into the little town of Dallas, twelve miles south of here and surrendered to a justice of the peace and two citizens. Mathis had been pursued by bloodhounds, and, realizing that his capture was certain, the fugitive voluntarily gave himself up and asked for protection. He was turned over to the posse and started for Oxford, but it is understood that he will not be brought to this city. The officers fear mob violence. When the news reached Oxford the streets were immediately filled with people and intense excitement existed for a time. Bonfires were built and many threats of summary vengeance against the alleged murderer were heard on all sides. Addresses were made by the local officers and cool-headed business men, and it is believed the threatened lynching has been averted. The local officers announce they will protect the prisoner at all hazards.

QUEEN DRAGA SHOT AT.

Some Reports Say She Was Assassinated in the Streets.

Vienna, Nov. 22. — An unconfirmed report has reached Vienna that Queen Draga has been shot at in the streets of Belgrade. The Neuie Freie Presse and other Viennese newspapers published voluminous accounts, one declaring the Servian queen was assassinated, another that she was wounded and a third that she committed suicide. Reports from other sources denied the report that the queen was killed, and assert that the rumor of her death was caused by a hysterical scene with King Alexander. There is no reliable information on the subject here, but it is believed that a serious crisis exists in Belgrade.

HAS A HARD TASK.

Said Pasha Well Received by All but the Russian Ambassador.

New York, Nov. 22.—The Constantinople correspondent of the Times says: Said Pasha began his duties as grand vizier yesterday. His appointment is regarded with favor by all the diplomats except those of Russia. All recognize the enormous difficulty of his task, the whole administration being disorganized, and the provinces being in a state of social disintegration.

ULTIMATUM TO BRIGANDS.

Given Six Days in Which a Accept Ransom for Miss Stone.

Sofia, Nov. 22. — Mr. Dickinson, according to the Vezerna Posta, whose editor was a member of the former Macedonian committee, has sent an ultimatum to the brigands giving them six days in which to accept a specified sum as the ransom for Miss Stone. If this amount is not accepted within the time limit Mr. Dickinson's offer will be withdrawn.

Pricked by Conscience.

Washington, Nov. 22.—The secretary of the treasury has received through the mail from a person whose name is unknown a draft for $5,875, with the statement that it is the amount which should have been paid the internal revenue department years ago, with interest to date. The letter is signed "E. O." The money will be deposited to the credit of the conscience fund.

Alarming Spread of Plague.

Vienna, Nov. 22.—There has been an alarming spread of the plague in South Russia, according to dispatches from Lemberg, hundreds of fatal cases being reported in Moscow, Odessa, Kieff, Karzon and other towns.

Train Robber Sentenced.

South McAlester, Ind. T., Nov. 22. — W. D. Stearnes, leader of the Caney train robbers, pleaded guilty yesterday and was sentenced to life imprisonment in the penitentiary at Fort Leavenworth, Kan.

STATES JOIN HANDS.

Gov. Van Sant Proposes a United Effort in Opposing the Combination.

St. Paul, Nov. 22. — Gov. Van Sant will ask the governors of Northwestern states having laws against the consolidation of competing lines of railway to unite in opposing the consolidation of the Great Northern and the Northern Pacific railway under the Northern Securities Company of New Jersey. Gov. Van Sant yesterday authorized the following statement:

"Owing to the great interest of the people of the states west of us, and their great desire to see the attempt to consolidate the Great Northern and Northern Pacific railway lines resisted, Gov. Van Sant has concluded to invite all the governors of the states having similar laws to those of Minnesota to join in a united effort to fight the great railroad trust."

Every mail brings a score of letters to the governor's office from financiers and investors throughout the East regarding the stand he has taken, and the probable action by the legislature and by the state legal department. none of the letters have been given out.

Attorney General Douglas is still in the North, but a messenger has been sent to ask him to return to St. Paul as soon as possible. No word has been received from him, but he is expected to return the last of this week.

ME, TOO, SAYS SAVAGE.

Governor of Nebraska Will Join in the Anti-Combine Fight.

Lincoln, Neb., Nov. 22.—Any form of railroad consolidation between the Union Pacific and Burlington lines tending to lessen competition of those roads will be opposed by Gov. Savage. The governor said yesterday that Nebraska would join with Minnesota and Washington in rigidly enforcing the laws against combinations, which in this state he regarded as plain and unmistakable.

MILLER AS TRAFFIC DIRECTOR.

Placed in Control of Great Northern, Northern Pacific and Burlington.

New York, Nov. 22.—Darius Miller, vice president of the Great Northern railway, has been agreed upon by the Morgan-Hill and Harriman interests to be the traffic director of the Great Northern, the Northern Pacific and the Burlington lines. He will bear the same relation to the Northwestern group of roads as J. C. Stubbs bears to the Union Pacific, the Southern Pacific and the Oregon Short Line.

-o-

St. Paul, Nov. 22.—"This is news to me," was Mr. Miller's comment when notified of the report. "I know nothing of such action. I have not been notified of this agreement concerning me, and expect no such appointment. I do not believe the report, and know nothing to indicate that it has any basis of truth.

ATTACKED BY WOLVES.

Rural Mail Carrier Has a Lively Time With the Beasts.

Stillwater, Nov. 22.—Charles Johnson, employed as a rural mail carrier of the Stillwater postoffice, yesterday had a warm time with two timber wolves while making his rounds north of the city. Mr. Johnson drives a horse attached to a cart and was surprised when two wolves sprang into the road and began snapping at his horse. His yells were heard by farmers, who hastened to his rescue, but they were unable to kill the wolves. Farmers living north of the city say that wolves are more numerous than ever, and are getting very daring.

PASSENGER TRAINS SMASH.

Miraculous Escape of Trains Loaded With Travelers.

La Crosse, Wis., Nov. 22.—The Chicago, Burlington & Quincy limited passenger train No. 47, north-bound, plunged into a local freight train at Newport yesterday morning while going fifty miles an hour. The engines of both trains were wrecked, but no one was injured except Engineer Foster of the limited, whose ankle was sprained. The train was packed, every berth being taken, and that no one was killed is a miracle.

ELEVATORS ARE FILLED.

Buyers Are Recalled—New Electric Railway Proposed.

Winnipeg, Nov. 22.—Winnipeg elevator firms are recalling their Manitoba buyers owing to storehouses being filled with wheat. It is proposed to build an electric railroad from Winnipeg to Lac du Bonnet, through Springfield and Tyndall. Wasile Spark, a Galician, was killed by a piece of falling coal in the mines at Lethbridge.

Forster Does Not Give Up.

Winona, Minn., Nov. 22.—The Winona and Houston county road case, which was recently decided by the supreme court of the state in favor of the commissioners of these counties as against the petitioner, William Forster, is not yet settled. A petition for a rehearing has been filed by the attorneys of the appellant and a stay of proceedings granted.

War Scout Dead.

Chilton, Wis., Nov. 21. — Stephen Nichols, a member of the First Wisconsin cavalry, is dead at Gravesville, Wis. "Steve Nick," as he was familiarly known, was one of Wisconsin's foremost scouts, and was a prominent figure during the war. Mr. Nichols was a member of the Iron Mountain Grand Army post, Iron Mountain, Mich.

Kane Acquitted.

Prairie du Chien, Wis., Nov. 22.—The jury in the Kane murder case returned a verdict of not guilty. Kane was charged with killing his wife, but claimed it was accidental.

Suspected Horse Thief Caught.

Lake Preston, S. D., Nov. 22—Deputy Sheriff Peterman received a message from the sheriff at Waseca, Minn., saying that the latter had captured the thief who stole a team and buggy from A. M. Pultz, northeast of here, about two weeks ago.

Small Express Robbery.

Faribault, Minn., Nov. 22. — The Wells-Fargo express office was entered by a burglar Monday night. He secured only $4.17, which had been left by a collector in the cash drawer.

FAINTS IN COURT

MRS. DALE COLLAPSES WHEN SHE HEARS THE AWFUL WORD OF "MURDER."

ACCUSED OF KILLING HER CHILD

DRAMATIC SCENE WHEN THE WOMAN IS ARRAIGNED IN COURT.

HER COMPANION IS ARRESTED

CHARGED WITH ILLICITLY LIVING WITH THE ACCUSED WOMAN.

Hoboken, N. J., Nov. 22.—Mrs. Elizabeth Dale of Chicago, who was arrested Wednesday accused of the murder of her 5-year-old daughter, Emmiline, yesterday was arraigned before Recorder Stanton.

Mrs. Dale, pale and haggard, was led by two court officers into court. She was visibly nervous, her mouth twitched and she clutched the arm of her chair. She is of the blonde type, rather good-looking, but appears a few years older than twenty-four, the age she gave. Her slight figure trembled violently as the clerk read the grave charge against her. When she heard the word "murder" her head fell back and she clutched the arm of her lawyer, who occupied a seat next her. She called out faintly that she was ill. She asked that her physician be sent for.

And Then Fainted.

She was revived after a minute or two and was able then to answer the few formal questions regarding her nativity, age and name.

Police Captain Hayes, who presented the charge against her, asked that the examination be adjourned pending the result of an autopsy by the county physician.

The adjournment was granted, and on recommendation of her physician, the prisoner was sent to St. Mary's hospital, where she will be guarded until she is again called into court. E. L. Bert Waller, who was Mrs. Dale's companion when she arrived in Hoboken recently, and who was arrested yesterday on the charge of illicitly living with her, was also arraigned in court and ordered committed to prison in default of $1,000 bail.

Wants to See Her Child.

While in the detective's room Mrs. Dale said to Detective Weinthal: "I know I am charged with murder and I will go anywhere with you. I don't care, but I want to see my child. Take me to my dead child."

The detective quieted her and later on she sent a telegram to her husband in Chicago. It was clearly written in a steady hand and said:

"Harvey, come on. This is horrible treatment you are giving me."

The message was taken to the telegraph office by one of the detectives. Later Dr. Kudlich arrived in a coach and Mrs. Dale was taken to St. Mary's hospital.

Waller, when arraigned, said his home was in Rotterdam, Holland, and he had no friends in this country.

County Physician Converse has not set a date for the autopsy on the body of the child, but the coroner's jury has been impaneled.

Capt. Hayes of the Hoboken police said to-night that he had failed to find any motive for the killing of the child by its mother, if she did do it. He said further:

"All I know is that as soon as the father of the child was telegraphed that she was dead from poison he wired here through relatives for an investigation to be made and a charge of murder to be brought if the circumstances seemed to warrant it. We then began an investigation and found that Mrs. Dale and her husband had been at odds."

Poison Purchased in Chicago.

Chicago, Nov. 22—It has been discovered that the strychnine tablets which were the cause of the death of the five-year-old daughter of Mrs. Harvey S. Dale were purchased probably in Chicago the night before Mrs. Dale and her friend, Elbert Waller, left for the East.

It is learned further, that Mrs. Dale and Mr. Waller were fond of pet dogs and had three running about the house in which they lived at 488 Belden avenue. Two weeks ago one of these dogs died of poison, supposed to have been placed in the yard by a neighbor. The day Mrs. Dale left for the East another died in convulsions, and Mrs. Mathilda Miller, who had the third in charge, after Mrs. Dale's departure, found that it was ailing. Mrs. Dale is the daughter of a physician.

PRANKS ON PREXY.

Students at the Wabash College Celebrate the Anniversary of Founders' Day.

Crawfordsville, Ind., Nov. 22—Yesterday was the anniversary of founders' day at the Wabash college, but the faculty yesterday announced that there would be no celebration of the event. The students took the matter in hand, and, after listening to speeches on the campus and going to the college, they tied the door to President Kane's recitation room, with the president and a class inside. They pinned a sign onto the door, "Jojo, the Caged Monkey," and gave all the college yells in derision. The members of the class and the president had to climb out of the windows and drop to the ground in order to escape. The students siding with the faculty were tied to trees with ropes.

STRIKERS STARVE.

Families of Milwaukee Mill Strikers Are in Dire Distress and Great Poverty.

Milwaukee, Nov. 22—Bayview strikers who left the employ of the rolling mills last summer during the great steel strike are suffering the pangs of hunger and a large number of families are in a pitiable condition, having neither food, clothing or sufficient warmth or fuel, to supply them with some of the comforts of life. Starvation has come to many families as a result of the struggle, and those who fought to the last ditch for the principals of unionism are either in distress or are impoverishing themselves to succor those who are.

EXPENSIVE FOR NEW YORK.

Recent Municipal Election Cost Over Half a Million.

New York, Nov. 22.—The pay rolls of the board of elections of Greater New York, approved yesterday, show that the recent city election cost the municipality $670,000, or $1.03 for each voter that was registered. Advertising cost $90,000; ballot printing, $35,000; incidentals, $75,000, and the rest went to registration and election officials. The state also spent about $80,000 in connection with the election.

CASTLES IN THE AIR.

Sometimes in dreamy reverie
I float away on memory,
And drift far back to isles where we
In happy days, long lost to me,
Built castles in the air.

On isles 'mid seas of heavenly blue,
Which only my hope and fancy knew,
Beyond the reach of human view,
Save yours and mine, I dwelt with you
In castles in the air.

O happy clime! So fair and bright!
Where in the purple, golden light,
Through one long day that had no night,
We worked and built to wondrous height
Our castles in the air.

Such happy hours they were withal
We never dreamed our castles all
Would sometime into ruins fall,
And only memory recall
Those castles in the air.

For still your scornful laugh I hear,
When once I dared express a fear
These castles might not last a year,
You said, "They'll last forever, dear,
These castles in the air."

Long since from dreaming we awoke;
Yet from the past I oft invoke
Your fair, sweet face as thus you spoke,
Or see it in tobacco smoke,
'Mid castles in the air.

Sometimes I dream of you until
I almost think you living still;
Then breaks the spell! With saddest thrill
I realize no more we will
Make castles in the air.

Yet who shall say there may not be,
Awaiting in futurity,
Some other clime, where we shall see
Restored for all eternity
Lost castles in the air?

The Ghost of the Alaho.

BY C. P. GREENLEY.

(Copyright, 1901, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

The scorching summer had passed, and the October winds shrilled over the wastes of brown sage grass, where the prairie chickens fluttered from every knoll, and the sharp, insistant

"Bob White," "Peas ripe?" "Not quite" rang to and fro on the nipping frost-laden air.

There was a vague hint of uneasiness among the men and cattle. Twice, there had been a barely averted stampede; and the cause—there lay the crux of the matter.

You have heard, how in the first days of the Alaho, it was owned by an Englishman who set his traditions at naught, and took to wife the daughter of Jose, the Mexican, whose ranch lay to the south, touching the Alaho for miles? Then you have also heard the tale of the glass-eyed broncho, who galloped from the Red death, straight into the cyclone's heart?

Many years have come and gone since then. The black-eyed Nita sleeps in the old Spanish cemetery where the white trail of the mesa ends; and the Englishman has gone to his own place over-sea.

In the old hacienda, a young Jose reigns in the old man's stead; but when the autumn comes, and the Dark Gods ride over the mountain crest and mesa, men say that the glass-eyed broncho gallops out to the West—woe to the herd, and woe to the man that meets him along the ride, for death and ruin ride in the wake of the fire-shod heels, and the cattle quiver with fear, as the long-drawn neigh shrills out of the dark.

White man, red man, cowboy and greaser, when the night comes, and they gather at the gate of the corral, whisper ominously, and there is a silence that means trouble.

John had laughed much and argued more, but against a dead wall of shrugs, and sullenness that grew with each day.

The cattle had been restless and uneasy for days, the men not much better. No longer at dusk, the songs rang up from the corral, for the rumor had gone among them:

Rusty Pete had seen the glass-eye.

Pete drank deeper and swore louder than ever before. Even Miguel flatly refused to ride the South trail, and on John expressing his opinion of men, women and things, including Miguel and the glass-eye, which was not a thing, he failed to answer to call. Neither were Bright-eyes or the pappoose to be found.

"Let me go."

John came in that night, seemingly having caught the mood of the men. I stood it as long as woman-nature could be expected to, and then began to question him.

Two or three turns up and down the room, and then he faced around in his favorite position on the hearthrug.

"It amounts to this, little woman: The entire layout of the Alaho have gone ghost crazy, and there will be serious trouble if I cannot find some way to stop it. Some have actually refused to ride the trail that leads from Jose's. I will ride it myself in the morning. At the present stage of the game, it will never do to force an issue. Pete and Miguel together have set the whole force by the ears, and the cattle seem to have caught it, too. They are roving all the time, and it is hard enough to keep up with them as it is, without this additional nonsense.

The morrow dawned—a perfect October day, and to John's dismay, I ordered Red Bess saddled, and insisted on riding that trail with him.

The glass-eyed broncho.

"Let me go, it will do more to quiet them than anything else," I said, and after a show of argument, he agreed with me.

The boys crowded to the gate as we rode out, and there was a faint cheer as they caught sight of me. I saw an anxious look on old Pete's face, as he stood, the last one gazing after me, for the trail that led to Jose's was the trail the glass-eye rode. John's spirits went up as we cantered along, and the day passed swiftly. The cattle were scattered here and there—under our feet the dried grass rustled, and the keen wind died down. We talked of many things, but, somehow, could not keep off the subject of the two that had once ridden this trail in the long ago. Two, young and full of life as we, and now—that Alaho was ours, and they were passed beyond. John told me old tales that he had heard from the rangers, of the early days when men and women faced the red death day by day, and the song of the bullet shrilled above the cradles of the wilderness—stories of the old graves in the cemetery, where Nita lies, of the Spanish rancheros, and the passing of priest and don before the hardy men from the East.

The heat grew more intense. The cattle were very quiet at first, but as the day declined, they began to wander restlessly, and in the pawing hoofs and lifted horns, John woke up to the danger. In the North, the haze resolved itself into a heavy bank that grew every moment. We were miles from home when we turned. The herd before us began to circle back. John's face grew graver with every glance at the darkening North. Little gusts of wind came and went, now whirling the sand in small columns, then dropping, like a live creature toying with its prey. It grew so dark that I could hardly see John's face as he rode alongside me.

"Margaret, my Margaret, we must ride for our lives. Never mind the cattle." As these words left his lips there was a prolonged roar, a blinding crash, and the world was shrouded in a fire-veined void of night, and the crash of God's artillery filled all space.

Red Bess trembled and stood still with a low whinny of fear. The horse that John rode sunk to his haunches, as out of the night, over the thunder voices, rang the shrill sharp neigh of a horse, and the sharp, keen ring of galloping hoofs—so near, that as he passed, the blare of the lightning shone on the white eye-balls. With bridle and empty saddle, passed the glass-eyed broncho.

Red Bess screamed, and lunged out with her hoofs, and then like a mad thing, flew for home. I can feel it yet, the cut of the wind and the drenching rain, with the awful cannonade, and behind us a new sound, the like of which had never yet been heard—the rush of a thousand maddened cattle. John gave Red Bess a cut with the quirt and digging his spurs deep, we made the race for our lives. I could see his face, as the green glare of the lightning flashed between us, but I could not hear a word. It was a silent goodbye, that each thought to be the last, and still we rode on.

Just out from the corral, came Miguel and Pete, heading a searching party. It was home and safety, and there were no questions asked, but Miguel crossed his breast as he bared his head in a muttered prayer to "Our Lady of Guadaloupe."

Of that night's work, and the ruin that lay in the track of the glass-eyed broncho, it would be weary telling, but when the pitiful remnants of the herd was rounded up, and we faced the worst, relief was written on every face. We had "Dreed the weird," and over the fire, the men sang the border songs once more, and told even darker tales of the "Ghost of the Glass-Eyed Broncho."

A TALE FROM ARIZONA.

Told to a Girl Who Wanted to Go West to Help Civilize Indians.

"I've been anxious to meet a real Westerner," said a girl who had dabbled more or less in East Side settlement work on being introduced to a man from Arizona. "Curious as to what sort of wild creatures we were, I suppose," he replied, smiling. "I hope you are not disappointed." "Oh, it wasn't that. I knew you were just like other people. It was about the Indians." "Better not come to Arizona. It's far too hot a place for comfortable missionary work. I live in a place called Globe, and we have to keep a kettle of water boiling in the parlor in order to keep the piano strings from snapping." "I wouldn't mind the discomforts," she said, "if I could only do the Indians some good. Do you think I could?" "It would be a poor sort of white man you could not improve." He began this way because she was a pretty girl. "But as for Indians—well, Indians are different. The government has been doing its best to get them into line, but so far as most of them are concerned, it does little good. I'll tell you of an incident which happened just before I left Globe. An Indian, whose face was artistically painted in yellow and green, and whose dress was a blanket belted at the waist, came into the store. 'Keep your eye on that fellow,' said my partner. 'He'll steal something when you're not looking.' He certainly looked capable of it or of any other crime on the list. A more savage creature I have never seen. He made some purchases, using the sign language of the tribe. I stood at the door when he went out. As he passed me he turned and said in as good English as I've ever heard: 'Pardon, will you give me a light?' I dropped my cigar, so great was my surprise. Afterward I found that he had spent four years at one of the big Indian schools. And to what purpose? He could ask the loan of a light with politeness. In every other respect he lived and acted as he had before the government treatment."—New York Tribune.

Happy, Though Miserable.

W. K. Vanderbilt, Jr., the other day got out of his $15,000 Mercedes racer with a queer expression on his face. "Run into anybody?" queried a friend casually. Mr. Vanderbilt's expression expanded into a slow, full smile. "Well, ye—es—in a way," he said. "The other day at a dinner I ran across an old bore of a fellow, who expressed the most ardent ambition to have a ride in my racer. As I didn't take any notice of his hints, my gentleman deliberately asked to be allowed to have a ride, to which I had to consent, as he was a friend of the family, you know, though I made an inward vow to shake him up a bit. You see, he had never before been on an automobile. Well, I took him along today. I started at a quiet little gait, taking care not to increase the speed gradually, as of course he would not then have felt it, but just when he was in the midst of an ecstatic eulogy on the 'calm, even floating motion of automobiling,' I turned on full speed and let the thing fly. He clung to his seat with his two hands, his eyes fairly shining and bulging with fear and excitement. 'How do you like it?' I asked, as the wind whirled his hat off. 'Wh-hy,' he stammered between his gasps for breath, 'my lad, I've just solved the problem of how to be happy though miserable!'"—The Motor World.

The World's Wine Butt.

The total production of wine in 1900 is estimated at 3,618,700,000 gallons. Of this total 3,403 million gallons was produced in Europe, and 260 million gallons in America, while the British Empire, with a vastly larger area than Europe, and embracing every variety of soil and climate, is only represented by a production of some 9,000,000 gallons or a four-hundredth part of the whole. France, with a yield of 1,482 million gallons stands easily first as the leading wine producer. Her contribution was about half the yield of all Europe, and considerably more than a third of that of the entire globe.

FARM AND GARDEN.

MATTERS OF INTEREST TO AGRICULTURISTS.

Some Up-to-Date Hints About Cultivation of the Soil and Yields Thereof—Horticulture, Viticulture and Floriculture.

Horticultural Observations.

(From the Farmers' Review.)

As to the cultivation of orchards no general rule can be laid down. We, in common with others, advocate the cultivation of orchards, but at the same time we recognize that there are some orchards that should not be cultivated. Those are the ones that are on very rich ground. This is especially the case with young and growing orchards. There is a rate of growth that should not be exceeded. In very rich ground trees often make such rapid growth that they are injured. In such cases we certainly would not urge cultivation till the trees come into bearing and begin to draw heavily on the fertility of the soil.

* * *

We would like to hear from our readers as to the best distance apart for the planting of apple trees. While this question has been before the country for a long time, it is still unsettled. This is due largely to the fact that it has been supposedly settled a number of times, and each time it has taken several years to find out that the settlement was not conclusive. A dozen years ago it was believed by some of our progressive orchardists that the only way to do was to plant the trees about twice as thick as they should ultimately stand and then cut out the alternate rows a few years after the trees had come into bearing. The trees were planted about a rod apart and in some cases closer together. They grew and began to bear fruit. They developed till their limbs began to intertwine and the owner recognized the fact that the time had come to do the thinning out. Did he do it? Not at all, in most cases. He hadn't the heart to cut down the large fine trees, though his intelligence told him it should be done. The result was ultimately an orchard gone more to wood than to fruit. Now horticultural scientists are urging the dropping of the system, for it has become to be a generally accepted truth that if trees are planted too closely in the first place they are likely to stand that way.

* * *

The man that buys fruit trees to put into his orchard should inform himself of the nursery conditions under which the trees were grown. The nature of the soil in which they were started and made their first few years of growth should not be far different from the nature of the soil in which they are subsequently to grow. If the trees have been started in a very rich soil with an abundant supply of moisture they will receive a check that will result in a permanent stunting. Without doubt this is the hidden cause of the failure of many an orchard. It is more than likely to be the case when trees are brought from very distant places, say a thousand miles or so away. It has been thought that the failure of so many trees thus obtained was due to some hidden quality in the climate, but it appears to the writer to be more reasonable to assume that the difference in soil conditions largely accounted for the failures.

Covering Strawberry Beds.

From Farmers' Review: As soon as the ground freezes hard enough to bear a wagon and team, wheat straw should be hauled and placed over the strawberry bed—4 to 6 inches deep between the rows and 1 inch over the rows. If care is taken to make the covering thin enough over the plants they will grow through and above it the following spring. A few years ago when the wheat was threshed with the old-fashioned separator, the straw was fairly free from grains of wheat and chess ("cheat"), and this was the best method. Now, when the wheat is threshed with a "blow stacker" the grains of chess and light grains of wheat are blown out with the straw. When this straw is used, the entire strawberry bed will be occupied by a dense growth of this chess and wheat which ruins the strawberries. To prevent this, old blackened straw, in which all seeds are dead, may be used. But this must be hauled before it freezes into solid lumps. It may be placed in a narrow ridge between the rows and afterwards, when the ground freezes, be scattered as previously described. Oat straw is a dangerous covering to use. Before spring, it is liable to cement itself together and smother the plants. I have grown cow peas between the strawberry rows. Their dense late summer growth smothers and weakens the plants and when freezing begins the cow pea foliage disappears leaving the sickly plants without protection. I have grown oats between the strawberry rows. The oats after freezing fall down and make a nice covering. But while they were growing they robbed the strawberry plants of light, moisture and air and weakened them so badly that they were not worth covering. It is not the proper thing to grow cow peas or oats between strawberry rows to mulch them for winter. I plan to experiment with another material for winter covering, but it is premature to describe it now.—L. H. Callaway, Morgan county, Illinois.

Kafir Corn and Alfalfa as Hog Feed.

At the Kansas Experiment Station ten hogs fed Kafir-corn meal and whole alfalfa hay gained an average of 90.9 pounds each in nine weeks, while those having Kafir-corn meal alone gained an average of 52.4 pounds each, an increase of over seventy-three per cent. from feeding the hay. The hogs fed hay ate more grain and gained more for each bushel eaten. The gains per bushel of feed were:

Kafir-corn meal dry and 7.83 pounds alfalfa hay ......10.88 lbs.
Kafir-corn meal dry alone... 7.48 lbs.

This shows a gain from the hogs of 868 pounds per ton of alfalfa hay fed. With hogs at three cents per pound live weight, the hay fed the hogs made a return of $26.04 per ton; and with hogs at four cents per pound live weight, the hay returned $34.72 per ton. These results are not due to the feeding value of the alfalfa alone, but also to its influence in aiding hogs to better digest the Kafir-corn. The alfalfa also gave variety to the ration, making it more appetizing and inducing the hogs to eat more grain. Wetting the Kafir-corn meal made a saving of nearly eight per cent over feeding it dry. Grinding the Kafir-corn caused a loss of over fourteen per cent. Soy-bean meal produced even better results than the alfalfa hay. The hogs fed Kafir-corn meal four-fifths, soy-bean meal one-fifth, gained 97.8 pounds, while those fed on Kafir-corn meal alone gained 52.4 pounds, an increase of over 86¼ per cent from feeding the beans. The hogs fed the soy-bean meal required 468 pounds of grain for 100 pounds of gain, while those having Kafir-corn meal alone required 749 pounds of grain, a saving of over thirty-seven per cent in amount of feed needed.

Cost of Raising Wheat.

From Farmers' Review: I wish to call to your attention a reference found in the Year Book of the Department of Agriculture for 1899. On page 316 you will find it stated that the improvement in methods has reduced the cost of human and animal labor in producing a bushel of wheat from four to one cent per bushel. On page 332 you will find it stated that the time required to produce a bushel of wheat is on an average of ten minutes and at a cost of 3½ cents per bushel for human labor. You will observe that these two statements do not agree very well, since in one case they state one cent per bushel for human and animal labor and in the other case 3 1-3 cents per bushel for human labor. However, I think this slight discrepancy is of very small importance, since they both to my mind are silly. By referring to page 700 of the same book you will find they state the average bushels per acre to be 12 3-10 for the year 1899. I submit that neither 12 3-10 cents per acre nor '41 cents per acre, as in his second statement on page 352, is anywhere in the neighborhood of correct, as neither amount will pay the man for plowing the ground, to say nothing of other necessary labor.

I notice in the forepart of the book here referred to that it was expected to distribute these books at the Paris Exposition. It is my opinion that it is very unfortunate to send out unreliable information to foreign countries, and almost equally so to our own people, and I am very much surprised that the Department of Agriculture would permit such imaginative statements to be made. After referring to the same, I would be pleased to have your opinion of the statements.—Thomas Penrose, Pennsylvania.

The Farmers' Review agrees with Mr. Penrose that the figures published by the Year Book as quoted by Mr. Penrose are utterly absurd. Moreover, it is evident that the deductions were made for the purpose of "making a case." They are certainly not a credit to the Department of Agriculture. In the Year Book of 1893 was published a table of the cost of producing wheat in very State of the Union, and for the country as a whole. This table was headed "Estimated cost of the principal items and total cost in the production of wheat and corn by States per acre for 1893." Under the headline was this legend: "Consolidated from returns from over 4,000 experts." The general average cost per acre for the country was as follows:

Rent of land	$ 2.75
Manure	2.34
Preparing ground	1.85
Seed	.87
Sowing	.35
Harvesting	1.17
Threshing	1.13
Housing	.33
Marketing	.69
Total	$11.48

The average amount of seed used per acre was 1.4 bushels.

The yield of wheat for 1893 was 396,131,725 bushels, grown on 34,629,418 acres of land. The average yield per acre was about 11.50 bushels, making the cost of growing a bushel of wheat that year about $1.00. In the figures of cost per acre, labor is comprised in the items preparing ground, sowing, harvesting, threshing, housing, marketing. The amount thus paid for labor is $5.52, or nearly 55 cents per bushel for the year 1893. About one-half the cost of raising wheat is in the labor. The cost per acre of raising wheat varies little from year to year.

The World's Wheat Crop.

Several foreign estimates on the world's wheat crop of 1901 place it at about 2,700,000 bushels. One of the estimates is by the Hungarian department of agriculture. Some of the principal items of the estimate in bushels follow: United States, 662,000,900; Canada, 93,000,000; South America, 93,000,000; Great Britain and Ireland, 55,000,000; France, 283,000,000; Spain, 110,000,000; Italy, 122,000,000; Germany, 95,000,000; Austria, 43,000,000; Hungary, 138,000,000; Roumania, 69,000,000; Turkey, 70,000,000; Russia, 417,000,000; India, 249,000,000; Africa, 51,000,000; Australasia, 59,000,000.

Cheese-Making Area Enlarging.

A few years ago it was believed that the area in which cheese could be made was comparatively limited. A strip of country including New England, New York, Ohio, Indiana, Wisconsin, and southern Canada was believed to be well adapted to the curing of cheese, while the regions a little to the north and south were debarred from ever going into the industry by reason of a too high or too low temperature. Within a few years, however some remarkable things have occurred. Cheese has been ripened and cured in places outside the supposed limit. While at the Tennessee Experiment Station this summer the writer had the pleasure of inspecting the cheese-making plant of the Tennessee Agricultural College. Professor Soule says that cheese is ripened perfectly in that region; the same is doubtless true of all the mountain region of the south. Since it has been discovered that the cheese-ripening process goes on in cold weather as well as warm the ripening of cheese in the far north is made possible. The supposed area suitable to cheese making has been always governed by the temperature for cheese ripening. The proper control of the curing room settles that question once for all. Doubtless if the dairying area is ever pushed to the gulf the cheese-making area will go with it.—Farmers' Review.

To Increase the Use of Wool.

The legislative committee of the National Live Stock Association has prepared a bill providing for the inspection of woolen goods and shoddy and for the proper stamping of the same. Congress will be asked to pass it at its next session. By the provisions of this bill all manufacturers of goods or fabrics of any kind whatsoever made in imitation of woolen goods or fabrics, or goods which when so made are calculated or intended to be sold as woolens or woolen goods, not made wholly of new or unused sheep's wool, shall so mark, label or tag such goods as that they may be readily distinguished from genuine wools. That such mark, label or tag shall be so attached to such goods or fabrics as that it cannot be detached except by design; and such label shall accurately state in plain printed letters and figures the constituent fibers or other materials or substances of which it is composed, or the relative portion or per cent of each. Provision is also made for heavy fines for the manufacturers that evade the law and also for all tailors and retailers that handle without marks goods requiring marking. Were such a law passed, its vigorous enforcement would be equally beneficial to the purchasers of clothing and to the producers of wool.

Pine Apple Producing Regions.

The flavor of the pineapple is so agreeable that no one has to acquire a taste for it. Pineapples are on the market throughout the year, but those sold at other times than during the main crop season are too high priced a luxury for the average man. The main shipping season is from the middle of April to the middle of July. The area in the United States adapted to their cultivation is considerable and can be greatly extended. The largest tract of pineapple land is in Florida. Pineapples can also be produced profitably on some land in southern California. Although all of Porto Rico and the Hawaiian Islands are free from frost, the soil and climate are not uniformly adapted to their production. There is more land in the Philippines adapted to the production of pineapples than will be utilized for several generations. The pineapple supply of the United States is contributed to by Porto Rico, the Bahama Islands, Jamaica, San Salvador and Trinidad.

Not long ago a man made the remark to the writer that "without doubt most of the food sold as butter is oleomargarine." The writer replied that he was most certainly mistaken, as the amount of butter made is greatly in excess of the counterfeit. Last year there was made in this country not less than 1,400,000,000 pounds of butter and about 100,000,000 pounds of oleomargarine. This means fourteen times as much honest butter as of the bogus article.

Level-Headed Child.

A lady was recently reading to her little son the story of a little fellow whose father was taken ill and died, after which he set himself diligently to work to assist in supporting himself and his mother. When she had finished the story she said: "Now, Tommy, if pa were to die, wouldn't you work to keep mamma?" "Why, no," said the little chap, not relishing the idea of work. "What for? Ain't we got a good house to live in?" "Oh, yes, my dear," said the mother, "but we can't eat the house, you know." "Well, ain't we got plenty of things in the pantry?" continued the young hopeful. "Certainly, dear," replied the mother, "but they would not last long, and what then?" "Well, ma," said the young incorrigible, after thinking a moment, "wouldn't there be enough to last until you got another husband?"

Ten Year's Progress.

The net result in respect of speed is that while ten years ago the highest sustained ocean speed was 20.7 knots, it is now 23.51 knots; the highest speed for large warships was 22 knots, and is now 23 knots on a trial of double the duration of those of ten years ago; the maximum speed attained by any craft was 25 knots, as compared with 36.581 knots now; while the number of ships over 20 knots was eight in 1891, and is fifty-eight now.—London Engineering.

NEAR TO PANAMA

CITY MOMENTARILY EXPECTS AN ATTACK BY THE LIBERALS.

A LARGE FORCE APPROACHING

LIBERALS ARE GAINING AND ARMING LARGE NUMBERS OF RECRUITS.

IOWA TO LAND FORCE OF MARINES

GOVERNMENT CANNOT GUARANTEE PROTECTION FOR ISTHMIAN TRANSIT.

Colon, Colombia, Nov. 24.—The Liberal Gen. Lugo has arrived at Empire station, distant about twelve miles from Panama, with a force said to number 1,000 men. The Liberals are gaining and arming many recruits along the entire length of the railroad, and now control the line up to within a point two miles from Panama. An attack on that city is expected momentarily and much uneasiness is felt there. The Liberal leader Domingo Diaz, is expected shortly to arrive at Colon. It is rumored here that Buenaventura, a Colombian port on the Pacific coast about 400 miles south of Panama, has been taken by the Liberals. Confirmation of this report is lacking. Marines from the gunboat Machias still guard the station and property of the railroad here. The battleship Iowa will land forces at Panama when the Necessity Arises.

The Liberals here have already given notice that the advalorem duty on goods disembarked at Colon will henceforth be 10 per cent, not 20 per cent, as formerly. All the stores in Colon are open and business has been resumed. It is reported that the government has addressed a communication to the United States consul, setting forth that it cannot guarantee protection for isthmian transit. The Liberals here assert that Gen. Lorenzo attacked Gen. Alban's force after it had landed at Chame, near Chorrera, and defeated it, only Gen. Alban and a few of his troops escaping. It is also claimed by the Liberals that the other division of Gen. Alban's army was routed by Gen. Lugo, when 400 of Alban's troops joined the Liberal ranks.

ARREST BY CASTRO.

Venezuelan President Is Suspicious Regarding His Minister of War.

Caracas, Venez., Nov. 24.—President Castro, believing that a conspiracy to overthrow him existed, caused the arrest at Puerto Cabello of Ramon Guerra, the minister of war. The president also brought about the arrest of a number of partisans of Guerra at Caracas, among them being Montauban, who claims to be a French citizen. The arrests have caused a great sensation. Joachim Garido succeeds Ramon Guerra as minister of war.

WHIPPING BY WIFE.

The Condition on Which George Galloway Was Allowed to Go Home.

Cleveland, Ohio, Nov. 24. — George Galloway was sentenced by Police Judge Kennedy to be trounced by his wife. Galloway was charged with intoxication and Mrs. Galloway was in court. She said she would forgive her husband.

"If you'll promise to take a broomstick," said the judge, "and give him what he deserves when you get him home, I'll discharge him."

"I'll do it if you say so, judge."

"All right. Make a good job of it. Go home with your wife, Galloway."

ONSLAUGHT ON BOER FORCE.

Boers Retreat in Disorder With Six Killed and Forty Horses Captured.

Cape Town, Nov. 24.—A British patrol under Capt. Elliott left Ugie, a village in the Transkei, between Elliott and Maclear, before daybreak yesterday. They discovered a Boer commando under Bezuidenhout, on Gatberg Nek, in the Drakensberg. Capt. Elliott attacked the Boers, who were driven up the mountains in disorder, losing six killed, one wounded and forty horses captured. Capt. Elliott and one British private were killed and three officers wounded.

LAST VICTIM RECOVERED.

Death List of the Colorado Disaster Numbers Twenty-Five.

Telluride, Colo., Nov. 24. — The work of recovering the bodies of the miners who were victims of the disaster in the Smuggler-Union mine progressed slowly until yesterday, when the last body was brought to the surface. It was that of John Nevala, and was found in one of the slopes of the seventh level. The death list now numbers twenty-five, the brave engineer who sacrificed himself in an effort to rescue his comrades, having died yesterday afternoon.

FRANCE IS ALARMED.

Government to Investigate the Means of Arresting Depopulation.

Paris, Nov. 24.—The senate adopted the proposal supported by the premier, M. Waldeck Rousseau, to appoint a commission to study the means to be taken in order to arrest the depopulation of France.

BANK TELLER INDICTED.

Confesses That He Robbed the Institution of $60,000.

New York, Nov. 24.—The Kings county grand jury has returned an indictment against George Zollinhofer, the teller of the Williamsburg Savings bank, who confessed that he and a fellow employe robbed the institution of $60,000. The indictment charged four counts of grand larceny. Counsel for Zollinhafer asked and was granted for his client until next Wednesday to plead.

KILLED BY A BULL.

Fate of an Old Settler in South Dakota.

Yankton, S. D., Nov. 26. — Wenzel Kreitsinger of Lesterville died from injuries received last Sunday in an attack made upon him by a young bull. He was in front of the animal tying it to the manger, when it viciously attacked him, throwing him into the air and then butting him repeatedly with his head when he fell into the manger. The animal had no horns, but his buttings inflicted internal injuries from which death resulted after four days of intense suffering. Mr. Kreitsinger was one of the oldest settlers of Yankton county, living nearly half of his sixty-six years on the farm on which he died.

SECRET IS SOLVED.

Wisconsin Sculptor Solves the Secret of His Father's Invention.

Kenosha, Wis., Nov. 26.—Emil Oscar Strauss, a young sculptor of this city, has forwarded to Emperor William of Germany a statuette which was begun more than fifteen years ago by the father of Strauss on an order for Emperor William I. The elder Strauss invented a new art material which attracted the attention of the kaiser, and he ordered a piece of the work made. The younger Strauss has worked for twelve years to solve the secret of his father's invention, and the original piece of work ordered by William I. has just been completed.

WRECK ON C. G. W.

Engine and Three Cars Ditched Near Spring Valley.

Spring Valley, Minn., Nov. 26.—There was a wreck on the Chicago Great Western at this place Saturday evening at 5:30. A freight train going south as it was pulling into this station was derailed by a tampered-with switch. The engine and three cars were thrown in the ditch and all the cars left the rails. Head Brakeman Holverson of Winona was buried beneath a car load of barley. The engineer was slightly injured.

KREUZER GETS $3,575.

Jury Gives Final Decision in Railroad Damage Suit.

Fergus Falls, Minn., Nov. 26. — The jury in the big Kreuzer damage suit returned a verdict for $3,575 Saturday evening. George Kreuzer was employed by the Great Northern in clearing away a freight wreck at Evansville, and a car roof fell on him. He sued the road for $15,000, and a jury gave him $3,000 one year ago. The supreme court set the verdict aside and ordered a new trial, which is just finished.

WISCONSIN DEBATERS CHOSEN.

Three Students Selected to Represent University in Contest at Iowa City Next Spring.

Madison, Wis., Nov. 26.—The Electoral college, composed of representatives of the five debating societies of the University of Wisconsin, met and elected the following men to represent the university in debate with the University of Iowa: A. D. Gillet of West Superior, Henry Gross of Sturgeon Bay and George L. Lohr of Milwaukee. The debate will be held in Iowa City in the spring.

BUILD MONSTER BRIDGE.

Span of 1,000 Feet Across Strait of Canso, Nova Scotia, Is Planned.

Highland, Kan., Nov. 26.—J. F. Ward, represented by a Sydney law firm proposes to build a suspension bridge across the Strait of Canso from Cape Porcupine to the vicinity of Port Hastings. The bridge as planned will have a span of 1,000 feet; will be the highest in America and will cost about $1,000,000.

THIRD FATALITY.

City Marshal Shot in a Fight With Robbers Is Dead.

Sioux City, Iowa, Nov. 26. — Charles Lodin, marshal of Albert City, who was shot in the battle last week with the Greenville (Iowa) bank robbers, died Saturday, making three fatalities in all—two citizens and one robber.

Morphine and Liquor.

Farmington, Minn., Nov. 26.—Daniel Burns, aged twenty-four years, a resident of Lakeville, burned to death some time Thursday night in a straw stack near Credit river. He was suffering from dementia, caused by the excessive use of morphine and liquor, and had wandered away from his friends. It is supposed that Burns set fire to the stack accidentally.

Elevator Is Burned.

Appleton, Wis., Nov. 26. — Fire Saturday morning totally destroyed the massive elevator of Holbrook & Ballet. The loss is $25,000. Some 20,000 bushels of grain, 500 bushels of potatoes and $1,000 worth of clover seed were in the building. The loss is covered by insurance. The blaze originated from an exposed electric light wire.

Dakota Hotel Destroyed.

Woonsocket, S. D., Nov. 26. — Hotel Dumont, one of the best hotels of this place, took fire, the guests barely escaping with their lives and leaving all valuables behind. The upper story was completely gutted. The fire was extinguished without loss to other property. The loss is about $4,000, covered by $2,500 insurance.

Tracked in the Snow.

Black River Falls, Wis., Nov. 26. — Three men who refuse to give their names were brought here from Merrillan and lodged in jail. They were tracked in the snow from the depot to a barn and captured. Just what the charge is cannot be learned, but is something relative to the Omaha depot.

His Neck Broken.

Black River Falls, Wis., Nov. 26. — John Nichols, a widower about fifty years old, was found dead in the road near Irving last night. A coroner's jury decided that he fell from his wagon and broke his neck.

Fire at the Soo.

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., Nov. 26.—The bleaching plant of the Canadian Electro-Chemical company, Canadian Soo, burned last night. It was owned by Philadelphia capitalists. Loss, $75,000.

WRECK AND RUIN

TERRIFIC GALE RAGES ALONG THE COAST OF THE ATLANTIC.

FEARED THAT LIVES ARE LOST

MANY VESSELS ARE DAMAGED OR DRIVEN ASHORE BY THE STORM.

SUMMER RESORTS ALSO SUFFER

MANY BUILDINGS UNROOFED AND SUMMER COTTAGES DEMOLISHED.

New York, Nov. 26.—A heavy northeast gale has been raging along the coast for the past twenty-four hours. The storm set in at sunset Saturday evening. It blew with great severity all night, accompanied by heavy rain. In the upper and lower bay the storm blew with great fury, an unusually high tide washing upon the Staten Island shores, doing considerable damage to docks, small boats and other craft. The Staten Island Rapid Transit railroad track between Thompkinsville and Stapleton was obstructed by wreckage from piledrivers and a small schooner which was driven ashore and the wreckage piled up on the railroad track. A heavy sea raged in the upper bay.

New York Suffers Severely.

The storm did considerable damage in the city. Windows in the upper part of the city were blown in and a few roofs taken off. The greatest damage was along West street, fronting the North river, where cellars were flooded. The rapid transit tunnel was also flooded in many places. The wind blew from thirty-six to forty miles an hour yesterday afternoon. The gale sent shipping scurrying to shelter and safety. In spite of the dropping of anchors and the putting out of additional hawsers many small boats and other craft were damaged or driven ashore. During the early morning hours the ferry boats had some trouble, owing to the high wind, in crossing the rivers.

Great Damage on the Islands.

In the East river the tide rose to a height not remembered by the "oldest inhabitant." Great damage was done on the island lying in the river off the Harlem shore. Piers were carried away, bathing pavilions were washed off their foundations and outhouses were swept into the flood and washed to pieces in the waters of Hell Gate.

The United States hotel at Long Branch was wrecked and considerable damage done to other property at that place.

The storm struck Asbury Park, N. J., with more force than any in recent years, and did much damage to cottages. The Metropolitan hotel was unroofed and the piazzas were torn from the Hotel Strand.

LOSS OF LIFE FEARED.

Several Yachts Have Not Been Accounted For.

New Rochelle, N. Y., Nov. 26. — A northeast gale blowing at the rate of seventy-five miles an hour raged over Long Island sound at Saturday night and Sunday morning and did more than $350,000 damage along the northern shore.

At City Island, New Rochelle, Larchmont, Oriento Point, Davenport's Neck and Premium Point the shores were strewn with wreckage. It is feared that when all the reports are in they will show that a number of lives have been lost, as several yachts have not been accounted for.

The big country estates of millionaires on Davenport's Neck, Premium Point and Oriento were badly damaged by great combers which ruined high retaining walls and flooded Italian gardens, while the cellars of many country houses near the sound are flooded. At City Island the storm was so bad that yawls and catboats were torn from their moorings and dashed like feathers on high hills and on the City Island and Westchester meadows far inland.

HE DIES SMOKING.

Judge Lights a Dynamite Fuse and Smokes Until Killed.

Denver, Nov. 26. — News has just reached this city of the suicide of Judge M. A. Rogers, formerly of the supreme court of Colorado, and one of the ablest lawyers in the state, at Steamboat Springs, Colo., on Wednesday last. The manner of suicide was unusual. Judge Rogers laid down on the ground with a stick of dynamite under him, and, lighting a cigar, fired the fuse from it and calmly smoked until the shock of the explosion ended his life. The act was committed among some willows near Bear river. Steamboat Springs is a considerable distance from the railroad and only accessible by stage, which accounts for the delay in receiving the news in Denver. Judge Rogers had been there all summer with his wife. No cause is known for his taking his life.

NEW SYSTEM FOR THE BLIND.

Revolutionizes Process of Writing, Calculation and Musical Notation.

Paris, Nov. 26.—Dr. Labordi has communicated to the French academy information about a new writing instrument for the blind. It will work a revolution in the existing process of writing, calculation and musical notation in blind schools. It is said to enable the blind to read correctly what is written, and will probably supercede the Braille system altogether.

Turkey Is Saucy.

Vienna, Nov. 26.—The Vienna papers assert that Turkey is addressing an arrogant circular note to the powers protesting against their perpetual interference in Turkish affairs and demanding to know their intention regarding Crete.

Will Be Tried for Treason.

London, Nov. 26.—Col. Arthur Lynch, the newly elected member of parliament for Galway, has been informed that if he comes to England he will be tried forthwith for treason.

COLLECTOR HELD UP.

Kansas City Man Falls in With Dakota Thieves.

Redfield S. D., Nov. 23.—Oscar Austin, a collector for the Beyer Portrait Company of Kansas City, was held up and relieved of $70 a mile and a half north of here last evening. He was driving into town at dusk and was stopped by two men. He was pulled from the buggy, thrown to the ground and relieved of his money. The men made the horses start toward town alone and compelled Austin to walk the rest of the way. Austin has been working in this county for over a week and the robbery was probably committed by some one who knew he was a collector. The sheriff is searching for the two men. Austin was roughly handled.

CORRECTIONS AND CHARITIES.

Capt. Faulkner of Minneapolis Is President.

Faribault, Minn., Nov. 23.—The closing session of the tenth Minnesota conference of charities and corrections was held at the school of the feeble-minded here yesterday. The election of officers resulted as follows:

President, Capt. Faulkner of Minneapolis; first vice president, Rev. Ambrose McNulty, St. Paul; second vice president, Robert Hall, Rochester; secretary, Miss Anna S. Swanson, Minneapolis; enrolling secretary, J. O. Bingham, St. Paul; executive committee, Capt. Faulkner, Minneapolis; W. A. Gates and Rev. S. G. Smith, St. Paul; Mrs. George Welch, Fergus Falls; Supt. F. E. Randall, St. Cloud; Miss Grace Johnston, Red Wing; Dr. Tomlinson, St. Peter.

BODY RECOVERED.

Cost $5,000 and Required Nearly Three Months to Reach It.

Ishpeming, Mich., Nov. 23.—The body of Edlord Riberty, the carpenter who went into Lake Superior No. 6 mine with the cave of ground from the surface on Aug. 29 last, was recovered yesterday afternoon. The Lake Superior Iron company spent nearly $5,000 in the search for the body. It was necessary to drift fifteen feet and then sink a shaft fifty feet through loose ground in order to reach the point where the body rested.

ACCUSED OF SEVEN MURDERS.

Notorious Outlaw Under Arrest at Sioux City.

Sioux City, Iowa, Nov. 23.—Jack Sully, accused of seven murders in the last twenty years, a notorious South Dakota outlaw, leader of the Lyman county gang of robbers and horse rustlers, a cattle thief and squaw man, is under arrest here. He tried to kill Pete Waugh for recovering cattle, and Waugh, with Sheriff Taylor, ambushed him. His arrest, together with that of Black Bird, his lieutenant, will break up the gang.

UNDER STRONG GUARD.

Wisconsin Woman No Longer in Fear of Former Lover.

Kenosha, Wis., Nov. 23—Miss Matilda D. Jacobson, who has been guarded for the last three weeks against the attentions of a former suitor, Attorney Chris Jensen, was married here last evening to Adolph G. Larsen. The marriage was celebrated at the home of the bride's parents. The wedding passed off without unusual accident, Jensen making no effort to attend the ceremony.

CORA OMAN CASE.

Habeas Corpus Proceeding Is Argued at Moorhead.

Moorhead, Minn., Nov. 23. — Court Commissioner Witherow has taken the Cora Oman habeas corpus case under consideration and will probably render a decision to-day. The case was argued yesterday afternoon.

Saloonkeeper Must Pay Damages.

Sioux Falls, S. D., Nov. 23.—A jury yesterday awarded Mary Garrigan a verdict for $1,800 damages against Samuel Kennedy, a Dell Rapids saloonkeeper for selling her husband liquor. Evidence was introduced to show that Garrigan became intoxicated on liquor bought of Kennedy and that he later committed suicide. Mrs. Garrigan has similar suits pending against two other liquor dealers.

Changing to a National.

Brookings, S. D., Nov. 23.—The Bank of Volga, which atpresent is a private institution, is about to be changed to a national bank. The organization is perfected, and it is understood that some of the Brookings capitalists are interested in the enterprise. The Volga National will have ample backing to make it a safe and reliable repository.

Rear-End Smash.

Sparta, Wis., Nov. 23. — An open switch at Summit, a small station twelve miles east of this city on the Northwestern, resulted in a rear-end collision and the wrecking of two engines and nine cars loaded with stock and merchandise. The trainmen all jumped and no one was hurt.

Land Hunters Numerous.

Jamestown, N. D., Nov. 23.—A steady stream of land hunters has been coming to the state, taking advantage of the fine fall weather. One firm has half a dozen teams at work in Emmons county.

Fatal Shredder Accident.

Belle Plaine, Minn., Nov. 23. — John Miller, who had his arm caught in a shredding machine about a week ago, died yesterday from blood poisoning.

Boy's Awful Death.

Butte, Mont., Nov. 23.—Wagner, the three-year-old boy of T. T. Marcellus of Gross, fell into a box of lime last night and died in five minutes.

School Building Burned.

Orchard, Iowa, Nov. 23.—The graded school building here burned at noon. Loss, $4,000; insurance, $1,500.

Strangers Took Him In.

Fargo, N. D., Nov. 23.—A. E. Nordeen worked in the harvest fields this fall and after sending some money east had $26 left. He slept in a lower Front street hotel with strangers. When he awoke strangers and money were gone.

Arm Destroyed.

Farmington, Nov. 23. — Samuel Conners Michael Dergan of Lakeville township, had his left arm torn off in a corn shredder. He was taken to a St. Paul hospital.

COUP AT PANAMA

GOVERNMENT OFFICIALS EXPECT THAT CITY WILL BE ATTACKED NEXT.

BUSY ERECTING EARTHWORKS

FOREIGNERS RESPECTED AND TRANSIT ACROSS ISTHMUS UNINTERRUPTED.

COLON IS PERFECTLY QUIET

LIBERAL COMMISSION TAKES POSSESSION OF AFFAIRS IN THE CITY.

Colon, Nov. 23. — The government troops at Panama are busy erecting breastworks in the vicinity of the railroad property in the direction of which the Liberal attack is expected.

The city of Colon was perfectly quiet all yesterday and last night. It is claimed in behalf of the Liberals that there has been no unseemly behavior. Foreigners are being respected and protected and transit across the isthmus is uninterrupted.

Col. Barrera, commander of the Liberal forces, asserts that he has notified the district representatives of the department of the interior and other former officials of the government that he has appointed a commission to take over their offices formally to-day.

The feeling of the community cannot be regarded as antagonistic to Liberalism. The existing conditions have created no panic, but it is recognized that the fact that the Liberals hold Colon, while the Conservatives are in possession of Panama, creates a state of affairs which cannot be continued.

Col. Barrera admits that the government troops here numbered a little less than 120 men. It was at first reported that twelve or more men were killed and thirty wounded. The bodies of more dead have since been discovered.

CONTROL THE ISTHMUS.

Outcome of the Chorrera Expedition Will Be Decisive.

Washington, Nov. 23.—Save for the two reassuring dispatches from Consul General Gudger at Panama and Capt. Perry of the battleship Iowa, lying off that port, neither the state department nor the navy department received any advices yesterday concerning the situation on the isthmus.

Great interest is felt in official circles here as to the outcome of the Chorrera expedition, for it is realized that the result of the engagement at that point will be decisive in giving either the Conservative or the Liberal element control of the isthmus.

In a few days the gunboat Concord will have reached Panama to relieve the Iowa and the Marietta on the Atlantic side will be at Colon to take the place of the Machias. However, if the present situation continues all four of these vessels will be held on the isthmus, pending further developments.

SEVEN KILLED IN ATHENS.

Grecians Engage in a Violent Demonstration in the City.

Athens, Nov. 23. — The agitation against the proposal to translate the Gospels into modern Greek was continued yesterday. Twenty thousand persons assembled around the ruins of the temple of Jupiter Olympus and took part in a demonstration organized by the students. A resolution was passed calling upon the holy synod to excommunicate any person who translated the Gospels into Greek as now spoken. Eight hundred marines were landed and co-operated with the troops in maintaining order. Several conflicts occurred and occasional shots were fired. The students will hold the university buildings. During the demonstrations following the assemblage several shots were fired at M. Theklis, the Greek premier, but without effect. During the encounters between the military and the turbulent demonstrators seven persons were killed, thirty were severely and many others were slightly wounded.

COMMITTED MANY BURGLARIES.

Denver Police Capture a Man Who Has Operated Extensively.

Denver, Nov. 23.—The police have in custody a man who confesses to many burglaries in various cities. He gives his name as T. H. Weber, and says he finished a twelve-year sentence at San Quentin, Cal., Sept. 20, 1900, and that since last July he has committed many robberies in Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis and Kansas City. The man was found Wednesday night acting in a surpicious manner in a residence part of the city and was taken to the police station. Burglar tools were found in his possession. Yesterday the detectives located his room and there found two large trunks filled with silverware, watches, jewelry and other valuables. When confronted with this evidence the man confessed.

CROKER DEPARTING.

Tammany Boss Will Leave in a Few Days for His Home in England.

New York, Nov. 23.—Richard Croker has announced that he will sail for his country home at Wantage, England, on Nov. 30, and in this announcement he did not state at what time he expected to return. He reiterated, however, that it was not his intention to abdicate the management of the New York Democracy, but he implied that for some time to come the only work which could be done was in the nature of a waiting game, and this any one of his trusted lieutenants could accomplish during his absence.

Wilhelmina Better.

Apeldoorn, Holland, Nov. 23.—Although Queen Wilhelmina has not yet left her room, her condition has improved. The court physician only visits her once a day. The queen will return to The Hague in about a month.

Thresher Killed.

New Paynesville, Minn., Nov. 23. — Sam Kimbell, a young man of this village, was accidentally killed at Borebells, N. D., while at work with a threshing crew. He leaves an aged mother, a brother and two sisters.

DICKINSON'S ULTIMATUM.

If Brigands Do Not Accept His Offer He Will Give Up the Task.

Sofia, Nov. 24. — Mr. Dickinson, the diplomatic agent here of the United States, started for Constantinople, there to confer with Spencer Eddy, the secretary of the United States legation, as to the best means of hastening a solution in the deadlock which has arisen in the negotiations over the release of Miss Stone. Mr. Dickinson will probably return here, bringing with him cash with which to pay the ransom, as the kidnappers insist this payment be made in Turkish gold. Mr. Dickinson is considering the advisability of presenting an ultimatum to the brigands in which he will fix ten days as the period within which $50,000 must be accepted by the brigands as Miss Stone's ransom. If this proposal is not accepted by her captors, all dealing with the bandits, so far as the United States is concerned, will cease. According to the latest information received here both Miss Stone and Mme. Tsilka continue in rather good health. They are concealed in a large village near Dubnitza, whither they were taken blindfolded, and where only rude comforts are obtainable.

CABALLOS HAS BIG FORCE.

Insurgent Leader Has Five Hundred Armed Men in Laguna.

Manila, Nov. 24. — It has been officially reported to Gen. Chaffee that the insurgent leader Caballos has 500 fully armed men, including a number of American negroes, under his command in Laguna province, Luzon. An insurgent officer has just been captured, carrying papers dated Mauban, Laguna province, Nov. 18, and signed by Caballos. The prisoner admits that Caballos has 1,000 men with him and contemplated attacking Mauban. This probably accounts for the fact that yesterday the telegraph lines were cut near Mauban and in several places the supporting poles were found to have been removed.

News received here from the Island of Samar is encouraging, although up to the present time there have been no wholesale surrenders of natives. The Filipinos captured there by our troops show evidences of suffering and hunger. The coasts of the island are closely patrolled by gunboats and the use of the searchlight makes it almost impossible for the natives to land food on the island for the insurgents.

SCHLEY ACCEPTS.

Will Be Guest of Honor at the Hamilton Club Dinner.

Washington, Nov. 24. — Admiral Schley yesterday accepted an invitation of the Hamilton Club of Chicago to be its guest of honor at a dinner to be given at some future date. The invitation was tendered the admiral by Mr. Edwin A. Munger, president of the club. The acceptance on the part of the admiral was definite, but he stated to Mr. Munger that he could not now name the day when he could attend a public dinner. A reception to which as many as can be accommodated will be invited will precede the dinner. Admiral Schley also will attend a public function in his honor at Memphis, Tenn., but no other than these two invitations will be accepted by him.

DRIVER BOYS SPREAD ALARM.

Two Men Fatally Burned in Coal Mine and Many More Would Have Perished, Unaided.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Nov. 24—The lives of four hundred men were endangered by a fire in the No. 6 Susquehanna Coal company colliery at Glen Lyon, and, had it not been for the heroic work of the rescuers, many would have perished. Two men, Adam Kaiser and John Perron, were hemmed in by the fire and fatally burned while trying to escape; Fred Rodda, Thomas Mulhern and Joseph Higginson were carried out unconscious and several others were overcome, but none seriously. Driver boys discovered the fire and bravely dashed through the mine to warn the men. Some could not get out, and a rescuing party forced their way through a burning gangway to reach several. Most of the rescuers were slightly burned, but they got the men out by an old man-way. The mine is still on fire, but the fighters think they have prevented it spreading.

Murderous Captain Suicides.

Mobile, Ala., Nov. 24. — The British bark Nirman Wood, from Rio Janeiro, in charge of Mate Poe, anchored at Mobile quarantine yesterday, and reports that on Nov. 18 the captain, named Morris, killed the vessel's steward. The body was buried at sea. The captain kept in his cabin, pacing up and down. When informed that Sand Island light was sighted at 4 a. m. Nov. 22, he gave the mate the course, then picked up a sea lead and jumped overboard and was drowned.

Bismarckers Alarmed.

Sioux City, Iowa, Nov. 24.—Col. H. M. Chittenden, the government engineer here in charge of the upper Missouri river and Yellowstone Park, is getting some amusement from letters of alarm received from Bismarck, N. D. Citizens there think the Missouri river there is giving unmistakable evidence of drying up, and the opinion of the engineer is solicited. Col. Chittenden says so long as the Rocky mountains stand the Missouri will run.

Cleveland Is Ill.

Trenton, N. J., Nov. 24. — Reports comes from Princeton to the effect that ex-President Grover Cleveland is ill at his home at that place. Mr. Cleveland recently returned from a gunning trip and was taken ill with a chill and was threatened with pneumonia. Inquiry at his home last night elicited the information that he is very much improved. His condition is not understood to be dangerous.

Leaves Iowa for Oklahoma.

Cedar Falls, Iowa, Nov. 24.—W. H. Clark, one of the best farmers of this county, has disposed of his fine tract of land northeast of here and has removed his family to Weatherford, Okla., where he drew 160 acres of land in the lottery contest.

Killed His Son-in-Law.

Jellico, Tenn., Nov. 24. — John T. Smith instantly killed his son-in-law, Frank Starr, because the latter while drunk whipped his wife. Smith then surrendered.

DOWN IN THE DEEP

NAVAL OFFICERS REMAIN UNDER WATER FOR FIFTEEN HOURS.

SUBMARINE BOAT A SUCCESS

MEN FELT JUST AS WELL AS IF THEY HAD SPENT THE TIME ASHORE.

LOUD IN PRAISE OF THE FULTON

ADMIRAL LOWE SAYS THEY MIGHT HAVE STAYED DOWN MUCH LONGER.

Greenport, N. Y., Nov. 25.—The Holland submarine torpedo boat Fulton came to the surface yesterday morning at 10:30, after fifteen hours.

All on board were alive and well and as fresh as if they had been sealed up in the boat but a few minutes instead of many hours. The test took place at the company's tuning-up plant at New Suffolk, while the fiercest gale and rainstorm that has visited this section in twenty-three years was blowing.

All preparations for the test was in order early last evening, and at 7:30 the following passed down through her companionway forward of the turret: Rear Admiral John Lowe, retired; Lieut. Arthur MacArthur, commander of the torpedo boat Winslow, which lies in the Holland company's basin, and who will be in command of the submarine boat Adder, which is here for tuning up; Capt. Frank T. Cable, navigator for the Holland company; John Wilson, machinist; John Saunders, engineer, and Henry Morrel, electrician.

Comes Up With a Rush.

The heavy iron hatch was closed over them, and after it was securely fastened the Fulton sank slowly, steadily and evenly out of sight. Before going down the men had eaten a hearty dinner and had with them their lunch and breakfast. This morning promptly at 10:30 the huge craft ran to the surface so suddenly as to almost startle the many people who had gathered on the shore to witness the finish of the test. The conning tower was not opened for several minutes after the Fulton came to the surface, so one of the workmen swung out to her by the derrick and peered in through the heavy glass windows, then shouted ashore that all were well.

It was evident that his report was true, for there was no haste on the part of those inside to open the cover of the tower. When it finally did open, Capt. Cable's head was the first thrust to view.

Didn't Know a Storm Raged.

He saluted the watchers who had been ashore all night and looked around in a very surprised way and remarked that if he had known the weather was so very bad above water he would have remained under a while longer. He then came out on deck and assisted out the second man, Admiral Lowe.

The sun was breaking all about the Fulton and a long gangplank was thrust out to her for the men to come ashore on. Admiral Lowe said: "Well, I have had a fine night's rest and feel just as well as if I had been ashore in usual surroundings. The air on board appears to be now about as good as when we went on board last evening, much purer than you will find in many New York city court rooms. We might have stayed down a great deal longer. Really, I don't know how long for little of the air in storage was used. I must have slept about ten hours out of the fifteen we were under. The boat is all right."

No Anxious Moments.

Capt. Cable took the test in the most matter of fact way possible and after a word with his friends went up to his home to bid his wife good morning. Mrs. Cable stood on the shore last evening when the boat went down and when questioned said she had not the slightest fear about the welfare of her husband. Capt. Cable says:

"The Fulton settled evenly to the bottom and rested there without motion till she was lifted this morning. There was no motion to her to indicate the severe storm passing over. The men were divided into four hour watches for the night and then amused themselves playing euchre, reading the new magazines and papers and spinning yarns. Not a valve or any machinery was touched during the test. The Fulton goes to Washington this week by the outside route."

DEAD BODIES RECOVERED.

Eight Mining Experts Who Lost Their Lives in a West Virginia Mine.

Bluefield, W. Va., Nov. 25.—The bodies of the lost party of eight well-known mining men who entered West mine of the Pocahontas Collieries company on Friday morning, were recovered yesterday.

At 7 o'clock in the morning a rescuing party numbering forty persons entered at the main entrance, bratticing the mine as they went in order to improve the circulation of the air. They had reached a distance of three thousand five hundred feet from the entrance when they encountered such quantities of white damp that it was impossible to proceed further. Retracing their steps, they decided to make another attempt from the Tug River entrance, some six miles across the Flat Top mountain. They went in this entrance about 10:30 o'clock, and after going a distance of some six hundred feet found the bodies of A. S. Hurst, chief inspector, Bob Odham, subinspector, and Frazier G. Bell, mining engineer, all huddled together. From their positions they must have met death suddenly and without pain.

CHAMBERLAIN IN POOR HEALTH.

British Colonial Secretary Unable to Assume Tasks Other Than Official.

London, Nov. 25.—The friends of Joseph Chamberlain, the colonial secretary, have for some time been concerned with regard to his health. Saturday Mr. Chamberlain wrote the Handsworth School, declining to distribute prizes at that institution because, as he said, "It is absolutely necessary for me to confine myself to public work."

Skull Crushed With a Club.

Highland, Kan., Nov. 25.—J. F. Ward, a member of the city council, crushed J. E. Springer's skull with a club, fatally wounding him, after Springer had twice shot him, a result of an old family feud. Ward is seriously but not mortally wounded. Springer cannot live.

Killed at a Poker Game.

Pittsburg, Nov. 25. — Harry McGee, son of a well known oil operator of this city, is dead as the result of a shooting affray during a poker game at his home in North Bridgewater.

DIVIDED ON HANGING.

Factions Lining Up on Question of Death Penalty for Murderer.

Helena, Mont., Nov. 24.—The people of Fergus county have split into factions by the agitation over the proposed commutation to imprisonment for life of the sentence of death passed on Milton O. Howell for murdering Henry Rosling. The men were employes of rival sheepmen and quarreled over the division of water in a joint irrigation ditch. After being beaten in a fight by Rosling, Howell went armed to the scene next day. The quarrel broke out again and Howell shot Rosling dead. The former employers of the men have taken sides for and against hanging, and are enlisting everybody in the county on one side or the other.

WIFE BRUTALLY ASSAULTED.

Husband Goes Insane and Injures Wife So She May Die.

Fergus Falls, Minn., Nov. 24.—A Finlander named John Butas, who resides near Deer Creek, went violently insane and attacked his wife with a heavy club, breaking her arm and several ribs and disfiguring her face in a horrible manner. Her screams brought neighbors to her assistance, and Butas was brought to this city and committed to the insane asylum. His insanity is said to be the result of a fall from a wagon sustained three days before. It is feared that his wife will not recover from her injuries.

RAILROAD SETS THINGS AFIRE.

Charge Is Made by Otter Tail County Grand Jury.

St. Paul, Nov. 24.—State Fire Warden C. C. Andrews yesterday received information that the grand jury in Otter Tail county had begun proceedings against the Northern Pacific railroad on two charges in connection with recent fires in that county. One charge is that the railroad line in the county is not kept free from combustible materials, and the second is that sparks from locomotives set fire to hay and timber in land near the right of way and destroyed considerable property.

NEW MATRON SECURED.

South Dakota Girls' Institution to Have One.

Sioux Falls, S. D., Nov. 24.—Mary M. Henry, matron of one of the cottages of the dependent school at Sparta, Wis., has been secured by the state board of charities and corrections to act as overseer of the girls' cottage at the South Dakota reform school at Plankinton. The new appointee was for several years connected with the public schools at Yankton. Supt. Young of the reform school is well pleased with the appointment. She will enter upon her new duties about Dec. 1.

GUILTY OF MANSLAUGHTER.

McElwain Convicted in the Second Degree at Yankton.

Yankton, S. D., Nov. 24.—Contrary to general expectations the jury in the McElwain case brought in a verdict of guilty of manslaughter in the second degree. The jury was out only four hours. Judge Smith will sentence McElwain to-day. The penalty for the crime is not less than two nor more than four years in the penitentiary. Although conviction was unexpected, the verdict gives general satisfaction.

Smallpox Abating Near Aitkin.

Cass Lake, Minn., Nov. 24.—Dr. T. T. Rodwell, physician in charge of the Cass Lake Indians, has returned from Aitkin and other points in that vicinity, where he went several days ago to investigate the report that there was considerable smallpox among the Indians there. The doctor found but one severe case. He quarantined the patient and left instructions as to his proper care.

Steel Plant to Run All Winter.

West Superior, Wis., Nov. 24.—It has been announced that the local steel plant will be run during the entire winter, and will employ a force of over sixty-five men. This is the first winter in several years that the plant has been operated. The plant manufactures cant iron pipes mostly, but this year it has several large contracts for machinery with the local shipyards.

Penalty Envelopes Prohibited.

Helena, Mont., Nov. 24. — The Bozeman land office has received a ruling of the postoffice department that United States commissioners are not entitled to use penalty envelopes for mailing homestead proofs or affidavits to applicants, as they are then acting as agents of the homesteaders. They may use such envelopes only on business of the government.

Pleased With College Prospects.

Huron, S. D., Nov. 24.—Dr. Dana W. Bigelow, who spent a week here investigating the conditions, needs and prospects of Huron college, returned to his home in Utica, N. Y., much pleased with his visit and what he had seen and learned. Other Eastern men are expected to come on a similar mission this winter.

Falls Into Boiling Oil.

St. Paul, Nov. 24.—One of the buildings of the American Linseed company in St. Anthony Park was destroyed by fire at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon. E. Condon, an employe, was seriously burned about the face and hands by falling into boiling oil. The injuries are thought to be fatal.

Death of an Engineer.

Fargo, N. D., Nov. 24.—Engineer W. T. Tarbell, who had been in the employ of the Northern Pacific for several years, died at Brainerd. He was taken to the Northern Pacific hospital there a few days ago suffering from an attack of pneumonia. He left a widow and three children.

Crushed by Falling Tree.

Prentice, Wis., Nov. 24.—While chopping in the woods at Driscoll's spur, August Judo had a tree fall on him, crushing his leg below the knee. He was taken to the Rhinehart hospital at Ashland.

Sold Liquor to Her Boy.

Manson, Iowa, Nov. 24.—Mrs. Andy Mortgomery is the plaintiff in an interesting damage suit. She sues L. J. Pemble for $5,000, on the charge that he has sold liquor to her son, John, a minor.

VAN SANT MOVES

ASKS GOVERNORS OF WESTERN STATES TO JOIN IN A CONFERENCE.

TO BLOCK THE CONSOLIDATION

HILL AND HARRIMAN MAY RETIRE FROM NORTHERN PACIFIC DIRECTORATE.

RECEIVERSHIP MAY BE ASKED

NEW YORK LAWYER DROPS A BOMB IN THE RANKS OF THE TRUSTMAKERS.

St. Paul, Nov. 24. — Gov. Van Sant yesterday sent out to the governors of North Dakota, Montana, Idaho and Washington letters stating the facts so far as he has ascertained them with regard to the attempted consolidation of the Northern Pacific and Great Northern railroads, and asking for their opinion as to what action should be undertaken.

The governor declined to give out the text of the letter, and declined to state anything more than its general purport, as given above. Should the other governors be favorable to united action, it is probable that a conference will be called for an early date, and it will very likely be held in St. Paul, although it is possible that it might be called at Helena, since that is about half-way between this city and Olympia or Boise.

It is not improbable that the consolidation may first be attacked in the federal court. There are several ways in which this could be done and it remains for the attorney general to investigate and determine which is the most likely to be successful. The mode of procedure will not be determined until ample consideration has been given the subject by the legal authorities of the state.

Hill May Retire From Northern Pacific Directorate.

A New York telegram says:

"According to a Wall street report, believed to be based on good authority, certain changes in the Northern Pacific directorate are to be made in view of the agitation in Minnesota against the joint operation of the Northern Pacific and Great Northern railroads. Influential interests in the organization of the Northern Securities company said that, while they believed that the company's plans for controlling the Northern Pacific and Great Northern railroads could not be upset through legal proceedings, based on allegations that they conflicted with anti-consolidation laws of the different states, some changes might be forced. It was held by these interests that there was a question as to whether President Hill of the Great Northern railway, under a strict interpretation of the present law, had an unquestioned right to be a member of the board of directors of the Northern Pacific railroad. The same doubt existed as to the right of E. H. Harriman, chairman of the Union Pacific, to be a member of the Northern Pacific board. It was asserted that it was not impossible that both officers might retire from the Northern Pacific board."

Receivership May Be Asked.

A special telegram from New York to the Minneapolis Times says:

"Nothing has ever stirred the financial depths of this city as the published announcement that Gov. Van Sant would make a strong stand against the big railway merger in behalf of the shippers and producers of the Northwest. Under the outward calm of Wall street there existed greater alarm in the private offices of the giant trust managers than has been felt there since the frightful stock panic of last May.

"A way was found at last by the enemies of the Northern Securities to smash the railroad trust just organized in the Northwest with so much care. J. P. Morgan's gigantic strength was put to the test yesterday to prevent a break in stock prices.

"Eminent counsel was consulted by a banker allied with one of the big syndicates. His lawyer told him that the Northern Securities as a company was absolutely impregnable.

"'But,' said the lawyer, 'any citizen of the State of Minnesota may apply, through the attorney general of his state, to have receivers appointed for the Great Northern and for the Northern Pacific companies on the ground that their controlling stockholders have entered into a conspiracy to violate the laws under which the roads are chartered. Visible evidence of this conspiracy is seen in the Northern Securities company. A court of inquiry would be forced to act on such a proposition. Receivers would take charge of the property of the two roads and manage for the benefit of stockholders. The citizen need not be a stockholder.'

"This opinion fell like a bomb in the camp of the trustmakers."

FIRE WARDEN BUSY.

Another Warrant Issued on His Complaint.

Hinckley, Minn., Nov. 24.—On complaint of the chief fire warden a warrant was issued yesterday for the arrest of John Dehms on the charge of carelessly causing a fire during the dry weather in October, which destroyed hay and timber of other parties.

BOY TRAPPER DROWNED.

Falls Through the Ice Near Fergus Falls and Is Lost.

Fergus Falls, Minn., Nov. 24.—Ole A. Anderson's fifteen-year-old son was drowned in Grove lake in the town of Scrambler Thursday afternoon. The boy had gone out to the lake to examine some traps he had set and as he failed to return, a search was begun. A hole in the ice was discovered, the water under it was dragged and the body found.

VINDICATION FOR SCHLEY.

Admiral Dewey Will Not Sign a Report of Censure.

Philadelphia, Nov. 26.—Admiral Dewey has taken the position firmly that he will not sign any verdict that in any way censures Admiral Schley, according to a Washington dispatch to the Ledger. The other members of the court, Admirals Benham, and Ramsey, have not taken this decided position, but so far as they have expressed their conclusions it is understood they will no doubt join in the ultimate vindication of Schley. Admiral Dewey, it is said, takes into consideration the uncertainties and perplexities that beset Schley at Cienfuegos and Santiago, and compares them with his own feelings when he sailed into Manila bay. The court is rapidly approaching the completion of its judgment. Unless a mistake has been made as to the presentations of the court the decision will go beyond the expectation when the record was closed, and Admiral Schley will receive an unequivocal and unalterable quittance of all the varied charges made against him and be given full honor for what he accomplished as the commander-in-chief in the battle of Santiago.

RAYNER REFUSES A FEE.

Schley's Attorney Declines Payment for His Services.

Baltimore, Nov. 26.—Isidor Rayner's fee for his services in the Schley inquiry case was nothing. The noted Maryland lawyer refused to accept one penny from the admiral either in remuneration for his services or in repayment of the money he spent in the hotel bills incurred during the long inquiry. These facts leaked out Saturday, when it became known that two magnificent presents had been sent Mr. and Mrs. Rayner by Admiral and Mrs. Schley. At first Rayner refused to discuss either the fee or the presents, but late last evening he admitted that he had declined to receive from Admiral Schley any remuneration, although that gallant officer tendered the man who conducted his case a signed blank check.

Mr. Rayner said: "I feel that I should not be asked to say anything on this question, but the newspapers have treated me so splendidly that I cannot find the heart to deny a fact that you have established a? well. The admiral is such a generous, noble soul that he would have sacrificed his last cent for those who represented him in the case."

The present sent Mr. Rayner by Admiral Schley is a heavy open-faced timepiece of solid gold. The chain is a very heavy one of finest gold. At its end is a solid gold pencil. The present to Mrs. Rayner is a magnificent heart, with pendant, a stone of rare brilliancy. Around the heart is a border of fifty diamonds.

GOPHERS BEAT PURPLE.

Poor Generalship Is Costly to Northwestern.

Chicago, Nov. 26.—Minnesota defeated Northwestern 16 to 0 at Marshall Field Saturday afternoon in a long-drawn-out, tedious game, which began late and was not completed until long after it was too dark to distinguish either plays or players. Northwestern's poor generalship was responsible for the size of the score, as two of the Gopher's touchdowns were almost entirely due to the purple's failure to punt the ball out of danger when its goal was threatened. In this way a magnificent defense was nullified to a considerable extent, for the team from Evanston put up a sturdy fight throughout the game and held the Gopher giants' mass plays well. But in two instances, after a plucky fight had gained them the ball almost at their last line, poor headwork sent the tandem crashing into the Gophers for short gains. Once a penalty gave the Minnesotans the ball within easy distance, and the purple defense, already worn down, was unequal to the task of again stopping the heavy plays.

HARVARD DOWNS YALE.

Crimson Team Makes Sons of Eli Look Like Scrubs.

Cambridge, Mass., Nov. 26.—Harvard Saturday won the intercollegiate football championship on Soldiers' Field by conquering Yale 22 to 0. The result came so unexpectedly that the New Haven men are wondering how it all happened. Harvard made three touchdowns, from which two goals were kicked, and a magnificent goal from the sixty-yard line was kicked by Quarterback Marshall. Harvard played beautiful football all the day. The attack and defense was so strong that the Yale varsity, the same team that vanquished Princeton at New Haven by a score of 12 to 0 last Saturday, was made to look like a scrub eleven at times.

QUEEN DRAGA'S PASSION.

King Treats Her Brutally and She Attempt Suicide.

Paris, Nov. 26.—The Matin publishes a sensational story explaining the rumors that an attempt had been made to assassinate Queen Draga of Servia. The newspaper states that a diplomat at the Servian court is its authority. Since he was disappointed in his hope for an heir, the story goes, the king has treated his wife brutally. After swearing at her and reproaching her in the presence of several persons, the queen retorted and the king slapped her twice. Her majesty rushed to her chamber and instantly took poison. When the drug began to work she ran out of the room, shrieking "Save me!" Her cries were perfectly audible to every servant in the palace and their gossip started the rumor of an attempted assassination. The court physician, with a stomach pump and powerful antidotes, succeeded in saving the queen's life.

Stabbed in a Street Row.

Cincinnati, Nov. 26.—Harry Bevington was murdered late last night, being stabbed in a street row. William Grimes is charged with the murder. Both were tinners. Bevington leaves a widow and three children.

Money for Spain's Navy.

Madrid, Nov. 26. — The minister of finance has consented to the demand of the minister of marine for the appropriation of 12,500,000 pesetas for the navy in addition to the sum already appropriated.

BOMBARD COLON

COLOMBIAN NAVAL OFFICER GIVES TWENTY-FOUR HOURS' NOTICE.

FOREIGNERS SEEKING REFUGE

COMMANDER OF THE MACHIAS AWAITS ORDERS FROM WASHINGTON.

GREAT EXCITEMENT IN PANAMA

BREASTWORKS BEING ERECTED AND CITIZENS ARE SEEKING COVER.

Colon, Colombia, Nov. 26. — The Colombian gunboat Gen. Pinzon has arrived here from Cartagena with troops, and as a result of an exchange of note between Capt. McCrea of the gunboat Machias, and Ignacio Follaco, the commander of the Gen. Pinzon, Commander Follaco has officially notified the American, British and French warships now in the harbor that he intends to bombard Colon at noon to-day, thus giving twenty-four hours' notice. The various consuls are notifying their respective fellow citizens that refuge may be had on board the warships.

To bombard the town of Colon it is absolutely necessary to fire across the railroad tracks, and the railroad employes will probably refuse to work.

Lieutenant Commander McCrea of the Machias is the senior naval officer, and he awaits instructions from Washington regarding the threat to bombard. There is much Excitement in Colon.

The afternoon passenger train, which should arrive here at 6 o'clock, had not arrived at 8. Breastworks are being erected in the public thoroughfares of Panama. The towns folk in the vicinity of these are hastily removing to safer places. All persons known to be Liberals are arrested on sight. The government has declared its intention to contest every inch of ground if an entrance to the city is effected. It is reported that some twenty who were wounded at Perequito were landed on the island of Taboga, to avoid creating alarm in Panama. Taboga is about eight miles from Panama. The government is very anxious that the marines should be landed from the United States battleship Iowa, but Capt. Perry, her commander, has not complied with the request.

DISASTER IN THE PHILIPPINES.

Steamer With Two Hundred Passengers Believed to Be Lost.

Manila, Nov. 26.—A marine disaster, costing the lives of over 200 people, has doubtless occurred. The local steamer Alerta, with 200 passengers, including some discharged American soldiers from Olongapo, Subig bay, to Manila, is believed to have been lost, with all on board. The United States distilling ship Iris has been aground on a reef near Iloilo for three days. The United States cruiser New York and gunboat Yorktown have gone to her assistance.

Capt. Edward P. Lawton's company of the Nineteenth infantry has attacked and captured an insurgent fort on Pohol island, south of Cebu, in the Visayan group. This fort was surrounded on all sides by a precipice, and the only entrance to the higher ground was guarded by a stockade with a line of intrenchments behind it. Capt. Lawton sent Sergt. McMahon and twenty men to climb the precipice and attack the fort in the rear. Sergt. McMahon's party accomplished their task after three hours' climbing through the thick undergrowth of brush and vines that covered the almost perpendicular cliff. They took the enemy by surprise and drove them from the fort. As the insurgents escaped they had to pass the remainder of Capt. Lawton's company at a distance of 150 yards. Here the enemy suffered terrible loss. The insurgents defended themselves with both cannon and rifles. The cannon were captured. The smaller ones were removed, while the larger ones were buried. Capt. Lawton in his report makes special mention for bravery of Sergeants List and McMahon.

EXPLOSION ON BRITISH SHIP.

Royal Mail Steamer Puts in at Barbadoes, Unable to Proceed on Its Voyage.

St. Thomas, D. W. I., Nov. 26.—The Royal Mail steamer Para, Capt. Stranger, has put in at Barbadoes, damaged to such an extent that it cannot proceed to England. While on its way from Jamaica to Barbadoes the reserve supply of certain chemicals used in reducing temperature to preserve fruit exploded, killing Lawton, the inventor of the process, and two others, and injuring the captain of the ship and several of the crew.

MOTHER ACCUSED.

Indicted for Murder of Daughter's Husband in Quincy.

Springfield, Ill., Nov. 26.—The Morgan county grand jury has returned a true bill against Mrs. Mary L. McWilliams of Quincy, mother of Mrs. Mamie Barnes, also of Quincy, for murder. They are charged, with being accessories of William Webb Ferguson, alias William Winn, a negro, who is to be tried next Monday on the charge of murdering Dr. J. L. Barnes of Monticello at the Central hospital for the insane, Jacksonville, Ill., last May, by giving him poisoned candy.

SAN JUAN BATTLEFIELD BOUGHT.

United States Government Will Convert It Into a Park.

Santiago, Cuba, Nov. 26.—During his recent visit here Gen. Wood bought for the government the principal portion of the San Juan battlefield, including San Juan hill, the site of the block house and Bloody Bend. The tract comprises 200 acres and cost $15,000. It will be considered a United States reservation, and the government intends to lay out a beautiful park on the old battlefield.

ARCHBISHOPS MEET.

Resolutions Adopted Lamenting the Assassination of McKinley.

Washington, Nov. 23. — The annual meeting of the archbishops of the Catholic church in the United States began at the Catholic university yesterday. Cardinal Gibbons presided and the attendance included Archbishops Williams of Boston, Corrigan of New York, Elder of Cincinnati, Ryan of Philadelphia, Ireland of St. Paul, Kain of St. Louis, Katzer of Milwaukee, Keane of Dubuque and Christie of Oregon. The meeting considered a number of matters of interest to the welfare of the Catholic church and reviewed generally the affairs of the hierarchy. The only feature of the proceedings formally made public after the day's work had been concluded was that the meeting had adopted resolutions lamenting the assassination of President McKinley and containing an invocation of the benedictions of heaven on his successor's administration.

SWIMMING THROUGH FIRE.

Thrilling Experience of the Members of a Boat's Crew.

Pittsburg, Nov. 23. — Swimming through spouting flames of gas was the experience of twelve men and a woman on the sand boat Vigilant, which was burned to the water's edge in the Monongahela river at Clairton. The boat was moored over a gas main which crosses the river at that point. A break in the main caused the gas to bubble up through the water and ignite from the fires under the steamer's boilers. There was an explosion and the boat was enveloped in fire. The members of the crew and the woman jumped into the river and swam through the geysers of fire. All reached shore in safety, badly scorched or burned.

TWENTY-NINE VICTIMS.

Full Extent of the Mine Disaster in Colorado Not Yet Known.

Telluride, Colo., Nov. 23.—The number of victims of the terrible disaster in the Smuggler-Union mine Wednesday is now known to be at least twenty-nine, with a considerable portion of the mine yet unexplored. Besides the twenty-two bodies taken out and identified Wednesday night, seven were located yesterday afternoon in the north end of the ninth level, but the gas is still too strong to permit the rescuers to reach them, and their identity is as yet unknown. Several members of the searching party were overcome in their efforts to bring out the bodies last evening. It will probably be several hours before they can be reached.

MURDER IN SECOND DEGREE.

Man Found Guilty of Having Killed His Wife.

Oskaloosa, Kan., Nov. 23.—The jury in the case of William H. Klusmire, on trial for killing his wife on their farm in Jackson county last summer, yesterday brought in a verdict of murder in the second degree. Mrs. Klusmire's body was found buried two feet under the ground in the barnyard. On the stand Klusmire said that his wife had committed suicide and that he had buried the body to avoid disgrace that would follow publicity. He disappeared and telegraphed his children that their mother had died and been buried in that state. Klusmire is a wealthy farmer forty years of age.
